STRANGER THAN FICTION, 88 (Univ.)

(5378)

Bernard Colby of Amesbury, Mass., is an expert at turning out all kinds and shapes of fish fly; another man has built an 18-room hotel from pieces of driftwood and old shipwrecks; still another man in Dallas uses household lye and water to run his auto; a hobbyist collects postage stamps and turns out mosaic pictures by piecing the stamps together, and a five-year-old girl in Missouri demonstrates her acrobatic ability.

WILD BOAR HUNT (W.B.)

Hollywood Novelty (6305)

Howard Hill, expert exponent of the bow and arrow, ventures on a island off the Southern California coast inhabited by wild boars. After a few preliminary shots, such as shooting a hawk hovering overhead, or placing an arrow directly in the center of a circle some distance away, Hill starts after his real quarry, the wild boar. He and his dogs come upon one of the animals, which turns upon the group and charges toward them at full speed. Hill aims, the arrow goes straight to its mark and the end of a boar.

QUIET! PLEEZE (Par.)

Popeye (EO-6)

When Popeye knocks on Pappy's door one morning, he finds his Pop suffering with a headache. Pappy is actually suffering from a hangover. Popeye decides to provide a day of complete quiet for his ailing Pappy. To do this Popeye is kept terrifically busy. He hushes a wailing infant with a hastily contrived baby bottle, deadens the hoofbeats of a trotting horse, throttles a noon whistle in the nick of time, catches a falling girder as it is about to crash and subdues the blasting of rocks by the expedient of throwing himself on the charge and holding it. Popeye, satisfied but weak, returns home to find his Pappy the center of a noisy party.

THE STREAMLINED DONKEY (Col.)

Fable Cartoon (2754)

A young donkey is told by his mother that he must follow in the tradition of all donkeys. But the youngster kicks up his heels, plays around and decides that life is made for fun, not for sorrow and unhappiness. His mother meets with a cruel taskmaster, but the young donkey sets out to find her and rescues her from her life of bondage.

FRESH AS A FRESHMAN (Col.)

Glove Slingers (2428)

Terry, contender for the lightweight championship, enrolls at Taylor College, where he meets Jo Blake, lively co-ed. Bill Wilks, Collegiate Welterweight Champion and the campus casanova, resents Jo's attention to Terry. Bill has Chiquita, the college siren, vamp Terry. When Jo finds him with Chiquita, she refuses to have anything further to do with him. Terry and Bill fight it out in the ring and Terry is the victor. Terry wins Jo. The cast includes David Durand, Paul Hurst, Wally Vernon, Dorothy Vaughan, Adele Pearce and Rita Rio.

CANINE SKETCHES (Par.)

Sportlight (RO-8)

Here is a portrayal of sporting dogs and their work afield. Introduced first is the springer spaniel posing for a sketch by the outdoor artist, Lynn Bogue Hunt. Then the springer is shown on a pheasant hunt. Next is shown a Labrador retriever working with sportsmen from a blind, hunting and retrieving wild ducks. Following the retriever, English setter and pointer breeds are shown in North Carolina with sportsmen hunting quail. Finally a bird dog is seen posing for his portrait.

"DISSIMILAR PLACES"

A MIDNIGHT prowling through the pages of a pile of press books, national advertising and a conglomeration of related motion picture merchandising expressions in print—alongside a both comforting and most convenient fireplace—seems to make cogent indeed a certain plea for homely, direct simplicity presented in a recent issue of Printers' Ink.

Copy that pulls in "such dissimilar places as Grand Forks, N. D., Huntsville, Ala., and Lancaster, Pa.," is under discussion by Mr. N. T. Hand, an advertising executive, who seems to feel that copywriters on national campaigns tend to get too cute.

The recital tells about a smart jewelry display which included some Webster Dictionary facsimiles with arrows pointing to the word "scintillating". The result was, records Mr. Hand, that the small town customers went in wanting to know where the dictionaries were on sale. Also he tells how an advertisement using the radio-famed word "communique" stubbed its toe.

"Allusions of any kind that are caviar to the general—no matter how much at home they might be in Vogue—are apt to be resented. It is safe to say that no foreign word or phrase . . . should ever be used. Humor may be used on occasion . . . providing it does not overstep the boundary into what these realistic minded customers will regard as silliness.

"Also—and this is true despite best sellers of the last ten years—sex still has two only generally recognized faces in these medium sized towns. One is that of the demure or saucy maiden with her bashful but always gallant beau. The other is best typified by Cousin Henry who brought back those postal cards from Paris when he was over there in '28. Cousin Henry is not a pleasant fellow and all suspicion of anything that might be attributed to him must be studiously avoided. . . . "

BEARING quite as positively on this same subject of sophistication and approach, comes a letter from an exhibitor out yonder, Mr. A. H. Kaufman of the Fountain theatre in Terre Haute, another medium sized town, who tells a somewhat kindred story, in terms of his ideas about trailers and what they sell. In the course of his letter he remarks:

"Many producers, for years, have made two kinds of one sheets, frequently two styles of threes and, always, different mats, some with class and others with action.

"This, as you well know, is done to help exhibitors who draw various kinds of patronage. Theatres appealing to action and westerns fans will run folks away with advertising showing costume periods or too much love on their display, etc.

"The reverse is equally true of first-run houses—they prefer 'more class' to their advertising on a big outdoor feature than the western advertising wanted by the 'shooting gallery' theatre.

"Now, as everyone agrees that this is important to posters and mats, why isn't it equally necessary that trailers be given the same treatment. I don't believe that it would be necessary to make two trailers on every feature, but there are quite a few released each year for which action trailers would be most helpful."

A related viewpoint concerning the manner and mood of selling approach is had from the speech that Mr. Arthur Mayer, retailer of screen murder at the corner of Seventh Avenue and Forty-second Street, New York, made before the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, last week. He has an "action market," too.

MR. MAYER, who admits he is "America's leading expert in selling bad pictures," claiming he books no others, insists: "I believe, also, that we must sell our product, whether we personally consider it good or bad, with warmth and color, with vivid phrases and glowing adjectives. . . . Most theatres have to sell from 100 to 300 pictures annually. They cannot do it with understatement or apology."

Some cheer may be had from this militant exhibitor's observation that he has never seen a picture so bad that some fraction of the audience would not take and even enjoy it, and that he has never noticed one so good that some customers did not consider it inadequate entertainment.

It has been said before that there are in fact several publics. Consideration might be given the notion that perhaps there is a point where there is no efficiency in trying to make a picture to please everybody.

THAT pertains to the product delivered. Interesting discussion of precedent processes under the title of "Hollywood Build-up" is had from Mr. Lynn Farnol in "Theatre Arts" magazine for April. He observes that Mr. Howard Deitz "estimates that the most a publicity campaign can do for a picture is an improvement of 15 per cent in its receipts," which Mr. Farnol takes to apply only to pictures of marked merit but "without outstanding stars or great reputations. For others, the variable, the dependence on a campaign may be as little as 5 per cent, according to many sages. This is not the difference between a good campaign and a bad one, but between a campaign and no campaign."

As to stars, Mr. Farnol holds that publicity never made one, but that it can somewhat assist if the personality is real and able, by answering the public inquiry: "What kind of a guy is he?" In fact, he observes that two years and two and a half million dollars spent on Anna Sten and "Nana" built up a publicity-made expectancy that not only made it difficult but also impossible for her to win—by that route.

All will agree with Mr. Farnol's observation that "it would be better if stars could be created a little more easily." He cites that "from the viewpoint of direction, story and production, 'Foreign Correspondent' and 'Boom Town' were about matched, but 'Boom Town" had three outstanding box-office stars and it grossed in rough figures about $4,000,000 in this country, while 'Foreign Correspondent' did only a little more than $1,000,000."

Stars, as we have so often observed before, seem to be made mostly by a competent performance in a fat part in a good picture.

The motion picture competently presented is the screen's greatest publicity medium—and that's the exhibitor's job, too.

PRODUCT, 1941

PRODUCTION plans and policies for the 1941-42 season, the first under the "new order" necessitated by the consent decree, were considerably advanced this week. Monogram obtained new production financing, United Artists lined up its largest roster of producers, Twentieth Century-Fox had about decided on 50 features and Paramount on between 38-40 for the coming year, Producers Releasing announced 42 features, Paramount disclosed its complete short subject line-up and Monogram set its annual convention for April 4-6 in Hollywood.

Herman Wobber, 20th Century-Fox general sales manager, said on his return to New York from the Coast that the company planned "about 50" features for 1941-42 and that final selling plans would be worked out after Sidney R. Kent, president, completed his Hollywood visit.

Y. Frank Freeman, vice-president in charge of studio operations for Paramount, said that 38 or 40 features were planned for next season, or about the same number as scheduled for this year. The first block-of-five is to be ready about July 15th, the second, August 15th and the third September 15th

United Artists will have 11 producers, exclusive of Charles Chaplin, James Roosevelt and David O. Selznick, it was reported this week.

Arnold Pressburger, European producer and director, William Czekely, also from Europe, and Merian Cooper, who will produce for Walter Wanger, are among the United Artist newcomers. Others who will continue to release through UA are: Alexander Korda, Walter Wanger, Edward Small, Gabriel Pascal, Sol Lesser, Ernst Lubitsch, David Loew-Albert Lewin and Richard Rowland. Active duty in the Marine Corps is expected to curtail Mr. Roosevelt's production activity next year.

W. Ray Johnston, president of Monogram, said this week in New York the company would increase its budget for the whole program next season, with special increase for certain pictures.

Further production developments of these and other producers are on pages 19 and 26.

'Dictator's' $285,000

UNITED Artists this week through the home office in New York reported a good response to Charles Chaplin's "The Great Dictator" under the picture's new popular price admissions policy. The film closed its 23-week run at the Astor, New York, this week with a gross of approximately $285,000. Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president in charge of domestic distribution for UA, on the basis of reports from return engagements throughout the country predicts it will establish a Chaplin boxoffice record. "Dictator" business is reported as 280 per cent above normal on the Loew circuit. Holdovers were reported from Philadelphia, Washington, Harrisburg, Detroit, Wilmington, Racine, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and other cities. Opening day, weekend, or weekly house records were broken in most instances. On foreign runs the picture has broken records in 23 countries, 15 of them in Latin America, according to Walter Gould, UA foreign head.

Latin Goodwill

TO promote goodwill between the Americas, Everett C. Callow, advertising and publicity manager of Warner theatres, in Philadelphia, before leaving there for the presentation to him of the 1940 Quigley Grand Awards Showmanship Plaque, in Hollywood last week, arranged for a short wave broadcast over WCAU in connection with Fox's "That Night in Rio."

Twenty-two consuls from Latin-American countries participated, each sending messages to their respective countries. The broadcast was designed to further international relations between the Americas. See story in Round Table, page 59.

Addison Durland, on Wednesday, was appointed a member of the MPPDA's Production Code Administration staff in Hollywood as a "specialist in Latin-American affairs," —presumably to advise producers on film scripts submitted to the Joseph Breen office which might need a certain treatment for Latin-American consumption. Mr. Durland, who has been in radio and with newspapers, reports in Hollywood Monday morning. He was most recently chief of the Spanish section of National Broadcasting.

Additional steps being taken for hemispheric solidarity are reported on page 23.

Political Trimming

ACTOR Edward Arnold's brief speech recanting his political views towards the end of Warner Brothers' "Meet John Doe" has been cut from the two prints of the film playing at New York's Rivoli and Hollywood theatres, upon orders from the studio. The company's home office said on Wednesday all exchanges had been ordered to eliminate the speech from all prints out, and from all prints to be delivered.

The elimination was ordered, apparently, because of dissatisfaction of theatre audiences and of Robert Riskin, co-producer of the film.

Wilkes-Barre's 5 Weeks

A THEATRE operator not affiliated with a distributor personally wired the trade press holdover reports on a distributor's picture this week. John J. Galvin, manager of the Penn Theatre, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., sent notice of a fifth week for Universal's "Buck Privates." Three weeks is the previous record for the town. Mr. Galvin reports that 63,000 persons have seen the picture there. Population is 86,000. The Penn is owned by Paramount-Comerford, whose distributor is a competitor of Universal.

PURCHASE of "Saratoga Trunk," unpublished Edna Ferber novel, by Warner Brothers for a reported $175,000, this week, recorded a new top price in recent years* for the screen rights to a book. Paramount held the previous record with a payment of $150,000 last October for Ernest Heminway's "For Whom the Bell Tolls." The Hemingway deal included $110,000 flat payment plus a percentage on book sales. Warners are understood to have paid cash for Miss Ferber's novel, currently appearing in Cosmopolitan magazine. It will be published in book form this spring. The terms specify that screen and other rights revert to the author at the end of five years.

*Selig, in 1914, bought the novel "The Spoilers" from Rex Beach, on a percentage basis. Mr. Beach's share was $250,000, marking the all-time high for payment for a book for the screen.

"Kane" Department

STILL-AND-YET, at mid-week, the issue of when, if ever, and how, if any, of the release of the celebrated but unseen "Citizen Kane" production made by or for or with RKO was very much up in the air, figuratively and literally. George Schaefer of RKO, the executive most directly concerned, was reported flying east, and Orson Welles, the boy-wonder producer, was flying west. Presumably they were to pass in mid-air somewhere in the trans-Mississippi country. There remained the possibility of rendezvous.

Meanwhile, as it were, Mr. Welles, as a producer of the stage, sometimes called the speaking stage, sometimes the "legitimate," seemed to have at least a possible success in "Native Son," a play pertaining to the negro and society. The play opened in New York Monday at the St. James theatre, and drew a considerably mixed press response. The reviews were sprinkled with the word propaganda. The reviewers seemed to feel that there was a lot more steam than art in the job.

Inevitably, in view of the fact that it has been alleged that Mr. Welles' "Citizen Kane" had something to do with the career of William Randolph Hearst, observers turned to see what Mr. Hearst's paper might be saying. The Mirror, New York tabloid daily, did not say at all. The Journal-American, with a review by John Anderson, observed: ". . . it is an uneven play in ten scenes with no intermission . . ." and, discussing the principal character remarks: ". . . The fact that he is an admitted criminal and as such is treated the same way the law treats members of the red, yellow, and even the white race, is glossed over blithely for the purpose of raising a racial issue and twisting it into propaganda that seems nearer Moscow than Harlem. . . ."

But even Richard Watts of the Herald-Tribune, New York, was not entirely sympatico. He remarked, concerning the translation of "Native Son" the book, into the play, that ". . . it is dangerous to use some other narrative form for which it was not essentially planned. . . ." The New York Daily News said " 'Native Son' carries a propaganda load."

And, the while, Mr. Hearst was sojourning in Mexico, as betokened by a picture with the publisher in person, with Miss Marion Davies on his right, in the center of a group including his several sons and related persons, posing for the camera in Mexico City, in connection with an official visitation at the capital. The picture was presented in a half page of his New York Mirror.

Bridges' Friends

TWENTY-TWO motion picture directors, writers and musicians have signed a petition asking that deportation proceedings against Harry Bridges, Australian, West Coast C.I.O. leader, credited with leadership in various Pacific Coast shipping strikes and related matters, be dismissed. The petition has been sent to the U. S. Attorney General.

According to the Associated Press the "Bridges Defense Committee" said the signers included Orson Welles, Robert Sisk, Artie Shaw, Burgess Meredith, Dudley Nichols, Dalton Trumbo, Vincent Sheean, John Howard Lawson and Irwin Shaw.

Mr. Bridges' contribution to the American scene has been widely recognized for several years, both by the press and internally in official Washington. Until now the motion picture had not numbered him among its problems, of which it has a number in the labor relations sector.

Representative Martin Dies, in Washington, Tuesday, declared he had evidence indicating that if Bridges is deported, his CIO factions in California will protest with a walkout strike tying up coast shipping.

"Peace Front"

CHARGING that "the artists of public expression—radio, film, theatre, journalism—are being used to create the atmosphere of panic . . ." in this crisis, a group of Hollywood screen writers and actors have joined others of the professions in the American Peace Mobilization in arranging a "Call to the American People's Meeting" for peace in New York, at Randall's Island, in the East River, on April 5th and 6th, to warn that "participation in the war would severely endanger a free American culture."

Anti-Lifebuoy

THE Motion picture Relief Fund, in Hollywood, Wednesday, attacked Louella O. Parsons' new Lifebuoy radio program, which starts Friday night over a national CBS network, because the Fund's management feared the Fund was in danger of losing the $10,000 weekly income obtained through the free time given by Hollywood players, writers and others to the weekly Relief Fund Gulf Oil air show. The basis of the complaint is the nominal sum to be paid to actors appearing on the soap program at the request of Hearst Columnist Parsons, who variously has conducted "guest star" programs for commercial sponsors.

Jean Hersholt, Relief Fund president, Wednesday, sent a statement to Edward Arnold, president of the Screen Actors Guild, and to Y. Frank Freeman, Paramount studio executive, as president of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, declaring, "We believe every actor who consents to appear on any free talent show, that every producer who consents to having contract players appear on such shows, is crippling the Motion Picture Relief Fund.

"A show of the type Miss Parsons has planned requires that actors waive their usual compensation and contribute their time and talent to advertise commercial product. If, by employing a motion picture columnist, one commercial sponsor can obtain radio services of screen actors at relatively nominal expense, how long can we expect another sponsor to pay $10,000 a week for actors' services?"

Both the Screen Actors' Guild and Actors' Equity Association have warned player members against guest star radio appearances.

New Blocks-of-5 Moves

UNDAUNTED by a setback in Georgia March 21st, when that state's House quashed an anti-decree bill, the proponents of state legislation to nullify the decree's provisions for selling films in blocks of five this week prepared to press their measures, state by state. Latest of the efforts was the sudden measure thrown into the Michigan legislature Tuesday, by Representative Raymond J. Snow. The bill would force distributors to sell their season's product, with a 20 per cent cancellation privilege; and would prohibit forcing of short subjects, newsreels and reissues. It would also have distributors licensed by the state.

The Georgia bill went down by a 90-74 vote, after unanimous passage in the Senate. On Saturday, the House rejected a move to reconsider it.

In Minnesota, the anti-decree measure sponsored by Northwest Allied and opposed by the majors, was still pending at mid-week in both House and Senate.

NEWSPAPER PUBLISHERS EYE THE FILM INDUSTRY FOR A 'NEW DEAL'

Amusement Page Fifth Most Popular Feature; Stills Rated Above 'Blurbs'; More Interest in Columnists than Critics

A nationwide approach to the motion picture industry intended to develop better relations, both publicitywise and for advertising purposes, has been started by the American Newspaper Publishers Association, through its Bureau of Advertising, representing 620 newspapers, and working in conjunction with the American Association of Advertising Agencies and the Association of National Advertisers, with respective memberships of 123 agencies and 325 national advertisers.

Recognizing that the motion picture is one of the newspapers' ranking space buyers, the project is aimed directly to the operators of the 15,500 theatres in this country and the 1,246 in Canada, hardly any of which do not have steady relations with some newspaper.

Through a special study on the subject made for MOTION PICTURE HERALD, the publishers urge that the exhibitor personally make a closer inspection of his position in relation to his local papers.

The subject assumes special interest at this time in view of the potentialities of the fast-growing frequency-modulation radio transmission as a new medium of promotion for local theatre owners, merchants and others, in sending their sales messages directly into the home in competition with newspaper advertising.

Audience of 84,000,000

In their new approach to motion pictures, the newspaper publishers this week pointed out that the daily newspaper audience in the United States and Canada for motion picture publicity and advertising totals 45,150,000 women and 38,990,000 men (based on 1.5 adult men, and 1.5 adult women readers per copy). This total represents 77 percent of the women and 62 percent of the men who read the 43,000,000 copies of newspapers published every day in the U. S. and Canada. These figures were determined from The Continuing Study of Newspaper Reading.

The amusement page, it was found, rates fifth among all newspaper features.

For years there has been an admitted need for impartial, scientifically gathered data on the newspaper reading habits of the nation. Until recently, there was no information of this sort on newspapers as a whole. In 1939, through the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association. The Continuing Study of Newspaper Reading was launched. This is cited by the publishers as "the most important research work ever conducted by newspapers collectively." The Study is operated by the Advertising Research Foundation of the American Association of Advertising Agencies and the Association of National Advertisers.

The Continuing Study of Newspaper Reading is said by the publishers to answer numerous questions that have befuddled advertisers over a long period. For example, one of the most frequent complaints heard by a newspaper is one concerning page position—and the motion picture industry was said to often complain about that; too. Advertisers are said to have always believed that the farther forward a particular article or advertisement appears, the better it will be read.

"This thought has been so prevalent," the Study says, "that in many cases it is the chief bone of contention between the publisher and his clients; sometimes leading to an absolute severance of business relations. Yet, in The Continuing Study of Newspaper Reading we find that the normal reading habit for both men and women, is to go through the entire newspaper, looking at every page, and stopping to read when something catches their attention."

	MEN Percent	WOMEN Percent
The Front Pages	98	98
First Section	99	100
Second Section	99	99
Third Section	98	98
Fourth Section	99	98
Inside—Section One	97	99
Inside—Section Two	98	99
Inside—Section Three	98	98
Inside—Section Four	97	97

The amusement page is described as one of the most popular pages in a newspaper. Excluding front pages, it is out-ranked by only the picture, comic, editorial and sports in total readership. The amusement page ranks fifth among all feature pages, as follows:

MEN	Percent	WOMEN	Percent
Comic Pages	85	Comic Pages	85
Editorial Pages	82	Society Pages	83
Sports Pages	73	Editorial Pages	80
Amusement Pages	62	Amusement Pages	77
Society Pages	43	Sports Pages	36
Financial Pages	35	Financial Pages	23

The publishers urge exhibitors to project these percentages against the circulations of their own local newspaper. For example, if the local paper has a circulation of 100,000, approximately 208,000 readers will read something on the amusement page. Using the percentages given in the chart nets above, 115,500 women and 93,000 men would be a minimum audience. This total is based on only 1.5 adult men and 1.5 adult women readers per copy. Children under eighteen are not included, since they were not interviewed.

"However," the Study says, "children are important to the motion picture industry, and read the papers in the average U. S. family. Thus, the newspaper will be read by many more potential motion picture customers than indicated above."

The publishers say that a general opinion throughout the motion picture industry seems to be that Thursdays and Fridays are the days on which to concentrate promotion material, adding that there is no one day of the week on which one can definitely point towards increased reader interest in the daily newspapers, as explained in the following table:

DAY	Amusement Pages Men Percent	Amusement Pages Women Percent	Amusement Advertising Men Percent	Amusement Advertising Women Percent
Monday	(insufficient cases)		(insufficient cases)
Tuesday	68	79	38	55
Wednesday	61	77	52	62
Thursday	62	77	44	62
Friday	61	79	46	57
Saturday	(insufficient cases)		(insufficient cases)

In the case of a few individuals the question of relative merit between morning and evening newspapers may have arisen. In the papers studied it is said there was an approximately equal number of morning and evening editions. When a breakdown of reader traffic is made, a slight variance was found in favor of women readers for the morning editions, and for men readers in evening editions. Average reading of amusement pages in morning papers was 61 percent of men, and 79 percent of women; in evening papers, 65 percent of men, and 76 percent of women.

Breaking down the reader interest in different subjects on the amusement page, the publishers claim "a lot of preconceived notions about values are knocked into a cocked-hat." Keeping in mind the fact that the page traffic includes reading by 62 percent of the men and 77 percent of the women, the reading by type of content is as follows:

TYPE	READING Men Percent	READING Women Percent
Advertising Block	44	59
Pictures	33	59
Syndicated Columnists	15	33
Local Critics	11	19
Time Tables, Guides, etc.	4	8
Blurbs	5	9

As far as free publicity is concerned, it is said there is only one technique that approaches the success of the advertising block, and that is the publicity picture, whether it be a still from a coming attraction or a posed shot of a screen personality. "There is a good reason for the picture technique doing the best publicity job, because the public wants something authentic—a still shot from a coming attraction, or a picture of a famous star is not only pleasant to look at, but also gives the reader a taste of what he can expect in the theatre that evening."

Publicity blurbs, it was said, which in most cases are turned out for "a dime a dozen," are just that to the reader, and reader reactions are shown in the above table. Time tables, movie show guides, etc., which one finds on many amusement pages in small bordered boxes were said to attract good attention for their size.

BRITISH SHORTS COPY NEWSREELS

British exhibitors rebelled this week against compulsory exhibition of the Ministry of Information's weekly propaganda short when the issue released on Monday almost exactly duplicated newsreel coverage of the recent sea raid on Lofoten, Norway. Operators claim the Ministry is unfairly competing with the newsreels, and expecting the cinemas to devote screen time to pictures that have already been adequately, and almost exactly, covered by prior newsreel releases. Circuits and independents, totalling approximately 1,500, refused to show the Lofoten pictures again, compelling Information officials to issue statements apologizing for the duplication. Firm attitude of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association suggests a showdown over the question of government encroachment on trade territory.

The local critic receives more attention than blurbs dated "Hollyywood," because here again authenticity is indicated.

Syndicated columnists (not necessarily writing about pictures and Hollywood) of the Winchell, Parsons, Sullivan, Fidler, Dorothy Dix ilk were said to get the next best reading after publicity pictures and advertising. When these columns appear on the amusement pages they help to draw reader traffic.

One thing that may be noted as missing in the above table is the authentic news story about Hollywood and the picture business. When these stories are really newsworthy, the editor places them in a deserving news spot. Reader attention for stories of this nature is described as phenomenally high, particularly with women. For an example, the return of Robert Montgomery from the French Ambulance Service was publicized with a picture in one of the papers studied, and 82 percent of women readers were attracted by the story, as were 71 percent of men.

Forty-four per cent of the men and 59 per cent of the women who read the newspaper read the amusement ads, making the daily advertising audience 38,055,000 adult women and 28,380,000 adult men.

Prepared Audiences

The publishers say:

"Motion pictures, without doubt, are the first consideration in the minds of the people when searching for relaxation, and it will pay the industry to make the most of their opportunity. People want to go to the movies, and the exhibitor will get them into his theatre if he will answer these questions:

"(1) What is playing?
"(2) Who is in it?
"(3) What type of picture?
"(4) Where is it playing?
"(5) What is the cost?

"Whether a picture is going to be a profit or a loss to the exhibitor, oftentimes depends on just a few admissions. The major newspapers throughout the United States and Canada stand ready to aid the exhibitor in getting his maximum box-office. Although only a representative group of newspapers have been surveyed, all members of the Bureau of Advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association have final reports on the findings, and a cooperative analysis of these by members of the picture industry and representatives of the local newspapers, should aid greatly in raising local box-office sales," the Study says.

The Continuing Study of Newspaper Reading was undertaken by the Foundation in line with its general objective of "making available broad and competent facts regarding the more scientific use of advertising." By learning just how people read news, editorial and advertising content it was believed that the buyer of newspaper advertising might improve his use of newspaper white space, and that the newspaper editor and newspaper users, such as exhibitors, might obtain reader interest figures on news, features and editorials.

Thirty newspapers in the U. S. and Canada were surveyed in both the morning and evening fields. Strategically located, both large and small circulations, these 30 papers were picked for a representative cross-section sample of the nation's reading habits.

Interviews were conducted on the day following the publication of the particular paper to be studied. The person interviewed was asked to indicate on an unmarked issue of the paper exactly what he or she remembered having read the previous day . . . not "usually read" or "is going to read," but "actually read."

MARYLAND SEEKS CENSOR FOR STAGE

Certain theatrical performances on the stage and similar types of entertainment would be examined by a committee just as films are now by the Maryland Censor Board, if House Bill No. 547, recently introduced in the House of Delegates of the Maryland General Assembly in Annapolis, is passed. The board would consist of three members.

In San Antonio, a petition has been presented to the City Council asking the enactment of an ordinance providing a local censor board for all amusements. The petition urges a board of nine members, with not more than three nor less than one to be paid.

Testimonials for Berger and Beattie

A testimonial dinner for Rudolph Berger, who recently was promoted from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer branch manager in Washington, D. C., to district manager, will be held in the capital at the Willard Hotel on April 7th. Chairman of the committee in charge is Sidney Lust. A. E. Lichtman and Hardie Meakin are vice-chairmen, Alvin Newmyer will be toastmaster.

Meanwhile, a testimonial dinner was held in Scranton, Pa., Wednesday night for George Beattie, Paramount branch sales manager in that territory, by the Motion Picture Associates. John Nolan, Comerford executive, was chairman of the committee. Delegations from upper Pennsylvania, the New York home office, Buffalo, Philadelphia and Albany, totaling more than 200, attended. Jay Emanuel was toastmaster.

Honor MacGowan

Twentieth Century-Fox studio personnel bade farewell to Kenneth MacGowan, producer, Tuesday, at a party in Hollywood. Mr. MacGowan was to leave the Coast this week for New York, where he will be production head of the film division of Nelson Rockefeller's office directing cultural and commercial relations between the republics of the Western hemisphere.

Brings Siamese Film

Asserted to be the first dramatic motion picture filmed in Siam for screenings in the United States, "King of the White Elephant," arrived last week in California by China Clipper, in the custody of Louis Banomyong, who then proceeded to New York, where the film is being edited this week. Though the picture has a native cast, dialogue is in English.

Copeland Transferred

Ray Copeland, formerly branch manager of Paramount in Des Moines, has taken over his new duties in the same capacity in Kansas City, Mo.

Kelly Succeeds Given

George Kelly succeeds Stanley Given, booker at the Paramount Philadelphia exchange. Mr. Given has been conscripted.

Three Anti-Trust Suits Continue

The anti-trust front continued quiet this week with exhibitors and others evidently watching the results of the first arbitration proceedings before deciding to turn again to the courts.

Federal Judge Elmer Davies, in Nashville, this week set July 7th as the date for trial of the U. S. Government suit against Crescent Amusement Circuit and Columbia, United Artists and Universal.

In Detroit last week testimony was concluded in the case of the Midwest Theatres, Inc., against the Co-operative Theatres of Michigan and the plaintiff was given until April 14th to file a brief and the defendants given three weeks beyond that date to file an answering brief. After that arguments of the briefs probably will be heard in court. This schedule dimmed hope of a final settlement before the new selling season begins. Questions involved concern the use made of the buying power of the Co-operative Theatres of Michigan and its alleged adverse effect on Midwest Theatres, Inc.

The Lansdowne Amusement Company, Harrison Brothers and Company, Inc., and Irvin Realty and Holding Company, Inc., have filed notice of examination of William F. Rodgers, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sales head; Tom Connors, eastern, southern and Canadian sales manager and Abe Montague, general sales manager of Columbia, in the U. S. District Court for the Southern District of New York. The examination in connection with the plaintiffs' anti-trust suit against the majors was scheduled for March 28th. The suit was filed in the Federal Court in Philadelphia and previously notice of examination of several Warner Brothers' officials have been given.

A decision in the case of the Montcalm Theatre Company against the United Detroit Theatres in the Detroit Federal Court is expected early in April. Testimony was concluded last week and the plaintiff was to file this week a brief and the defendant has until March 31st to do likewise.

Universal Papers Subpoenaed

The Department of Justice on Wednesday received from Federal Judge John Knight in Buffalo the right to inspect numerous documents of Universal, in the pending Federal anti-trust action against the Schine circuit and the majors.

It was said the documents the Government was interested in were those in which Universal had business relations with the circuit, or with the seven other major companies named in the original complaint. Furthermore, the documents are expected to bear names of corporations or persons to whom Universal allegedly refused to license films, and with whom it is claimed to have refused to negotiate on runs and locations.

This week, Universal officials and those of the Justice Department were expected to agree on delivery of such records, as provided by court order.

Wanger Honored Guest

Walter Wanger, producer, and president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, was to be guest of honor at the annual Founders' Day, Friday, of the Rocky Mountain Screen Club, Denver.

"WE HAVE THE RIGHT TO SELL FILMS TO A RAT-TRAP", SAYS JENKINS, FOX

Chicago Case Dismissed after Distributor Counsel Argues Theatre Was Not Customer; MGM Settles Dallas Case

"We have a right to sell to a 'rat-trap' theatre if we so desire," Felix A. Jenkins, secretary and general counsel of Twentieth Century-Fox, declared on Thursday of last week at the hearing of the No. 2-Chicago arbitration case brought by the Ken theatre. The case was dismissed on the ground that run and not clearance was involved so the matter could not be arbitrated until the decree becomes effective on September 1, 1941.

The arbitration complaint was filed over a month ago by Ben Banovitz of the Ken theatre and Twentieth Century-Fox, Paramount, RKO and the Schoenstadt circuit were named in the clearance dispute. The arbitrator was Charles P. Megan, former president of the Chicago Bar Association.

Dismissal Asked

Mr. Jenkins said:

"We do not care to sell or license second-week run to the Ken theatre and they do not want third run. Under the terms of the consent decree an exchange manager has the 'God-given' right to be stupid and determine to whom product shall be sold. We have a right to sell a 'rat-trap' theatre if we so desire. In this instance the Ken is not our customer inasmuch as we have not made a sale and I make a formal motion to dismiss this case.

"We have not imposed clearance on the Ken theatre," Mr. Jenkins continued, "because we have not sold any of the 1940-41 product to that house. That the Shakespeare (Schoenstadt circuit theatre) shall play ahead of the Ken was imposed as a measure of protection and the fact Schoenstadt operates other theatres is not relevant in this case."

Mr. Megan, the arbitrator, ruled that the motions of the defense counsels to dismiss the action would be sustained and the complaint dismissed owing to lack of jurisdiction under section eight of the consent decree. He also refused to hear the evidence so that an appeal could be taken.

Washington Hearing Opens

More than 30 exhibitors and distributor representatives were present Tuesday morning at the Washington office of the American Arbitration Association to witness the hearing of the first case filed anywhere in the system established by the consent decree. E. Barrett Prettyman, had been selected as arbitrator of the complaint of the Walbrook Theatre, Baltimore, against the seven-day clearance granted by Vitagraph and Twentieth Century-Fox to the Ambassador, Forest and Gwynn Theatres, operated by the Frank H. Durkee Enterprises.

Throughout Tuesday a mass of evidence, mostly documentary, was put into the record during a session which ran from 10 A. M., to 5 P. M., with a short recess for lunch, and then similarly through Wednesday.

At the opening of the hearing, counsel for the various interests identified themselves as J. Purdon Wright of Baltimore, appearing for the Walbrook Theatre; John F. Caskey, New York, for Twentieth Century-Fox; Morris Ruffman, New York, for Vitagraph, and J. Calvin Carney, Baltimore, for the Forest Theatre, intervenor.

Mr. Caskey opened the hearing with an hour discussion of distribution, clearance and other problems.

First witness to be put on the stand was Thomas D. Goldberg, president of the Walbrook Theatre Company, who testified that he also operated the Hartford Theatre and had under construction the Hilton Theatre. The Walbrook, he said, is more than two miles from the Ambassador, and nearly that far from the Forest. The house was built in 1916, seats 950 persons and plays A pictures 95 per cent of the time. The house plays MGM, Paramount, RKO, Universal, Warner and Twentieth Century-Fox pictures, he said, contracting for Twentieth Century and RKO films on a flat rental and the others on a percentage basis.

In the first case to come before a Denver arbitration board J. J. Goodstein Enterprises, Inc., asked that Twentieth Century-Fox, Loew's and Paramount be directed to sell him some product. Mr. Goodstein, who owns and operates the Longmont theatre, Longmont, Colorado, claims that he can buy only from Republic, RKO and Warner Brothers, and that at times some of these dates are cancelled to allow Fox Theatres to play the films at their Boulder, Colo., house, 25 miles distant.

On Tuesday Mr. Goodstein testified that he was not able to buy from Republic, RKO and WB until after a representative of Thurman W. Arnold, assistant U. S. attorney general, had a conference with Spyros Skouras, head of National Theatres, who, it was said approved the deals. Defendants asserted that Mr. Goodstein offered to operate on the product of the three companies.

Additional arbitrators for the Kansas City panel were announced this week:

Paul Barnett, lawyer.

Glen L. Bennett, Equitable Life Assurance Association of the United States.

Russell F. Greiner, Greiner-Fifield Lithographic Company.

John Thornberry, lawyer.

John E. Jones, First National Assurance Association.

Proctor Kerr, Arthur Young and Company.

Guy B. Park, lawyer.

MGM Settles Third Case

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer continued its policy of settling arbitration cases before the hearing, where possible, by reaching an agreement last week in the demand filed by Joseph's Drive-In near Austin, Texas (Dallas Case—No. 1). The complaint requested "some run" from MGM and Twentieth-Century-Fox, with the Interstate, Underwood and Ezell theatres of Dallas named as interested parties. After granting "some run" MGM was dropped from the case.

Previously MGM settled the No. 1 Boston Case brought by the Park theatre (Paulston, Inc.) of Nashua, N. H., and was removed as a defendant before the hearing opened. Also with Paramount, RKO and Twentieth Century-Fox, MGM settled the clearance case filed by John H. Taylor, operator of the Charles in La Plate, Md.

Professor Thomas P. Whelan of Marquette University has been named arbitrator in Milwaukee's first case, tentatively set for hearing at 9 A. M., March 29, in the American Arbitration Association's headquarters in the Loyalty Bldg., Milwaukee. The action involves a matter of clearance between the Rex at Evansville and the Jeffris in Janesville with Paramount charged with giving the latter house clearance over the former.

The hearing of the No. 1-New Orleans case, brought by Charles K. Woolner of the Drive-In theatre, has been scheduled for April 1st before Phillip E. James. Mr. Woolner also filed another case, his third, this time naming Warners in a "some run" action. The first and second demands named Paramount in "some run" and clearances cases respectively.

George A. Spiegelberg, a lawyer, was appointed to hear the No. 2 New York case brought by the Esquire Corporation, operator of the Squire in Great Neck, Long Island, N. Y. The case involves clearance and all five distributors and the Great Neck Playhouse, a Skouras house. The hearing has been set for April 3rd.

The first Oklahoma City case was filed this week by J. D. Guest, Ritz, Duncan, Okla. It was a "some run" complaint, naming Warners.

Second Denver Case Filed

In the second case filed with arbitration board in Denver, E. K. Menagh asked that he be given dates that would permit him to compete with the Rex at Brighton, Colo., five miles from his Star theatre at Ft. Lupton, Colorado. Mr. Menagh claimed that all five companies which signed the decree gave the Rex unreasonable clearance. He requested damages and other relief.

The sixth New York demand was filed this week by Joseph Siccardi, president of the Andora Amusement Company which operates the Liberty in Plainfield, N. J. Paramount, RKO, Warners and Twentieth Century-Fox were named, as were the Paramount, Strand and Oxford, Walter Reade theatres in Plainfield. Mr. Siccardi asked that the clearance enjoyed by the circuit houses be cut to 14 days on single features and 7 days on double bills.

Warren Leslie was appointed arbitrator to hear the Forum theatre, Metuchen, N. J., demand (New York Case—No. 3).

ARBITRATION CASES

The following is a summary of the arbitration cases filed to date:

Hearings Held:

One in Chicago on a "clearance" case, with the complaint dismissed on the ground that the subject involved was a definite run and not clearance.

One in Washington on a "clearance" demand brought by the Walbrook, Baltimore, and involving Warner Brothers, Twentieth Century-Fox, and the Durkee circuit.

One in Denver on a "some run" case filed by Joseph J. Goodstein, Longmont against Loew's Twentieth Century-Fox and Paramount.

U.S. EARMARKS ANOTHER 5 MILLIONS FOR ARMY MOVIE THEATRE BUILDING

Motion Picture Service Expanded to Book Films for 198 Post Theatres; No Billings Allowed Off Reservations

Plans of the War Department at Washington to provide for motion picture and other entertainment at all Army camps and posts will require the expenditure of more than $5,000,000 for additional motion picture theatre and recreation centers.

Funds for the work are included in appropriations which have been approved by Congress for Army camp construction and for construction of housing and other facilities for defense workers.

The War Department itself will receive probably $1,500,000 or more for construction of film and recreation facilities at camps and posts, and the emergency housing program calls for probably $2,750,000 more. In addition, funds for films and recreation were carried in the regular War Department appropriation bills.

The plans of the Government for motion picture entertainment contemplate that provision shall be made to permit every man in the Army to go to shows at least once a week. When completed, there will be a seating capacity of one seat for six men; actually, the capacity of the post and camp theatres will vary as required by local conditions, and camps remote from centers where amusement may be sought will probably have a proportionately larger seating capacity than those in the vicinity of large cities.

The defense housing program calls for the construction of recreation centers at all points where large numbers of defense workers and their families will be located. Many of these points are in out-of-the-way areas, far from cities and towns, and will be not-so-small cities themselves. The Government will provide all the facilities of city life for its defense workers, and a feature of every community will be its community center and recreation hall, with motion picture theatres where the number justifies their construction.

Becomes Problem

With the national selective service training program gathering momentum, entertainment for the approximately 1,003,500 men now in Army service is becoming a major problem for morale officers and the commanders of some 125 training posts.

Motion pictures, obtained through the rapidly expanding Army Motion Picture Service, have provided the majority of the entertainment offered at military posts to date. Radio, vaudeville, post amateur shows and musical programs have been offered occasionally at a few of the larger Army posts and plans are being laid to bring more "live" entertainment to the Army recruits.

However, lack of stage facilities, and the unwillingness of Army officers to sponsor elaborate stage shows likely to interfere with military work will continue to restrict most of the entertainment programs to expansion of existing post motion picture facilities. Almost all posts have some sort of screening facilities and another 30 or 40 Army theatres are planned or under construction.

ARMY GETS FIRST TRAINING FILMS

The War Department at Washington this week announced the acceptance of the first two training films produced in Hollywood by the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, headed by Darryl Zanuck. A third film is now in production and a number of others will be produced before June 30th next, under plans whereby the Research Council produces pictures which are beyond the capacity of the Army Signal Corps.

The two pictures accepted were on health subjects; the one under way deals with military customs and courtesies. Production was carried on at the Twentieth Century-Fox studios under the direction of Lieutenant Colonel Zanuck.

The first two pictures to be made were directed, respectively, by John Ford and Irving Pichel, with photography in the hands of George Barnes and Virgil Miller.

Post Commanders in Charge

Regulation of the entertainment program, and all arrangements for visiting shows, now rest ultimately with each post commander. Corps morale officers, the motion picture service and voluntary entertainment assistance groups must, under regulations prescribed by the adjutant general, submit programs to the local commandant who may accept any entertainment offers that do not conflict with military activities. Permanent theatres are under construction, with some stage facilities, at larger posts, but as yet most encampments are equipped only for cinema programs.

Thomas Martell, civilian chief of the Army Motion Picture Service office in New York which arranges with home offices for the booking of films for approximately 198 post theatres, said the film service is keeping pace with Army expansion. The Motion Picture Service is self-supporting and books films on a flat rental basis. Admissions are sold to soldiers by coupon books, at an average cost of 14c each. Deficits from the smaller posts are made up by the large centers. At present 5,625 films are handled each month by the service. Prints are distributed through regular exchange centers and the Motion Picture Service maintains operations offices in six cities throughout the country. Rental costs run from $10 to $25 a print. Enlisted men operate the post theatres. They receive extra pay from the service.

Matching the expansion of the Army under the draft law, the Motion Picture Service expects to increase the number of its theatres to about 300 and will probably double its purchase of feature pictures, shorts and newsreels. New theatres have already been opened at Camp Upton, Fort Dix, Fort Bragg and Fort Grant and new and expanded theatres will soon be ready for soldiers at other training centers. Most camps exhibit films on a split week, with single feature and shorts programs on Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Thursday, Friday and a double feature action program for Saturday. Shows are held twice nightly, at 6 and 8 P. M. Equipment for the theatres is purchased by the Army and by the Motion Picture Service out of its operating funds. The average post shows 20 features per month.

Clearance for the Army theatres varies, but in most instances runs 30 days behind the local exhibitor. In a few cases clearances up to 90 days have been reported. Mr. Martell denied, however, that post theatres compete with the local exhibitor.

No Billings Off Post

Civilian employes of the Army, and guests of soldiers are permitted to attend post theatres, but billings may not be circulated off the post and persistent local visitors are not encouraged, he said. The Army accepts National Board of Review ratings and classifies its film purchases as "F" (Family) or "M" (Mature). In all cases pictures are subject to censorship by the post commander, but in practice deletions are very rare.

Bert Lytell, president of Equity, at a recent meeting of the Friends of New York State Soldiers and Sailors, Inc., expressed doubt that the motion picture service, and haphazard amateur and vaudeville programs would satisfy the amusement demands of the soldiers. He called for the establishment of adequate theatre facilities in the Army camps and pledged talent for the Army shows if a coordinated booking system can be set up.

Equity offered to set up a central booking service and pledged cooperation of the entire Four A's membership. Mr. Lytell, John Lorenz and Maida Reade were authorized to negotiate with the War Department. The March issue of Equiety's magazine, however, charges the War Department with indifference to suggestions for organizing "adequate professional entertainment" in the camps. It asks the Secretary of War to accept offers of assistance and predicts that professional shows can be offered enlisted men at 50 and 25 cent admission prices.

Civilian Group Formed

In New York a civilian organization has been formed by Thomas J. Watson, International Business Machine executive and others, to promote the welfare of soldiers and sailors from the Empire State. Known as the Friends of the New York Soldiers and Sailors, Inc., the group raised $70,000 for Christmas gifts and entertainment for troups at Fort McClellan, Anniston, Ga. Currently it is devising plans to bring live entertainment to camps in the South and the New York area, and has purchased stage and motion picture equipment for installation in several posts.

On March 12th the name of the committee was changed to Citizens Committee for the Army and Navy, and it was reported in Washington that its activities will be expanded to national scale with the blessing of service officials. They will seek a $1,000,000 fund.

Among those assisting Mr. Watson on the entertainment committee are Mrs. Junius S. Morgan, Brock Pemberton, Antoinette Perry, Mrs. Winthrop Ames Pemberton, Mrs. Lawrence Tibbett, Emily Holt, John Lorenz, Maida Reade, and Robert E. Sherwood.

PARAMOUNT SETS 1942 SHORTS; PRC LISTS 42; MONOGRAM MEETS APRIL 4

42 Features Announced for Season by Producers Corp. at Chicago Meeting; Heavy Shorts Program Set by Paramount

Producers Releasing Corporation this week became the third distributor to announce its 1941-42 program, (listing 42 pictures), and to hold a convention. Previously, Republic and Universal announced their new season product to their assembled sales personnel.

Paramount, on Wednesday, took an unprecedented action—new product-wise—when it announced its complete short subject program in advance of its feature product announcement, and before its annual sales convention. The company listed the heaviest program in its history.

A fourth convention was announced this week, when Monogram set the dates as April 4th, 5th and 6th, and Hollywood as the location.

Republic made its first circuit deal of the season, with the Paramount-Richards-Saenger Theatres Corporation; and Paramount's theatre circuit officials and partners in the field began convening on Thursday in Hot Springs, Virginia.

"42 Minimum", P. R. C. Convention Is Told

Producers Releasing Corporation will have on its 1941-42 program a "minimum" of 42 pictures, 18 of them westerns, and at least four of them "specials"—O. Henry Briggs, president, told the first annual convention of the company, at the Congress Hotel, Chicago, on Sunday. The company's executive and sales personnel met from Saturday through Monday.

Mr. Briggs added, "The market for PRC pictures demands a maximum of dialogue—entertainment keyed to the pace of today, as the public lives it and likes it, with emphasis on the things that divert; and that's the kind of pictures PRC is pledged to produce and distribute."

The company executives said the 24 features and specials would be of four groups: drama, comedy-drama, mystery melodroma, and character comedies with musical hits featured.

The sales policy of PRC was outlined by Leon Fromkess, vice-president in charge of domestic and foreign sales, who said the company had won the confidence and respect of the industry because it made no extravagant claims beyond its power of delivery.

"In spite of conditions overseas we have closed deals in every country in the world in which it is possible to get," he declared. This is partly because PRC pictures contain stories in action and situation, obviating excessive use of superimposed titles, he said that this was particularly true of the Latin-American markets.

Guest of honor of the convention was William Gell, general managing director of Pathe Pictures, Ltd., United Kingdom distributors of PRC films. Other speakers were George Batcheller, in charge of feature production; Sigmund Neufeld, supervisor of westerns; Joseph O'Sullivan, director of advertising and publicity; George Gill, Harry Asher, Bert Kulick, Louis Rutstein, Lee Goldberg, Jack Adams, and others.

Following are the specials announced by Mr. Batcheller: "Swamp Woman," a drama; "Hard Guy," a comedy-drama; "The Terror Trail," a horror-mystery; "They Can't Get Away With It," an action melodrama; and "Argentine Love," a Latin-American romantic drama.

Mr. Neufeld announced one "outdoor action special," to have an Alaska locale.

The first day of the convention, Saturday, was given over to meetings of the board of directors, and conferences of franchise holders, O. Henry Briggs presiding. Present at the conferences were: Messrs. Briggs and Fromkess, George Gill, Harry Asher, Abe Fischer, Bert Kulick, M. & L. Lefton, Jack Adams, Louis Rutstein and William Flemion. Following the meeting the franchise holders discussed mutual problems. Franchise holders attending included: Ike Katz, Atlanta; Mr. Asher, Boston; Edward E. Heller, Charlotte; Mr. Fischer, Chicago; Nat B. Kaplan, Cincinnati; Lee L. Goldberg, Cleveland; Mr. Adams, Dallas, Bernard Newman, Denver; Mr. Flemion, Detroit; Sam H. Abrams, Indianapolis; John Muchmore, Kansas City; S. A. Arnold, Little Rock, Ark; Mr. Rutstein, Los Angeles; Charles Weiner, Minneapolis; F. F. Goodrow, New Orleans; Mr. Kulick, New York; Sid Kulick, Buffalo; E. B. Walker, Oklahoma City; Herbert Given, Philadelphia; M. & L. Lefton, Pittsburgh; A. R. Dietz, St. Louis; Dave Nathanson, San Francisco; Ollie Wog, Seattle; Mr. Gill, Washington.

The second day saw the entire personnel in attendance, with other guests apart from Mr. Gell, making their appearance—Henry Armetta, who starred in "Caught in the Act" for the company, and is scheduled for two more films; George Houston, star of the Lone Rider westerns; and Art Davis, new cowboy star of radio, signed to make westerns on the new program.

On the second day, Harry Asher, chairman of the board of directors, opened with a resume of the progress of the company within one year, paying tribute to all departments and their executives.

Mr. Gell praised PRC product, told of his trip to America, and declared that though he had "to cover 12,000 miles to make it," nothing could stop him. He suggested a slogan for PRC product: "Consistency, Reliability, Consistency."

Paramount Sets Largest Short Subject Program

Paramount's short subject and news production budget for 1941-42 will be its largest, Neil Agnew, vice-president and general sales manafer, announced in New York Wednesday.

Eighty-five one-reel films and one two-reel color cartoon will be released, in addition to 104 Paramount newsreels.

Three new series will be introduced and there will be an expansion of existing groups. The new series will include 12 "Superman" cartoons, in color; six "Quiz Kids" films, and six of "Hedda Hopper's Hollywood."

In addition there will be six "Madcap Models" Puppetoons, in color; four Robert Benchley comedies, 12 "Popeye" cartoons, six issues each of "Popular Science" and "Unusual Occupations," in color; six "Speaking of Animals" novelties, six "Paramount Headliners," 13 "Grantland Rice Sportlights," two "Fascinating Journeys" and one special novelty two-reel cartoon, in color.

"Superman," based on the cartoon strip by Jerry Siegel and Joe Shuster, currently appearing in 235 newspapers with a circulation of 20,000,000, as well as on the air, will be produced at the Max Fleischer Studios in Miami. The "Popeye" cartoons also will be made at the Florida plant, along with the special two-reel cartoon.

"Quiz Kids" will feature the same youngsters who have been on the air on the NBC Blue coast-to-coast network, reaching 10,000,000. Gerard Darrow, eight-year-old, will appear in each release, along with a rotating group of four teammates selected from the radio program.

"Madcap Models" Puppetoons, produced by George Pal, in color, will present lifelike puppets against third-dimensional miniature backgrounds.

"Popular Science" and "Unusual Occupations," both will be produced in color by Jerry Fairbanks and Bob Carlisle. The former charts new advances in the everyday life of millions of Americans, and the latter presents a gallery of bizarre individuals and unconventional jobs.

"Speaking of Animals," produced largely by the same pair, presents a combination of animation and trick photography in which animals comment verbally about their own activities.

"Hedda Hopper's Hollywood" will be produced by Herbert Moulton, mirroring the daily life of the cinema colony. Miss Hopper is sponsored three times weekly over CBS network and she has a syndicated column in newspapers.

"The new 'Paramount Headliners' will have a higher budget allocation than previously and will be flexible in nature, permitting production or acquisition of independent short subjects of exceptional merit, or inclusion of timely themes," it was announced.

The "Fascinating Journeys" series, produced by Count and Countess Von Keller, in color, will present two new releases, "Road in India" and "Indian Temples."

"Paramount has appropriated a record exploitation budget for the promotion of shorts on a feature picture scale; a separate advertising and publicity department has been set up for this purpose," it was said.

Monogram Meets In Hollywood

Monogram franchise holders and executives are to convene in Hollywood from April 4th through 6th, at the Roosevelt Hotel, with more than 125 expected. The new season program will be announced; also, the funds allocated to increased budgets for a group of special attractions.

Presiding will be W. Ray Johnston, president; Trem Carr, of the board of directors; and Samuel "Steve" Broidy, general sales manager. A guest will be William Gell, Monogram distributor in Great Britain.

The situation the company faces in the consent decree adopted by the majors, will be thoroughly explored, it was anticipated. Friday and Saturday, the first two days of meeting, it was expected, will be devoted to business

COLUMBIA SIGNS FOR THREE YEARS

The agreement under which Columbit will release two English pictures annually produced by the new company formed by George Formby, top English comedian, is for three years. Each of the six films will be planned to count for triple quota credit under the distributors' quota. Columbia will supply part of the financing in return for world distribution. The first film is expected to go into work within 60 days.

PRODUCT PLANS PUSHED

sessions, with the annual banquet planned for Saturday night.

The final day, Sunday, will be spent by the assembled men in a sightseeing tour that morning, followed by a visit to the company's ranch at Newhall that afternoon.

In production at the ranch will be producer Edward Finney's "The Pioneers," a James Fenimore Cooper story. Tex Ritter is the star.

The convention guests will see two other company films in work: "King of Zombies" and "Redhead."

Among those who will attend the sessions are John Mangham, Atlanta; Ben Welansky, Boston; Harry Berkson, Buffalo; Henri Elman, Chicago; William Onie, Cincinnati; Nate Schultz, Cleveland; Ed Blumenthal and John Franconi, Dallas; F. E. Judd, Des Moines; William Hurlbut, Detroit; William Benjamin, Kansas City; Howard Stubbins, Los Angeles; Charles Trampe, Milwaukee; Ben Nathanson, Minneapolis; Harry H. Thomas, New York; Carr Scott, Oklahoma City; S. J. Francis, Omaha; George West, St. Louis; Mel Hulling, San Francisco; L. T. Fidler, Denver.

The home office contingent includes, in addition to W. Ray Johnston, Trem Carr and Samuel "Steve" Broidy, the following: Herman Rifkin, vice-president; Ray E. Young, treasurer; Joseph Lamm, comptroller; Louis S. Lifton, director of advertising and publicity; John S. Harrington, manager of the print and accessories department; Lloyd L. Lind, head of the contract department; Russell M. Bell, art director; J. P. Friedhoff, office manager.

The production organization will be represented by Scott R. Dunlap, Lindsley Parsons, I. E. Chadwick, Edward F. Finney, George W. Weeks, Samuel Katzman and Paul Malvern.

Speakers will be, in addition to Mr. Johnston, Mr. Carr, Mr. Broidy, Scott Dunlap, I. E. Chadwick, Sam Katzman, and George Weeks.

Mr. Johnston, in New York last week and early this, was to leave for the Coast Friday, with stopovers scheduled in Chicago and Kansas City.

Republic Signs Saenger; Program Being Rushed

The first important circuit deal of the year for its 1941-42 program was obtained by Republic Pictures last week. It is with the Paramount-Richards-Saenger Theatres Corporation, of New Orleans, and was negotiated there with officials of the circuit, by James R. Grainger, president of the company, A. C. Bromberg, its southern franchise holder, and Leo Seioshnaydre, New Orleans branch manager.

Mr. Grainger, and William Baker, former United Artists salesman, promoted to manager of Republic's Chicago exchange, were hosts on Monday in that city to exhibitors, in celebration of the promotion.

Mr. Baker succeeded Harry Lorch, resigned.

Meanwhile, from Hollywood it was announced Republic is rushing its 1940-41 program so that it will be completed by August 11th. It now has six films in the cutting room.

Paramount's Theatre Partners In Convention

Paramount's theatre partners and home office theatre executives descended upon Hot Springs, Virginia, Thursday, the first day of a scheduled three-day meeting. Those to be there from New York included Barney Balaban, Stanton Griffis, Y. Frank Freeman, Leonard Goldenson, Sam Dembow, and Leon Netter.

Among the partners to be there were A. H. Myron, and Raymond Blank, G. Ralph Branton, S. A. Lynch, others.

To Set Up Warner Shorts Policy

Norman Moray, Warner Brothers' manager of short subject sales, was scheduled to arrive in Hollywood Friday for conferences with Jack Warner, in charge of production, and Gordon Hollingshead, on a perhaps new or changed policy of short subject selling, under the provisions of the consent decree to which Warner Brothers is a signatory.

They are also expected to delineate the new 1941-42 shorts program. The first short on that program, "Those Good Old Days," started work Friday, March 21st.

The company disclosed its entire 1940-41 short subjects program had been completed four months ahead of time.

On Tuesday, a meeting of Albany zone Warner circuit executives launched a 13-week drive to honor Joseph Bernhard, general manager, for his ten years with the company. The initiative for the drive was provided by M. A. "Moe" Silver, zone manager. Mr. Bernhard attended the Albany meeting, with Harry Goldberg, director of advertising and publicity for the circuit.

The Twentieth Century Fox studio, over the weekend, disclosed it now has 215 persons on its production-talent listings, 45 of them actors, 29 actresses, 13 stock players; 14 of them producers and associate producers.

The full producers' list was augmented recently by William Le Baron, Ernst Lubitsch, and Mark Hellinger. Sol Wurtzel had been up to then, the sole full producer.

The third annual Spyros Skouras Showmanship drive of the National Theatres' chain is to begin April 13, end July 12th. Competing will be 450 theatres, in classifications determined by seating capacities and runs.

"Tarzan" Deal Set

Crystal Pictures, Inc., of New York City, have announced they have concluded deals for the distribution in northern Illinois and Indiana with Special Attractions of Chicago and for New York State and northern New Jersey with Hoffberg Productions, Inc., for their picture, "The New Adventures of Tarzan." The picture had its first New York showing, Friday, March 21st, at the New York theatre.

Paramount Exercises Options

Paramount has exercised options on five important players. They are Fred MacMurray, Paulette Goddard, Betty Field, Virginia Dale and Martha O'Driscoll. Mr. MacMurray has been signed for two more years and Miss Goddard for one year. Miss Field, Miss Dale and Miss O'Driscoll have had their options renewed for another year.

Stars On Air

Nine featured film players were guests on the "Charity for the Wandering Christ" program Sunday evening over the Mutual network, one of a series arranged by the Bishops' Relief Committee. William Gargan was master of ceremonies. Among the nine were Irene Dunne, Spencer Tracy, Pat O'Brien, Una O'Connor, and Jack Haley.

Paramount Signs Kohlmar

Paramount has signed Fred Kohlmar as an associate producer. Previously he was an associate producer at Twentieth Century-Fox and a producer for Columbia.

U.S. Hearings Start on Labor Classifications

Arguments over 31 disputed classifications of studio workers—of the 585 listed by the Wages and Hours Act Administration recently—began on Wednesday at special hearings in the Los Angeles Federal Building. With representatives of studio unions present, as well as of the producers, it appeared to be the beginning of a fight by the unions to obtain the maximum benefits possible under the Act, and to force the producers to negotiate new contracts.

Joseph Padway, general counsel to the American Federation of Labor, represented the estimated 12,000 members of International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees' studio unions at the hearing. On Sunday, and Monday, he had conferred with the business agents of those unions, which for several weeks have been asking their international officers to aid in hurrying producer action on demands for adjustments in wage and working conditions.

Expected to be discussed during the hearings, which may last more than a week, were elimination of distant location rates, shifts in overtime and work-week limitations, the correctness of the 31 classifications disputed, and their status under the Act.

The international unions in the studio basic labor agreement were expected to protest at the hearings against those parts of the report of E. M. Cooking, chief analyst of the wages and hours division, which the unions claim interfere with concessions obtained from producers in the agreement.

Supervising the hearings is Merle Vincent, chief examiner of the wages and hours division.

Among those testifying were J. P. McGowan, executive secretary of the Screen Directors Guild; Fred Meyer, of Twentieth Century Fox; Herbert Lamb, production manager for the Walt Disney studio; William Littlejohn, Screen Cartoonists Guild; David O. Garber, Universal studio operations manager; Fred Pelton, producers' labor representative; and Edward M. Gilbert, president of the Set Designers Guild.

Publicists Draw Contract

Thursday night, in New York, the Eastern unit of the Screen Publicists Guild was to ratify the contract which it expects to present to the home offices of the eight majors, after expected certification by the National Labor Relations Board as the proper bargaining agency for the advertising and publicity workers in those offices.

Oral arguments were scheduled for Tuesday, April 3, in Washington, on the Guild's petition to the NLRB.

Members of the IATSE-affiliated Exchange Employees unions are being polled by the international on a change of their classification from "B" to "A" locals. This would give them autonomy, negotiation power, and representation at conventions.

Elected to represent the Associated Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania, in negotiations at Pittsburgh, with the projectionists' Local 171, are Harry Walker, chairman, Archie Fineman, Morris Finkel, and Harry Hendel. Mr. Walker is to serve on this "labor committee" for three years, the others for two.

FILMS ON the WAY to LATINS FOR HOLLYWOOD AND U. S. GOODWILL

Production, Distribution Plans Directed Southward in U. S. Plan for Cultural Exchange; New Product Shows Influence

Eyes turned southward this week as the motion picture industry spared a sidelong glance from production and selling plans for the 1941-42 season to survey what has been done, what is underway, and what remains to be done towards fulfilling its pledges of cooperation with the U. S. in the drive to improve cultural relations with South America, and to extend foreign markets for Hollywood. The prospect, in general, revealed a few films with a Pan-American motif already completed, several in production, and many planned for the near future.

Cinema participation in the U. S. Government's "Good Neighbor" policy is under the general supervision of John Hay Whitney and a committee of producers, directors, writers, actors, art directors and technicians appointed in January by Nelson A. Rockefeller, the President's Coordinator of Commercial and Cultural Relations Between the American Republics. Y. Frank Freeman, president of the Producers' Association, is chairman of the executive committee which directs the joint Hollywood effort to "do it the South American way."

New Production Attention

Story material is increasingly devoted to South American themes, drawing on the history, music, art and settings of the leading Pan American republics. Newsreel coverage has been extended throughout the western hemisphere and an increase in the number of short subjects and travelogues on Latin America is reported. New corps of experts are said to be on hand to check details of Latin American customs, settings and costumes as they are filmed in the Hollywood studios.

The Production Code Administration has appointed Addison Durland, radio and newspaperman, to its Hollywood staff to check scripts for authentic presntations of Spanish American customs, language and history. Mr. Durland has served as a Havana correspondent, South American wireless editor of the New York Herald Tribune, and chief of the Spanish section of NBC.

Personal appearance tours of South America by topflight stars have been announced by several of the major companies. Leading players and many featured players who are favored by South American audiences will visit theatres in Brazil, the Argentine, Mexico, Chile, Colombia and other countries as soon as production schedules permit.

More sales executives are directing special attention to South America. At least three major sales conventions have been held south of the Isthmus this year and more are scheduled. Documentary and commercial films are being transcribed with Spanish and Portuguese narration for free distribution through the Rockefeller Committee and the Pan American Union. There is extensive talk of producing major pictures, both in Spanish and in English on location in South America. Radio, on both sustaining and commercial programs, is renewing its attention to South American listeners.

"That Night in Rio," Twentieth Century-Fox musical, in color, was the first major picture dedicated to promoting hemispheric good will in line with the Whitney committee's suggestions. The story of romance and gay life in the Brazil capital was well received in the United States by reviewers and customers. Its South American reception, following its release in May, remains to be seen. Fox officials currently are working on plans for special exploitation of the Brazilian premiere.

Pictures on South America, in preparation or scheduled for early release, include "Down Argentine Way" (recently opened at Buenos Aires), "Blood and Sand," 20th Century-Fox; "They Met in Argentina," RKO; "The Life of Simon Bolivar," MGM; and several as yet untitled musicals. Several of the major companies are also distributing Spanish language films through Latin America. United Artists will handle "The Kingdom of God," produced in Cuba by Geza Polaty. Mexican pictures, some produced in Texas and Arizona by Aztec Films, are also being circulated throughout South America. Reciprocally Argentine Sono Films and Lumiton plan to distribute 36 features in the United States next year.

Free 16 mm. Distribution

A large collection of technical and cultural pictures, most of them in 16 mm., is being prepared for free Latin American distribution. Three million feet of film dealing with technical subjects such as the manufacture of glass, petroleum, steel, telephones and other products are being distributed by the Department of the Interior to schools and public institutions in Brazil, Mexico, Argentina and Peru. Forty-five topics are included in the catalogue. The commercial films are prepared by American business houses and are institutional, without direct commercial advertising.

Major newsreel companies are assigning top cameramen and editors to South America and a number of distributors are preparing special short subjects. RKO Pathe is releasing a series of three short subjects dealing with Nazi activities in South America, filmed and narrated by Julian Bryan. The pictures illustrate German political and commercial activity in Brazil, Chile and Argentina. MGM's News of the Day will film a South Amercia series under the direction of Norman Alley. Pathe is preparing a sports series in Latin America and Paramount and Universal are reported to be expanding staffs and offices in South and Central America.

Sales conventions have been held this year in Panama City by Paramount and Twentieth Century-Fox and Universal and other major companies are planning special gatherings of sales executives and Latin American franchise holders to discuss 1941-42 product. In addition to the "Pot o' Gold" debut at Mexico City special openings have been arranged for "Gone With the Wind," "Down Argentine Way" and other featured pictures, both in Mexico City and in the capitals of the other major American republics.

Personal appearance tours are being arranged by Hollywood studios in cooperation with a Committee on Visits to South America headed by Joseph Schenck and including Edward Arnold, Ben Thau and Kenneth Thomson. Alice Faye, Don Ameche and other players from "That Night in Rio" are scheduled to leave for the Brazil opening next month. Dorothy Lamour will be sent to South America by Paramount. Other stars will be sent south by producers as they complete pictures calculated to appeal to the Latin American market.

Executives On Tour

Producers and other executives are also touring the Latin America in increasing numbers to examine the market for American films and check on the preferences of exhibitors. Sol Wurtzel, 20th Century-Fox producer, recently returned from a three month tour of South America, declared that better pictures rather than specially prepared Latin-American pictures will do the most to improve relations with the Latin film public.

Nate J. Blumberg, president, and J. H. Seidelman, vice-president of Universal are en route to a Latin American sales convention at Cristobal from April 2nd to 6th.

Radio networks have expanded short-wave programs for South America and are preparing transcribed series to be distributed to Latin American stations. NBC is on the air over its two short wave stations WNBI and WRCA to 20 countries below the Rio Grande for an average of sixteen hours daily. CBS recently expanded its news service to Latin-America and appointed Roberto I. Unanue, Buenos Aires newspaperman, to head its South American editorial staff in New York. CBS also arranged a special shortwave roundup with broadcasts by 15 South American consuls over WCAU, Philadelphia, in connection with the opening of "That Night in Rio."

Commercial re-broadcasts, from disc or direct relay, are paid for by the American networks. Columbia averages $1,500 a month in payments to South American outlets, with the number of stations growing. Mutual releases transcribed programs commercially to Radio Record, of Sao Paulo, Brazil, and directly via Press Wireless, which maintains six South American outlets.

Official regulation of the film business in South America is on the increase, but foreign division executives are not unduly alarmed. The chief object of recent legislation has been the establishment of censor boards and imposition of new tax measures.

In Cuba a 12 man board of review was appointed in January by President Batista to review both film and air entertainment. Nicaragua's Ministry of Interior has assigned local censor boards, with three members, to all theatres in the country. The local review option is reported to be largely nominal. An eight per cent remittance tax on earnings removed from Brazil is being enforced on current transactions. The government demand for retroactive payment is still subject to mediation. In Mexico tax measures fall chiefly on theatre operators who must pay from seven to 14 per cent on grosses. The Mexico City levy is nine per cent.

SHELVE PAN-AMERICA BROADCAST SCHEME

Foreign publicity managers of major companies meeting in New York on Tuesday tabled a proposal for a joint project to send recorded film programs to South American broadcasters. Current difficulty of clearing songs for radio, and conflict with foreign publicity plans of several companies prompted the decision to leave the matter in abeyance. Dave Blum, MGM; Albert Deane, Paramount; Les Whalen, 20th Century-Fox; Clarence Schneider, Columbia; Michael Hoffay, RKO, and Sam Cohen, United Artists, participated in the conference.

Films on Way to Latin-America to Promote Goodwill reasons, in portions of the Argentine, Paraguay, and Chile do not appear to have seriously affected the Chaplin film's popularity or extensive runs throughout South America. It has played Parana, in Argentina and officials believe there will be an early lifting of the Buenos Aires ban. To date it has been booked for a total of 26 weeks at theatres in Mexico City; Santiago and Valparaiso, Chile; Colon and Panama City, Panama; Montevideo and Colonia, Uruguay; Caracas, Venezuela; Havana; and San Juan, Puerto Rico. It is also scheduled for Peru, Colombia, and Trinidad, B.W.I.

Figures released by the U. S. Department of Commerce this month show that War has not affected the Brazilian film trade. The statistics were compiled by Edward McLaughlin, of the American embassy at Rio de Janiero. He reported a decrease in the number of European films and a tightening of censorship of war material, likely to offend belligerent nations.

From Jan. 1, 1940, to Oct. 15, 1940, the report indicated that the censor examined 318 features, 581 shorts, 296 trailers and 140 newsreels. Ten films of all types were rejected—nine from the United States and one from England. The 1940 percentage of screen time in Brazil gives American product 90 per cent, France five per cent, and Germany, Argentine and Brazil five per cent.

Five domestic features were produced in Brazil from Jan. 1 to Oct. 5, 1940. Production costs vary from $7,000 to $15,000 per feature. The total Brazilian film investment is estimated at about $5,000,000. There are 1,350 theatres in Brazil. The average weekly attendance is estimated at 1,950,000. At least 1,200 theatres are wired for sound. Estimate place the yearly gross income of Brazilian theatres at from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000.

"Fantasia" Price Change

"Fantasia," in its sixth week at the Aldine theatre in Philadelphia, has modified its price scale to provide for lower admission tickets. In addition to the $1.14 and 86-cent scale for all weekday matinees and at special matinees on Saturday mornings, 50-cent seats will be made available. For the evening performances, and the Saturday and Sunday matinees, besides the $1.14 and $1.71 seats, some 75-cent seats will be placed on sale. The price changes went into effect Monday.

Raise Price Sale

Increased weekend admission prices may become general at Allentown, Pa., following experiments with a higher scale at the Colonial theatre during the past few weeks. Evening price all day Saturday and Sunday have brought fine results and no complaints, manager Charles Bierbauer reported, and the Colonial and Rialto theatres will make the policy permanent. Other houses are expected to follow suit.

Film Carriers Meeting Set

The eighth annual convention of National Film Carriers, Inc., will be held May 12th to 14th at the Park Central Hotel in New York, it has been announced by Clint Weyer, secretary. James P. Clark is the retiring president-secretary and new officers will be elected at the meeting.

Public's Bill is $10,000,000 For Radio's Dial Moving Day

The American public will be called upon to pay for most of the expense involved in shifting 802 of the 893 standard broadcast stations in the United States on the "Radio Moving Day", Sunday, March 29th, at 3:00 A.M. Cost to broadcasters may amount to about $1,000,000 for transmitter changes, but the 10,000,000-odd push-button radio receivers will all have to be readjusted, at an estimated price of $10,000,000. Radio service men are expected to enjoy a series of field days not only in adjusting the sets but by taking the opportunity while in millions of homes to push the sale of new receivers.

The moving day was ordered by the Federal Communications Commission as a result of the North American Regional Broadcasting Agreement signed by Canada, Cuba, Mexico and the United States. Under the reallocation the United States will have 59 clear radio channels, as compared with 44 at present; Canada will have 6, Mexico 6 and Cuba 1. Listeners in many parts of the country will, it is expected, enjoy much better radio reception, with static cut considerably, after 3:00 A.M., March 29th. Sixty-eight of Canada's 84 commercial stations will shift, despite objections made last week in the House by M. J. Coldwell.

The following set-up, issued by the FCC, indicates the changes which U. S. radio stations will make March 29th:

DIAL SETTING:

Between 550–720 k.c.—No change; 91 stations within this range retain present dial positions.

Between 740–780 k.c.—21 stations herein will be heard 10 points further up the dial.

Between 790–870 k.c.—22 stations herein will be heard 20 points further up the dial.

DIAL SETTING:

Between 880–1450 k.c.—633 stations herein will be heard 30 points further up the dial (11 will advance 40 points).

Between 1460–1490 kc.—11 "clear channel" stations herein will be heard 40 points further up the dial.

1500 k.c.—63 stations on this setting will move down 10 points.

Only 41 stations will undergo shifts at variance with this pattern.

Group Finds Home, Not Films, Influence Child

In a panel discussion sponsored jointly by the Middletown Motion Picture Council and the Federation of Women's Clubs, it was agreed that young people react to the morals of a picture in accordance with the moral standards to which they are accustomed in their own home.

"We are prone to place too much emphasis on the wrong types of pictures, just as we appreciate the better ones too little," was the opinion advanced by Hugh Butler, school principal. "Children judge a picture in terms of their own experience. We adults do likewise. What we see on the screen is not what the children see, despite modern sophisticated childhood."

Saying that the good and evil of motion pictures were about evenly balanced in his opinion, Police Chief Hugh King advocated sport reels as the means of teaching good morals, and such pictures as the "Crime Does Not Pay" series as means of impressing youth.

Del Ruth Contract Signed

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has signed Roy Del Ruth to a term contract as a director, it was announced in Hollywood, Monday. Mr. Del Ruth was with the company in the same capacity previously.

Goodman in Mexico

Morris Goodman, vice-president in charge of foreign sales for Republic, is in Mexico City as the first stop of his annual trip to the company's Latin American branches. He will be gone about four months.

Nathanson Joins U.A.

Morton Nathanson has joined the publicity staff of United Artists, it was announced in New York by Monroe Greenthal this week. In recent years Mr. Nathanson has been handling publicity in the legitimate theatre, for such organizations as Katharine Cornell's company, the Playwright's company, the Group Theatre, the Theatre Guild and the "Life With Father" companies. Prior to his activities in the theatre, he worked at motion picture publicity for Robert Sisk at RKO.

Display Company Formed

Stan E. Samuelson, art director for Intermountain Theatres, Inc., for the past ten years, has established his own Theatre Display Company in Salt Lake City. The new company will service Intermountain, which is now operating 27 theatres in Utah and Idaho, but under the new set-up he can take on contracts with other chains or individual theatres.

Prima for AMPA Dance

Music for the 25th anniversary dinner dance of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, next Friday evening, at the Hotel Edison, New York City, will be provided by Louis Prima, noted trumpet player, and his orchestra.

To Distribute Egyptian Films

Albert Rashid has established the Near Eastern Film Co., at 658 Taylor Avenue, Detroit, Mich., to distribute 35mm. Egyptian films in this country. The films are in Arabic.

U.S. AUTHORIZES F-M TRANSMITTERS TO SERVE 48,521,700 PERSONS

Commission To Hold Hearing on Newspaper Ownership; Areas To Be Serviced Include Key Cities, Best Markets

FM stations authorized to date by the Federal Communications Commission will bring the new 'staticless' radio to an estimated audience of 48,521,700, over 37 percent of the nation's population, centered chiefly in and around 24 of the larger key cities. The service areas of FM stations thus far licensed total 265,014 square miles, less than 9 percent of the area of the country but including many of the best markets.

The FCC last week opened public hearings and an investigation to determine what policy, if any, should be adopted in view of the increasing number of FM applications from newspapers. At the present time newspapers control about one-third of the nation's standard broadcast stations. The FCC will attempt to determine whether or not "joint control of newspapers and radio broadcast stations tends to result in an impairment of radio service under the standard of 'public interest, convenience and necessity.'"

In the past the commission has denied applications to newspapers where there was a well qualified applicant asking the same channel for the same city, it was pointed out. Approximately one-fourth of all applications for FM stations have come from newspapers, the FCC announced. It was also said that at least 100 regular stations are owned by publishers with more than one newspaper and more than one radio connection and in over 90 towns the only stations are controlled by the local newspapers.

Commercial Programs Permitted

Companies which have received only part of their FM equipment have received authorization to go on the air with commercial programs, under certain conditions. This is expected to result in a wide FM service this year despite delays in receiving transmitters on account of defense needs.

The Federal Communications Commission this week approved two more FM construction permits bringing the total authorized in the nation to 43. Also two additional applications were filed bringing the total to 51 which are pending.

The following is a list of FM stations authorized by the FCC and a list of applications pending.

WAR NEWS HELPS RADIO AND PRESS

Both newspapers and radio have enjoyed an increase in audience interest since the world crisis became acute, according to a survey made by Paul F. Lazarsfeld, director of the office of radio research of Columbia University, with funds supplied by the Rockefeller Foundation. Radio is now becoming a help to newspapers because educated listeners like to read full details about news events which have been outlined over the air, the report concluded.

First FM Sports Contract

The Atlantic Refining Company, Philadelphia, has signed a contract to sponsor major and minor league baseball games over the facilities of W W S W's FM station in Pittsburgh. This was reported to be the first FM radio contract for sponsorship of baseball games. Atlantic for the past six years has sponsored baseball games over eastern radio stations.

Clamping down on broadcasters who attempted themselves to solve interference problems with foreign stations by negotiating for frequency changes, the Federal Communications Commission this week warned that such procedure might prove "embarrassing" to the Government.

Otto S. Schairer, vice-president of RCA Laboratories, announced this week that the contract for designing and building the new laboratories at Princeton, N. J. had been awarded to the H. K. Ferguson Company of New York and Cleveland.

The Mutual network has acquired an exclusive contract for the radio rights to prize fights sponsored by the 20th Century Sporting Club, headed by Mike Jacobs, it was reported. NBC which in formed years carried the fight since 1937 claims that it had already purchased an option of the 1941-42 season's radio rights.

The Philco Corporation reported a net income for 1940 of $2,268,568 which compares with $1,899,323 in 1939, James T. Buckley, president, announced this week. The number of radios sold by the company in 1940 was reported greater than in any previous year. The company produced 2,000,000 sets last year.

ARMY AND THE NAVY TURN OUT FOR 'WINGS'

War, Defense Tie-up Promotes Paramount Film; "Sea Wolf" Shown on Board Liner

Affording timely exploitation because of the nation's arming, Paramount's "I Wanted Wings" opened Wednesday evening, at the Astor Theatre, New York City, in a world premiere attended not only by the normal complement of social, screen, stage, radio, and political luminaries, but also by numerous officials and officers of the nation's forces.

The opening followed a press preview Tuesday night at the same theatre and another Saturday, March 22nd, at the Gulf Coast Air Crops Training Center, San Antonio, attended by newspapermen and political figures of the territory, and by the Army and Air Corps officers in the Center. (See review of "I Wanted Wings" on page 40.)

Premiere in New York

Following are those who were to be present at the New York premiere Wednesday evening:

Paramount officials: Barney Balaban, Stanton Griffis, Adolph Zukor, John Hertz, Harvey Gibson, Neil Agnew, John Hicks, R. M. Gillham, Charles Reagan, Joseph J. Unger, George Smith, Paul Raibourn, Arthur Israel, Jr., Oscar Morgan, Duncan Harris, George Weltner, M. S. Russell, Fred Mohrhardt, Louis Phillips, W. B. Cokell, Claude Lee, Russell Holman, E. A. Brown and G. B. J. Frawley.

Also, William Erbb, Harry H. Goldstein, E. W. Sweigert, Allen Usher, R. C. LiBeau, Hugh Braly, Hugh Owen, J. F. Kirby and Dell Goodman, Paramount district managers to be here for the occasion.

Other representatives of the industry were to be: Maurice Silverstone, Joseph Bernard, J. Cheever Cowdin, Nate J. Blumberg, Jack Cohn, David Bernstein, Arthur Kelly, J. J. O'Connor, William Brandt and Harry Brandt.

Trade paper men were to include: Martin Quigley, Sam Shain, Abel Green, Jack Alicoate, Jay Emanuel, Charles Lewis and Maurice Kann.

Army and Navy Men

Among the Army and Navy men and other celebrities scheduled to attend were: Major General Delos Emmons, Commanding General of the U. S. Army Air Force General Headquarters; Madeleine Carroll; Lieut.-Gen. Hugh A. Drum, Commanding General of the First Army; Clarence Chamberlain, trans-Atlantic flyer; Mary Martin; Major General Henry H. Arnold, Chief of the United States Army Air Corps; Colonel John B. Brooks, Commander of Randolph Field; Robert Patterson, Under Secretary of War; James V. Forrestal, Under Secretary of the Navy; Orson Welles; and Dolores Del Rio.

Rear Admiral John H. Rowers, chief of the Bureau of Navy Aeronautics; Major General James E. Chaney, commanding general of Mitchell Field; Roy Howard, Arthur Hays Sulzberger, Miriam Hopkins, Neysa McMein, Katharine Brush, Deems Taylor, Clayton Knight, Willy Pogany, Brigadier General John C. McDonnell, Colonel William E. Kepner, Colonel Douglas Johnston, Moss Hart and Norman Bel Geddes.

Guthrie McClintic, Gilbert Miller, Ilka Chase, Brigadier General Irving J. Phillipson, Commanding General of the 11th Corps Area, Brigadier General Francis B. Wilby, chief of staff of the First Army, Harvey Dow Gibson, Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, Gene Tunney and Colonel William J. Donovan.

Another notable acceptance received late last week by Paramount home office officials was that of William A. "Billy" Bishop, Canadian Air Marshall, who was to attend, with his staff.

New York was made conscious of its impending premiere by the announcement from its Mayor, Fiorello Henry LaGuardia, late last week, that this, in New York, is "Flying Cadet Week."

The U. S. Army lent a cooperative hand by placing on exhibition in Duffy Square, near the Astor Theatre, one of its newest fighting airplanes, the Curtiss P-40; a band; an anti-aircraft detachment from Fort Totten, in Queens; and a recruiting trailer truck.

On Monday, at Mitchell Field, Long Island, Paramount executives and the film critics of New York's newspapers were guests of Major General James E. Cheney, commanding officer, at a luncheon and field inspection. Present were Barney Balaban, Stanton Griffis, Adolph Zukor, and Y. Frank Freeman, of Paramount; Bosley Crowther and Thomas Pryor, of the New York Times; Robert Dana, of the New York Herald Tribune; Kate Cameron, Wanda Hale, and Anne Masters, of the Daily News; William Boehnel and Frank Farrell, of the World-Telegram; Eileen Creelman, of the Sun; and Archer Winsten, of the Post.

Paramount has invited several thousand amateur pilots in the Eastern states to a special screening at the Astor, on Saturday. Several hundred will probably attend. They are, under the plan, to land at Roosevelt field Saturday afternoon, and be conveyed by bus to the special screening at 5:00 P.M.

Texas Press Preview

The San Antonio press preview and its accompanying events, on Saturday, March 22nd, were witnessed, it is estimated, by approximately 15,000 persons, including 1,000 flying officers and trainees, and such persons as Major General Henry Arnold, chief of the U. S. Army Air Corps; Governor Lee O'Daniel, of Texas; Mayor Maury Maverick, of San Antonio; Brigadier General Gerald C. Brant, commanding officer of the Air Corps Training Center; Lieutenant Beirne Lay, Jr., author of the book, "I Wanted Wings"; Clayton Knight, illustrator of air stories; William Holden, Veronica Lake, and Wayne Morris, stars of the picture; five ranking officers of the Venezuelan Air Force; and Robert Gillham, Paramount's advertising and publicity manager, who flew to San Antonio from New York City.

The events were highlighted by an aviation show that afternoon, in which 300 airplanes participated. Ninety of them spelled out the word "Wings". The show was followed by a tea dance for 600 cadets.

Paramount this week announced it would produce a picture about the training of young men for the Navy air force, a sequel to the "I Wanted Wings." The company has purchased "Amateur Admirals," an original story by Lientenant Commander George Campbell and Mitchell Fessier, and expects the cooperation of the U. S. Navy in its filming.

"Lie" in Littleton

Warners Brothers "The Great Lie," starring Bette Davis, will have its world premiere Saturday evening, April 5th, in Miss Davis' home town, Littleton, New Hampshire. It will be an "all-out" celebration for the town's 4,500 inhabitants who will also note Miss Davis' birthday. Governor Robert O. Blood, of New Hampshire, is expected, as are other political notables, stars, and representatives of the news and trade press from New York, for whom Warner Brothers will be the host.

Theatre chosen is the Premier. Miss Davis and her husband, Arthur Farnsworth will attend.

Mitchell Rawson, Warners' Eastern publicity director, spent several days in the town, arranging for the opening and celebration. Other members of his staff remain there.

"Sea Wolf" Sea Premiere

The first ocean premiere of a film occurred Friday night, March 21st, aboard the S. S. America, en route from Los Angeles to San Francisco. Picture had opened at the New York Strand on the same day, and had a West Coast showing on land Saturday, in the Sonoma Theatre, Sonoma, California. Newspapermen were aboard the ship, and wirelessed their reviews to their newspapers, this, the company asserted, being the first time reviews of a film have been transmitted to press mediums in such a fashion.

Among the guests aboard were J. R. Wheeler, and Everett C. Callow, 1940 Quigley Showmanship Awards winners.

"Barbara" in Nassau

Gabriel Pascal's screen version of George Bernard Shaw's "Major Barbara" had its world premier Friday evening, March 21st, at the Savoy Theatre, Nassau, British West Indies, with the Governor of the Bahamas, H.R.H. the Duke of Windsor, and his wife, in attendance, together with Mr. Pascal and the islands' socially great.

The film is a United Artists release, but has not been booked by that company yet, for American showings.

Republic's "Sis Hopkins" will have its premiere in St. Louis Friday evening, April 4th. Sam Abarbanel and Al Ardmore, of the company's Coast publicity department, arrived in the city early this week to arrange the premiere; and Herbert J. Yates, chairman of the board, and William Saal, of the studio, were to be in St. Louis later this week, also to assist in premiere and celebration arrangements.

The MGM New York home office announced Thursday, March 20th, that it had set 34 key city dates for its "Men of Boys' Town," beginning April 9th, on which day it will open at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, Seattle. On the following day, it will have premieres in Des Moines, Reading, Harrisburg, New Haven, Bridgeport, Worcester, Springfield, Hartford, Providence, and Wilmington. On the 11th, it will open at Portland, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, Memphis, Kansas City, Syracuse, Rochester, Richmond, Baltimore, Columbus, Dayton, Indianapolis, St. Louis, Norfolk, Akron, Cleveland, Atlanta, New Orleans, Evansville, Nashville, Waterbury, Louisville, and Houston.

Theatre Acquired

The 11th theatre of the Bernstein & Leiberman circuit with headquarters in St. John, N. B., has been purchased. It is the Savoy at Fort Kent, Me., and seats 400. Fort Kent is opposite Clair, N. B., on the St. John River, the two border towns being connected by a bridge.

Kreisler Joins U. A.

Samuel Kreisler has been added to the publicity staff of United Artists as a feature writer. For the past three years he has been a rewrite man on New York newspapers, with one year experience in an advertising agency.

Hull Named Manager

Hadley H. Hull, acting manager of the Universal branch in Indianapolis for the past nine months, has been named permanent manager for the exchange. He has been associated with various companies in the motion picture industry since 1920.

RCA'S TELEVISION BOMBSHELL NOT TO DELAY COMMERCIALIZATION

Commission Seen Ready to Give Commercialization Permits Soon Despite Opposition at Hearings in Washington

Prompt issuance of orders by the U. S. providing for commercialization of television, probably effective early in the fall, were foreseen in Washington this week as the Federal Communications Commission closed a three-day hearing on proposed new standards and regulations with apparent rejection of a plea by Radio Corporation of America that commercial operation be suspended until it was definitely shown that all branches of the industry were prepared to meet public demand for receivers and programs.

Paramount's television interests, including Balaban and Katz and the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, were among the companies asking for immediate commercialization. Representatives of Balaban and Katz announced that the Chicago theatre circuit company was ready to go ahead with television, virtually without any restriction or condition. The DuMont firm again emphasized its flexible television system but even this was subordinated to a desire for commercial operations. Hughes (Howard Hughes) Productions also asked for a "green light" for television.

Most of the final session on Monday was devoted to an assault by members of the commission and counsel for other television interests on the position taken by Dr. C. B. Jolliffe, representing RCA, on Friday of last week, when his suggestion that commercialization be postponed threw a bombshell in the all-but-completed hearings.

RCA Reverses Stand

Made as the commission was looking forward to an early conclusion of the hearings on Friday, Dr. Jolliffe's disclosure that RCA, which a year ago went "all-out" for commercialization under the later-rescinded order looking to business operation in September, had reversed its position, brought the proceedings to a sudden halt.

On the stand for only a few minutes, the RCA official said the commission should adopt standards as soon as possible, so that designers might have something to go by, but that commercial operation should be deferred until investigation showed without doubt that the manufacturers of transmitting and receiving equipment, and the television broadcasters had the apparatus and man power available and were prepared to meet any demand that might arise.

Upon completion of his statement, Chairman Fly called a short recess, as is usual in the middle of a session, but at the resumption of the hearing it became apparent that the matter had been discussed by the commissioners for, after a few questions which failed to develop why RCA had about faced, the hearing was adjourned over the week-end.

The suddent move of RCA astounded and perplexed the television engineers. Left out on a limb was William C. Eddy, Balaban & Katz television director, who earlier in the day had testified that B & K were prepared to go ahead with regular service, for as many hours a day as the commission might direct, "without hesitation."

Also discomfited were other witnesses, all of whom had given their approval to commercialization, although most of them had urged that the proposed five-hour-a-day program service requirement be shortened to from 10 to 15 hours a week.

Somewhat less troubled was Columbia Broadcasting System, whose witnesses on Thursday had given grudging assent to commercialization but had indicated they were not anxious to see it come in the near future, stressing difficulties resulting from the defense situation.

As the weekend adjournment came, it was apparent that the only major questions for determination by the commission were flexibility, urged by the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, and the number of hours service stations should be required to render daily.

Standards Submitted

At the opening of the hearings on Thursday of last week, Dr. W. R. G. Baker, General Electric, chairman, submitted the final recommendations of the National Television System Committee, most of which already had been made known, urging that the standards be applied to all channels when used for commercial service instead of only channels 1 to 7 as originally suggested. This would make possible more stations in each area.

In brief, the standards proposed were as follows: 525 line pictures instead of the 441 line images used generally at present; 30 images per second; a further test of four synchronizing signals and adoption of the one which proves itself the best in several months of actual field tests on a comparative basis. Television pictures, as at present, are to have the same ratio of height to width as used in motion pictures, i.e., three to four. Tentative color standards of 375 lines and 60 frames. were also proposed.

The standards submitted, Dr. Baker told the commission, "will make possible the creation of a nationally coordinated television service and at the same time will insure continued development of the art."

The NTSC chairman was the first witness to appear before the new commissioner, Ray C. Wakefield, whose nomination was confirmed by the Senate March 17, bringing the FCC to full strength for the first time since June 30, last, when the term of the late Thad Brown expired.

The proposed standards, Dr. Baker said, will not tie the industry down. Recommendations on synchronization have been broadened to permit field tests of several interchangeable systems, he explained, in the expectation that "some one of these systems will be found to be superior to the others," at which time the standards might be narrowed to require the use of that particular superior system.

Further synchronization signals to receiver tests are those sponsored by DuMont, the Hazeltine-Philco "alternate carrier" which uses a combination of FM-AM and a FM type of signal. All three systems are said to have advantages over the old RMA (Radio Manufacturers Association signal) which has been used generally up to now.

Porter Asks for Caution

Opening the testimony of the industry, Paul Porter, counsel for the Columbia Broadcasting System, urged the commission to move cautiously in the initiation of commercial operation, with due regard for the possible shortage of trained technicians and materials which might be caused by the defense program.

"The public and the broadcasters may be injured if television is launched under the wrong conditions," he asserted.

"Once the broadcaster has embarked on a program of service he cannot abandon it without damage to the public and himself. If the manufacturers are unable to produce receivers, the broadcaster may be put in a position of broadcasting to the empty air, attempting to engage in what may be a futile and uneconomic activity and jeopardizing public good will and confidence."

Mr. Porter suggested that the commission secure information regarding the possible material needs of the defense program from Government officials connected with that effort before authorizing commercial operation.

However, he said, CBS feels that the setting of standards now would lay the groundwork for the development of commercial television in an "orderly fashion," and commercialization could proceed provided it did not lead the public to believe that an extensive broadcasting service would continue during the period when defense requirements are steadily increasing.

Color Discussed

Devoting himself largely to a discussion of color, Adrian Murphy, executive director of television for CBS, urged that full provision be made for its unhampered growth in any standards adopted.

Mr. Murphy also testified that there would be found an urgent need for the linking of television stations if worthwhile programs were to be given, pointing out that the cost of programs would be so heavy that individual stations would find difficulty in financing them. He estimated the cost of programs at $1,000 an hour for live talent and more than $100 an hour for others. Motion pictures are not proving the most suitable source of program material, he said, because the good features are not made available.

The CBS official registered the first protest against the proposed five-hours-a-day service, explaining that a shorter term would enable the broadcasters to conserve and apply their finances better. He urged that the commission encourage

BELL CREDITED WITH TELEVISION 'PEACE'

At the television hearings in Washington before the Federal Communications Commission several witnesses referred to the optical demonstrations of lines and frames possible in various television systems recently conducted by the Bell Telephone Laboratories. A number of persons expressed the opinion that the tests shown by the telephone company in New York to members of the FCC and of the National Television Systems Committee solved a number of disputed points and, in a large measure, were responsible for the more or less unanimous agreement on several previously debated issues.

Of note was the fact that some Bell engineers thought that instead of settling the point their own demonstrations showed there was little to choose from, when program material was shown, between the 441-line picture previously used and the 525-line image now recommended.

TELEVISION DELAY ASKED

the establishment of inter-city links so that high-quality programs could be developed, and advocated also that the proposed limitation that no more than three stations can be under the same control be eliminated.

Maintaining its position that standards should provide for flexibility, Allen B. DuMont of the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, declared the industry had had enough experience to warrant commercial operation. A number of manufacturers are prepared to produce equipment, he said, and "unless we do have commercialization a number of companies are going to have to seriously curtail development work."

Mr. DuMont said the Army and Navy were benefiting by the work of the radio and television industry, particularly in the lines of circuits and tubes and the ultra-high frequency areas.

"It is a very fortunate time now to start commercialization," he declared, explaining that more people are at work and the market is expanding while at the same time industry still has enough capacity to meet the new demand without difficulty. Further, he commented, if started now, the new industry will be valuable in giving employment after the end of the emergency.

Mr. DuMont did not agree with CGS that the cost of programs would be excessive and contended they could be produced for less than the $150 an hour estimated by Mr. Murphy.

B. & K. Ready

Balaban & Katz are drawing upon their many years of experience as exhibitors to prepare for the new television service, Mr. Eddy told the commission, but are interested in television "only as broadcasters" and not as theatre operators. So well consolidated are their plans, he indicated, that the company is prepared to go ahead immediately, giving as many hours of service a day as may be required.

Bernard Goodman was counsel for B. & K. and the Paramount television interests.

All that Balaban & Katz ask, he said, is that the standards be so written that every receiver in the area will receive any signal, feeling that no success can be achieved unless every broadcaster is assured he can be picked up by every receiver owner.

Possibilities of union interference with program development were voiced by Harry R. Lubcke of the Don Lee Broadcasting System, who said he was worried about program material because he feared the talent unions would clamp down on effort to get Hollywood players at low fees.

Declaring that now is the time to give the "green light," Edward M. Martin of the Farnsworth Television & Radio Corporation, urged immediate commercialization and said his company would accept the five-hour service requirement.

Albert F. Murray of Hughes Productions, however, suggested that 15 hours a week would be a better service requirement because of the difficulties of getting programs, personnel and equipment.

Recalled to the stand on Monday, Dr. Jolliffe of RCA under cross-examination, admitted he had no objection to immediate commercialization, but warned "you can't do a job of commercial broadcasting unless you have both ends of the circuit going. We don't want to get broadcasting stations spending a lot of money without receivers to receive them, nor do we want to get receiving sets out on the market without any broadcasting stations," he explained.

His testimony brought out the fact that RCA sees possible difficulties ahead in the demands of the defense program for materials and technical manpower, but at the same time he disclosed that RCA was not prepared for immediate production of receivers.

He told the commission that the manufacturing organization created a year ago when commercialization was ordered had been disbanded and the company must start from scratch. While RCA has possibly a thousand receivers in stock, he said, they are not designed for the channels now in use and would have to be redesigned.

Dr. Jolliffe's testimony also indicated that RCA was still smarting under the punishment it took last year and doesn't want to be made the scapegoat of any further adventures.

"A year ago we went ahead," he told the commission. "There was violent objection to it. We have suspended all manufacturing and it will take us some time to get under way. We have been working on the design and manufacture of receiving sets for two years but we no longer have that ability to manufacture. We ourselves will have to start in afresh."

He denied that RCA's position was in any way influenced by the proposed prohibition against any interest owning more than three stations, and Philip J. Hennessy, RCA counsel, pointed out that the company was planning only three stations.

Members of the commission were outspoken in their disapproval of the RCA stand, Commissioner Frederic I. Thompson telling Dr. Jolliffe he could not subscribe to the latter's "philosophy," while Chairman Fly pointed out that under the RCA proposal the industry would "be put to the expense and inconvenience of ever-recurring hearings" with no assurance that a decision ever would be reached.

Formation of an American Scophony Company to produce and market the English theatre-projection equipment in this country is being negotiated, the commission was told by Sven Dodington, head of Scophony's electrical department. He urged slight changes in the proposed standards so that Scophony would not be frozen out, but was assured by representatives of the NTSC that the way would be left open for changes whenever Scophony's equipment reached the point of development at which they would be justified.

Requirement Reduction Urged

John R. Howland, secretary of the Zenith Radio Corporation, joined with other witnesses in urging that the service requirements be reduced to 10 hours or less a week, contending that the five-hours-a-day provision would be an onerous burden initially.

Modifications also were suggested by Metropolitan Television, Inc., the American Television Corporation and the Telechordon Laboratories.

U. A. Sanabria, president of the American Television Laboratories, Inc., told the commission that labor organizations were handicaping the growth of television by demanding the same wages received in motion picture work. He suggested that television operators be licensed by the FCC and urged that standards adopted be fixed for a certain period of years. Mr. Sanabria also cross-examined witnesses who appeared to be less interested in immediate commercialization than the majority of the industry.

Toward the close of the hearings, the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories submitted a supplemental brief attacking the delay in commercialization and charging that RCA and CBS were not desirous of immediate action because of the competition television would give their broadcasting chains.

As the hearings came to an end, Chairman Fly pointed out that any order authorizing commercial operation would be issued well in advance of its effective date and suggested that the industry prepare to cooperate with the commission during that period in working out the problems of production which were discussed.

Variety Barkers Talk Convention

Arrangements for the national Variety Clubs of America convention in Atlantic City May 15th through 17th, were to be completed by members of all convention committees on Sunday, in Philadelphia. John H. Harris, of Pittsburgh, national chief barker, said the meeting would be the only general one of committees, before the convention. Meanwhile, the general arrangements committee this week announced several exhibition booths, of the 18 available, had been negotiated for, by national equipment manufacturers and dealers.

Additional committees this week were named: registration, George Weiland, chairman; the boardwalk, store, and town decorations, Harry I. Waxman, chairman; the ticket and coupon book, Jay Emanuel, chairman; the meeting rooms, Henry Friedman, chairman. Cities anxious to obtain the 1942 convention will have representatives at the affair, it was said. Among the cities are Miami and Hollywood.

Two attendance awards will be made, one the Mileage Attendance Trophy, the other the Capita Attendance Trophy. The former is now held by Pittsburgh. The latter is new. In order to qualify for either, members must be at the business session Friday, May 16th, at 10:00 A.M.

Charity Plans Set

The first of a series of special events planned by the St. Louis Variety Club was to be held Saturday night, at the Fox Theatre. With tickets at $1, there were to be 15 acts, and two bands, with proceeds going to club fund for its charity, the Midwest Police Association, composed of infantile paralysis victims. The club hopes to raise $250,000 within the next five years, with which to erect a special building.

Under the leadership of Robert Marhenke, of the Broadway, and Michael Reaber, of the Mayfair, a new showmen's club may be formed in Baltimore, patterned after the Philadelphia club of that name, and possibly bearing the name.

Mr. Marhenke said the club's desire would be to give a recreation and resting place for theatrical workers of "moderate circumstances."

At the Wednesday meeting of the Kansas City Cinema Club, Joseph Lysowski, president, was to hand in his resignation, and a new officer was to be elected.

Mr. Lysowski has resigned from the Altec Service branch of that city, to go to Dallas.

The Washington Variety Club will hold its annual Father and Son banquet May 4th at the Hotel Mayflower. Sidney Lust is arrangements committee chairman. On the committee are Carter Barron, John J. Payette, Gene Ford, Hardie Meakin, Sam Wheeler, Sam Galanty, and Harry Lohmeyer.

Supervises Fox Musicals

Charles Friedman, a member of the Twentieth Century-Fox production staff since last summer, this week was appointed coordinator and creative collaborator for all musical productions. Fox plans 12 musicals for next year. Mr. Friedman staged "Pins and Needles" and "Sing Out the News" prior to joining the Fox studio.

FOX FOREIGN RESERVES INCREASED BY $2,800,000 TO $3,250,000

Large Reserves Set-up in 1940 Result in Net Loss of $517,336; Earned a Net Profit of $558,275 in Fourth Quarter

Twentieth Century-Fox films in New York, Wednesday, issued its annual report for the year ended December 28, 1940, showing, for the fourth quarter, a consolidated net profit of the corporation and its wholly-owned subsidiaries (except Roxy Theatre, Inc.) of $558,275, after providing a reserve for foreign assets of $600,000, compared with a loss of $1,192,824, after a reserve of $1,400,000 for foreign assets, for the third quarter.

The corporation had a consolidated net loss for 1940 of $517,336, after providing a reserve for foreign assets of $2,800,000. Had this reserve not been provided, the corporation would have shown a consolidated net profit for the full year of $2,032,664, after due provision for Federal income taxes.

The consolidated net profit for 1939 was $4,146,000, and the profit in the fourth quarter of that year was $994,218.

Foreign Earnings Excluded

The purpose of the additions to the reserve for foreign assets is to exclude from net income that portion earned during the year in foreign currencies, not currently realizable in U. S. dollars because of restrictions imposed by foreign governments, and therefore, not available for use in the corporation's operations in the United States, and accordingly to increase to that extent the general reserve against net foreign assets. This unrealized income is represented by foreign current assets (principally cash) and at such future time when it may be converted into U. S. dollars, or some equivalent conversion is possible, it will be included in the income account.

"To view the practical aspects of the relationship of this reserve to the consolidated balance sheet, at the end of 1939 there were net foreign assets of $7,088,197 against which there was a reserve of $450,000 (created prior to 1939) leaving a net balance of $6,638,197," the company said, adding: "During 1940, the net assets in foreign countries increased from $7,088,197 to $10,338,707 due to the fact that a portion of earnings could not be withdrawn from England and other foreign countries. Of the total increase of $3,250,510 approximately $450,000 comprised assets which were in process of conversion into U. S. dollars, and the balance of $2,800,000 is the dollar equivalent of restricted foreign current assets, most of which is cash. Accordingly, following out the established policy of the corporation, the reserve has been increased by $2,800,000 to $3,250,000 which operates as a general reserve against net foreign assets of $10,338,707."

Dividends from National Theatres Corporation are included for 1940 in the amount of $693,000 compared with $756,000 for 1939. These dividends were received in the fourth quarters of the respective years. National Theatres Corporation and its voting controlled domestic subsidiaries had consolidated net income of $2,037,177 for 1940, compared with $2,311,108 for 1939. Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation's 42 per cent interest in National Theatres Corporation indicates an interest in 1940 earnings of $855,614.

Twentieth Century-Fox paid dividends on the preferred stock in 1940 of $1.50 per share, or a total of $1,381,155. No dividends were paid on the common stock.

Outstanding capital at December 28, 1940, comprised 917,420 shares of preferred and 1,741,995 shares of common.

Mr. Sidney R. Kent, President of the corporation also stated: "While operating results for the year 1940 were particularly burdened by the disturbing effects of the war, the corporation has, nevertheless, maintained a strong financial position."

Gross income in 1940 totaled $47,319,512, of which $45,573,943 came from film and accessory rentals and sales, $942,306 emanating from miscellaneous sources and the remaining $715,515 from National Theatres and other dividends.

It cost $10,814,505 to operate the exchange system, home office and administration, and $29,813,785 went for amortization of production and other production costs. Earned surplus on December 28, 1940, stood at $13,172,467.

The company is now operating its amortization on an accumulated percentage writeoff as follows:

Number of weeks since release	All negative costs	Domestic positive costs
13	53 %	75%
26	75.5	95
39	88	100
65	100

Total assets stand at $53,913,451. Current assets on December 28, 1940, were $24,339,140, of which $7,498,004 was represented by cash in hand and $15,994,058 was the listed value of inventories of productions and stories. Current liabilities were $3,470,179, a ratio of current assets to liabilities of about seven to one.

Keith Earnings

Annual statement of Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corp. released last week lists a net profit of $780,004 for 1940, less charges and taxes. The profit for parent company and subsidiaries is equivalent to $12.26 per share on 63,586 outstanding shares of 7 per cent preferred cumulative stock. In 1939 the company reported $976,627.13 profit, equal to $15.18 dividend on each of 64,304 preferred shares then outstanding.

Total KAO income last year amounted to $14,966,601 of which $13,293,852 was from theatre admissions. Expenses were $12,900,493, of which $3,989,240 was film cost. Theatre overhead and running expenses totaled $4,888,818 and salaries and wages amounted to $3,551,073. Current assets are reported at $2,989,353, of which $2,923,433 is in cash.

KAO profits amounted to an equivalent of 28 cents a share on 1,206,381 shares of one cent par common stock. The 1939 dividend equalled 43 cents per share on the common stock.

B. F. Keith Corp. and subsidiaries at the same time reported net profits of $543,614 for 1940, allowing for all charges. The 1939 net profit was $575,271.

Atlas Buys More RKO

Atlas Corporation materially increased its strength in Radio-Keith-Orpheum in January, it was disclosed this week at Washington in the semi-monthly summary of the Securities and Exchange Commission, acquiring 11,600 shares of common and 1,200 shares of preferred stock during the month. At the close of January, Atlas held 744,496 shares of common and 36,681 shares of preferred stock, in addition to 327,812 warrants for common and 268,230 shares of common held through the American Company, it was shown.

The SEC summary also reported acquisition of 500 common voting trust certificates of Universal Corporation by Preston Davie, New York director, giving him a total of 3,500, and the purchase of 20 shares of Universal Pictures preferred stock by Mr. Davie, giving him a total of 50 shares.

In Paramount Pictures, Henry Ginsberg, Hollywood, officer, reported the purchase of 400 shares of common stock, giving him a total of 500 shares. A delayed report filed for December by Edwin L. Weisl, New York, director, disclosed the sale of 3,200 shares of second preferred stock, his entire holdings.

Also reported was the acquisition of 10 shares of Keith-Albee-Orpheum preferred stock by William F. Whitman, New York, officer, giving him a total of 45 shares.

Employees Share Kodak Profit

Employees of Eastman Kodak Corporation shared a $2,396,045 dividend on March 25th under the wage dividend profit sharing plan instituted by the company in 1912. Checks were distributed to 27,175 employees of the company in the Western Hemisphere. 18,133 Kodak workers in Rochester received $1,779,844 under the dividend. Employees in military service also received checks from the film company. Distribution to employees outside the Western Hemisphere will be made at a later date.

Columbia Broadcasting System stockholders at the corporation's annual meeting in New York on April 2nd will be asked to authorize the board of directors to approve a plan for distributing additional compensation to executives, junior executives and other employees, commencing with the current accounting year. Aggregate dividends to be distributed under such a provision are not to exceed six per cent of the annual net profits of the corporation or six per cent of the consolidated profits of the CBS subsidiaries, after deduction for all taxes and expenses.

William S. Paley, president of CBS, received a 1940 salary of $204,320 according to a proxy statement filed at the New York Stock Exchange this week.

"I WANTED WINGS" TRAILER ON 16 MM.

For national release at the same time as the general release of "I Wanted Wings", Paramount has completed a 13-minute short subject on 16 mm. called "Keep 'Em Flying". The short tells the story of Air Corps Cadet training, stars all the players of the feature it is designed to exploit.

The 16-mm. film will be shown in recruiting stations throughout the country and in the Army's mobile recruiting trucks.

Additionally, a special trailer has been made for the feature's advanced price openings in New York, San Antonio, Washington and Los Angeles, and a regular trailer incorporating reviews of the picture will be made for general release.

250,000 BACK MISSOURI BATTLE AGAINST DUALS

Better Films Council Enlists Women's Club Support of Bill to Control Programs

War on multiple bills reached a new and serious stage in Missouri this week as the Better Films Council of Greater St. Louis, campaigning against duals and triples, introduced a bill into the State Legislature at Jefferson City limiting film performances to two and a half hours. The measure, drafted by Milton F. Napier, attorney for the Better Films group, requires a 15 minute intermission between every performance.

Designed to halt double and triple feature programs, the bill will be supported by 250,000 club women in a statewide campaign, Mr. Napier said. It is scheduled to come up for enactment in the House this week. The Better Films Council, long opposed to dual programs, mustered its forces for a concentrated attack following the recent appearance of three- and four-hour triple features and "preview" programs in St. Louis theatres.

Called Last Resort

Mr. Napier said the council decided on legislative action as a last resort "to do what should have been done by the industry and the exhibitors particularly, not only for the public good but for their own best interests." He declared the Council has stood firmly against 'so-called censorship in all its devious forms and has tried valiantly through cooperative efforts to put an end to the abuses of multiple feature showings without success."

The law, if enacted, provides for fines ranging from $100 to $500 or six months in jail or both to punish convicted theatre managers and the owners or executives of theatres or operating circuits. Mr. Napier said the two and a half hour limit was decided upon after the council had determined that the average features runs an hour and a half. This leaves one hour for shorts, trailers, and news. Should a picture of the length of "Gone With the Wind" (running time 228 minutes) be screened, provision is made for an intermission at the end of two and a half hours. The fifteen minute intermission, between repeat performances, is defined as a complete stoppage of projection, with house lights continuously lighted.

Many individuals and educational and industry groups will support the measure, Mr. Napier declared. "Untold thousands have come to the conclusion they no longer go to the show for entertainment, but to engage in an endurance contest; children are beginning to suffer with 'movie eyes' and many adults leave the theatre exhausted and 'show drunk,'" he said.

Harry C. Arthur, Jr., general manager of Fanchon & Marco, pledged his support, but declared the bill will not eliminate double and triple features.

"I would rather see a measure enacted providing for single features only," he said.

Two of the F & M-St. Louis Amusement Company theaters present triple features once a week, and Arthur said this would be discontinued if competitives houses abandon giveaways.

Fred Wehrenberg, MPTOA head in St. Louis and co-owner of 25 neighborhood theaters who are featuring four-hour shows thrice weekly, likewise said he would back the measure. He announced at the same time the four-hour shows were a failure as business dropped off during these nights and the complaints from patrons were heavy. The four-hour shows were in retaliation for the F & M triple features, which even extends occasionally to the first-run Ambassador when a preview is scheduled with a dual bill.

The "Nine O'Clock Plan", for early screening of the lead feature, meanwhile continued in operation in theatres of the Loew and RKO circuits in New York where it was instituted in February as a trial solution to the duals problem. Other circuits, and a scattering of independents, chiefly in suburban areas, also are experimenting with the early program. None would hazard a guess on its effect on the box office. At least six months are needed to give it a full test, executives declared.

RKO, which has adopted the "Nine O'Clock" system in 33 of its theatres announced that it would hereafter apply only on weeknights. John J. O'Connor general manager announced that the circuit will revert to old screening times on Saturday night when box-office jams, and turn-aways were reported under the early feature system. C. C. Moskowitz, Loew's chieftain, said that the early plan continues in 31 of the Loew houses in New York.

Outside New York, Paramount affiliates in double-feature towns are reported to be studying the plan. Warners are extending their version of it in suburban Jersey areas. At Omaha the Tristate circuit Orpheum reported the 9 P.M. system is working satisfactorily. Loew's Poli at Bridgeport is trying nine o'clock feature screenings which will be extended to the Majestic and Globe if successful. Publicity is directed toward defense factory workers on early morning and late night shifts. In New Britain, Conn. the State, also seeking workers on odd-hour factory shifts, has started matinees at noon.

Syracuse, N. Y., independents and subsequent run exhibitors have protested to distributors against the 20 cent "any seat, any time" operation of first-run duals at the RKO-Schine Empire theatre. Programs change weekly.

Exhibitors at Portland, Me., this week were laughing quietly at claims that the New York 9 P.M. plan is a new experiment. Harry Botwick, manager of the Mullin and Pinanski State theatre said the scheme has long been in successful operation in northern New England, where winter nightfall is considerably earlier than in other sections of the country. Screen timetables listing features, shorts, and newsreels are printed daily in both Portland papers.

On Metro Honor Roll

Jack Hynes, manager of the Paramount, Youngstown, Ohio, and Bill Elder, of Loew's, Harrisburg, Pa., won Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Honor Roll buttons this week, for outstanding campaigns for "The Trial of Mary Dugan" and "The Philadelphia Story." Mr. Hynes printed imitation subpoenas, with lucky numbers, for the Mary Dugan "trial" and staged a legal quiz program on a local radio station. Mr. Elder's campaign included a "Philadelphia Story Hostess" contest.

New Company Quarters

San Francisco Theatres, Inc., Golden State Theatres, and T. & D. Jr. Enterprises, representing 85 districts and suburban theatres in the San Francisco Bay area, have taken over the entire second floor of the Western States Life Insurance building in that city for their offices.

BRITISH INSTITUTE NAMES "GREATEST"

In the opinion of the British Film Institute, in a report from London, the 12 stars who have made the greatest contribution to the screen are:

Charlie Chaplin, for his incomparable achievements in pantomine and comedy.

Mary Pickford, the prototype of the film heroine who achieved fame as "The World's Sweetheart."

Douglas Fairbanks, Senior, the outstanding exponent of action in films.

Theda Bara, the creator of the film vamp.

Greta Garbo, the screen's foremost dramatic actress.

Rudolph Valentino, the first great screen lover.

Fred Astaire, for his contribution to dancing.

Spencer Tracy, the characteristic exponent of realism in film acting.

Tox Mix, the popularizer of the cowboy hero.

Harold Lloyd, the hero of comedy, of danger and suspense.

Marie Dressler, one of the screen's greatest actresses of character and humorous roles.

Shirley Temple, the outstanding example of the child star.

Six Companies Incorporate

Six motion picture exhibition and product firms filed corporation papers with Michael F. Walsh, secretary of state for New York this week, and one, International Theatre Accessories Corp., 170 Broadway, New York, petitioned for dissolution. The new concerns are: Manert Productions, 200 shares, by Solomon Granett, Florence Epstein and Rose Matetsky, 1270 Sixth Avenue, New York. Si-Lo Amusement Co., $10,000 capital stock by B. Arnold Chambers, Emanuel Staft and Isaac J. Dukore, 51 Chambers St., New York. National Documentary Theatre Co., by I. Jack London, Harold McCracken and Ivan M. Beck, 608 Fifth Avenue, New York. Dome Films, 100 shares, no par, by E. G. Milton, Albert G. Katz and Martin W. Teichman, 60 E. 42d Street. Talking Tabloid, motion picture photography, by Sol Ringel, Pearl Ringel and Milford Fenster, 580 Fifth Avenue, New York. Eileen Amusement Corp., 200 shares, by Isidore Lapan, Max Lechner and Sarah Elinson, 305 Broadway, New York.

Iowa Tax Report

The two per cent state sales tax on amusements netted the state $70,019.04 for the three months period from July 1st to September 30th, 1940, according to a report of the Retail sales tax division of the Iowa State Tax Commission. The tax was collected on motion pictures and established places of amusements and did not include carnivals, one night or one week shows or circuses.

Civic Post for Manager

Bob Talbert, city manager of three theatres in Spartanburg, S. C., operated by the Wilby-Kincey circuit, has been named a director of the merchant's bureau of the Chamber of Commerce in that city. He will be in charge of amusement activities.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

A golf club near London now has a set of rules framed to meet current conditions:

"During gunfire or while bombs are falling," says one, "players may take cover without penalty for ceasing play."

But this rule would appear to be only for particular emergencies, for another permits "a player whose stroke is affected by the simultaneous explosion of a bomb or shell or by machine-gun fire" to play another ball from the same place. This procedure involves a penalty of one stroke.

Full provision is made for all possibilities. "The positions of known delayed-action bombs are marked by red flags placed at a reasonably, but not guaranteed, safe distance," while "a ball moved by enemy action may be replaced as near as possible to where it lay." And for this, no penalty is imposed.

"Try Our Famous High Explosive Haircuts —They're a Knockout," reads one sign in the bombed window of a London barbershop, seen in pictures arriving in New York. "Bombed Out, Blasted Out But Not Sold Out—That's Us," reads another. Still another announces that "J. Winkle, Window Cleaner, Is Doing Business as Usual. If You've Got No Windows, We'll Clean Your Chimneys."

Robert C. Sherwood—not to be confused with playwright Robert Sherwood, makes his debut this week as a producer of full length pictures, with "Adam Had Four Sons," for Columbia. He says he got the money to produce "Adam" merely by walking in to a banker, telling him he had no experience, had never produced a motion picture and then asked the banker to loan him half a million dollars to produce "Adam." Sherwood once sold caskets over the radio.

When United Artists releases Ernst Lubitsch's new picture, along about mid-April, the company's press agents will flood the country with little cards, brightly colored little pasteboards, which strange men on the country's Main Streets will hand to womenfolk, asking: "LADY! HAVE YOU GOT 'THAT UNCERTAIN FEELING?'"

Mr. Lubitsch's picture is titled "That Uncertain Feeling."

The telephone rang at three a.m., the other morning, in the Washington home of Norman Davis, head of the Red Cross in the U. S. Motion picture circuit operator Spyros Skouras was calling, speaking as head of the Greek War Relief Drive in this country. He was disturbed, worried. Just a few minutes before, Mr. Skouras's night office telephone wires had burned with the frantic pleadings of Greek war authorities, phoning from Athens to rush, in all possible speed, several hundred vials of anti-toxins for emergency cases. Mr. Davis agreed to immediately push the wheels of Red Cross machinery, and within a comparative few hours, the anti-toxins were speeding to Greece aboard a regular Clipper airship.

One of the questions on a recent New York radio station WOR quiz program was, "If a breeze is a gentle wind and a gale is a strong wind—what is a tycoon?"

Quipped a quiz contestant: "A tycoon is a big bag-of-wind—but if my boss is listening, I'm only kidding."

Among extra players in Hollywood, there exists an acute shortage of young men of draft age who can do the new U. S. army streamlined drills. Because of the large number of military pictures scheduled, the Screen Actors Guild is sponsoring a program of such drills for its members so that when requests are made by studios for them, the Guild can certify members to fill the cast instead of granting waivers for non-members.

All men of draft age interested in brushing up on the new manual of arms were asked to call Miss Mary Jane King at the Guild—HO-7311—and when sufficient number have enrolled, all will be notified of the time and place of the drills. Several Guild master drill sergeants have volunteered their services in training the "volunteers."

Occasion for this move occurred in January when Paramount wanted 300 Guildsmen of the draft age to perform in "Caught in the Draft." After three days of interviews, the Paramount casting office was unable to fill ranks with Guild players who knew the drills, and was reluctantly granted waivers from the Guild to fill remainder of the list—about 100—with National Guardsmen.

A grey-templed distinguished looking man, standing in the lobby of a Yiddish theatre down on Second Avenue in New York's East Side section, was accosted, the other evening, by one of those old patriarchs who live on and on, with a memory running almost as long. "Hello, Dave," saluted the old timer, "haven't seen you for some time. Are you still ushering here?"

"Why, no" replied the man addressed as "Dave." "Not any more. I hope to get something better soon."

The man addressed as "Dave" was David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America, who, when younger, was a part-time usher at the theatre.

The interview occurred while Mr. Sarnoff was waiting for Louis Nizer, Broadway film lawyer, to check his coat and hat. The pair had a notion to see a Yiddish show "for old time's sake."

About 1,000 British civilians are there, Wodehouse being one of 60 who share a long dormitory fitted with double-decker bunks something like our Pullman sleepers. The building was a lunatic asylum and the Nazis have condescended to allow the author the use of a small, private room, which once was—a padded cell! Rapidly nearing its April 1st completion date is the Irene Dunne-Cary Grant co-starring "Penny Serenade," produced and directed by George Stevens. It is set for a mid-April release.

The story, based on a McCall's magazine yarn by Martha Cheavens, is in the nature of a return to the vein of his "Alice Adams" of 1935, in Mr. Stevens' own view. For that picture, starring Katherine Hepburn, was also a "sentimental human comedy."

In between the two, such differing entertainment types as "Vigil in the Night," "Gunga Din," "Vivacious Lady" and "A Damsel in Distress" had been on the Stevens schedule, all made at RKO Radio before the producer director moved less than a dozen blocks down Gower Street to Columbia, where his current enterprises are being shaped. Of the four pictures named, two had been box office winners according to the FAME-MOTION PICTURE HERALD listings; "Gunga Din" an annual Champion, "Vivacious Lady" a monthly Champion. The latter is now being re-issued; its stars, Gingers Rogers and James Stewart, having been the 1940 Academy Award winners.

Born in 1905, Stevens at an early age joined the stage company of his father, John Landers Stevens, and ended up in Hollywood in 1921. As an assistant and then a first cameraman, and later as a writer, he worked for the next nine years at Louis B. Mayer's old Mission Road studio, the Hal Roach studio, and others. In 1930, he directed the Roach "Boy Friends" series, and three years later made his first feature, "The Cohens and Kellys in Trouble." Two Wheeler and Woolsey films came next, followed by "Alice Adams," "Annie Oakley" and "Quality Street."

Feeling that he wants a chance to evaluate public response to "Penny Serenade" before making another picture, Stevens has set no definite plans for his next film. In preparation since last March, the current vehicle has stronger individual characterizations, slighter "facts and circumstances" than most pictures, its creator feels.

The fewer than usual ramifications of plot, he believes, are more than compensated for by the "basic" qualities of a story concerned with two people and their efforts at adjustment in making a home together.

Gower Street is betting it will be another Champion.

Name News

DEANNA DURBIN and CHARLES LAUGHTON will be co-starred in "Almost an Angel," which JOE PASTERNAK will produce and HENRY KOSTER direct.

BOB HOPE has been assigned to a leading role in "Louisiana Purchase" at Paramount.

FAY BAINTER received a new term contract at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

BABY SANDY has had her option taken up for another year by Universal.

ERROL FLYNN and JOAN LESLIE are to appear in "The Constant Nymph" at Warners.

ILONA MASSEY received a term contract from EDWARD SMALL.

JOHN WAYNE will appear in C. B. DEMILLE's "Reap the Wild Wind."

New Contracts

Paul Hernried, who has appeared on Broadway in Elmer Rice's "Flight to the West," has been signed to a long-term contract by RKO. His last name will be changed to Herndon for screen purposes. Another stage player, James Corner, has also been engaged by RKO for the juvenile lead opposite Mildred Coles in the next Scattergood Baines picture, "Scattergood Pulls the Strings."

Sam Wood who recently directed "Kitty Foyle" and "The Devil and Miss Jones" for RKO, is expected to return to the company, as a producer-director on a four-picture deal as soon as he completes "King's Row" for Warners. If the negotiations are completed, the Music Corporation of America, which is handling the matter, will provide the stories and players for the four films.

The next Latin American production from Twentieth Century-Fox will be "Venezuela" for production by Nunnally Johnson, who will also prepare the screen play. Carmen Miranda will have a featured role in the picture.

Cesar Romero and Mary Beth Hughes will play the leads in "Dance Hall," formerly "The Bounder and the Lady," based on the novel "Giant Swing" by W. R. Burnett. The property has been on the schedule of Twentieth Century-Fox for a number of years and was announced originally for Alice Faye.

Julian Duvivier, French writer and director who recently arrived in this country, has been assigned to direct "Illusions," a forthcoming Alexander Korda production for United Artists. According to the present plans Merle Oberon will star in the picture and play opposite four leading men, all of whom will be newcomers to the screen. Joseph Cotton of the Mercury Theatre whose only screen appearance to date has been in the second male role in RKO's unreleased "Citizen Kane," is the sole actor thus far engaged for one of the leading male roles.

The Bud Abbott and Lou Costello contract with Universal calls for a maximum of four pictures during the next year, it was announced Monday. They have starred in the currently releasing "Buck Privates" for the company and will soon start on "We're in the Navy Now." In addition, they announced the signing through the J. Walter Thompson Agency of a four-year contract with yearly options to appear on the Edgar Bergen-Charlie McCarthy radio program for Chase & Sanborn, beginning April 6th.

I Wanted Wings

(Paramount)

All-Out Aviation Melodrama

Here is a picture to shout about, a film to be exploited with all the vigor and resources at command, a production with power, drama, fact and fiction in a manner to entertain and thrill throughout two hours and twelve minutes which seem too short. It is a story of U. S. Army aviators in training and afterward, a story of the nation's armaments in the heavens, but always a story, never a preachment, never propaganda, and always a story about six people whose relationships, trials, triumphs and failures would be the same if none of them had ever set foot on a landing-field.

It is in the particular, perhaps, that this story of flying and flyers eclipses other films of past and present in general kind. The conflicts and struggles which make up the plot possess the plausibility and appeal which so many pictures filling their skies with planes have lacked. Transitions from sky to drawing-room, from barracks to night-club, from mass maneuvres to personal exchanges, are negotiated without let-down or break. The author of the best-seller on which the film is based and after which it is titled is reported a graduate of the Army Air Corps with 1,500 flight hours to his credit, experience which the picture reflects.

There is no dialogue about national defense, no speeches solicit enlistment, but the production opens with a practice blackout of Los Angeles being conducted while squadrons of bombers converge on the area from all quarters, interceptors dash up to meet them, flares are dropped, searchlights pencil the skies, a sequence in which the camera performs feats of narration never approached in this field of interest.

Other sequences deal with the training of flyers, displaying the operation without glorifying it, presenting the cadets as no collection of supermen but as youngsters making the mistakes of behavior and code most youngsters do, surviving or not as they are able. One dies while hedge-hopping against orders. Another becomes involved with a woman who lives in and by trouble. But always there is flying to be done and no picture ever showed the doing of it with such clarity and conviction.

The plot is by no means all sweetness and light. One of three enrollees has left a woman of sin behind him. Another of them, rich, falls into her company while intoxicated and she determines to take him for his money. As an artifice she tells his sweetheart she is "in trouble" and his friend, now dismissed from the service, marries her to spare him, although knowing her story is untrue. Fleeing custody after a murder, she secretes herself in a bomber and perishes in a crash for which the hero is court-martialed. This aspect of the plot is a matter for consideration of exhibitors who specialize in juvenile patronage. It is handled in such fashion that it does not cheapen the picture for adults.

Performances by Ray Milland, William Holden, Wayne Morris, Brian Donlevy, Constance Moore and Veronica Lake add much to a tale that descends to the routine at no point, steers clear of the stereotyped from beginning to end.

Direction by Mitchell Leisen is for contrast between lights and shadows without release from tension.

Aerial photography by Elmer Dyer, an achievement to be noted as measuring-stick for work of its kind, is matched by the process photography of Farciot Edouart and the special effects by Gordon Jennings, all aides of Leo Tover.

Arthur Hornblow, Jr., whose productions have been of a quality to get him rumoured into command of more than one studio, tops all previous pictures with this one.

The Sea Wolf

(Warner Bros.)

Jack London Sails Again

This report is being written aboard the S. S. America, out of Los Angeles bound for 'Frisco, and it is your sea-going correspondent's pleasure to report that a good time has but now been had by all, save perhaps a tiny minority afflicted with mal de mere, at the world premiere of this latest filming of Jack London's story of that sea of another era sailed by such ships as The Ghost and such seamen as London's Wolf Larsen. It is to be set down, against the unpredictabilities to which showbusiness is heir, that the setting and circumstance of the premiering may or may not have conduced to creation of a susceptibility to pleasure which will not be paralleled in every instance of the film's unveiling, but that is a recording in the realm of probability only.

The fact is that tonight's exhibition scored a hit.

As produced by Henry Blanke and directed by Michael Curtiz for executive producer Hal B. Wallis, the late Mr. London's tale of brutality on the high seas is tempered to today's understandings of what makes a bad man bad. As the man in question, "Wolf Larsen," Edward G. Robinson dominates the picture. Accompanying his portrayal are others by John Garfield, Ida Lupino, Gene Lockhart, Barry Fitzgerald, Alexander Knox and others, which give the story, as re-fashioned for today's audiences, a roundedness it did not possess in either the Hobart Bosworth or the Milton Sills version.

On one point there is, however, no disagreement. What with three broadcasts from the S. S. America carrying the name and news of the film to the world, what with news services, correspondents, photographers and special agents representing all the channels of information from which the ticket-buyer derives his information, there can be no doubt that a job of pre-selling seldom matched in the annals of exploitation has been done for showmen by S. Charles Einfeld, father and still champion, of the junket form of promotion.

Hopalong Cassidy Does It Again

Practice makes perfect, saith the proverb, and this is Harry Sherman's thirty-fourth western based on the characters created by Clarence E. Mulford. By the law of averages, at least one of the other 33 must have surpassed this in the qualities for which the series has gained fame, but eye-witnesses to the preview were giving that law an argument when interviewed at deadline.

So much has been said and written of William Boyd's portrayal of "Hopalong Cassidy" that more in the way of praise must be repetitious. Your reporter falls back, as have exhibitors perforce in their billing, upon comparisons, he tells you that this is faster than most in the series, more direct as to story line, handsomer, if that be possible, in point of background scenery, and as full of villainy, gunfire and heroism as the best of them. It may be remarked, by your reporter and mayhap by you in our copy, that this is the first of the series to be directed by Derwin Abrahams and proves that the gentleman knows his objectives and gets to them like a veteran.

Standouts on the side of talent, in addition to Boyd, are Andy Clyde, assigned more prominence than usual, and Victor Jory, captaining the forces of evil.

The story is about vigilantes headed by a leading citizen playing both ends to the middle until "Hopalong" arrives on the scene to unkink the plot.

Outlaws of the Panhandle

Charles Starrett Western

Charles Starrett is again in the saddle for this newest of his outdoor extravaganzas of six-shooting genre. Where action fare on the extrovert side is relished, this offering should find agreeable acceptance. To add to the native flavor of the presentation, that wild west choral group, popularly identified as the Sons of the Pioneers, is on hand for a recital of sagebrush songs.

Trouble for Starrett comes from a well-tapped source of outdoor complications, a contest between cattle raisers and a local heel who is trying to ruin the group collectively for his own private and personal aggrandisement. A railroad is being constructed to facilitate herd shipments and it is the main purpose of the picture's villainy to sabotage such work. However, Starrett and his bronco buddies clear up matters nicely for the side of law and order, a task transacted by gun, horse and fist.

The film seemed to find agreeable audience reaction from a mid-afternoon crowd at the New York Theatre in New York City.—Joseph F. Coughlin.

Footlight Fever

(RKO Radio)

Theatrical Comedy

RKO in "Footlight Fever" presents the second in the series—the first was "Curtain Call"—of theatrical adventures of two money hunting producers as portrayed by Alan Mowbray in the role of "Avery," the ham actor who turns director, and Donald MacBride as "Crandall," the short tempered, blustering producer whose lack of money for the stage venture brings many moments of hair-pulling.

Irving Reis' direction, aided by the ministrations of the stars, extract many laughs from the script and skim blandly over the elements of romance and melodrama in emphasizing the sometimes implausible comedy.

The story concerns the two producers who suffer many embarrassments in their attempts, through subterfuge, to get the financial backing necessary for the opening of the play before they successfully ensnare a wealthy dowager. "Avery" at the last moment decides that only he is fit to play the lead of the young and handsome cowboy. "Crandall," in an effort to prevent his colleague from rendering an anticipated hamish performance, plans to have him sandbagged. The plan works too successfully and both are sent to the hospital. Upon regaining consciousness they find the play in its second month playing to standing room only.

Supporting the stars are Elisabeth Risdon as "Hattie," who backs the production for the producers out of gratitude in showing her the enjoyments of life, Lee Bonnell, as the unscrupulous lawyer who has been robbing "Hattie's" estate, and Charles Quigley as "Spike," the company's press agent, whose lot in the picture is to stand around in a trench coat and lend atmosphere to the film.

Dead Men Tell

(20th Century-Fox)

Charlie Chan Carries On

A sailing-vessel about to start upon a voyage in quest of pirate's gold is setting for the two murders and many incidents of violence, deception and humor which, transpiring within a space of hours, engage the attention of Charlie Chan and his Number Two son in this melodrama. There is more of gloom, mystery and suspense to the minute than most films in the series have offered, more entertainment to the hour of its unreeling.

Aboard the vessel are gathered such characters as the woman sponsoring the voyage, who has divided her map into four parts and distributed them among the personnel, a film star and his bride, a newspaper reporter who is a fugitive from justice, a neurotic, a psychologist, a Chinese cook, a travel agent and others. At start of the picture the sponsor of the trip is murdered by fright. Later on the reporter is done to death by suffocation. At close of the picture Charlie Chan identifies the murderer, suspicion having shifted from one to another of the persons present meanwhile. There is no tip-off at any time as to where the guilt will fall.

Direction by Harry Lachman is in the tradition of suspense and thrill. Walter Morosco and Ralph Dietrich share the associate producer credit.

Sign of the Wolf

(Monogram)

Dog Story

"Sign of the Wolf" is a Monogram production which merits added exploitation campaigns and its content will stand up to the extra attention given it. It is the story of two dogs, one of which turns thief while the other remains faithful to his human friends. Taken from the story, "That Spot," by Jack London, the film little resembles the original, filmed previously, in which one dog reverts to his wolf ancestry and the other continues to defend his master.

The story, as filmed by Paul Malvern, producer, has modern touches, opening with the rivalry of two Alsatian shepherds at a New York dog show and later depicting the stealing of silver foxes by one dog which is captured by thieves and the guarding of the property by the other.

The leads are played by Michael Whalen and Grace Bradley, with Darryl Hickman, Mantan Moreland, Louise Beavers, Wade Crosby, Tony Paton, Joseph Bernard, Ed Brody, Brandon Hurst, Eddie Kane completing the cast. The dogs are "Smokey" and "Shadow."

Howard Bretherton directed the film which, aside from some technical defects noticeable to animal lovers, is great family entertainment.

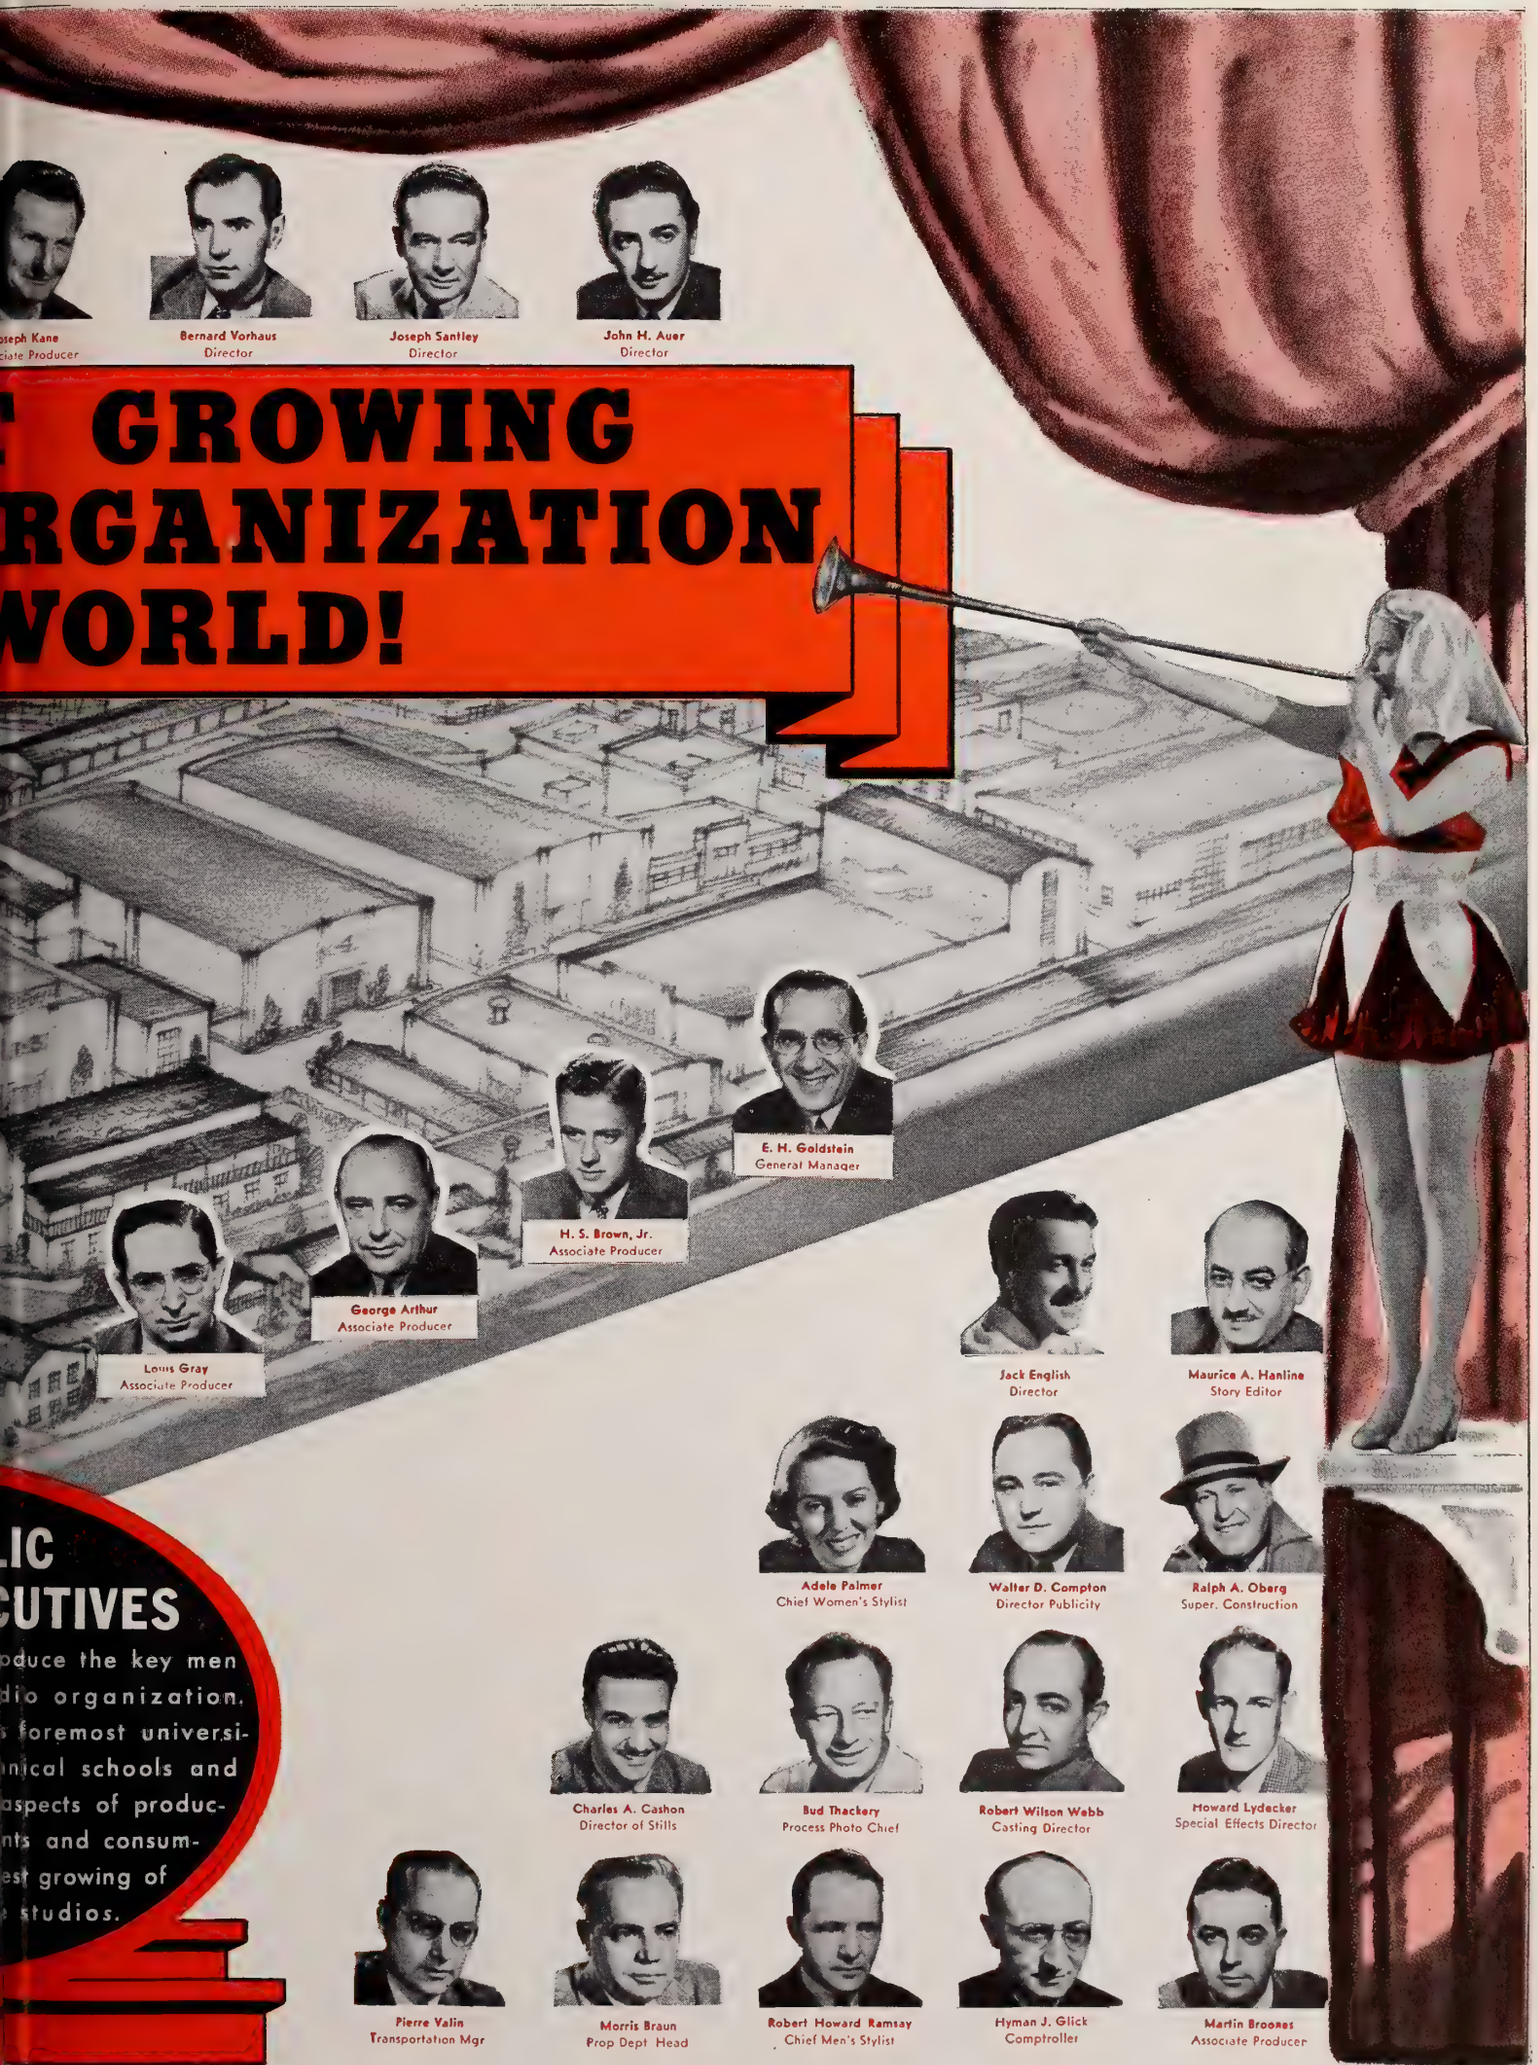
Las Vegas Nights

(Paramount)



Musical Comedy

The Nevada town of Las Vegas advertised by the chamber of commerce as "The Friendly City," and known from coast to coast for its gaming tables and slot machines, its wide open night clubs, and frontier life merging with modern refinements, is the locale for this Paramount production. Directed by Ralph Murphy, who has shown his adaptability for handling music and comedy in other productions, the picture has been made with an eye toward the audience appeal and sprinkled throughout with gags and puns of various vintage.

Heading the cast are Constance Moore and Bert Wheeler as part of a vaudeville team of four stranded in Las Vegas without funds

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS OF PRODUCT

while awaiting the distribution of an estate, Phil Regan as the local rancher, Hank Ladd as the unscrupulous jack-of-all-trades, and Tommy Dorsey and his orchestra, who offer, besides some of the numbers he has popularized, four new musical pieces, "Dolores," "Moments Like This," "Mary, Mary, Quite Contrary" and "I Gotta Ride."

Awaiting a legacy, a vaudeville team is arrested for importing pigeons into Nevada. In trying to prove their innocence they become entangled with the town's crooked politician, "Hank Bevis." Their long awaited legacy is not funds as they had expected but a run-down saloon, which is the key to a valuable plot of property. "Bevis" as an agent to purchase the property attempts many illegal methods, but is exposed by "Bill Stevens." After some humorous adventures the group outwit the swindler and make a handsome profit on the sale of the building.

Hank Ladd, as the vaudevillians' foil, is a newcomer to the screen who turns in a creditable comedy performance as do Lillian Cornell and Virginia Dale, as the other two of the vaudeville team, in their singing and dancing routines which helps carry the story, songs and comedy. The highlight of the picture, though, is Dorsey's music.

Reviewed at the Paramount theatre in New York, attended for the most part by a mid-afternoon crowd, who also witnessed the stage show featuring Ina Ray Hutton, the Andrews Sisters and Allan Jones.—GEORGE SPIRES.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. William Le Baron, producer. Directed by Ralph Murphy. Assistant director, E. Salven. Film editor, Arthur Schmidt. Art director, Hans Dreier and Earl Hedrick. Photographer, William Mellor, A. S. C. Running time, 89 minutes. Release date March 28, 1941. P. C. A. Certificate No. 6914. Adult audience classification.

The Man Who Lost Himself

(Universal)

Mixed Identity Comedy

The complexities in which a man finds himself involved when he undertakes to carry on in the personality of his double are negotiated, in this treatment of the theme, by Brian Aherne, a performer whose talent and versatility seem to know no limitation. Opposite him, playing the wife of the man he is not, 'though she knows it not, is Kay Francis, gowned to the peak of fashion and displaying verve, vivacity and charm. S. Z. Sakall, as the man's valet, sparks the picture on the side of comedy.

The story differs from its predecessors in the vein by doing away with one side of the dual-personality casting at close of the first sequence, an incident in which the two men who look alike spend a night of drinking together, the survivor awakening next morning in the bed of the deceased under circumstances which compel him to masquerade as the latter until close of the picture. The incidents strung between opening and close afford Aherne opportunity to display his ability in many a situation.

Produced by Lawrence W. Fox, Jr., with Ben Hersh as associate producer and Edward Ludwig directing the film is for purposes of humour and none other. It is staged with the richness and sheen with which art director Jack Otterson invests all productions in kind.

The Bad Man

(MGM)

Wallace Beery Vehicle

The fact that this is the first picture starring Wallace Beery to be offered since news of his rating among the Ten Money Making Stars of the year in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD-Fame Poll of exhibitors is a point for showmen to stress in the exploitation. Presence of Lionel Barrymore and Ronald Reagan in the case is another circumstance to mention. That the film is a play which made history behind footlights in its day is something else that rates express in the billing.

Reference to the play in exploitation will serve also to explain to the customers why it is that the characters sit, stand and walk around a ranch house, talking, arguing and threatening instead of riding, shooting and fighting, save ever so briefly, up and down, over and across, the plains, canyons and mountains which, glimpsed fleetingly as photographed in MGM's sepia tint, surround the place. It is a play of talk, in the manner of the stage, lacking the movement action and thrill most people expect of a western and Beery. As on the stage, a Mexican bad man raids a ranch where an assortment of people are at cross purposes and by devices of his own establishes a sort of justice while terrorizing all present.

Produced by J. Walter Ruben and directed by Richard Thorpe the plot gains nothing, maybe loses something in its transcription to screen.

Man-Made Monster

Horror Story

Universal's "Man-Made Monster" deals with the efforts of a mad scientist to prove his theory that an immunity to electricity can be built up in the human body. The doctor finds a subject, builds up his resistance and gets absolute control over him. The youth thus treated slays a benefactor and is sentenced to the electric chair. His power is revived upon being electrocuted, and he breaks away from the prison to murder the scientist.

Lionel Atwill as the scientist and Lon Chaney, Jr., as the youth, head the cast, which consists of Anne Nagel, Frank Albertson, Samuel S. Hinds, William Davidson, Ben Taggart, Connie Bergen, Ivan Miller, Chester Gan, George Meader, Frank O'Connor, John Dilson, Byron Foulger and Russell Hicks.

Fools of Desire

(Syndicate)

Sex Sensationalism

Purporting to portray the sex struggles of an elderly Don Juan on the "Caspar Milquetoast" side, this picture probing into the sphere of the libido may be in essence what the sponsors of the film claim it to be, namely, a psychological drama. However, the situations detailed are so patently obvious and on the tabloid and confessional side of reporting and the performances by a group of unknown actors so painfully projected that an engagement of the picture at any motion picture house with a sense of obligation to its patronage is debatable.

"Wilbur," the hero of the sex saga, dreams of love, is awakened by his shrewish wife, tempted at his office and finally entangled with a blonde whose attractions cause him to steal. His personal affairs finally adjusted, he turns on his wife, who sprinkles herself with perfume and returns to the side of the waiting "Wilbur" for a kiss and hug fadeout.

Seen at the New York City Miami Theatre in the center of an employment office district, where a scarce afternoon audience of males, perhaps driven to seek shelter from their work quest by inclement weather and the added attraction to the bill of a "gay bedroom farce," sat before the sex show with an apathetic lack of personal response.—J. AAA ISSUES NEW ORDERS TO LOCAL ARBITERS FOR 'TRYING' FILM CASES

District Panels Get Instructions on Method and Procedure; Requirements, Responsibilities, Nature of Office Detailed

The American Arbitration Association, in New York, this week, issued formal orders to the 500 local arbitrators who will sit in judgment on arbitration awards under the motion picture consent decree, instructing and advising them on the manner and method of their procedure and conduct.

The orders also give exhibitor arbitration complainants and those contemplating complaints additional insight into certain of their rights before their local boards and during hearings of their cases.

Arbitrators' "ethical conduct" is prescribed. Set down also are basic and public responsibilities, along with 13 other matters, as follows:

I. Judicial Character of the Office
II. Requirements of Impartiality
III. Honorary Position of the Arbitrator
IV. Primary Responsibility
V. Public Responsibility
VI. Independence of Office
VII. Oath of Office
VIII. Source of Authority
IX. Method of Selection
X. Panels of Arbitrators
XI. Tenure of Office
XII. Effect of Taking Office
XIII. Powers of Arbitrator
XIV. Requirements for Making an Award
XV. Ethical Duties
XVI. Standards of Conduct

Of particular interest are sections XV, Ethical Duties, and XVI, Standards of Conduct, in which special hints on how an arbitration hearing must be conducted. For example the arbitrator must not assume the role of a mediator or conciliator. He is expected to give a decision. The parties have the right voluntarily to reach a settlement but the arbitrator must not initiate or participate in any compromise settlement, according to the rules.

The text of the instructions to the men who will hear arbitration demands filed by exhibitors follows in part:

I. Judicial Character of the Office

The office which the Arbitrator holds, by authorization of the parties, is of a judicial nature; for he is chosen to determine the respective claims of the parties by making a just and final award. In the performance of his duties, the Arbitrator remains independent and impartial, acts within the powers bestowed upon him, is responsible for the conduct of the proceeding, offers a fair hearing and receives evidence—all acts of the highest judicial importance.

An Arbitrator need not consider it any reflection upon his office, if, during the proceeding, the parties mutually arrive at a settlement of their differences. One of the functions of his office is to create goodwill and if he succeeds to the point where they voluntarily, by themselves, reach a settlement, this is to the credit of the Arbitrator and of the proceeding.

The Arbitator's only responsibility is to avoid having any personal part in arranging a settlement, for he is a judge and not a compromiser. If, however, he creates, by his fairness, impartiality, integrity and courtesy, an atmosphere that leads to a settlement, the function of his office is fully met.

[1]The Arbitrators appointed to serve in Motion Picture Arbitration Tribunals under a Consent Decree, however, have the added prestige in that the agreement of the parties was approved and made a Decree of the Federal Court.

II. Requirement of Impartiality

The office of Arbitrator is judicial in that a dispute is to be decided, not only deliberately and fairly, but with conscientious appraisal of the evidence and according to facts. The element of honesty is satisfied when the Arbitrator conscientiously believes he is doing what is right, regardless of errors in judgment. The element of independence is satisfied when he arrives at his decision by his own free will on the basis of these same facts.

But more than this is required to satisfy the element of impartiality, for this includes not only an honest purpose and an independent mind, but the ability to maintain an even-handed attitude toward both parties alike.

The Consent Decree, establishing the office of Arbitrator in the Motion Picture Tribunals goes even further in safeguarding the impartiality of an Arbitrator. It prohibits any person from holding the office who has any financial interest in, or has or has had any connection with, the production, distribution or exhibition of motion pictures or has or has had any interest in any motion picture theatre as landlord, lessor or otherwise. The Rules of Arbitration and Appeals provide for the removal of any Arbitrator selected in violation of this provision, thus immunizing the Arbitrator from contact with, or influence by, any previous association with the industry.

III. Honorary Position of the Arbitrator

Carrying on ancient traditions, the office of the American Arbitrator is honorary.[4] Inherent in this concept is the belief that an Arbitrator not only acts as a private judge for the parties but he renders a public service in ridding commerce and society of a dispute that threatens their stability and peace.

[4]This practice prevails under the Rules of the American Arbitration Association and under those of many trade associations. Where compensation is arranged for, it is an honorarium rather than payment for services and is so regarded by the men who receive it. Under the Motion Picture Decree, compensation is authorized and has been fixed upon the basis of an honorarium, thus avoiding making the office sought for by reason of its remuneration.

IV. Primary Responsibility

Arbitration is, in itself, nothing but a word, save as the Arbitrator clothes it with dignity, integrity and authority. The office is precisely what the Arbitrator makes it: If he is conscientious, deliberate, fair, painstaking in arriving at the truth, and bases his decision upon the facts, arbitration becomes an instrument for advancing justice.

VI. Independence of Office

Not only is the office of an Arbitrator honorary and judicial; it is independent of all political organizations. Once the Arbitrator is appointed he is free to arrive at his decision without partisan or other outside influences. There are no election debts to be paid and no political favors to grant. He need not frame his decision with the idea in mind that some other tribunal will upset it and he is not bound by what someone a century ago, when society was so utterly different, thought about a similar case. The public, being unaware of the proceeding, does not bring public opinion to influence his judgment and he is not worried about what the press will say concerning his conduct and how it will affect his future.[5]

[5]The contrary policy is established under the Motion Picture Consent Decree where an appeal may be taken to an Appeal Board and where hearings are public. These changes have been made by reason of the vast public interest involved in the industry and under the Decree.

VII. Oath of Office

The dignity of the office of Arbitrator is greatly enhanced by the solemnity of his taking an oath of office.

VIII. Source of Authority

An Arbitrator acting under the Motion Picture Consent Decree derives his express authority from the Decree which definitely fixes his powers and from the Rules of Procedure which definitely fix his duties.

IX. Method of Selection

An Arbitrator is selected for his office by the parties according to the method established under the Rules of the Association or of the Motion Picture Rules of Arbitration and Appeals. The number of Arbitrators chosen for any case is fixed in the Rules or, if not so fixed, is optional with the parties.

One of the outstanding principles in all Tribunals of the Association is the reservation to the parties of their mutual right to select their own Arbitrators. For this purpose lists of names are sent out to be approved or checked by the parties before an appointment is made. Only when they fail to agree upon names from such lists does the Association make the appointment in the manner authorized under the prevailing Rules.

X. Panels of Arbitrators

For the convenience of parties and in order to expedite the selection of Arbitrators, National and Special Panels of Arbitrators are maintained by the Association. As has been indicated, on the special Motion Picture Arbi-

NO FREE TICKETS FOR ARBITRATORS

The rules and regulations for motion picture arbitrators forbid "fraternizing with motion picture representatives or receiving any theatre tickets."

One section reads as follows:

"In Motion Picture Arbitration Tribunals, members of the Panel, even when not serving, must scrupulously avoid social fraternizing with the motion picture representatives or receiving any theatre tickets, accepting or seeking any favors whatever, however slight they may be, or in any way giving the impression or creating a suspicion that they are any more friendly or approachable than before their appointment. Any substantial change in attitude, leading to such an inference, may give cause for their removal from the Panel. Any charges of having an interest, even if not a substantial one, ends an Arbitrator's usefulness, as suspicion once aroused is always difficult to eradicate."

AAA INSTRUCTIONS FOR PANELS

tration Panel, he is chosen for his general qualifications, standing and ability rather than for expert knowledge of the industry.

XI. Tenure of Office

Under the general rules of the Association and those of the Consent Decree, an Arbitrator is chosen by the parties and serves in that one case only. His office begins with his appointment and closes when he makes award. An Arbitrator serves in as many or as few cases as he is chosen for by the parties and as he has the inclination or time. He is under no obligation to accept the appointment, but once he does so, there is a moral contractual obligation to see the matter through.

XII. Effect of Taking Office

Upon accepting the office, the Arbitrator is immediately in a new position with respect to the parties, the subject matter and the public. As to the parties, he is set apart as a judge and can no longer see them separately and privately at his convenience or enjoy them socially while the arbitration lasts. As to the subject matter, he cannot make private investigations, but must wait for the proofs to be presented to him at a hearing. As to the public, he has assumed the responsibility of ridding the community of a troublesome dispute.

XIII. Powers of Arbitrators

The powers of Arbitrators are both judicial and administrative. Their judicial powers are fixed, as to the scope of the subject matter and as to determining the controversy, by the agreement of the parties. They may decide no more and no less than the matter referred to them. Under the Consent Decree their judicial powers are strictly defined and limited by that Decree.

The administrative powers of Arbitrators are fixed in the Rules of Procedure. They provide an administrative schedule for the conduct of the proceeding from the time the dispute reaches them until it is disposed of in an award. In general commercial Tribunals the prevailing arbitration law also defines their powers and duties. In Motion Picture Arbitration Tribunals the Consent Decree and the Rules define their procedural powers.

XIV. Requirements for Making an Award

An award should be made in accordance with the arbitration agreement in that:

(1) It should not go beyond the terms of the arbitration agreement.

(2) It should be a complete adjudication of every matter submitted by the parties.

(3) It should observe each and every condition set forth in the arbitration agreement.

(4) It should be rendered within the time limit, if any, specified in the arbitration agreement.

(5) It should be certain and definite and final in its terms.

(6) The award should be made in clear and simple English, technical expressions of law being avoided. The award should be so phrased that its terms are possible of performance at the time the award is made.

(7) An Arbitrator, unless the submission provides otherwise, is not required to state the reasons for the conclusions reached but may do so if he sees fit.[6]

(8) It is clearly the duty of an Arbitrator not to give any inkling of what his decision is to be before the hearing is closed and the award is made; nor to indicate the nature of his deliberation.

[6]Under certain sections of the Motion Picture Consent Decree the Arbitrator is required to make definite findings in addition to or in place of making an award.

XV. Ethical Duties

There are, however, ethical duties that make the office of Arbitrator one of integrity and distinction, which are not to be found in arbitration laws or Court Decree or in Rules of Procedure. These are of the very essence of the proceeding and may be briefly stated as follows:

(1) Any person nominated as Arbitrator in any specific case, upon the receipt of the notice and before acceptance, should examine scrupulously his own personal and technical qualifications. Any circumstance, which he believes might cause suspicion of his impartiality, independence, or ability, should be immediately disclosed, so the parties may withdraw the appointment or waive the circumstance.

(2) It is an elementary duty of the Arbitrator to expedite the settlement of the controversy. He should be alert to make his service useful to the parties by avoiding delays on his own part, by opposing dilatory practices by parties or counsel, by refusing unnecessary adjournments, and by meeting the convenience of the parties as to the time and place of hearings.

(3) One of the alleged advantages of arbitration is its low cost. It is the duty of the Arbitrator to conduct the proceedings with the utmost economy, keeping within allowances when these are set, or regulating rigorously the expense when the parties have neglected to safeguard themselves. The Arbitrator should incur no new or unusual expenses without the explicit consent of the parties. By expediting the proceedings, by having the fewest necessary hearings and refusing frequent adjournments, the Arbitrator can and should keep down costs.

(4) The behavior of the Arbitrator should be such as to encourage all parties to lay matters honestly and fairly before him. It rests solely with the Arbitrator to have the parties leave a hearing in a spirit of friendliness, for it is he who gives the atmosphere to the whole proceeding. A loss of temper, a display of impatience, an indication of bias, an exhibition of arrogance on his part, may destroy the amity of the proceeding and cause loss of confidence.

(5) When counsel are present on behalf of their clients, there is sometimes a tendency to introduce the tactics of litigation. It is the responsibility of the Arbitrator to free the proceeding from the spirit of litigation. He can do this by requiring courtesy on the part of counsel toward each other and witnesses and by allowing the parties to present their case in their own way, free from intimidation. It is entirely within the power of the Arbitrator to maintain an attitude of cooperation on the part of all participants.

(6) It is the responsibility of the Arbitrator to maintain the privacy of the proceeding, for it is he who decides who shall be admitted to a hearing. Only with the mutual consent of the parties, or where the Rules provide for public hearings, may this rule be abrogated.[7]

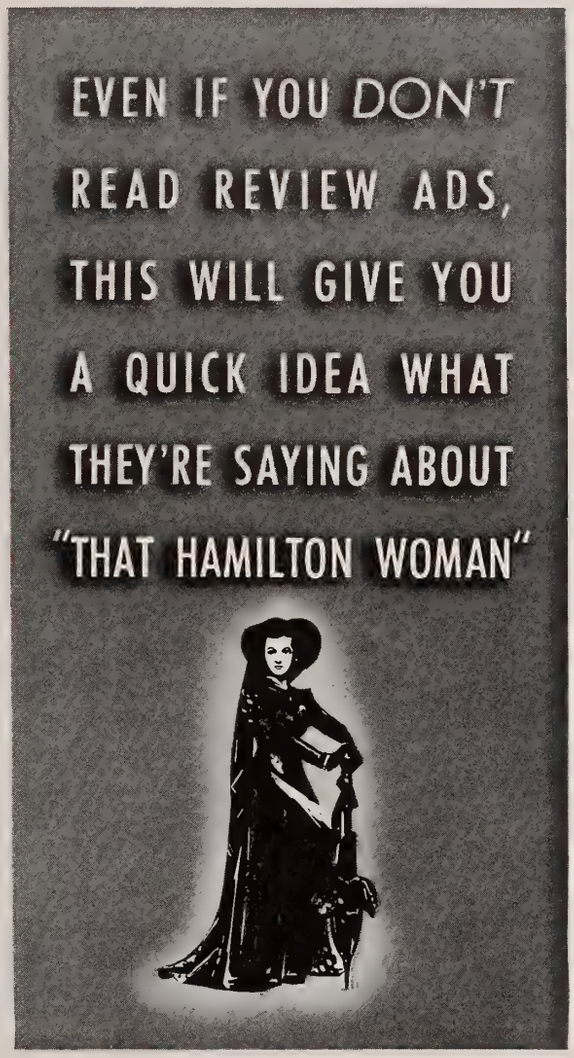
[7]The Rules of Arbitration and Appeals provide for making the award public and the hearings are also public, particularly to those identified with the motion picture industry.

(7) From the time the Arbitrator accepts office, his conduct should be such as to avoid any suspicion as to his fairness and honesty. He will, therefore, avoid receiving favors from either party, or accepting invitations from a party or his counsel; he will have no communication with either party, not immediately made known to the other party; he will receive no private communications which he does not disclose to both parties; he will enter into no relationship which might change his point of view or make him a beneficiary under his own award. A scrupulous Arbitrator will go further and refuse to benefit from offers made by the successful party to improve his social or financial position, for the acceptance of these, even subsequently to the making of an award, may be construed as a reward for his favorable decision.

Members of the Motion Picture Tribunal Panels must observe these standards not only while they are serving in cases but at all times, lest it be inferred that they are being influenced in advance of their service.

(8) It is an invariable standard that an Arbitrator shall not profit from his office either during his service in office or subsequently. This means that information disclosed, contacts made, or opportunities for advantages developed while he is in office shall not be used to the advantage of an Arbitrator or of his friends, as such acts lead to the suspicion that he has taken advantage of his judicial position. Such would be—subsequently to making an award—taking a paid position with a party; accepting a loan from a party; or solicitation of favors.

(9) Under the Rules of the Association it is assumed that parties desire to have a legal arbitration with the award enforceable by law or Decree; and that they therefore seek a judicial determination of their difference on the basis of facts. The parties, therefore, have a right to expect a decision which determines their respective claims on the basis of the evidence submitted. An Arbitrator misuses his powers and takes an unfair advantage of the parties when he voluntarily tries to persuade or force parties to compromise or settle their controversy. Had they preferred this procedure, the parties would probably have selected a mediator or conciliator. It is the privilege of the parties voluntarily to effect a settlement of their controversy during an arbitration proceeding and to withdraw the case or to ask the Arbitrator to give it the status of an award. It is not, however, the privilege of the Arbitrator to initiate or participate in making such a settlement. Furthermore, in his discretion, he may, with entire observance of the obligations of his office, decline to give a settlement his approval as an award if such settlement is contrary to his judgment.



(10) It is not the function of an Arbitrator to give legal advice. Even though he may be a member of the Bar, the parties have appointed him to act as a judge and not as their counsel. Applying the Rules of Procedure and interpreting the prevailing arbitration law or the terms of a Decree are within his powers. But to advise a party how to proceed in a matter before him or to help him in the presentation of his case is clearly not the function of an Arbitrator.

CIRCUIT ASSIGNS AD DUTIES TO MANAGERS

Effective April 1st every manager of the Tri-States Theatre Corp., of Des Moines, Iowa, will be expected to be his own advertising and publicity man under the revised operating procedure. The advertising and publicity departments of the home office will also be enlarged. Dale McFarland, manager of the Capitol theatre at Davenport, Ia., will become advertising director for the circuit, and Dorothy Day, now in charge of advertising and publicity, will head a new publicity department and will also be Mr. McFarland's assistant.

Louella Parsons says "The picture of the week, perhaps of the month or year. I don't see how it can miss being box-office!" John Chapman, NewYork Daily News columnist writes: "Miss Leigh has done the nearly impossible—she has topped her performance in 'Gone With The Wind'." Film Daily calls it "Tops in all departments. Great entertainment for all audiences. Ranks high among the outstanding pictures of the year." Hedda Hopper broadcasts: "Alexander Korda has produced the whole picture with a prodigal hand. Vivien Leigh is superb from start to finish!" Hollywood Reporter reports: "A magnificent production. Vivien Leigh gives a glorious performance. Hers is a brilliant exhibition of acting." Daily Variety says: "A stirring drama." Sheila Graham, North American Newspaper Alliance writes: "Leigh's performance outranks her Scarlett!" John Truesdell, Esquire Syndicate, raves: "A powerful and beautifully told love story. One of the year's film high points." Los Angeles Daily News says: "One of the standout films of the year." Los Angeles Herald Express predicts: "It should find large audiences. Plenty of entertainment for the movie fan."

XVI. Standards of Conduct

There are certain standards which the Association has established for members of its Panels which are not to be found in its Rules but which obtain in practice. These may be briefly stated as follows:

(1) An arbitration is an informal proceeding. This does not mean that it shall become a disorganized or casual proceeding. An Arbitrator should at all times preserve the dignity and orderliness and decorum of a judicial proceeding, without, however, the technicalities of a court proceeding.

(2) The atmosphere of a proceeding takes its tone from the Arbitrator. He should conduct a proceeding free from animosity or arrogance and with patience and tact so as to elicit in a friendly atmosphere all pertinent information. He should maintain confidence in his own integrity, by his own acts, while in office.

(3) In qualifying for his office an Arbitrator should decline an appointment when he has:

(a) Any personal, financial, or close family relation, or close business relation, such as partner or agent, to any of the parties.

(b) Any probable pecuniary interest in the outcome of the controversy.

(c) Any private understanding with, or obligation to, any party respecting the subject matter in controversy or making of an award.

(d) Any personal bias or prejudice in favor of, or against, any of the parties.

(4) There are certain practices which have been found to undermine the prestige of arbitration and confidence in its proceedings. An arbitrator should avoid the following as coming within such practices:

(a) Acting as a conciliator. In a proceeding where the arbitration law contemplates the making of an award, the duty of an Arbitrator is not to facilitate a compromise but to reach a fair decision and to make a just award.

(b) Acting as an advocate or agent for either party. His duty is not to argue or defend the case but to hear and decide it according to his best understanding.

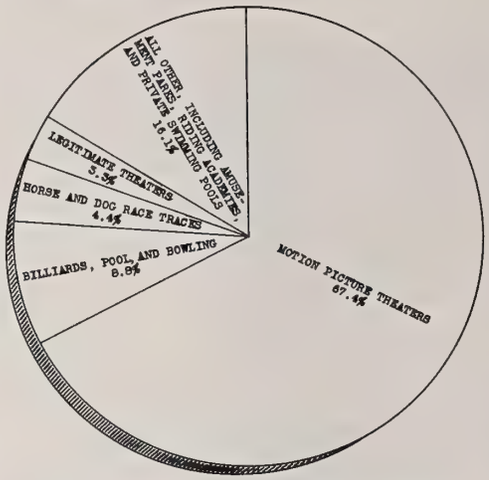
(c) Delegating his duties or authority. Each Arbitrator is personally responsible and is obligated to perform the full duties of his office.

(d) Appearing to have a bias. An Arbitrator should not express opinions or views concerning the parties or the controversy before or after the award is made.

(e) Refusing to admit pertinent and material evidence.

(f) Postponing hearings for insufficient reasons or denying postponements for sufficient cause shown; or making adjournments beyond the date fixed for rendering an award.

(g) Indicating, by word or manner, that a decision has been reached before all of the evidence is received and before the award is signed by all or a majority of the Arbitrators.



(h) Differentiating between a party and his counsel. The responsibilities of the Arbitrator toward counsel are precisely those observed in his relations to the parties.

(i) Obtaining information, expert advice, knowledge of conditions or other data from outside sources without the knowledge of the parties and without disclosing such intention in advance to all parties and obtaining their consent thereto.

Final State Witness in Schenck, Moskowitz Case

The trial of Joseph M. Schenck and Joseph H. Moskowitz in the income tax case before Judge Grover C. Moscovitz in United States District court in New York at mid-week neared the end of the prosecution's presentation, after two and a half weeks of testimony, largely on matters of accountancy. Tax figures were recapitulated by Lawrence W. Gibney, Los Angeles treasury agent, and presumably the final witness for the Government. The Government was calling, without response, for the appearance of A. C. Blumenthal, said to have been served with a subpoena some months ago, and now said to be in Mexico City. It was calculated that the case might occupy two more weeks of court time.

Harvard University of Cambridge, Mass., will build a new Alvin theatre in Pittsburgh, Pa., for the Harris Amusement Co. on the site of house closed since last November when its roof collapsed. The opening is expected late this summer and the theatre will be operated under a long term lease.

Champion Joins Agency

Burt Champion, for several years in the United Artists publicity department in New York, has resigned to join Lynn Farnol's public relations organization.

Admission Prices Vary in Wisconsin

Wisconsin circuits are juggling admission prices in a number of situations around the state. In Kenosha, Standard Theatres has inaugurated 20-cent early matinee prices at its Kenosha and Gateway, with Saxe Amusement Management's Orpheum retaliating with 15-cent admissions to 6 p.m. Saxe also has announced a 20-cent policy all day on Wednesdays and Thursdays at its Oshkosh in Oshkosh.

Fox has announced new low prices of 15 and 20 cents at its Uptown in Racine on Mondays to Fridays and 10 cents all day on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays. In Beaver Dam, where the circuit operates the city's two houses, it has announced a policy of 20 cents to 6 p.m. on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays and all day Mondays. In Stevens Point, the Fox is now charging 20 cents to 6 p.m. and its Lyric 20 cents all evening every Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. The circuit has also inaugurated a 20-cent policy for seats in the balcony of its Myers at Janesville at any time.

In a number of these situations, including its Orpheum in Green Bay, where a 20-cent admission prevails until 2 p.m., Fox has instituted daily matinees. Also offering matinees is the circuit's Zenith, Venetian and Downer in Milwaukee and the Paradise in West Allis. The latter was the first to adopt such a policy with the others following suit within the last week.

A greater number of Milwaukee houses are also playing Saturday matinees. Among those recently adopted to this policy are Warner-Saxe's Granada, Lake and Egyptian; Fox's Shorewood and the Climax and Greendale theatres, independent houses.

Two Houses Burn

The Family theatre, Warners' all-night motion picture theatre in downtown Philadelphia, was completely wrecked by fire early Sunday morning during the 14 hours it was closed for its weekly cleaning. Only the projection booth and the sound equipment in the rear of the theatre escaped damage. Albert Plough, Warner district manager, estimated the damage at approximately $25,000.

In Bridgeville, Del., 25 persons at a last show filed out safely but the projectionist was seriously burned when fire destroyed the $10,000 Keller theatre, last Saturday. The projectionist, Mace Allen, was burned about the face and hands when he attempted to extinguish a fire in the projection booth.

Vaughan Joining Small

Al Vaughan, publicity and advertising director for Sol Lesser, is resigning to take a similar position with Edward Small Productions, also releasing through United Artists, it was announced in Hollywood this week. He will join the Small outfit on Monday, after handling the preview and the premiere of "That Uncertain Feeling," an Ernest Lubitsch-Sol Lesser film.

Guinan Joins P. R. C.

William A. Guinan has been added to the sales staff of the St. Louis exchange of Producers Releasing Corporation by A. R. Dietz, branch manager.

CLEAN SLATE FOR FILMS IN N.Y. LEGISLATURE

Chain Tax, Bingo Legislation, Billboard Measures Killed; Discrimination Bill Debated

New York's legislature continued a fast pace toward intended adjournment this week, clearing up virtually all committee work in the Assembly, with the bulk of anti-motion picture industry legislation killed in the House. Plowed under in committees were the Bennett chain tax bill, both Turshen Bingo legalization measures, all but one of the outdoor advertising bills and a three per cent sales tax measure.

While the large majority of anti-discrimination bills affecting places of public accommodation were killed, two measures were reported out sponsored respectively by Assemblymen William T. Andrews and Daniel Burrows, New York Democrats. One provides a statement of policy which is included in the penal law with penalties for violation, but the Burrows measure would allow suspension of licenses for a minimum of one month if a place of public accommodation were found guilty of practicing discrimination. The latter bill stipulates written complaints can be brought before licensing authorities and a hearing held on the charges.

Second Discrimination Bill

Of direct interest to theatres was the Judicity Committee's report in amended form on Assemblyman Irwin Davidson's bill to prohibit refusals of admission or ejection of persons over 21 who purchased tickets and were not guilty of abusive or violent speech tending to a breach of peace. The committee amended the bill to specify that common gamblers or bookmakers could also be refused admission or ejected.

The Moffat business turnover tax of 1/10 of one per cent was amended to apply only to New York City, but theatre admission are definitely involved. Likelihood of New York's adopting the permissive impost if the legislature grants permission is said to be in store.

The Senate last week passed the James measure, allowing children to act for non-profit making businesses with the approval of the mayor or president of their locality.

Assemblyman James J. Wadsworth's bill which provides that plans for the construction of public assembly buildings, including theatres, excepting for New York City, be submitted first to the Industrial Commissioner has survided the committee "kill session" and has been sent to Rules Committee for consideration.

Following the passage of the Georgia Sunday motion picture bill in Senate early last week, whereby the showing of films on Sunday would be permitted on a local option basis in communities where 25 per cent of the voters signed a petition requesting them, the proposal was killed in the House by representatives angered by a letter read to them by Representative Harrison in Jenkins County.

The letter charged an Atlanta firm of lawyers had promised to get the bill through the legislature for $5,000 payable, $2,500 in cash and $2,500 when it becomes a law. It pointed out that if the bill were passed the theatre operators in those towns now running Sunday movies on a charity basis would receive greater profits since the charities would no longer be necessary. The letter listed 14 alleged subscribers to the lobby fund.

Last Saturday night the Assembly adjourned sine die after defeating the Sunday movie measure, the block-booking bill and adopting a measure giving the entire state eastern time. Until the passage of the bill, about two-thirds of the state had eastern time and one-third had central standard time.

With a budget of $73,858,000, or $8,322,000 more than estimated receipts for the biennium, tax measures are being tossed into the legislative hopper in Wisconsin to help balance expenditures and income.

Most recent is the McParland bill, providing for a ten per cent tax on movie film where rentals for the same exceed $500. Exhibitors and distributors will offer strenuous opposition to this measure. In the 1939 legislature a measure providing for an assessment of $2.50 on each 1,000 feet of film failed to pass the indefinite postponement state.

Another revenue measure is the Fowell bill, which would tax coin movie machines an annual $10 license fee and owners of the machines would be required to file a $5,000 bond. The Fehlaber bill, also introduced in the Wisconsin assembly, would assess the machines $25 a year.

For the fourth time since the 1941 legislature started its session in January, daylight saving again has been revived, this time in the form of a bill which would limit optional daylight saving to Milwaukee and other cities. The move is being strongly opposed by exhibitors.

A 1½ per cent gross receipts tax is being suggested by Representative J. N. Reed in the Austin, Texas, legislature, that will apply to theatre tickets, sports and athletic events. By levying such a tax, $500,000 a year would be collected. Religious, charitable organizations and educational associations would be exempt.

In Des Moines, an effort to repeal Iowa's Blue Sunday laws, has failed in the legislature, with the bill killed for the remainder of the session.

"No Standing Room" Bill

In Jefferson City, Mo., Representative Paul Turner of St. Joseph has presented "A No Standing Room" ticket bill in the Missouri General Assembly. The bill introduced would prohibit motion picture theatres and other places of public amusement from selling tickets after all of the seats have been occupied.

Another measure has been introduced into the legislature designed to eliminate double and triple features, and to limit motion picture performances to two and a half hours. The measure will be sponsored by the Better Films Council of Greater St. Louis. The bill provides a 15-minute intermission if the performances run more than two and a half hours. Violations would be punishable by fines ranging from $100 to $500 or six month in jail or both.

In Andalusia, Ala., an amusement tax for the purpose of additional revenue for schools has been levied by the city fathers on admission prices to "amusement houses, picture shows, theatres, vaudeville shows, and other places where general admissions are charged, within the corporate limits of Andalusia and its police jurisdiction." The levy will be one cent for each 15 cents admission, with a maximum of three cents, within the city, but only half this much outside the corporate limits. Exhibitors will be allowed commission of five per cent for collecting tax.

A bill urging one-cent tax on all film admissions, the revenue to finance recreational activities in the city of Salisbury, has been presented to the Maryland state legislature by Delegate J. Howard Johnson. Endorsement of the Mayor and City Council has been obtained. Mr. Johnson estimates an annual revenue under the measure at from $12,000 to $15,000 annually.

Mexican Officials Weigh Import Tax On German Film

by LUIS BECERRA CELIS
in Mexico City

The federal attorney general has been assigned the task of determining whether or not a picture that is imported duty free as an educational film, but which later is exhibited publicly for profit, must then pay duties. The case concerns the German "documentary" film report of the Ninth Olympiad, the last one to be held in Berlin, imported by Angel Truchuelo Robles. He had no trouble inducing the customs officers to exempt the lengthy film from taxes, on the ground it was educational. But the customs department demanded that he pay full duties on the film when they found that he had exhibited it for some time at a local theatre at the regular admission charges.

The prosecutor's ruling in this case is being awaited as a precedent by all picture importers and distributors in Mexico.

"Wind" Grosses Unequalled

Exhibitions here of "Gone With the Wind" have ended for at least a year, with a gross that will probably not be equalled, excelled or even challenged for a long time. Exhibitions of "GWTW" here were in the nature of an experiment. It was to be shown simultaneously for six weeks by the Cines Alameda and Iris, two of the most important local theatres. But the Iris abandoned this picture after only three weeks. That action, it is said, provoked Metro to cancel its contract with this theatre. The Alameda, which from the beginning got most of the trade for this film, ran it the full six weeks.

The total gross of "GWTW" at both theatres is announced at $84,000—$71,500 for the Alameda and the rest for the Iris. This picture grossed $15,500 in its first week at the Alameda. Its business at the Alameda was the highest in every respect that any film has ever done in Mexico. "GWTW" also had the longest run of any film at this theatre. The next longest runner there was "Rebecca" which lasted for four weeks and grossed $32,500.

But the run of "GWTW" was not the longest here. "All This and Heaven, Too" is now in its 12th week at the Cine Rex here. This is the longest run at one theatre any picture has ever had in Mexico. But the Rex is very small. It only seats 1,000 and the charge is much less than for "GWTW"—32 cts. "Arlette and Her Two Papas," a French film, ran for seven weeks at another small local theatre, the Cine Regis, 1,200 seats, at prices of from 32 to 45 cts.

How "GWTW" will do outside Mexico City is indicated from reports of the Cine Alcazar, leading theatre of Tampico, that the gross was $15,500 in the first week—exactly equal to that in the first week at the Alameda here. But in the second week at the Alcazar, the gross was only $3,100 and business was so poor in the third week that the picture had to be withdrawn.

Celebration Planned

President Manuel Avila Camacho has approved plans for the celebration here, April 12 to 15, of the "Pan-American Cinematographic Festival" and he is to invite Hollywood's leading players, producers, directors and other leading lights of the industry to visit the city for the occasion. The object of this festival, the first of the kind to be held, is to increase good relations between Mexico and the United States, and to reveal to Hollywood the extent and nature of the Mexican picture industry.

The President has ordered the ministry of the interior to formulate a program for the festival. But it has already been arranged that a feature of this fiesta will be the world premiere, at a local theatre not yet chosen, of "Money from Heaven," which was produced by young Mr. Roosevelt.

Apart from the professional Hollywood contingent, this festival is counted upon to attract great numbers of American tourists, visitors that Mexico is most eager to have.

Unions to Rescind Ban

It is reported that the new government of the Confederation of Mexican Workers will abolish the ban that the former administration, headed by Lic. Vicente Lombardo Toledano, placed on three films, two of them American—"He Stayed for Breakfast" and "Ninotchka." The third was the Italian-made "Scipio Africanus," which the labor organization forebade because it considered it to be Fascist propaganda.

Credit for being the only woman picture sound engineer who is a Mexican and working in Mexico is claimed by Consuelo Rodriquez. She is the youngest member of the family that is very well represented in nearly every branch of the Mexican film industry, from acting to producing. She was taught by her two brothers who are picture sound experts.

OUTSIDE GROUPS TIE UP FOR "LAND OF LIBERTY"

Typical Campaigns for Industry Film Show Schools, Civic Organizations Easily Interested

Organized efforts of the industry were placed this week behind the nationwide circulation of the industry's patriotic picture, "Land of Liberty," through distribution and promotion undertaken by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, after the film had been given some advance test showings in selected territories.

Having scratched the surface with these early showings—after the film played both New York and San Francisco World's Fairs, during the past two summers "serious attention" is now to be given to its national exhibition, with an audience of some 2,000,000 already marked down, and, according to William F. Rodgers, MGM sales manager, an eventual total audience of 21,000,000 estimated.

School, civic and patriotic tieups are putting the industry-sponsored feature over, according to reports reaching the MGM home office in New York.

School Campaign in Texas

One of the most comprehensive campaigns of school cooperation thus far was arranged between Karl Hoblitzelle, president of the Interstate Circuit, and L. A. Woods, state superintendent of schools, to cover the entire state of Texas, beginning with thirty Interstate theatres. Mr. Woods recommended to all deputy state superintendents that they give it their full support, and managers are following through with county and city superintendents.

In tryout spots, the picture was so well received that Hoblitzelle went ahead with complete campaigns in each of thirty locations. San Antonio opened with a preview for civic leaders on Saturday, March 15th. Other high spots are Fort Worth, Dallas and Houston.

A special manual outlining the campaign was prepared by Ray Beall, director of advertising and publicity for Interstate. School cooperation is directly tied in by means of student coupons distributed by teachers. These are redeemable at special matinees by payment of fifteen cents. Th American Legion, Boy Scouts, Women's clubs, Girl Scouts, churches, Junior Chambers of Commerce, newspapers, civic and patriotic organizations are all cooperating. Advertising stresses the fact that "Land of Liberty" is a full length feature.

Carl E. Milliken, secretary of the MPPDA, wrote to enlist the support of community leaders. This is a service that the Association gives to first runs in every community. Gordon S. White of the Hays office worked with Beall.

The campaign put on by Elihu Glass at Fabian's Paramount theatre, Stapleton, S. I., is cited as an illustration of what can be done in a more modest situation. At a preview arranged with cooperation from the Hays office Dr. C. Frederick Pertsch, assistant superintendent of schools in charge of Staten Island, urged the leaders of patriotic, civic, PTA groups and teachers who attended to give the picture their fullest support. Mr. Glass posted special announcements on all school bulletin boards, supplied the Staten Island papers with stories relating the picture's narrative to local history and got club and civic organizations to circulate their membership. As a result of his school tieup, 562 children attended his 1:00 o'clock matinee, and a total of 1,445 children attended the first day's showings. For the three-day midweek engagement, 2,879 children attend, out of a total of 6,130.

In Cambridge, Md., Harold C. Koren arranged for sponsorship of a city-wide benefit by the Professional and Business Women's club at the Arcade theatre. This was in addition to the usual school and civic tieups.

In Cleveland, Arnold N. Gates ran a school contest awarding prizes for the best captions on the press book mat showing Washington signing the Constitution. A tieup with a local Boystown body was another distinctive feature in a complete campaign of school, civic and patriotic tieups. Charles Deardourff, MGM exploiter, assisted.

After promoting special editions of the two Harrisburg dailies in connection with the premiere at the Senate Theatre, James Ashcraft has been busy in other parts of Pennsylvania. In connection with the showing at the Park Theatre in Reading, he assisted C. G. Keeney in securing cooperation from schools, the American Legion, clergy, the mayor and unprecedented support from the newspapers.

The school tieup put over by Gene Lutes at the Capitol Theatre in Frankfort, Kentucky, was so successful that it was necessary to run the picture in three theatres at the same time. Special arrangements were made with the county superintendent of schools to dismiss pupils under his supervision and transport them in school buses to attend an early showing of the picture on the opening day. Police cooperation was needed to prevent accidents. This was the most distinctive feature in a comprehensive campaign that included cooperation from newspapers and all civic organizations.

Mayors' proclamations roll in from cities as widely separated as Phoenix, Arizona, sent in by Jim Schiller, and Madison, Wisconsin, sent in by Louis Orlove. W. L. Hill arranged for the entire student body of a nearby Indian school to attend a special matinee at the Grand Theatre at Pierre, South Dakota, Norman Pyle assisted.

In Tallahassee, Florida, A. P. Sparks, Perry Neal and MGM Exploiter J. F. Thames, Jr., were responsible for another outstanding campiagn.

In Sheboygan, Wisconsin, the Better Films Council, headed by Mrs. Henry E. Smith, district chairman of the Federation of Women's Clubs, financed the showing of the picture for all pupils of the sixth, seventh and eighth grades.

Short Subject Broadcast

Ed Murrow, European director for the Columbia Broadcasting System, spoke on a special broadcast Wednesday evening from England on a coast-to-coast hookup coincident with the American premiere showing of "This Is England," a short subject released by Columbia Pictures simultaneously in 200 theatres in the greater New York area. Mr. Murrow was commentator for the short subject which Harry Hopkins, special envoy to England, brought with him upon his return to this country.

RKO Promotes Huy

Charles Huy, formerly of the Golden Gate Theatre, San Francisco, has been named by RKO to take over the San Francisco and Los Angeles exploitation territories. For the same company, Eddie Rivers, formerly of the Hamrick-Evergreen circuit, of Seattle, has replaced William Scholl in the Minneapolis exploitation area, Mr. Scholl being transferred to Cleveland.

Of the 14 films classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week eight were found unobjectionable for general patronage and six were classified as unobjectionable for adults. The pictures and their classifications follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Back in the Saddle," "Double Date," "Federal Fugitive," "The Great Train Robbery," "Here Comes Happiness," "Lone Wolf Takes a Chance," "A Man Betrayed" and "Men of Boys Town." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Flying Wild," "Las Vegas Nights," "Man Made Monster," "Reaching for the Sun," "Scotland Yard" and "Thirty Days Hath September."

Warners Promote Harwell

William Harwell, manager of the Warner Ohio theatre in Mansfield, Ohio, since 1938, has been promoted to the post of city manager and will have general supervision of the three Warner theatres in that city. Benjamin Schwartz, who managed the Ohio theatre before Mr. Harwell assumed that position, and who has been with a Cleveland circuit since that time, will resume as manager of the Ohio.

Colbert Joins Fox Unit

Claudette Colbert will augment the Irene Dunne, Ronald Colman and Charles Boyer independent unit at Twentieth Century-Fox, according to an announcement by William Hawks, business manager of the group.

10,000 Theatres In Campaign for Greek War Relief

The Greek War Relief Association's drive in the film industry, and among its theatres, officially began Tuesday—Greek Independence Day—and was to have enlisted more than 10,000 theatres, giving 1,142 midnight shows, by Sunday evening, end of the drive. Because of local situations, the drive began in many localities on Friday, March 21st.

The amusement industry division, of which Adolph Zukor is general chairman, hopes to collect $500,000.

Highlight of the 123 stage shows expected among the 1,142 midnight benefits, was to be that at the Radio City Music Hall, New York City, Friday. On the theatre's stage were to appear many of the country's greatest, in radio, stage, and screen; many of those from the latter medium flying in from California for the one performance. Tickets for this affair, from $1 to $10, were reported early this week to have all been sold.

Special Short Shown

The theatres participating in the drive this week will display the special MGM short subject featuring Melvyn Douglas, and representing Hollywood's contribution to the drive. Many of the houses will also play "Greece Fights Back," March of Time short subject being released by Paramount. That short subject on Friday, March 21st, began its runs at New York's Broadway area houses. All proceeds from it go to the Greek war relief.

In all the theatres, young women prominent in the community will collect money in lobbies and auditoriums. In most instances, the women will be wearing headbands carrying the Greek coat-of-arms.

The 123 stage shows will be held in the following 120 cities:

New York City, Albany, Buffalo, Boston, New Haven, Washington, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago, Indianapolis, Detroit, Des Moines, Omaha, Kansas City, St. Louis, Minneapolis, Memphis, Atlanta, Charlotte, Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston, El Paso, Oklahoma City, New Orleans, Denver, Salt Lake City, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Phoenix, Prescott, Tacoma, Spokane, Stockton, Fresno, San Diego, Reno, Carson City, Butte, Helena, Boise, St. Paul, Duluth, Laramie, Sheridan, Cheyenne, Provo, Ogden, Santa Fe, Albuquerque, Pueblo, Wichita, Hutchinson, Lincoln, Tulsa, Springfield, Joplin, Davenport, Dubuque, Fargo, Bismarck, Sioux Falls, Sioux City, Rockford, Champaign, Dayton, Columbus, Youngstown, Wheeling, Clarksburg, Parkersburg, Harrisburg, Richmond, Norfolk, Hartford, Bridgeport, Portland, Me., Bangor, Rutland, Barre, Manchester, Providence, Lynn, Lawrence, Salem, Troy, Schenectady, Syracuse, Trenton, Newark, Jersey City, Hoboken, Wilmington, Raleigh, Charleston, Columbia, Augusta, Savannah, Jacksonville, Palm Beach, Miami Beach, Birmingham, Montgomery, Baton Rouge, Meridian, Natchez, Shreveport, Montpelier, Little Rock, Hot Springs, Louisville, Lexington, Nashville, Chattanooga, Wilkes-Barre and Scranton.

The stars who were to appear in these shows included Bette Davis, Jack Benny, Bob Hope, Kate Smith, Amos & Andy, Rudy Vallee, Ben Bernie, Eddie Cantor, George Jessel, Eddie Duchin, Vincent Lopez, Benny Goodman, Tyrone Power, Paul Muni, Edward G. Robinson, Edward Arnold, James Cagney, Gracie Fields, Danny Kaye, Gertrude Lawrence, Raymond Massey, Katharine Cornell, Monty Woolly, Helen Hayes, John Barrymore, Al Jolson, Harry Richman, Sophie Tucker, Harry Hershfield, Milton Berle, Irving Berlin, George M. Cohan, Hank Greenberg, Alfred Lunt, Lynn Fontanne, Martha Raye, Ethel Merman, Jane Cowl, Peggy Wood, Humphrey Bogart, Ida Lupino, Bing Crosby, Irene Dunne, Cary Grant, Ronald Colman, Ginger Rogers, Deanna Durbin, Clark Gable and Carole Lombard.

In addition to the special midnight shows, the drive is being featured by special events, such as a concert next Wednesday evening at the Orpheum Theatre, Minneapolis, by the city's Symphony Orchestra; a horse race at Santa Anita racetrack; exhibition baseball games, hockey games, dances, banquets, balls, luncheons, and a special Tag Day in Minneapolis, with college students dismissed for the day to make collections.

In many cities, theatres are cooperating in the drive by boosting, from their screens, the special shows at one of the town's houses. Next Wednesday evening there will be a "Show of Shows," with Jack Benny as master of ceremonies in Chicago. In that territory alone, there will be 32 other special shows.

In Cincinnati, 500 members of the Greek Letter sororities in the city's university are selling tickets for the two benefits to be held there.

In Boston, there will be a big cooperative show at the Metropolitan Theatre, as well as 24 other midnight screenings.

Theatre Cooperation

More than 150 theatres in the Dallas area are giving midnight performances in Des Moines, many houses are donating one day's receipts; others are donating a percentage of weekly receipts.

The large show in Detroit will be at the Fox Theatre.

More than $3,000 had already been received from Indianapolis, at the end of last week. The Variety Club is handling the drive there. Co-chairmen are Kenneth Collins, chief barker, and Richard Frank. Others in the campaign are Claude McKean, Marc Wolf, Al Blocher, and Harold Marshall.

There have already been two special shows in Los Angeles, one at the Grauman's Chinese Theatre, the other at the Shrine Auditorium.

The Malco Theatre show in Memphis was a "sell-out."

In New Orleans, 180 theatres are participating in the drive; 50 of them giving special performances.

The New York territory boasts over 900 theatres participant, with 20 stage shows given or to be given.

In Pittsburgh, there will have been given more than 125 special affairs, by the 300 theatres enrolled; in Oklahoma City, 55 special motion picture shows; in Philadelphia, 15, including a large stage show at the Earle.

Three hundred and three theatres in the Kansas City territory enlisted; most of them are to use Plan A, calling for a speaker, the trailer, lighting of theatre, and a collection.

A. P. Waxman, director of the amusement industry division campaign for the Greek War Relief Association, said in New York this week that the quota of $500,000 might be exceeded, possibly doubled.

British Film Acquired

The American distribution rights to the two-reel documentary film, "Battle of London," have been acquired by Mack Littman. The film depicts London, before, during and after the heaviest bombardments, and commentary is by Frank Philips, B.B.C. commentator. The subject was reviewed in Motion Picture Herald, January 11th, from London under the title "London's Got Grit."

Football Star Signed

Tom Harmon, All-American half-back of 1940, has signed a contract with the Crosby agency in Hollywood for one picture at $13,500, with an option for a second at $17,500.

Rosso Joins Pathe

L. T. Rosso, who has been service manager of Consolidated Film Industries for the past ten years, has resigned to become general manager for Pathe Laboratories in Bound Brook, N. J.

ARIZONA: Jean Arthur, William Holden—If this picture had been made a year or so ago it would have broken records. It does a good healthy business but this makes my ninth epic western in less than six months. Running time, 128 minutes. Played March 9-10.—Austin G. Dodge, Hiland Theatre, Myrtle, Ore. ARIZONA: Jean Arthur, William Holden, Warren William—For a special, business was only average. The title and the trailer emphasized action. It brought out the action lovers but they were disappointed because of the long stretches of dialogue in it. The few people who came not expecting to like it thought it was excellent and claimed it to be one of the best. That's the whole point as far as this town was concerned. All the advertising was pointed toward the wrong people. The ones who would have liked it and talked it up were scarce in their attendance. Those who were drawn to it were disappointed. Of course, it is a fine film with beautiful effects in sepia and blue. The acting is good. It looks authentic. However, something misses fire somewhere and I think I have located it above. What do you think? Running time, 123 minutes. Played March 14-15.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

BLONDIE PLAYS CUPID: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms, "Daisy"—Played to nice business. Many favorable comments.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

FACE BEHIND THE MASK, THE: Peter Lorre, Evelyn Keyser—Double featured with "Wildcat of Tucson." Very good program picture with novel angles. Business very good. Running time, 65 minutes. Played February 27-29.—R. F. Netzel, Palace Theatre, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

WILCAT OF TUCSON: Bill Elliott, Evelyn Young—Double featured with "The Face Behind the Mask." Good western and very good business. Running time, 58 minutes. Played February 27-29.—R. F. Netzel, Palace Theatre, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

First National

EAST OF THE RIVER: John Garfield, Brenda Marshall—A fairly good action picture. Garfield is too stiff in this picture. His acting is like that of George O'Brien; afraid to turn his neck. Running time, 73 minutes. Played March 9-11.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

HIGH SIERRA: Humphrey Bogart, Ida Lupino—An excellent picture that holds your interest and well acted by entire cast. Very poor business on this one, grossing just about half of film rental. Running time, 100 minutes. Played March 12-13.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

SANTA FE TRAIL: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Raymond Massey, Ronald Reagan, Alan Hale—A box office attraction from Warners, with plenty of action. Parts were well chosen, with Raymond Massey as John Brown of Kansas abolitionism, and Harper's Ferry. It should be a good bet for any situation; a strong attraction for the men's trade. Running time, 115 minutes. Played March 2-3.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

TUGBOAT ANNIE SAILS AGAIN: Marjorie Rambeau, Alan Hale, Jane Wyman, Ronald Reagan—Played with "Five Little Peppers at Home" from Columbia, single day double bill. Just managed to take in film rental. It is not to be compared with "Tugboat Annie" of the olden days and Marie Dressler. I consider it just a fair program picture, that's all. Running time, 77 minutes. Played March 4.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ANDY HARDY'S PRIVATE SECRETARY: Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Ann Rutherford, Kathryn Grayson—Everybody liked this picture and, as usual, our darling little Mickey cut loose with his personal magnetism and really kept the cashier busy. Running time, 100 minutes. Played March 9-10.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

COME LIVE WITH ME: James Stewart, Hedy Lamarr—Good picture which failed to draw. Pleased those who saw it. Running time, 88 minutes. Played March 12-13.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

COMRADE X: Clark Gable, Hedy Lamarr—Definitely not a small town picture. Even these two notch stars failed to incite any extra business and those who came were either noncommittal or said they didn't like it. No picture with foreign locale or with considerable foreign accent in dialogue goes here. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 8-10.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

DR. KILDARE'S CRISIS: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day, Robert Young, Nat Pendleton—Five popular actors, Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Robert Young, Laraine Day, et al, pleased good audiences in "Dr. Kildare's Crisis." Rather mysterious and unusual theme, that of a mysterious malady, but a curable one, ending in the marriage of the two young lovers. Running time, 75 minutes. Played March 13-18.—William Noble, Midwest Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

ESCAPE: Norma Shearer, Robert Taylor, Nazimova—After juggling this one around several times, I played it to above average business. It fits right in with the times abroad and should prove a good bet in any situation right now. Running time, 105 minutes. Played March 9-10.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

ESCAPE: Norma Shearer, Robert Taylor, Nazimova, Conrad Veidt—Here is a well wrought tale of Nazi persecution which no one had asked for and which created no comment after its showing. A well made picture, yes, but the relationship between the means and extremes, i.e., film cost and box office, was much too close. Definitely not for small towns. Running time, 104 minutes. Played February 26-27.—Austin G. Dodge, Hiland Theatre, Myrtle, Ore. General patronage.

GONE WITH THE WIND: Clark Gable, Vivien Leigh, Leslie Howard, Olivia de Havilland, Thomas Mitchell—The outstanding box office attraction of all times. People keep coming to see it over and over again. Color was perfect with Super-Cinephor lenses to bring it out. It was beautiful. Business was up to a marked degree, along with the admission prices. I could not get the dates I wanted, so did the next best thing, Friday and Saturday, which were still good. Running time, 225 minutes. Played March 7-8.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General and factory workers' patronage.

GO WEST: Marx Brothers—Good picture; fair business. MGM pulled my date on this twice and it was milked out when I finally got it. Running time, 82 minutes. Played March 15.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SKY MURDER: Walter Pidgeon—Played one day single bill Saturday to just average business. It is a fair program picture and probably would have done better on a double bill for two days. Running time, 72 minutes. Played March 1.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

WILD MAN OF BORNEO: Frank Morgan, Mary Howard, Billie Burke—One of the poorest pictures from this company in many months. It was too silly to be good. Running time, 78 minutes. Played March 11.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

WYOMING: Wallace Beery, Leo Carrillo, Marjorie Main—This offering is a super western well enacted by the entire cast and satisfy the action fans. While it failed to do outstanding business, I blame it on the weather conditions and Lenten season. Beery still has a following that appreciate his type of acting. Business fair. Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 14-15.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General and factory workers patronage.

Monogram

APE, THE: Boris Karloff—Good picture, but not as good as we expected. Box office results here satisfactory. Running time, 60 minutes. Played March 16-18.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

OLE SWIMMIN' HOLE: Jackie Moran, Marcia Mae Jones—Fair picture for Saturday crowd. No extra business. Running time, 80 minutes. Played March 14-15.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

Paramount

ARISE MY LOVE: Claudette Colbert, Ray Milland—Fine picture, but absolutely no business. Why, I do not know, but it just didn't draw.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

ARISE MY LOVE: Claudette Colbert, Ray Milland—I didn't see this, but our box office statement reveals that it wasn't so popular.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

CHEROKEE STRIP: Richard Dix, Florence Rice—This show was lined up for the Boy Scouts Troop as a benefit show with short subjects. They failed to perform after arranging for it. I did not take in film rental on the engagement. It should of been double-featured for two days as originally planned. It is below par as an attraction. Running time, 84 minutes. Played February 28.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

IN OLD COLORADO: William Boyd, Russell Hayden, Andy Clyde—Fine western. Mr. Sherman, how about giving us a "Cassidy" with a Northwest or Canadian background? How about "Hopalong Cassidy Trails North?" or "Hopalong Cassidy Joins the Mounties?" Either one would be a bang-up title for an excellent "Cassidy." It would be good. I've never yet seen a poor "Cassidy."—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

LOVE THY NEIGHBOR: Jack Benny, Fred Allen, Mary Martin, "Rochester" (Eddie Anderson)—I think Benny and Allen are both a little bit out of place on the screen. Personally, I don't care for either of them. Business was a shade above average, however. Running time, 82 minutes. Played March 4-6.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

MOON OVER BURMA: Dorothy Lamour, Robert Preston—A picture with all the ingredients to sell it but Paramount didn't give it the attention it required to keep it out of the "run of the mill mellerdrammer" class. Lamour is box office in this type of picture but needs better material. Running time, 75 minutes. Played February 2.—Austin G. Dodge, Hiland Theatre, Myrtle Point, Ore. General patronage.

Republic

ARKANSAS JUDGE: Weaver Brothers and Elviry—One of the best of series. Not so much hillbilly but plenty of down to earth drama that the small town patrons go for. Production values comparable with the best. Business good. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 16-19.—R. F. Netzel, Palace Theatre, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

MELODY RANCH: Gene Autry, Jimmy Durante, Ann Miller, George "Gabby" Hayes, Mary Lee—I played this on March 2-3 to an average business and was very much disappointed in it. In my opinion, Republic pulled another boner in this one by leaving Smiley Burnette out and trying to fill the bill for comedy relief with George Hayes. Taking Smiley away from Gene is like taking the motor out of your car. Wake up, Republic.—Harry F. Blount, Plaza Theatre, Potosi, Mo. Rural patronage.

RKO Radio

DANCE, GIRL, DANCE: Maureen O'Hara, Louis Hayward, Lucille Ball, Ralph Bellamy—Nothing to rave about in comparison with other pictures produced along these same lines. Do not give it your best playing time. It is not worth it. It suffers from star value names and the title does not attract patrons. Running time, 87 minutes. Played March 12-13.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General and factory workers' patronage.

DREAMING OUT LOUD: Lum and Abner (Chester Lauck and Norris Goff), Frances Langford, Frank Craven—Played on a double bill with "Streets of Memories" from Fox. Both proved to be no box office magnet. Therefore, failed to gross film rental. Both belong in the cellar position. Entertainment value below par. Running time, 81 minutes. Played March 11.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General and factory workers' patronage.

KITTY FOYLE: Ginger Rogers, Dennis Morgan—One of the very best pictures Hollywood has produced for many months. Gingers Rogers was superb and richly deserved the Academy Award for her work in this one. Business good. Running time, 105 minutes. Played March 5-6.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

THEY KNEW WHAT THEY WANTED: Carole Lombard, Charles Laughton, William Gargan—RKO had the nerve to put this picture on highest allocation. Even on the lowest allocation, my advice to exhibitors is not to play it. Running time, 90 minutes. Played February 26-27.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

VILLAIN STILL PURSUED HER, THE: Hugh Herbert, Anita Louise, Buster Keaton—Be careful, brethren, a lot of walk-outs on this one. A Three Stooges' comedy saved it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

GOLDEN HOOFS: Jane Withers, Charles "Buddy" Rogers—Good picture and good business. Jane always pleases. Running time, 67 minutes. Played March 11.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HUDSON'S BAY: Paul Muni, Gene Tierney, John Sutton—Here's one I was dubious about and rightly so for it didn't mean a dime at the box office. Muni just fair and picture the same but it definitely was not a Sunday show. Running time, 94 minutes. Played March 2-3.—Austin G. Dodge, Hiland Theatre, Myrtle Point, Ore. General patronage.

HUDSON'S BAY: Paul Muni, Gene Tierney, Virginia Field, John Sutton—It might have been okay if you could understand what they say. Many walkouts on small crowds. Running time, 94 minutes. Played March 4-5.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Ritz Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

MARK OF ZORRO, THE: Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell—This picture on mid-week did very well for me and I consider it a box office attraction. In fact, the business was better the second day than on the opening, which is unusual for this situation. Running time, 94 minutes. Played February 26-27.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

MURDER AMONG FRIENDS: John Hubbard, Marjorie Weaver—Little picture which failed to draw. Entertaining enough but no star power. Evidently designed for the lower half of a dual. Why we people who run single bills should have to buy this kind of stuff I do not know. Running time, 67 minutes. Played March 14.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

NIGHT TRAIN: Margaret Lockwood, Rex Harrison—This picture while foreign made is very timely, and I think my patrons enjoyed seeing it. However, no comments. I used it as a double feature along with "Angels Over Broadway" with twice the rental and not near as good. Business was normal. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 5-6.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

NIGHT TRAIN: Margaret Lockwood, Rex Harrison. —This is the best British picture we ever played. Business above average. Running time, 93 minutes. Played March 7-8.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

TALL, DARK AND HANDSOME: Cesar Romero, Virginia Gilmore, Charlotte Greenwood, Milton Berle, Stanley Clements—A swell comedy that pleased everyone. Business just fair. If you can get them in, they'll like it. Running time, 78 minutes. Played March 6-7.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Ritz Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

TIN PAN ALLEY: Alice Faye, Betty Grable, Jack Oakie, John Payne—A musical show pleases the patrons and brings them to the box office. Fox has had a great success with this type of entertainment and I have failed to receive one yet from them that did not do business. "Down Argentine Way" topped "Tin Pan Alley" for me due principally to the opposition I encountered with the showing of the latter. Running time, 95 minutes. Played March 16-17.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General and factory workers' patronage.

TIN PAN ALLEY: Alice Faye, Betty Grable, Jack Oakie, John Payne—Excellent. Oakie is tops as usual. Best Sunday-Monday business in many months. —Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

TIN PAN ALLEY: Alice Faye, Betty Grable, Jack Oakie, John Payne—Good picture. Not as good as "Down Argentine Way." Average business. Running time, 95 minutes. Played March 16-18.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, New York. Neighborhood patronage.

TOBACCO ROAD: Charley Grapewin, Marjorie Rambeau, Gene Tierney—This cleaned up edition of the famous stage play did not please when I saw it in a near-by city. Too much had been cut from it and the same people who said the stage play was too dull.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

STREET OF MEMORIES: Lynne Roberts, Guy Kibbee—Played on a double bill with "Dreaming Out Loud" from RKO Radio. Both proved to be no box office magnet. Therefore, failed to gross film rental. Both belong in the cellar position. Entertainment value below par. Played March 11.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General and factory workers' patronage.

WESTERN UNION: Robert Young, Randolph Scott, Dean Jagger, Virginia Gilmore—The Overland Stage, Pony Express, Union Pacific, Arizona here again, the men who made the West. Heroically they fought for every mile, against the peril of wild Indians on the war path, and the creeping peril of a traitor's cowardly revenge; the messages transmitted were real Morse, because the writer was an operator and could readily read same. The support, Randolph Scott, Dean Jagger, Barton MacLane, John Carradine and Slim Summerville were excellent in their respective parts. And the Line was built through to its destination. "Western Union" will rank with the best pictures of the year. And the West was caught in the magic of color. Running time, 88 minutes.—William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

United Artists

LONG VOYAGE HOME, THE: John Wayne, Thomas Mitchell, Ian Hunter—I know a lot of you fellows thought this picture was terrible. Maybe that was just because business was bad. My own personal opinion is that it is the best picture of the year. There was nothing the matter with the size of my crowd and a large number of them went out of their way to say how much they liked it. However, most of my crowd was college students. The few townspeople who came were not particulary impressed by it. I for one am glad we can get pictures like this once in a while. Get your camera clubs interested in the photography in this one. Whether they like the picture or not, it is right down their alley. Running time, 104 minutes. Played March 13.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

LONG VOYAGE HOME, THE: John Wayne, Thomas Mitchell, Ian Hunter—As uninteresting a picture as we've ever played on preferred playing time. It's well made and has some very beautiful scenery but it drags with only a bare semblance of plot. Very poor box office. Running time, 105 minutes. Played March 8-11.—Ritz Amusements, Ritz Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

THIEF OF BAGDAD, The: Conrad Veidt, Sabu, June Duprez, Rex Ingram—Very good. Remarkable photography and beautiful scenery created considerable interest. Above average business. Running time, 109 minutes. Played February 25-27.—J. M. Thomas, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

BANK DICK, THE: W. C. Fields, Una Merkel—Good comedy for small town. Last 20 minutes of picture brought many laughs. Business swell. Running time, 74 minutes. Played March 9-12.—R. F. Netzel, Palace Theatre, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

BUCK PRIVATES: Abbott and Costello, Andrews Sisters, Jane Frazee—One of the funniest pictures we ever played. Exceptionally good draw. Running time, 84 minutes. Played February 23-26.—R. F. Netzel, Palace Theatre, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

BUCK PRIVATES: Andrews Sisters, Abbott & Costello—One of the funniest pictures we've ever played. Abbott and Costello are without question the funniest team on the screen. This picture brought out swell business. Running time, 84 minutes. Played March 1-3—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Ritz Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

BURY ME NOT ON THE LONE PRAIRIE: Johnny Mack Brown, Fuzzy Knight—Fuzzy Knight steals this picture. The best of series so far. Universal sure has a winner in this series. Business very good. Double featured with Columbia "The Devil Commands." Running time, 58 minutes. Played March 13-15.—R. F. Netzel, Palace Theatre, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

LITTLE BIT OF HEAVEN, A: Gloria Jean, Robert Stack, Hugh Herbert, Stuart Erwin—A fairly entertaining picture. No extra business. Running time, 87 minutes. Played March 9-11.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

SANDY GETS HER MAN: Baby Sandy, Stuart Erwin, Una Merkel, Edgar Kennedy—A fairly entertaining program picture. Would have been much better if they would make a two-reel hokum comedy out of it. Running time, 66 minutes. Played March 5-6.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

SEVEN SINNERS: Marlene Dietrich, John Wayne, Mischa Auer, Broderick Crawford, Albert Dekker, Oscar Homolka, Anna Lee—Very good action picture. Supporting cast excellent. Patrons ate up the big fight scene. Business excellent. Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 2-5.—R. F. Netzel, Palace Theatre, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

Warner Brothers

CITY FOR CONQUEST: James Cagney, Ann Sheridan—Best Cagney show to date and Sheridan was swell. Only thing wrong with this one is the title, which doesn't mean a thing. It's worth your best playdates. Running time, 105 minutes. Played February 5-6.—Austin G. Dodge, Hiland Theatre, Myrtle Point, Ore. General patronage.

FLIGHT FROM DESTINY: Thomas Mitchell, Jeffrey Lynn, Geraldine Fitzgerald—Heavy drama which pleased our Sunday patrons. Formerly called "Invitation to a Murder." Business was fair. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 16-17.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MEET JOHN DOE: Gary Cooper, Barbara Stanwyck, Edward Arnold, Walter Brennan—This picture, a Southwestern Premiere, was shown at the Criterion two hours before being shown in Hollywood, and Supervisor W. C. (Lew) Lewellen should and will receive credit for one of the greatest scoops in the picture industry. And a real Oklahoma City premiere as well as that of Hollywood. Gary Cooper (John Doe) was one in a million and a million men in one, and his acting was faultless, and exquisitely lovely Barbara Stanwyck is an actress, superb and beyond compare. Edward Arnold, Walter Brennan, Spring Byington, James Gleason and Gene Lockhart, with Director Frank Capra, did all that could be wished for and more. The story is a grand one, and very interesting, and even dramatic, and the audience almost kept spell-bound from start to finish. But, to our notion, the plot should have shown a different ending, that is, the John Doe movement to have been a decided success, and not a failure in the end. But John didn't jump off the roof of the city hall as the story read, and did marry Barbara as we thought he would all along. Running time, 83 minutes. Played March 12-19.—William Noble, Midwest Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

NO TIME FOR COMEDY: Rosalind Russell, James Stewart, Charles Ruggles, Genevieve Tobin, Louise Beavers—Take two good stars, mix the ingredients well and if it doesn't jell, blame the director. This is a fair picture and might have been great if several of the scenes hadn't been so impossible. Running time, 96 minutes. Played February 19-20.—Austin G. Dodge, Hiland Theatre, Myrtle, Ore. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

BOOBS IN ARMS: Three Stooges—Our farm lads enjoy these boys a lot. It saved our feature.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

BUNDLE OF BLISS, A: Andy Clyde—Real good. People enjoyed it immensely.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

MOVIE MAGIC: Cinescopes—Interesting, educational and entertaining. Running time, 10 minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

FIGHTIN' FOOLS: Our Gang—Average Our Gang comedy. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GREAT MEDDLER, THE: MGM Miniatures—Very good showing how the A. S. P. C. A. was started. It should be of interest to everyone. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

MORE ABOUT NOSTRADAMUS: Miniatures—Interesting short about a man who hundreds of years ago foretold events which are now happening. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MORE ABOUT NOSTRADAMUS: Miniatures—These shorts about Nostradamus and his prophecies are very well liked. Running time, 10 minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

NEWS OF THE DAY: My people like this news very much. But why not include more baseball, Metro?—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

POUND FOOLISH: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Good two-reelers.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

THIRD-DIMENSIONAL MURDER: Metroscopix—This was okay and received considerable favorable response, but I believe that the last Metroscopix was more thrilling than this. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

YOU, THE PEOPLE: Crime Does Not Pay—Very good two-reeler from Crime Don't Pay Series. Running time, 20 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Paramount

ALL'S WELL: Gabby Color Cartoons—Hats off to Max Fleischer for this cartoon. I really split my intestines on this one and that's the best one I've seen in five years of show business. Running time, 8 minutes.—J. M. Thomsen, Center Theatre, Marlette, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

BLUE BARRON AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Headliners—Good band reel.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

RIVER THAMES, YESTERDAY: Fascinating Journeys—Nice colored reel of a trip down the Thames River in England. No mention of the war is made. It is plain and simple travel stuff. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

WESTERN DAZE: Madcap Models—Animated models instead of cartoon drawings make this a nice change. The backgrounds are unusually beautiful and the action is quite smooth. It has singing, change of expression, fast action, good plot and quite a pretty looking heroine. It must have been a hard job to film it. Running time, 8 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

BULLETS AND BALLADS: Ray Whitley—Good two-reeler with comedy and music against a western background. Running time, 20 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DRAFTED IN THE DEPOT: Edgar Kennedy comedy. Edgar Kennedy in the army by mistake and manages to get some pretty good laughs. Running time, 18 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

FIRED MAN, THE: Leon Errol—This is a dandy comedy of errors featuring Leon Errol. It is one of the best two-reel comedies we have had this season. If your bunch likes the mixed bedroom type of humor, they'll go for it. Running time, 20 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

GROWING UP: Dionne Quintuplets—This short brought in a little extra business, but not as good as previous ones and this includes several duplicate shots from them. Running time, 18 minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

INFORMATION, PLEASE, No. 7—This is one series that is looked forward to every time. It never falters in quality of entertainment (although some are better than others). Not many series can boast of a record like that. Anna Neagle is guest in this one and says quite a few funny things under her breath. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

PLUTO'S PLAYMATE: Walt Disney Cartoons—Pluto and a friend, a performing seal, have much ups and downs, and the little red ball wouldn't stay put. Very amusing and interesting. Running time, 8 minutes.—William Noble, Midwest Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

POWER AND THE LAND: Very good, Play it. Distributed gratis by RKO.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

SUNK BY THE CENSUS: Edgar Kennedy—Just a filler. Not so good because it's not funny! Have seen Kennedy in better.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

FISHING MADE EASY. Terry-Toons—Good enough black and white cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HOME GUARD, THE: Terry-Toons—Good cartoon in brilliant color, featuring barnyard fowls. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MISSISSIPPI SWING: Terrytoons—This is a better-than-average color Terrytoons. People enjoyed all the swans on Swanee River. Running time, 7 minutes.—M. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

TWO CONTRIBUTORS JOIN DEPARTMENT

Two new contributors this week sent reports to the What the Picture Did for Me department. They are:

AUSTIN C. DODGE, Hiland Theatre, Myrtle Point, Ore.

R. F. NETZEL, Palace Theatre, Crandon, Wis.

Read the reports from these and other regular contributors in the adjoining columns.

Universal

BAGDAD DADDY: Musicals—Scenes from the Arabian Nights over again. Much pleasing dancing scenes, and everything the Sultan wanted he got, and he wanted entertainment and got entertainment galore. Running time, 18 minutes.—William Noble, Midwest Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

Vitaphone

CHRISTMAS UNDER FIRE: Special—Quentin Reynolds narrates an excellent sequel to "London Can Take It." It should be run everywhere. Applauded here. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

CLIFF EDWARDS AND HIS BUCKAROOS: Melody Masters Bands—The poorest in this series of shorts to date. Running time, 10 minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

DOGS YOU SELDOM SEE: The Sports Parade—This picture is a real treat. Dogs of all kinds, and some seldom seen here in the U. S. A dog heaven and it was a real heaven to the dogs. Very interesting.—William Nobel, Midwest Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

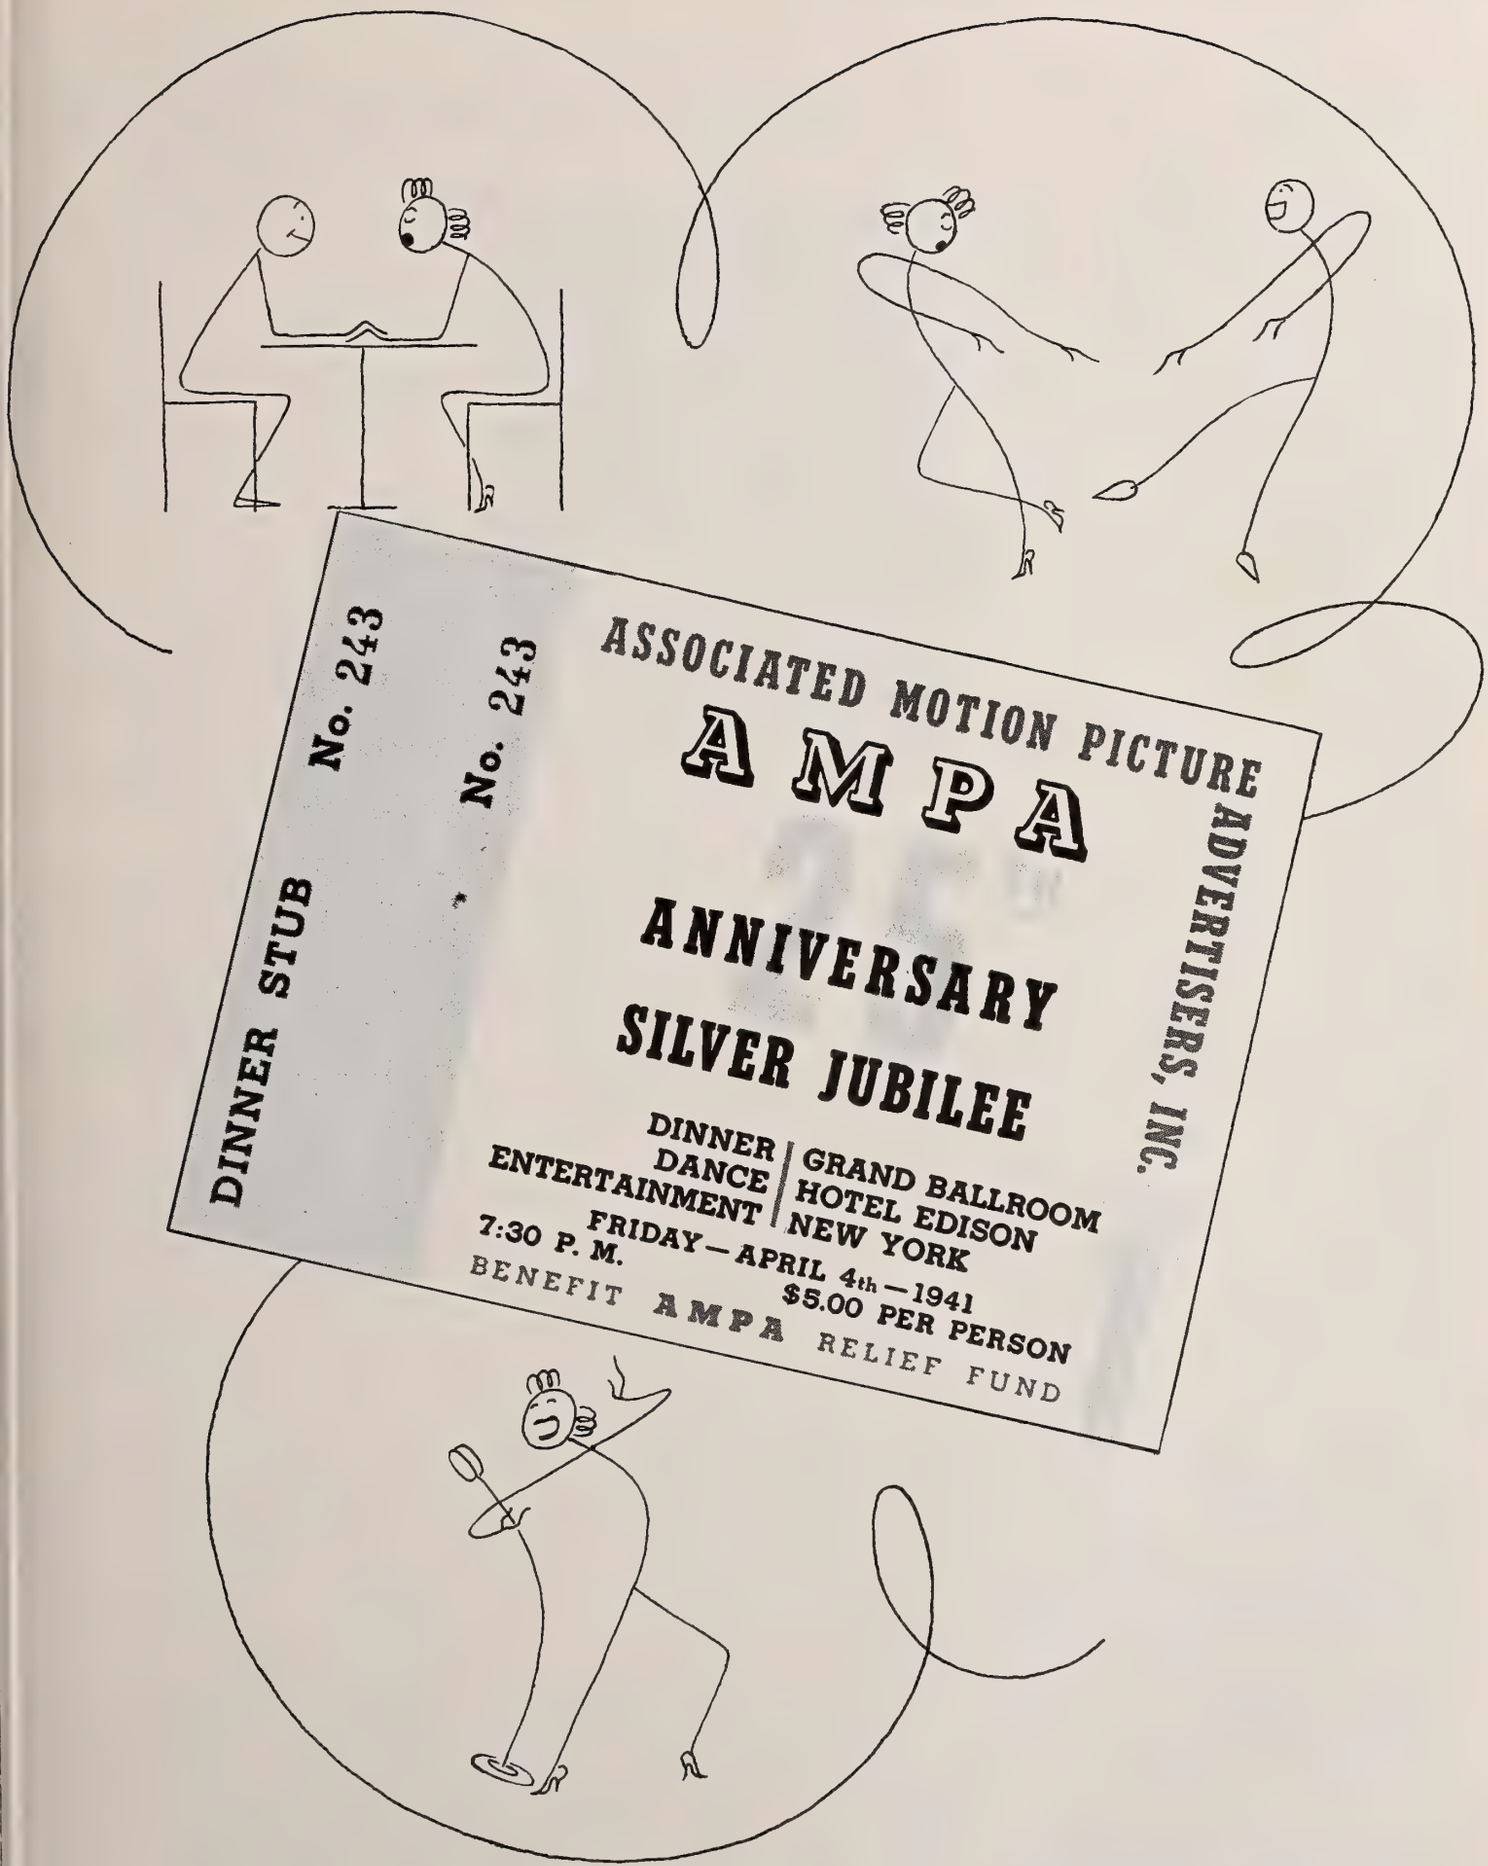
HOLIDAY HIGHLIGHTS: Merrie Melodies—Very good. Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

ROYAL RODEO, THE: Broadway Brevities—A featurette in itself that does the industry credit.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SHOP, LOOK AND LISTEN: Merrie Melodies—Department stores. A traveling aerial car with passengers seeing the sights en route. In color and very interesting. Running time, 7 minutes.—William Noble, Midwest Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

Newsreel Censoring Stays on Ohio Books

Ohio House Bill No. 240, introduced by Representative Ford, at the instance of P. J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, to eliminate newsreels from censorship, last week was killed in committee. The Ohio censorship law was enacted as a police measure, but has become a revenue measure, Mr. Wood pleaded, in substantiation of which he pointed out that the censor board received $1,073,241 in fees during the past six years, while the board's operating cost was $130,325 during that period. In 1940 total receipts were $190,710, including $29,700 from newsreel censorship. Representative of the so-called school lobby successfully fought the measure on the ground that the revenue went to school funds. Censorship fee is $3 per reel.



"Only six stated censor pictures, and only three, Ohio, Maryland and Virginia, censor newsreels," Mr. Wood said, speaking in support of the bill. "The newsreels have made us aware of the unified spirit of the Americas which is based on common democratic hopes, ideals and inspirations. The newsreels have done this without departing from the canons of scrupulous fairness and good taste. This is one of the great merits of a free screen."

Altec, McCrosker Sign

C. H. McCrosker, who operates a chain of Arkansas theatres, has returned to Altec Service. The agreement was negotiated by A. Fiore, who has also signed up R. Applebaum for sound and booth service for the newly remodeled Roosevelt theatre in the Mississippi Delta.

Helprin Back with Korda

Morris Helprin has returned to Alexander Korda's publicity staff at United Artists home office after a six months leave of absence during which he undertook stage production.

GOOD FUN FOR A GOOD CAUSE!

OBITUARIES

John D. Williams, Producer, Is Dead

John D. Williams, former stage producer and director, who in association with Charles Frohman and A. L. Erlanger, produced many famous American plays, died of a heart attack at the home of his sister, Saturday, March 22nd, in the Bronx, New York.

Among the plays produced and staged by Mr. Williams was "The Copperhead," by Augustus Thomas, "Rain," with Jeanne Eagels, "Justice," starring John Barrymore, Richard Bennett in "Zack," and many others. With Charles and Gustave Frohman, Mr. Williams had been active in the management of Maude Adams. He later sued Miss Adams for services rendered in persuading her to return to the stage in 1931.

Mr. Williams is survived by his sister and a brother.

Al Levy, Los Angeles and Hollywood Restaurateur

Al Levy, the basis of whose success as a Los Angeles and Hollywood restaurateur was the introduction of the oyster cocktail followed by the oyster loaf, died in Los Angeles, Monday, March 24th, at the age of 81 after undergoing an operation.

Mr. Levy arrived in Los Angeles in 1885 and started his career with a two-wheeled pushcart, later opening an oyster house. He is survived by a widow, a son, Robert, who will operate the business, and a grandson.

Peter L. Myers

Peter L. Myers, 73, retired manager of the Myers theatre in Janesville, Wis., died March 19th in that city. Mr. Myers managed the theatre, built by his father, for 30 years until 1914, when it was leased to other operators. In recent years it has been conducted by Fox-Wisconsin Amusement Co. Mr. Myers is survived by his wife.

Relief Fund Purchases Property for Rest Home

Accumulating more than $800,00 in its building fund, the Motion Picture Relief Fund announced recently the completion of negotiations for the purchase of property for the erection of a new rest home. It will be located near the town of Calabasas, immediately east of Warner Brothers' ranch. William Pereira, Paramount studio architect, has volunteered his services in designing the new building. The fund was acquired through proceeds of the Gulf Oil Company's radio show.

The Greater New York Fund has prepared a nine-minute film, "For the People," for exhibition in theatres during the forthcoming campaign. Raymond Massey is the commentator and scenes from the institutions benefited by the Fund are shown.

Although an appeal is made for funds, the audience is told to make contributions through employers. The film will be free to theatres.

Companies Formed

Three new independent companies have filed articles of incorporation in Sacramento, Cal. They are: Riviera Film Productions, Acme Productions and King Pictures. The Riviera is capitalized at $25,000 and the other two companies at 1,000 shares each with no par value.

Herman De Vry, Film Inventor, Dies

HERMAN A. DE VRY

Herman A. De Vry, one of the first to use motion pictures for educational purposes and the inventor and manufacturer of a number of devices important in the development of the motion picture industry, died of a heart attack, Saturday, March 22nd, while bowling. He was 65 years old.

Mr. De Vry was the founder and president of the De Vry Corporation, which manufactures motion picture equipment. Born in Germany he came to the United States as a boy and began his career in Chicago as a builder of contrivances for the illusions of Harry Kellar, Howard Thurston, and other stage magicians. Then he became a camera man.

His first invention, a portable motion picture projector which could be carried in a suitcase, proved a success. In 1914 he founded the De Vry Corporation, which was bought by the Q.R.S. player piano roll company in 1929. He then formed Herman A. De Vry, Inc., which became the De Vry corporation which again was purchased by the Q.R.S. company.

He believed that the greatest service of the motion pictures was in the visual education field. For that reason he founded the De Forest Training, Inc., named after his close friend Dr. Lee De Forest, inventor of the tube credited with making radio transmission of the voice possible. De Forest Training, Inc., trains thousands of students in the United States and Canada for technical work in electricity, radio, motion pictures, and television with the aid of motion pictures used in their homes as textbooks.

His widow, Mrs. Ida De Vry, survives with two sons and a daughter.

Texas Incorporations

South Main Drive-In Theatre Company, Houston; capital stock, $40,000; incorporators, W. G. Underwood, C. C. Ezell and Lowell Russell. Austin Drive-In Theatre Company, Austin, capital stock, $40,000; incorporators, Lowell Russell, R. A. Conner and R. R. Conner.

IN COURTS

Roach Asks Examination Of Ten Loew Executives

In a notice filed in the Federal Court by Hal Roach Studios, Inc., examination before trial of ten executives of Loew's, Inc., and the Metro Goldwyn Mayer Distribution Corp., is sought on March 31st. The examination, which is in connection with Mr. Roach's $1,263,993 damage suit, is to be held in New York at the offices of Schwartz & Frohlick, attorneys for the plaintiff.

Executives called for examination are: William F. Rodgers, Arthur M. Loew, Al Lichtman, David Bernstein, J. Robert Rubin, Howard Dietz, Leopold Friedman, A. F. Cummings, J. T. Mills and C. K. Stern. The defendants in their answer are counter-claiming for approximately $500,000 damages.

Posen Seeks Examination

Application for the inspection of the books and records of Cellofilm Corp., subsidiary of University Pictures, was filed last week in the New York supreme court by Samuel I. Posen, plaintiff in a suit as director and stockholder against Universal and its officers. The motion says the Mr. Posen unsuccessfully sought permission from Nate J. Blumberg to examine the books previously.

Lease Motion Denied

The Trust Company of Georgia and Henry B. Troutman, creditors of the Fox Theatre Corp., on Friday, March 21st, asked Federal Judge John C. Knox to set aside the transfer of a lease on the Academy of Music in New York to Skouras Theatres Corp., on the grounds that the original bid made some years ago by Skouras Theatres was invalid. Judge Knox denied the motion on technical grounds with leave to renew.

RKO Damage Suit Filed

E. A. Thomas and other lessees of the Grand Wilshire theatre in Los Angeles have filed a counter suit against RKO over the repossession of "Primrose Path" and demanded $20,000 damages, half actual and half punitive. The counter suit charged the film was leased for two weeks starting March 1st, and that RKO took it back because it acquired new value due to Ginger Rogers winning the Academy award. RKO filed suit for recovery of the print following the theatre's advertising the film as a sex picture.

Teacher Sues Paramount

John Ardizona, actor and voice teacher, has filed a $150,000 damage suit against Olympe Bradna and Paramount Pictures alleging his manuscript, "A Bird on a Flying Trapeze," was plagiarized in the film "Night of Nights." Mr. Ardizona said he gave the story to the actress who in turn brought it to the studio for consideration as a vehicle for her.

Dietrich Ruling Reserved

Justice James C. Madigan of the city court in New York, has reserved decision in the $90,000 breach of contract suit of Jack Forrester, French producer, against Marlene Dietrich. Mr. Forrester charges that Miss Dietrich failed to make a picture in France in 1939 for which she is contracted.

Yiddish Firm Formed

Articles of incorporation have been filed in Sacramento, Cal., for the Hollywood Yiddish Film Corp. Directors are Nathan Hale Goldberg, S. N. West, Robert D. Katz and Jean Ruth Katz, all of Los Angeles.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

THE GRAND AWARDS

"It is fitting that, in rewarding these winners, we consider the phase of the business they represent. They are the men who take what we create and sell it to the public. They represent the branch of the business that brings in the money we use to make other pictures. . . . We are most grateful to the Quigley Awards for encouraging better thinking and better planning in the presentation of the films in which we invest millions. . . . "

The quotes, from the address by Walter Wanger at the Grand Awards presentations, tell the reason for the record turnout at the ceremonies. That reason is the acceptance now that the making of a picture is but half the job, an acceptance that must find expression in heavier showmanship-ammunition in pictures for the artillery of the theatreman on the firing line.

Thus, in the eighth year of these Competitions, the Quigley Awards gain further prestige in Hollywood for bringing production closer together, for so long stressing the need of making of these two branches one continuing function.

FIGURES VERSUS SAVVY

Mysteries of higher mathematics are outside the ken of this scrivener. Even high school algebra was a constant source of confusion. The biographical allusions are made to explain a lack of understanding of a procedure perhaps obvious to others.

And that is how arbitrarily-fixed manager salaries are arrived at.

Only last week came one of the brothers, a smart theatreman, capable, trustworthy—in short, a definite manpower acquisition. Learning of his abilities, a leading circuit offered the Round Tabler a situation that needs a lot of building, but at a figure quite a bit less than he is accustomed to making. The reason given was that "the house cannot afford any more".

Sez who? And why? We thirst to know. Why measure the applicant's talents by those who came before, and responsible for the same grosses that cannot bear a heavier salary load? And why penalize the man for something the other fellow did? It's a cinch that by the employment of this high-type producing showman, better grosses are to be anticipated. Else why seek out a manager whose record shows so consistent a score of "wins"?

If a man is a proven producer, it certainly should be good business to pay him the money he rates, in the comfortable knowledge that the theatreman's savvy and talents may be depended upon to bring in those extra grosses the house is not now getting.

Why, then, should an open-and-shut case be confused in a welter of bookkeeping?

STRIPED PANTS AND PLAID VESTS

With the observations by "Pat" Patchen, on another page, following opinions by other members in recent issues, the Round Table forum on adjectives-in-advertising may well end with a stand-off that every man is "his own baker" and what the individual situation calls for is what the doctor ordered. Patchen notes his advertising reason-why in saying:

"Big words and little words, shouts and whispers, black and white—and how the ad works—isn't as important as what it gets done. And the ad that does the job is good—regardless of what the experts say about it and even if it violates all the rules in the book.

The final word, then, might be that there is room for the "striped pants and cutaway" school of advertising, as there is for the "plaid vest and velour". It is strictly in the hands of the showman directly concerned that the two schools do not conflict.

A-Mike Vogel

Reported as a terrific attention-getter was the window display illustrated above and arranged for "Mr. & Mrs. Smith" by Manager George French and Publicist Bill Morton for that date at the RKO Albee in Providence.

High spot of T. Teschner's "Road Show" date at Loew's Stillman in Cleveland was psychometer planted in lobby to test patron's humor quotient. Shown above is Mayor E. Blythin, who attended opening. In addition, Teschner arranged for girl to be analyzed over WGAR.

When local fraternity boys voted in favor of the "Strawberry Blonde" as the perfect partner to take to a dance, Ed Benjii at the Capitol in Madison, Wis., hopped to it and arranged for brunette sorority members of the U. of W. to picket fraternity house with appropriate tiein signs.

Round Table In Pictures

For his date on "Western Union" at the Park, Miles City, Mont., John W. Trewhela promoted uniforms from local branch and dressed his entire staff of usherettes for the occasion. Blowup of the Winchell wire to Zanuck may be seen in the background.

Described elsewhere in this section was the stunt arranged by Eddie Sniderman of RKO Proctor's in Newark in advance of "Tobacco Road". Shown below is Gene Tierney, whom Sniderman prevailed upon to come over from New York where she was visiting, and change Market Street to Tobacco Road for the engagement.

1940 Grand Awards Winners Tell Members What It's Like

by E. C. CALLOW
Quigley Silver Grand Award
Ad Head, Warner Philadelphia Theatres

DEAR MIKE:

Having reached the end of the most memorable week that any man ever spent, I felt that I wanted to write you and express through you to fellow Round Tablers the true significance of the Quigley Awards.

When first I was advised that I was selected winner of the Silver Grand Award my heart missed a beat, but it was nothing to the palpitations I have experienced since my arrival in Hollywood.

It began on the day I arrived with studios turning themselves upside down to do honor to A-Mike Vogel's boys, to the never-to-be-forgotten luncheon at the Beverly-Wilshire, where the top-ranking producers, directors, stars and writers gathered for the presentation of the Plaques. As Walter Wanger acted as toastmaster and famous newspaper columnists covered for their respective papers, you could not but help feel that here was the dream of every showman come true.

After the luncheon more trips through studios and the memorable Warner junket to Jack London's ranch, sailing on the U. S. America to San Francisco and returning to Hollywood by plane.

Awards Held in High Esteem

The Quigley Awards have grown up, they are held in the same esteem by the producers as the Academy Awards. They are grateful for the efforts of the men in the field, whose job it is to "put over" the result of their work in Hollywood and through the medium of Quigley Publications, express that appreciation in no uncertain terms by the warm welcome and the exciting whirl of affairs that are arranged in honor of the Award winners.

Words really fail to express the true description of the importance that is attached to the Quigley Awards here in Hollywood. Being a Quigley Award winner is like being one of the top stars; everywhere, everyone is striving to make your Hollywood visit an event and that's just what it is—the most significant event in any showman's life.

After a week like this you have a much different sense of values of the work that is done in Hollywood. It is far from being the playground that I thought it was. Every man is very serious about his work and particularly with the reaction of the public to his efforts to make product that will entertain.

In our visits to every studio we found hordes of workers busy making pictures, but their concern about the job that was being done to sell this product that took such painstaking days, weeks and months to turn out, was evident in each studio. Don't ever sell Hollywood short . . . they don't sell your efforts short, and that goes for producers, writers and players, they are all tremendously interested in everything that is done to sell pictures.

Round Tablers, a year looked like a very long time to keep ringing the bell consistentently to make this trip possible, but if it were five years it would still be worth it, because aside from the grand spree, the scenic beauty afforded you on this trip, the coveted Plaque is a distinction that should be every showman's objective. I personally am deeply grateful to Quigley Publications for having made it possible for me to have seen Hollywood at work as well as at play the way I have, and to have had the recognition that has been attached to my efforts.

I hope that the plan will continue for many years to come and my sincerest wish to you fellow Round Tablers is that you have as grand a trip as mine. Go to it fellows for the 1941 Awards and the best of luck to every one of you.

THANK YOU

In appreciation of the hospitality extended to the Grand Awards party, both winners and Quigley Publications bow deeply to S. Charles Einfeld and Bob Taplinger, at Warners; S. Barret McCormick and Perry Lieber, at RKO Radio; John Joseph and Gene Murphy, at Universal; Harry Brand and Bob Doman, at 20th-Century Fox; Harry Sherman, George Brown, Murphy McHenry, at Paramount; Howard Strickling and Don McElwaine, at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Lou Smith, at Columbia.

by J. R. WHEELER
Quigley Bronze Grand Award
Manager, Granada, South Bend, Ind.

They told me there is an old saying that goes something like this, "If you want a friend in Hollywood, go buy yourself a good dog." I don't know who is responsible for that but certainly whoever started that rumor never won a Quigley Grand Award.

From the very moment of my arrival in this beautiful land of movie-make-believe it has been thrill upon thrill, starting with a never-to-be-forgotten visit to the Dick Dickson ranch for a barbecue and first impression of Hollywood at home, and leading right on through a full week of studio visits, parties, and visits with the stars. The Grand Awards luncheon at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel was attended by leading studio heads, stars, etc. World premieres, in Hollywood and at sea aboard the luxury liner "America," a visit to San Francisco and the Jack London "Valley of the Moon" ranch, an air trip with stars back to Hollywood, and a hundred and one other events will forever serve as a memory of the grandest, and most profitable vacation of my entire life.

I only wish that every theatre manager in the United States could win a Grand Award and make this visit to Hollywood for I know that then they too would return to their desks, as I am going to, with a deeper appreciation of just "what goes on," and of the tremendous effort and patience required to produce a motion picture, and to deliver it to my theatre for screening. I have found Hollywood to be a community of hard workers, patient and painstaking workers, workers with whom I am more than proud to be associated. Never did I realize that the efforts of the theatre manager in the field are so appreciated and respected by the top notch stars of Hollywood. Upon leaving the studios their farewell was always topped with, "I'm glad you came to see us, you know we owe everything to you boys in the theatres." So take it from me, Hollywood is doing its part, and when the manager in the field does his, it becomes a combination that can't miss.

If space would permit I could go on and on telling of the marvelous treatment accorded us during this great week in Hollywood, but before I close let me remind every manager in the country that two more winners will be selected for the Grand Awards of 1941, and is it something worth working for? . . . It's an experience beyond all expectation.

My deepest thanks and appreciation go to the entire Quigley organization and to the judges who looked with favor upon my work. I only wish that I could be gifted with a silver tongue to put into words that which would amply describe my feeling of thankfulness.

Yale Drama School Addressed By Lewin for "So Ends Night"

Starting his campaign four weeks in advance of the opening of "So Ends Our Night," Bob Russell, of Loew's Poli in New Haven, climaxed his efforts by arranging to have Producer Albert Lewin address the Yale Drama School.

Highlighting Russell's campaign were his different tie-ups with Radio Station WELI, which included a 15-minute interview with Lewin, and a sponsored "man in the street" quiz program.

Russell also arranged for the distribution of appropriately imprinted fan magazines to Poli movie-goers to a selected mailing list which was contacted one week in advance of playdate. Special pictorial lay-outs were obtained in the local dailies as well as in suburban newspapers.

Samartano Fetes National Guards

Latest to report on various current defense tieins is Joe Samartano at Loew's Poli-Palace, in Meriden, Conn. who recently presented a National Guard Farewell Stage Show, which he says packed them to the rafters. With two companies leaving for camp night of the monster show, Joe made arrangements with the proper authorities to have the 118th Medical Regiment Band parade to the theatre with both companies of guardsmen, officers, etc. at seven p.m. At nine, the farewell program which lasted an hour was presented with city heads, American Legion officials and others participating. Acts were provided for the occasion.

To give the affair more color, a member of the Meriden Record and Samartano contacted some 13 different organizations and arranged for them to provide athletic equipment to the guardsmen, which brought additional publicity, etc. In connection with the whole program, papers devoted much space to art and stories.

The program itself was built around two numbers that the band had composed, entitled "Florida Moon' and "The 43rd Division March", which is being adopted as the official march for the New England Division. These songs were given wide publicity, since they were played for the first time publicly that night.

One of the most inspiring highlights of the party was the fact that practically the entire audience left with the boys to bid them farewell at the railroad station.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Passport Herald Issued by Stoltz

Ingenious was the four page folder passport distributed by Arnold Stoltz in advance of "So Ends Our Night" at the Avon, in Utica, N. Y. Left inside page carried copy: "This passport issued to the citizen of Utica, New York State, in the United States of America, whose picture is herein shown, and is guaranteed to have a most enjoyable evening at" etc. etc. Directly to the right of the words "herein shown" was a piece of aluminum foil measuring one and one-half by two inches. On peering into the foil, one's reflection could be seen.

Contest angle was also brought in through lucky numbers listing on each herald. Right page carried restaurant ad advising that if corresponding number was listed at their cashier's desk, guest ticket would be awarded. Entire cost of printing and distribution was met by merchant who is reported to have been well satisfied with results.

Nelson Is Feted

Much was made locally recently when Jack Nelson was the first Canadian showman to win a place on MGM's honor roll for his exploitation campaign on "Escape" at the Capitol, in North Bay, Ontario. Tribute was paid to the Round Tabler, who was hosted at a dinner, which was attended by local bigs. Newspapers came through with three column art breaks and stories on the occasion.

Short Wave Tiein Held by Callow

Before shoving off for Hollywood as one of the 1940 Quigley Grand Awards winners, Ev Callow, advertising and publicity head for Warner theatres in Philadelphia took advantage of the WCAU short-wave facilities by arranging an international broadcast to promote "That Night in Rio." In addition, a preview of the picture was presented in the WCAU Auditorium to a select group of 250, including the consuls of all the 22 Latin American countries.

Preceding the picture premiere, the consuls participated in the short-wave broadcast that reached all the South and Central Americas, each sending goodwill messages to their respective countries, the central theme being that the picture, as well as the broadcast itself, was designed to cement international relations between the Americas. The broadcast was at eight p.m. for a half hour, the first 15 minutes being carried by WCAU for local listeners.

The premiere itself had all the Hollywood trimmings, the station providing canopy, velvet carpet and klieg lights to herald the arrival of each consulate party. The affair was strictly formal and following the screening, the WCAU Auditorium was transplanted into an authentic night club. Music for dancing was provided by a rhumba band and only South American drinks were served at an improvised bar.

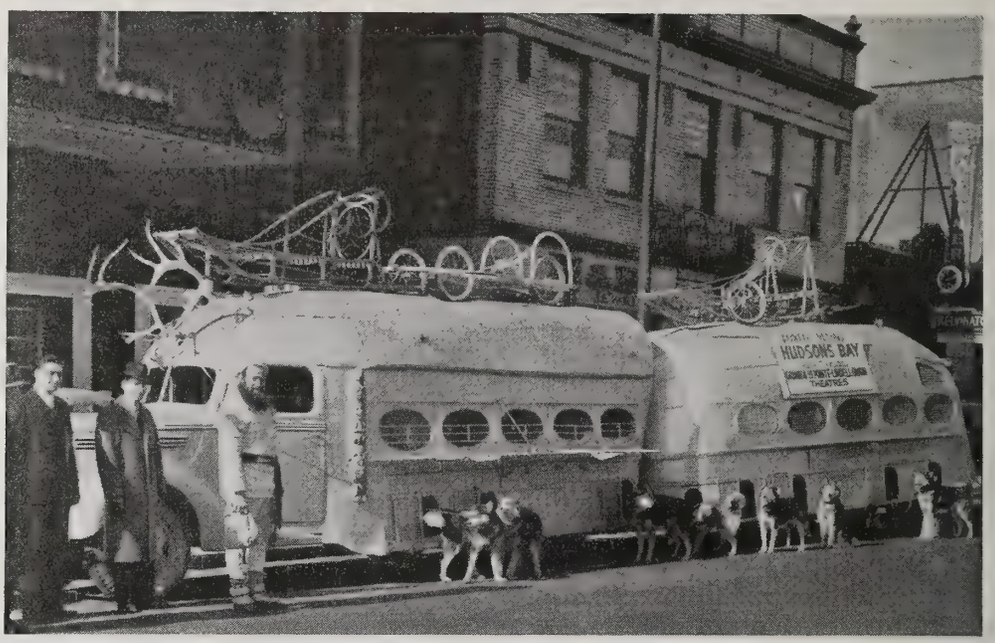
Street Sign Changed By Tierney for "Road"

Market Street over in Newark was recently turned into "Tobacco Road" by Eddie Sniderman of RKO Proctor's, who arranged for Gene Tierney, visiting in New York, to trek to the theatre and partake in the ceremonies attendant to changing the street signs (see photo in picture section). Paper devoted three columns to art and story, as did other cooperating papers. Day ahead, readers were planted inviting one and all to be present at noon while the star climbed a ladder and replaced the sign.



For "Western Union," Sniderman again crashed the papers by turning the theatre over to local Western Union boys for opening day. The kids managed, ushered, sold tickets and generally had the run of the place. Papers came through here, too, with art and stories.

"Arizona" Opening Tied To British Relief Fund

Contacting chairman of the local American British Relief Committee, in connection with "Arizona" at the L. & J. Palace, Athens, Georgia, city manager Moon Corker and publicist Frank Bickerstaff sold idea of a pie baking contest with the winner to receive a gold loving cup. Pie entries donated by leading bakery shops and women's clubs were auctioned off on stage opening night with proceeds going to the Fund. Local jeweler who had donated the cup displayed it in his window two weeks ahead, in addition to advertising the tieup.

Fanchon & Marcomen Tie Explorer to "Hudson's"

FOR the simultaneous four-theatre neighborhood engagement of "Hudson's Bay," F&M Zone Manager Bill Hoppe and his managers took advantage of the publicity atetnding the presence in St. Louis at that time of Earl F. Hammond, noted Arctic explorer.

Hammond and his wife, garbed in typical Eskimo outfits, toured the town via trailer and special Arctic sleds, fitted with wheels and drawn by a team of huskies proclaimed the opening of "Hudson's Bay" at the Granada, Union, Hi-Pointe and Lindell Theatres. Signs were posted on both trailers and sleds. The special fur pelts carried by Hammond were utilized for lobby displays, while the caravan toured schools throughout the communities, Hammond speaking at auditorium gatherings of student bodies and was interviewed over KWK.

Dave Kinzler, of the Lindell, Bill Abeln of the Hi-Pointe and Bob Heining of the Union worked out the citywide tour with Hoppe and Dick Fitzmaurice of the Granda. Louis Dauwalter, relief manager of the St. Louis Amusement Company, accompanied Hammond and his entourage throughout the city.

Pollock Distributes Lucky Number Cards

Concentrating on high school students, Les Pollock, at Loew's, Rochester, distributed lucky number cards in connection with "So Ends Our Night". Girls received white cards and boys red, each carried copy to the effect that if they could locate a student of the opposite sex in their school who held a card with the corresponding number, guest tickets would be awarded. Same stunt was used in stores with holders to search for fellow employees with the same number.

For herald giveaway, four page folder was used front cover of which carried copy "Girls . . . this concerns you". Inside spread was devoted to title, cast, playdates and cut of stars while back page read: "See this picture with someone you love dearly."

Men's Cooking Contest Held For "Penny to the Rescue"

In connection with the opening of Pete Smith's short "Penny to the Rescue" at Loew's State and Grauman's Chinese, in Los Angeles, Hal Elias of the MGM short subjects department with the cooperation of the Fox West Coast theatres publicity department arranged for a men's cooking contest at one of the leading department stores.

Cooperating store laid the scene for the entrants, setting up ranges, utensils and supplies. Smash newspaper publicity was accorded the event, with the Los Angeles Examiner coming through with practically three full pages, which included art, the regular Prudence Penny column and two column story on Pete Smith's career. Contest was judged by well-known home economists and the public was invited to attend.

Minish Sends Rogers Congratulatory Message

Harold Minish of the Tower Theatre, Milwaukee, tied in Ginger Rogers' Academy Award with the current run of "Kitty Foyle" via a giant postal card mounted in the lobby. The card, five feet by seven feet in size, carried a congratulatory message to Ginger with space provided for the names of hundreds of fans. The card was forwarded airmail to Ginger at the RKO Radio Studios on the opening day of engagement which ran day-and-date in the Tower and Oriental.

Buried Treasure Stunt Arranged by Rankin

Reporting on his activities at the Plaza, in Tilbury, Ontario, Harland Rankin advises that last fall a special children's matinee was held at his house during which time each child put his name on a piece of paper which was placed in a box, sealed and then buried in a vacant lot with appropriate ceremonies. On March 1, children were notified to be present at the following matinee, at which time the Mayor would unearth the box, call off the names on the slips of paper and to each child present, guest tickets were awarded.

Another stunt consisted of a special art contest which was held on stage, where four contestants drew a picture of a popular local prominent. Finished portraits were then auctioned off by the Mayor, with proceeds going to the Red Cross.

A tieup with a local shoe merchant is reported by Rankin as proving highly successful, with store sponsoring a two mile hike in conjunction with the Civil Guards and the Canadian Legion. The race started from the theatre and routed through back streets which were closed off measuring the two mile distance. The winning team received merchandise prizes and ducats.

"Ziegfeld Girl" Stills Available from M-G-M

M-G-M has made available a set of stills to be used as an advance exploitation aid for "The Ziegfeld Girl." They include photos of Hedy Lamarr and Lana Turner, two of the stars of the musical; shots of several of the showgirls selected from among the nation's beauties to appear in the picture, and a drawing by James Montgomery Flagg—his individual impression of the typical "Ziegfeld Girl of 1941." The original of this latter is one of a number of impressions submitted by the country's leading artists as an inspiration to artists and art students entering the contest sponsored by the company with the cooperation of the Art Students League of New York.

Novel Co-op Ad Used By Decker on "Thief"

Bill Decker at the Capitol Theatre, in Steubenville, Ohio, went oriental for his date on "Thief of Bagdad," entire staff wearing turbans imprinted with title. Co-op page was promoted, each ad being tied to picture with such copy as "no magic, no tricks, our prices," etc., or "sorcery and deception are okay in fairy tales, but," etc. Fifteen-minute radio transcription by Lowell Thomas was planted as were art and readers in out-of-town papers. Decker credits Bill McClain, his assistant, with aiding on the campaign.

Changes Street Name

Ahead of "Mr. & Mrs." at the Strand, in Niagara Falls, Bill Gibson held a 15-minute radio contest with guest tickets going to those correctly answering list of questions pertaining to the film. Photos of former Carole Lombard pictures were numbered and placed in department store window, tickets went here too, to those correctly identifying the titles.

Members Report On Kiddie Clubs

With theatremen realizing that the kids of today are the adult patrons of tomorrow, the latest Round Tablers to report on their Saturday matinee clubs are Bill Hock at the Warner Enight in Philadelphia and Stanley R. McSwain at the Arbor, in Nebraska City, Neb.

Hock opens his Saturday morning shows at 10.15 with news, cartoons and novelties and challenging his statement that he has one of the largest kiddie clubs in existence, numbering some 5,000. Promptly at 11.30 he goes on the air with a half hour sustaining program over WWSW, conducted by popular station announcer, who leads the kids in community sings, etc., assisted by theatre organist, Johnny Mitchell. The program is interspersed with several amateur acts in which the children participate and broadcasts are varied from time to time to keep interest of visual as well as listening audience by use of spelling bees, quiz contests and by inviting stars of stage, radio and screen to appear.

Immediately after the broadcast portion of the show, lunch is partaken of, with kids supplying their own and ushers on hand to request the passing of uneaten portions to the open aisles. While this is in progress, showing of a series or feature is held. At the present time, Hock has promoted a bicycle which will be awarded as a door prize in connection with a lucky number contest, this to cover a period of 26 weeks.

McSwain Divides Club Into Teams

Out in Nebraska, McSwain has but recently started his kiddie club to which he gives a little different twist by dividing the entire registration membership into two teams, with two of his theatre employees acting as captain for each. The entire club is to be operated on a competitive basis with each side trying to score more points each week than the other team.

Every Saturday morning, each team must take part in a short stage entertainment, for which that team scores 100 points. So that the children may understand the scoring, heralds are distributed carrying the following ratings: 10 points each time a child attends Sunday School; 6 points for every new member brought in; 5 points if the team tells 10 adults about certain coming attractions at the Arbor and have these adults sign their name to a paper; 1 point each time the child attends a regular Saturday show; 1 point for non-lateness at school and 100 points each week if the team puts on some sort of stage entertainment at the regular Saturday morning meeting of the Kiddie Club.

Reisinger's "Blonde" Ice Gag

Three days ahead of opening of "Blonde Inspiration" at the Loew Poli, New Haven, H. Reisinger placed an empty film can, supposedly containing a print of the picture, in a block of ice and planted it out front of his theatre. Copy overall read: "So hot, we had to cool it off" etc. A "Blonde Inspiration" usherette was stationed in the entrance to the orchestra beneath a spotlight. Chest banner gave title and playdates.

Imported Rug Dealer Aids Leighton on "Thief"

Bert Leighton, manager of Warners' Grand Theatre, Lancaster, Pa., for "The Thief of Bagdad," tied up with a local dealer of imported rugs and carpets, utilizing in the window a small carpet and a midget figure of Sabu upon it suspended in mid-air. In addition, picture had a send-off in the public schools with special announcements in classrooms and special stills used on bulletin boards. Window tie-ups were also made with the town's book shops.

Book shop tie-ups were also utilized for "Kitty Foyle," having copies of the book surrounding an enlargement of Ginger Rogers. Similar tie-ups were effected with typewriter stores. Two weeks in advance, Leighton arranged a special 40x60 lobby display, using the front cover of "Life" magazine as the main theme.

Taylor Wires Taylor On "Flight Command"

A telegram from Robert Taylor commending a local recruiting officer for his fine work, and mentioning "Flight Command," was one of the features of the campaign for the film put over by Pat Heavey, State, Kalamazoo, Mich. Heavey also offered guest tickets to recruits passing their physical examinations. In addition, he obtained photos of new recruits and planted them in downtown windows, informing their parents that the picture was on display and offering the elders guest tickets.

Autry Print Delivery Used for Publicity

Special attention was given to "Melody Ranch" by Art Cohn, manager of Warners' Roosevelt Theatre, Philadelphia. Window and counter displays were arranged with five-and-tens in the neighborhood, while special display board, illuminated, was planted at the gasoline stations. In addition to novelty ads in the newspaper, a trailer was used, in form of "Hollywood News Flash," it combined the photo of Cohn greeting Gene Autrey, who personally delivered the print of the picture. A seven-foot lobby display duplicated the trailer stunt. Other angles included Boys Club tie-up, Autry autographed photo giveaway, radio plugs, dance hall tie-up and several specialized displays at the music stores.

Cohn further attracted curiosity to "The Invisible Woman," with a fishpond in the lobby with copy: "Danger! Man-Eating Sharks! Look Below!" People gazing into the pond saw copy about the picture.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Martin Issues Faint Check

In advance of his two-day horror show at the Fox Granada, in Inglewood, Cal., Dave Martin distributed faint checks to outgoing patrons. Issued by the "Fright Insurance Company," copy on card read: "The person named below is entitled to return again if sufficient evidence is presented to management proving he or she fainted during the showing of 'The Torso Murder Mystery' and 'Face at the Window.' Assistant Bill Erickson was co-idea man on the stunt.

'Zanzibar' Given Teaser Premiere

Despite Mark Twain's statement that nothing could be done about the weather, it took Sparks city manager Bolivar Hyde and Walter Tremor, advertising and publicity director to bring a "heat wave" to "frost-bitten" Floridians through the world premiere of "Road to Zanzibar" at the Florida, in St. Petersburg.

With conversation rife about the unusually cold weather the folks there were experiencing, the theatremen opened their campaign with teaser ads and stories advising readers through a box on the weather page, that "a heat wave will be observed in St. Petersburg when Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour arrive in the world premiere of the hottest show," etc., etc. Newspaper coverage was abundant with front page stories and art week ahead, while radio breaks were secured directly after the Bob Hope and Bing Crosby shows. Local stations carried premiere announcements as news features and gratis plugs were landed over the man-on-the-street broadcasts.

Cannibal Ballyhoo Featured

Highlight was the massive center piece built inside the lobby with 24 sheet cutout head of Lamour with art heads of Crosby and Hope. Inside lobby was decorated by local wild animal and reptile ranch with Spanish moss, vines, cut underbrush, monkey heads, human skulls, animal skins, etc. For the street front, a large cage was promoted and in it sat a negro dressed as an African cannibal, similar to those seen in the picture. Sign overall read: "Captured by Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour on the Road to Zanzibar".

Public address system was mounted over boxoffice and periodic announcements by barker were interspersed with recordings of Bing, singing hit tunes from the picture. Pennants and flags were draped on the marquee and entire staff wore sun helmets ahead and during run.

For giveaway, cellophane imprinted bags were distributed. Copy read: "In this bag is captured a small quantity of real Zanzibar spice . . . but you'll find plenty of Zanzibar spice in" etc., followed by title, cast, playdates and cut of the stars.

CALLING ALL MEN FOR "LITTLE MEN"

There still remains time for you theatremen who have not already played "Little Men" and sent in your entries to get going and grab yourself a piece of the $15,000 that is to be awarded by RKO in this connection. The deadline on this contest is April 15th and those of you who have not yet booked the picture can still get in under the wire.

Theatremen in all situations are eligible to participate with some 369 lucky lads taking home the bacon. Entries may be sent direct to RKO or to Round Table for inclusion in the Quigley Awards Competition.

FROM READERS

Further comment for the recent Round Table forum on "Adjectives in Advertising", as expressed here by "Pat" Patchen, outstanding advertising exponent and city manager for Westland Theatres in Grand Junction, Colo.:

DEAR MIKE:

A newspaper ad is just like putting a salesman on your payroll—you expect it to roll up its sleeves, get in there and pitch. You don't care how it sells, just so long as it does sell, and the ad that sells a hundred tickets is better than the one that half-way sells a thousand.

Big words and little words, shouts and whispers, black and white—HOW the ad works isn't so important as WHAT it gets done. And the ad that does the job is good—regardless of what the experts say about it and even if it violates all the rules in the book.

Most of us in the field sincerely admire the Radio City Music Hall ads and congratulate Mr. Van Schmus for them. But to copy them generally would be disastrous. For example, take this copy from a recent Music Hall ad on "Our Town."

"All the evocative, penetrating drama, the haunting beauty which catches at the heart, and the poignancy of Thornton Wilder's play, have been intensified by the artistry of the screen. . . ."

That ad wasn't talking to run-of-the-mill patrons in the average theatre. It was selling for the Music Hall, talking to Music Hall patrons. And I'm not one of those who still believe that ads should be written for the "12-year-old" minds of our patrons. Situations where that type of ad can be used with success are very few.

If your average patron says a show is "swell" when he likes it—your ads should talk right back to him in the same language. Van Schmus can sell evocative, penetrating and poignant drama. Very few others can.

Hotel Tieup Features "Strawberry" Dance

In connection with the Cleveland engagement of "Strawberry Blonde" at the Warner Hipp, ad man Manny Pearlstein arranged a tieup with the Arthur Murray Studios at local hotel. Each night at two special performances in the grill, Murray dancers dressed in appropriate period costumes were introduced with proper credits to the picture and theatre and would then dance the "Strawberry Waltz" featured in the picture. This was followed by a spiel again giving picture mention. Contestants were then picked from the audience to do the waltz with the professionals, after which winners so picked by audience applause, were presented with guest tickets for following week's show.

In exchange for this cooperation, the theatre carried a display board in the lobby with appropriate copy tying in both the picture and the Arthur Murray Studios. Promotion started opening day and continued throughout its playing time.

'John Doe' Gets 4-City Opening

In an unprecedented four-city seven-theatre world premiere, "John Doe" opened with showings at the Rivoli and Hollywood Theatres, in New York; the Beach and Paramount, in Miami Beach, the Hollywood and Downtown, in Los Angeles and the Criterion, in Oklahoma City. Openings were attended by leading socialites, local celebrities, film stars and just plain John Does.

In New York, the activities were broadcast over Station WMCA from the lobbies of both theatres with noted radio film commentators doing the honors. The New York Journal-American conducted a "Meet John Doe" contest which ran a week and continued for another week. Man posing as John Doe travelled to designated parts of the city at set hours and the first person at each location to recognize him was awarded a prize by the paper. News and picture breaks were run daily during the entire period of the contest.

For a first-timer, the Subway Advertising Company devoted space to a picture through car cards planted in units of the surface, elevated and subway lines in all five boroughs. Card which runs for 30 days carried cut of Gary Cooper and Barbara Stanwyck with the following copy: "Go See 'Meet John Doe.' It's the picture of the month. Frank Capra has brilliantly cast Gary Cooper and lovely Barbara Stanwyck in a great story. I was thrilled. I know you will be too when you 'Meet John Doe.'" Card was signed by Susan Lee, Motion Picture Editor, N. Y. Subways.

Capra Presented with Scroll

In Los Angeles, sidewalk bleachers were constructed to accommodate the crowds and both a stationary and roving mike were used to broadcast the activities over KFWB. Highlight of the premiere was the presentation to Capra of a scroll of appreciation from the "Capra Alumni Association," signed by stars and featured players who had figured prominently in previous Capra films. Presentation was made by Edward Arnold, president of the Alumni.

In Miami and Oklahoma City, the premiere showings were accorded similar treatment as in New York and Los Angeles, with socialites and celebrities in attendance, lobby broadcasts and complete newspaper coverage.

DRAFTEE SAYS ADIOS WITH TRAILER COPY

What might be termed his last official act as manager of the Avalon Theatre, in Plattsville, Wis., was the farewell trailer run by Leo Kulik, before shoving off for his year's training in one of Uncle Sam's army camps.

Addressed to "My Friends and Patrons," Kulik said goodbye, thanked the folks for their past patronage and expressed the hope that they would continue to seek their film entertainment at the Avalon.

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS FROM A-FIELD

Tying in with local paper, Fred C. Doughty for date on "Land of Liberty" at the Lyric, Winchester, Ind., promoted editor to donate twenty-five per cent of the revenue from a full page ad. Also in connection with this, Doughty sold signature spots to merchants to defray cost, to the Greek War Relief. Tieup brought front page story.

With the cooperation of the Navy, Johnny McManus, Loew's Midland, Kansas City, arranged a "Flight Command" window display using an open parachute hung from ceiling, and including various types of bombs, flying suits, machine guns, etc. The Commander and officers of the local base attended the opening night showing and lobby interviews were transcribed for a special broadcast.

An advance screening for the Governor and members of both houses of the state legislature was a high point in the "Land of Liberty" campaign put over by Norman Hicks, State, Raleigh, N. C. The Executive issued a proclamation as a result of the showing. In addition, strong cooperation was received from the Junior Chamber of Commerce, which sponsored the engagement. Letters directed to parents of students, asking their permission for the children to attend special matinees of "Land of Liberty," were distributed through the grade schools.

An opening night parade to the theatre, including a contingent of local Boy Scouts, was the feature of the "Flight Command" campaign put over by H. T. Grisson, Jr., Colony, Portsmouth, Va. In addition, the Scouts cooperated by distributing window cards. In advance of the opening, a screen was held for high-ranking Navy officials.

Walter Norris of the Regent, Grand Rapids, arranged for a "Ten Best Rules for Married Couples" contest. A "Calling All Smiths" broadside was sent to all Smiths calling their attention to a special "Smith night." "Smith night" also was boxed in the regular house ads, given space in the movie columns and plugged over the air.

Two days before the opening of Mr. and Mr. Smith" at the Regent Theatre, Grand Rapids, persons named Smith along the streets were called on to appear on the "Sidewalk Interviews" program conducted by Stanley Barnett of Station WOOD. In addition Barnett devoted spot announcements to the show beginning a week in advance of the opening.

Reproduced above is front page of one of Bill Johnson's programs for week's attractions at Smalley's, Dolgeville, N. Y. In this instance, plug on "City for Conquest" has been carried over to an inside spread, with rest of space and back cover devoted to remainder of week's pictures.

Johnson's policy is to shoot the works on page one in an attempt to hit the keynote of the week's program with a phrase, catchline or picture that will command attention and practically compel the prospective customers to look inside.

A "Maisie" contest was presented on the stage by Perry Lessy, manager of Warners' Lindley Theatre, Philadelphia, for "Maisie Was a Lady." Young ladies from the neighborhood were dressed as Ann Sothern in the picture and the one resembling her closest in looks, characteristics and mannerisms was showered with gifts donated by co-operating merchants in the vicinity. Judging was made solely by audience applause. For "The Thief of Bagdad," Lessy used an enlarged figure of Sabu with a small heart painted on the side. Patrons were invited to display their marksmanship with the darts for free passes.

F. T. Ackerman of the Regent Theatre, Bay City, Mich., spotted a girl dressed as "Kitty Foyle" in his campaign for the picture of that title. She sat at a desk in the lobby beginning several days in advance of the opening and passed out memos to each patron. A shorthand mailing and other promotion reached the business and high school pupils of the entire community. Playdates were prominently mentioned here.

Bert Leighton, manager of Warners' Grand Theatre, Lancaster, Pa., used an old flivver with a boy and girl riding it through town to plug "This Thing Called Love." In addition, Bert made arrangements with the marriage bureau, giving tickets to prospective brides and grooms applying for licenses while the picture was playing at the theatre. Leighton also promoted an epigram contest in the Franklin and Marshall College campus paper and an editorial in the Lancaster Era, using the picture theme as text.

Special messages plugging "The Trial of Mary Dugan" were imprinted on Postal Telegraph blanks and delivered with regular messages as part of Charles A. Midelberg's campaign for the showing at the Capitol, Charleston, W. Va. He also had a special card with a still and proper credits displayed in city and suburban buses.

Instituting a search for a "Miss Gone With the Wind" through the local newspaper, George Mullare, Pekin, Pekin, Ill., arranged with the Mayor to name the winner his personal representative at the film's premiere.

Sammy Tietelbaum, manager of Warner's Commodore Theatre, Philadelphia, brought "Kitty Foyle" to attention by using a ginger cookie wrapped in cellophane bearing this copy: "If You Think This Ginger Is Snappy—Wait Until You See Ginger Rogers as Kitty Foyle at the Commodore."

Jack Singer, assistant manager of Warners' Sedgewick Theatre, Philadelphia, used an invisible message for "The Invisible Woman." Special blue-cards purchased at a novelty shop carried teaser copy. But when dipped into water, the picture message and playdates appear.

A "Little Nellie Kelly" contest was worked out by Roland Haynes, manager of Warners' Keystone, Philadelphia, in connection with the neighborhood newspaper. Kids were asked to vote for the favorite or most popular girl in Central North Philadelphia. The top winner received a Nellie Kelly doll. The paper printed stories and coupons. Judy Garland scarfs were given to the first 200 women attending the opening performance.

A gigantic figure of a djinni, suspended from the ceiling and kept floating through the lobby was set up in advance of "The Thief of Bagdad" by Lee Kline, manager of Warners' Orpheum, Philadelphia. The figure held the principal performers in the palm of his hand.

C. G. Keeney, manager of the Park, Reading, tied in with a local bakery for "Buck Privates." A "canteen" was set up in the lobby where an "Army Hostess" distributed promoted doughnuts to patrons. For the opening, Kenney arranged for a Veterans of Foreign Wars parade. After a march through the center city streets, the band serenaded in front of the theatre.

EDWARD PURCELL III

has been in theatre business for about eight years. He began doing odd jobs around the movie house and then became a part-time usher. He also worked in the poster department and soon became an assistant manager. During all this time Edward was still pursuing his studies in high school and then college. His first job was at the Virginia, Harrisonburg, Va., and then he was transferred to the Strand in Staunton, Va., where he now acts as manager.

began in show business as a bill boy in Chickasha, Oklahoma, in 1926. He then became janitor's helper, relief doorman and usher. Moving to the Rialto, Howard was made head doorman and helped the artist and bill poster. The next town he went to was Ada, same city, as artist, where he learned to operate. Gradually, he took over all advertising and exploitation and when he moved to Duncan, Okla., he did the same work, plus the writing of newspaper ads. El Reno, Okla., was his next spot and he acted as assistant manager of three theatres there. The next transfer brought him to Lubbock, Texas, as assistant manager of the Palace, Lindsey, Texan and Cactus houses. Early this year Howard secured a managerial post at the Broadway and Lyric Theatres in Lubbock.

is the manager of Schine's Federal Theatre in Federalsburg, Maryland. An usher's job started him off in picture business about ten years ago, working for Century Circuit and shortly after he was made assistant at the Beacon, Port Washington, Long Island, N. Y. Ted also worked for Skouras, as a relief manager and assistant, previous to his present post.

is the manager of the LaFayette Theatre in LaFayette, Alabama, which house belongs to the Martin Theatres circuit. After finishing school four years ago, he worked in theatres in Columbus, Georgia, starting from the bottom, as an usher, proceeding to doorman and assistant manager. Leroy went to Opelika, Alabama, and was taken on at the Martin Theatre as assistant manager. Shortly thereafter he was transferred to his present post.

acts as a supervisor and publicity director for the Levine Circuit in Virginia. Working for an advertising association which specialized in theatrical accounts, after several months Ganderson accepted an assistant manager's job at the Colonial in Norfolk. The next move brought him with Valley Enterprises' State and Strand and Warners' Virginia houses where he took care of all advertising. This position kept him in the Shenandoah Valley for 18 months and immediately thereafter he came on to his present affiliation, working at the Plaza, Rosele, Elton, State and Colony Theatres in Norfolk, Portsmouth and Ocean View, Va.

THE CHART

Productions are listed alphabetically under distributors. Parenthesis after title denotes audience classification: (A) Adult, (G) General.
Numbers following titles are production numbers.
Release dates are furnished as soon as available (advance dates are tentative and subject to change).
Running time is subject to change.
Managers' Round Table exploitation references may be found in the Product Digest Section, which is published every other week alternately with the release chart.
For complete listing of 1940-41 Short Subjects see Product Digest, page 93.

COMING ATTRACTIONS

are listed in alphabetical order with the other productions of each distributor, and may be identified at a glance by reason of being in italic type.

ULTIMATELY—THE AUDIENCE

SO MUCH is being said, considered, projected and variously promoted concerning the functions of the American screen in this war world, that special interest attaches to certain aspects of the screen in Britain, standing more adjacent to the conflict and considerably longer and more immersed in conditions that are daily being brought closer to these shores.

The bald fact is that the motion picture of Britain has not actually made official adjustment to the war world, yet.

As recorded in the news pages of this issue in cable dispatches from Mr. Aubrey Flanagan of Motion Picture Herald's London bureau, issues of the relation are just beginning to appear in open discussion.

Basic are two elements of concern: first, consideration of Government interested in propaganda in prosecution of a war; second, the trend, older than the war, from certain political forces that would deliver every channel of communication over to the control of bureaucracies. We need not tediously here and now go into governmental relations to radio and television, either in England or on this side. A reference tells the story.

The screen with its vast audiences and compelling machinery of attention has always been an objective of those with something to sell. Perhaps because of its relative youth among the media, and because of certain vulnerabilities which are not part of our story here, endeavours to appropriate the screen's audience, without regard to the abiding interests of either screen or audience, have ever been marked with a daring never ventured with the older press and stage.

IN BRITAIN the problems are not only more acute, by reason of the immediacy of events, but also considerably more complex because of the tangled issues of politics and trade. England wants a powerful motion picture industry because, mostly, it has found the American screen an uncommissioned but amazingly effective commissioner of American trade. That is older than the war. But there is no little consideration of trade in this war, like the rest of the wars.

Today's screen situation in England, and all the world, is considerably a sequel to and inheritor of the American dominance of the screen which developed not only out of sheer ability in the art of America's movie makers, but also out of an automatic and inevitable world monopoly delivered to America when the First World War shut down all the studios overseas just as the films were entering into their larger estate with the development of the "feature era".

Conspicuously, the halls of Parliament have for these many years heard a deal about what to do for the British motion picture industry; and, the while, in our United States, the halls of Congress have reverberated mainly to what to do to the American motion picture industry. That, however, is another story.

The British film trade, being in the amusement business, wants, and ever has wanted, American pictures, along with the rest of the world. All devices, subsidies, quotas, and all the rest, have failed of making Britain an important source of screen amusement merchandise in the world market or the American market. Despite all of Britain's great actors, able writers, clever dramatists, there has been a subtle something missing. Possibly inhibition made a British market for American films even as prohibition made an American market for Scotch whiskey.

While in semi-official fashion the issues only now begin to be apparent, the subject has been in unofficial discussion in Britain for a considerable period. The current issue of "Sight and Sound", published by the British Film Institute, at 4 Great Russell Street in London, presents an article entitled "Nationalize" by Mr. Brian Smith, with the subline of "For 20 years private enterprise has failed to establish a British film industry, with solid foundations; it is time for nationalization". Turning over to another page, one finds: "Rationalize! . . . Heaven preserve this poor industry from the fate which Brian Smith hopes will overtake it. It's had a taste of it already." And that is from the hand of Mr. Michael Balcon, who is known considerably on this side, too.

MR. SMITH considers that England has "experienced 20 years of unsteady production . . . terrible waste of skill . . . sterile result of years of booms and slumps. It is said, with bitterness, that this is all because we can't crash the American market. There are two reasons why we can't sell our films in America. Firstly, they are not good enough; secondly, Americans don't see enough of them to become comfortably familiar with our idiom, style conventions and stars. . . . One solution would be to sink millions in a long term scheme. . . . Another solution might be to reduce all production costs. . . . Yet all the talent we developed would migrate to the security and affluence of Hollywood. . . . The third alternative is nationalization. Through one centre organize the production of entertainment films, documentaries and educationals; and because divisions of the industry have no advantage save to private enterprise, organize also the distribution and exhibition of all films in Britain. . . . The task of the B. B. C. [British Broadcasting Company] is comparable and their organization is superior to that of the British Film Industry now, or at any time. . . . "

WHEN we come to Mr. Balcon's page we find: "In Soviet Russia, they nationalized industry, and they went further. They tried to nationalize the arts. . . . The Russian film industry was conscripted the same way. What has happened to it? . . . Mr. Smith is quite wrong when he says that the Americans do not like our films because they are not comfortably familiar with our idiom. They usually don't like our films because they are poor imitations of the American idiom. . . . Mr. Smith suggests nationalization as a possible solution. . . . He may not know it but this, in fact, is what is taking place in this country. . . . As a commercial

Ready with "Kane"

AT MID-WEEK it was reasonably certain that the Orson Welles-RKO controversial "Citizen Kane," was about to be brought for public view from the can where it has reposed (except for a number of very special, private screenings) for six weeks beyond the planned release date because of circumstances beyond the control of the distributor.

A declaration of exhibition policy of "Citizen Kane" was expected late Friday afternoon at the conclusion of another in a series of meetings between the RKO management, lawyers, Mr. Welles, et al. It was understood the film will first be shown to the press in New York next week. Shortly thereafter the film will be roadshown in certain selected key cities, on a policy somewhat similar to that used for "Gone With the Wind," embracing simultaneous runs at two theatres in one city, one show on a reserved seat basis and the other continuous showing at lower prices.

producer, I am all too unhappily aware of this fact. In a quiet, unobtrusive manner and under the unimpeachable banner of 'national effort', the film industry is becoming nationalized. . . .

"What, then, is my solution? Not nationalization, but rationalization. . . . Let the Government behave rationally toward the film industry. . . . Let the industry enjoy the faith and support of the Government. Let the Government sufficiently recognize the potential value of the film as a weapon of war and so allow the industry to retain its technical personnel, give it facilities, let it have the supplies it needs, and it will flourish. Let it have the proper war insurance risks, a credit bank to draw on. . . . But let it be controlled by free individuals and not by Government memoranda. . . ."

What Mr. Smith ignores, what Mr. Balcon says, not too directly, is that, regardless of what governments and industries have to say, the final decisions for the screen are recorded and rendered, with decision beyond repeal, by the whole people, the box office patronage.

All Out to Mexico

WHAT originally began as a private press junket to Mexico City, from Broadway, Hollywood, and in-between, in behalf of James Roosevelt's "Pot o' Gold," was turned into an all-out turnout by Hollywood for a big "Motion Picture Festival" in the Mexican Capital, at the invitation of Mexican President Avila Camacho, April 12th to 14th.

With the invitation from Camacho, young Mr. Roosevelt, eldest son of the President, Hollywood motion picture producer and active United States Marine Captain, withdrew his own plans in favor of "an industrywide event," which, Hollywood reported Wednesday, would find every major studio participating.

Even the United States Government will participate. John Hay (Jock) Whitney, director of the Motion Picture Division of the U. S. Office of Coordination of Commercial Cultural Relations between the American Republics, will accompany Hollywood to Mexico in the interests of cultural relations between the American Republics, and is presently working with the majors on arrangements for the festival.

"The first view of young Roosevelt's initial production effort ("Pot o' Gold") to be had by any one in the Presidential family," was to be at a screening at the White House Thursday evening, it was announced by United Artists late Wednesday. The screening was to follow an informal birthday party given by the President for Crown Princess Martha of Norway.

Local Showmanship

THAT special neighborhood theatre exploitation can improve box office income as much as special promotions at first runs is indicated in the recently completed "Division Managers' Drive" for RKO's New York theatres, directed by J. J. O'Connor, RKO Circuit vice-president and manager.

Four prizes, one to the winning manager in each of four divisions were awarded, as follows: James O'Donnell, manager New 23rd Street Theatre, in the Charles B. McDonald division; Leon Kelmer, manager RKO Kenmore, Brooklyn, in the Louis Goldberg division; Ansel Weinstein, manager RKO 58th Street Theatre, in the S. A. Schwartz division and Jerome Baker, manager RKO Capitol, Union City, N. J., in the H. R. Emdee division. What they did to gain their honors is detailed in the Managers' Round Table showmanship section which starts on page 65.

Anatomy Again

THE persistent endeavor of certain factors in production to put what James Fenimore Cooper so many years ago called "Eve's flesh" on sale on the screen erupted into national attention this week through the attention of Hollywood newspaper correspondents to a letter which Joseph I. Breen, administrator of the Production Code, is said to have issued to the studios bearing on the tender but conspicuous subject of tight sweaters, low cut gowns and the feminine bosom.

The United Press went forthrightly to Mr. Breen and reported back an answer that his letter was not "of public interest."

"For the last six months," observed the UP writer, "the curves of the picture stars have become more pronounced on the screen."

Recently MOTION PICTURE HERALD editorially commented on the transfer of press agent attentions from legs to breasts. That attention appears, however, to have been merely responsive to the production practise.

The state of the art is illuminated by the contemporary currency of a Hollywood label for "the Sweater Set." None of this has relevancy to the recent Hollywood engagement of "Elsie."

Paramount Pictures, in New York, Wednesday, announced it had assigned Veronica Lake, its "new discovery," who appears prominently in that company's "I Wanted Wings," to a new production entitled "Blonde Venus," which, says Paramount, is "self descriptive."

Talent & Soap

FREE Hollywood talent for soap exploitation, the future of the Motion Picture Relief Fund and the strength of the Screen Actors Guild ban on gratis talent shows were the chief issues in the Hollywood battle this week over free "guest star" appearances on the new Louella O. Parsons-Lifebuoy radio program, which started 10 days ago.

A compromise agreement was reached on the eve of the first broadcast, March 28th, under which the Actors Guild would waive the rule against free performances for a limited period and Miss Parsons would discontinue the Lifebuoy show after the contracted period of 13-weeks and thereafter make no plans for similar free-talent broadcasts which might jeopardize the $10,000 paid each week to the Motion Picture Relief Fund for star appearances on the Gulf Oil air show. The stars on the Gulf show are paid, but donate their checks to the Relief Fund.

Still subject to dispute, in some quarters, was the statement made by Edward Arnold, president of the board of directors of the Screen Actors Guild, in a letter to Jean Hersholt, president of the Motion Picture Relief Fund, and the one who started the "battle," that "there is a distinction between exploiting pictures and exploiting soap."

Miss Parsons asserted that before signing for the Lifebuoy free talent show she had been assured by film producers that such exploitation was welcome and players were under contract to aid in radio exploitation of their own productions. At the end of the 13-week period Miss Parsons said she would not continue with any radio show "which conflicts with talent regulations of the Guild."

Kenneth Thompson, executive secretary of the Guild, said, "SAG will continue its efforts to eliminate all commercially sponsored 'free talent' radio performances, no matter who conducts them, because they violate, we believe, the best interests of all factors of the industry."

More Film Defense Aid

FULL advantage will be taken of motion pictures and radio to push the sale of defense bonds and defense savings stamps by the Treasury Department. Heading the motion picture activities will be Howard Dietz, advertising-publicity director of MGM, who will act as liaison between the Department and the industry for the production of a series of shorts which the film business is to produce. Broadcasting will be in charge of Vincent Callahan, formerly general manager of Station WBZ, Boston.

Treasury officials explained that a nationwide drive for the sale of defense bonds and stamps would be instituted May 1st by which time it is hoped to have the first motion picture ready for distribution and radio programs prepared.

Definite details of the film phases of the program are being worked out by the film companies with Mr. Dietz, who will commute between a Treasury Department desk in Washington and his Loew-Metro office in New York.

$$$ for Trust-busters

THE anti-trust division of the Department of Justice, which in recent years has elected the motion picture industry along with oil, building construction, labor unions, fertilizer and other fields as targets of its "trust busting" attacks, on Wednesday received a budget increase of more than $1,000,000 for next year from the House Appropriations Committee.

The House Committee explained that enforcement of the anti-trust laws was "one of the most urgent governmental requirements" in the present emergency and approved a sum of $2,325,000 for the anti-trust activities, $750,000 more than the figure recommended by the Bureau of the Budget.

Studio Press Unhappy

BECAUSE of what appeared to some of them to be attempted "regulation"of Hollywood newspaper, syndicate and magazine correspondents, 18 of the Hollywood press, on Monday, set up an "informal" organization to ask the producers and their press representatives for the answers to certain questions. Douglas Churchill, of the New York Times, as chairman, is to be chief interrogator.

Although it was said a threatened copy censorship was the spur which led to the gathering of syndicated and other writers representing millions of readers, the new preview situation in which pictures are not shown in Hollywood until a day or two prior to a New York opening and sometimes even after films have been previewed in the east, will be the first problem to be taken up with studio publicity directors and Jock Lawrence, assistant to Y. Frank Freeman, president of the Producers Association. A uniform system of pre-preview showings for those with early deadlines is wanted.

Although attendees were pledged to secrecy as to the subject of discussions at the meeting, it was learned that what seemed to be a trend of "censorship" of Hollywood correspondents was thoroughly discussed. It was asserted that it was suggested to two newspapermen that they submit their copy to a certain source before filing it to their papers. It was also reported that one syndicate columnist was contacted to write a column extolling a certain Hollywood industry figure and was promised in return to "be taken care of" with exclusive stories for his service.

Concede to Labor

THE Screen Publicists Guild, eastern unit, in New York, Wednesday, asked seven of the "Big 8" distributors, excluding Warners, to start immediate collective bargaining "for the five categories of home office publicists conceded by the producers" at the recently-concluded formal hearings before NLRB Trial Examiner Dan Baker. The Guild said Warners made no concessions, and so was not included in the new petition.

Passing the Hat

TAKING a cue from frequent collection-plate passing among paid audiences of the country's movie houses in behalf of war and other charities of all kinds and description, Gertrude Lawrence, of stage and screen, proposed in New York this week that collections be made for British war relief from radio's audiences which see top-name air shows free. Broadcasters and advertisers are to be approached.

SEVEN COMPANIES REPORT OVER 10,000 DEALS EACH FOR 1940-41

U. A. Calls Five Meetings for 1941-42; MGM Will Meet in July; Goldwyn-Disney Tieup; About 50 from 20th Cent.-Fox

The major distributors, now entering the last stage of this season's selling, and already well advanced on product formulations for 1941-42, are starting to take stock of contract achievements for 1940-41. Seven of them have announced, individually, sales of 10,000 contracts or more for the year.

Paramount, through Neil Agnew, vice president in charge of sales, reported in New York that domestic sales contracts for 1940-41 "reached an all-time company high," servicing "in excess of 10,000 accounts." Paramount previously went over the 10,000 mark on individual picture sales of the Mae West come-up-'n'-see-me-sometime presentations, according to declarations made during Congressional hearings on block booking legislation and its relation to morality clauses.

"In 1940-41, Loew-Metro did better than 11,000 accounts," declared William F. Rodgers, general sales manager, on Tuesday. "This total is more than ever before," he explained, adding, "we passed some time ago the total for all of last season."

Universal's home office claimed 11,000 accounts, an increase of ten per cent over 1939-40, when, it was said, the company 'broke' 10,000.

Herman Wobber, general manager of distribution at Twentieth Century-Fox, had previously reported "around 10,000 accounts."

Republic Pictures, in New York, claimed 12,500.

At RKO, it was said the company was preparing to issue shortly a report on the actual number of accounts serviced in 1940-41. The figure was described as "over 10,000."

Warners would not disclose any account figures, and officials at Columbia, Monogram and United Artists were not available.

Product, Policy Plans Advanced for 1941-42

Virtually all distributors are turning concentrated attention from the old to the new season. Already three annual sales conventions have been held—an unusually early convention season. Meetings have been held by Republic, Universal, and Producers Releasing Corporation, in that order. This week United Artists became the fifth to schedule annual meetings, while, at the same time, arranging for expanded production activity by its outside producers and for a completely revised selling method for the "new order" starting September 1st. Monogram opened its annual convention Friday, in Hollywood, announcing 53. See page 28.

William F. Rodgers, for MGM, disclosed new season's plans for about 45 to 50 features and a convention in July. Samuel Goldwyn and Walt Disney contracted to join production forces for at least one picture for 1941-42. RKO's convention is tentatively set for June. Twentieth Century-Fox will probably have "about 50" for the coming year, with Paramount releasing around 40.

OLDTIMERS STAR IN NEW SHORTS

Cuttings from oldtime films, famous in the history of the screen, form the basis of "Screen Parade," a new series of 24 shorts announced by J. J. Balaben, president of Jubilee Productions in New York. Pictures representative of the pioneer classics will be rescored with modern synchronization and a commentary. In three sections, devoted to early comedy, serial and dramatic photoplays, the series is designed to give a complete cross section of the early film. Special prints with Spanish titles and comment will be made for Latin American audiences.

Charlie Chaplin will lead the parade of stars of another generation which will include Fatty Arbuckle, Ford Sterling, Chester Conklin, Will Rogers, John Bunny, Sidney Drew, Ben Turpin, Larry Semon, Mabel Normand, Buster Keaton, Pearl White, Rudolph Valentino, D. W. Griffith, Florence Lawrence, E. K. Lincoln, Mae Murray, W. S. Hart, Theda Bara, Douglas Fairbanks, Wallace Reid and others. The research staff for Jubilee Productions includes Benjamin Green, Theodore Huff, Jock Kemp, Tom Bret and George Vidor.

United Artists Will Hold Five Meetings

Salesmen for United Artists will learn of product planned for the new season at five regional conventions which will be held starting April 14th, Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president in charge of domestic distribution announced. New York, New Orleans, Cleveland, Chicago and San Francisco were selected for the sales meetings.

First district meeting is in New York on April 14th with managers from Boston, New Haven, New York, Philadelphia and Washington in attendance. On April 17th and 18th the southern exchanges will meet in New Orleans. Personnel of UA branches in the Ohio area gather at Cleveland April 21st and 22nd. Midwest and Canadian managers meet at Chicago April 24th and 25th and far west and coast agents at San Francisco April 28th and 29th.

Edward Small, was the first of the UA producers to reveal title of his next year's product with announcement that he will make "G-Man Versus Scotland Yard," with Ilona Massey; "Twin Beds," "Heliotrope," "The Corsican Brothers," "My Official Wife," "Two Years Before the Mast" and "In Rudolph Valentino's Day."

Seven home office executives will attend all the regional meetings of UA salesmen. They are: Mr. Kelly, Harry Gold, vice-president and Eastern sales manager; Haskell M. Masters, Western sales manager; Paul Lazarus, contract chief; Monroe Greenthal, advertising and publicity director; David E. Weshner, exploitation director; and Al Margolies, publicity chief. George Archibald, joint manager in England for UA will attend the New York meeting. Following his return to England, Teddy Carr, co-manager will visit the home office.

United Artists will revise its sales policy drastically for next year, Maurice Silverstone, operating chief, announced to sell the product of all its producers under one contract. Heretofore pictures of each producer have been handled separately. Under the plan the distribution department takes complete charge of selling and contracts will probably drop a clause giving producers final approval of play dates. Prices are said to be patterned on a sliding scale plan.

Metro Plans 45 to 50 Films Next Year

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will announce 45 or 50 major pictures for its 1941-42 production schedule at the annual sales meeting to be held in July, William F. Rodgers, general sales manager revealed on his return to New York this week. Its first block-of-five will be ready for the July convention he indicated.

The schedule does not represent a substantial change from previous years output Mr. Rodgers said. A staff of approximately thirty additional salesmen will be needed to sell the pictures under consent decree provisions, he predicted. An average of one new man will be placed on the sales staff of each exchange, he said. Most will be promoted from bookers jobs and other positions within the company.

The MGM sales head revealed that the sales staff had increased the number of current accounts above the 11,000 mark to set a new all-time record. No separate sales organization will be formed to handle short subjects next year, he added. Details of the July convention and product announcement will be worked out when he reaches the coast next week, Mr. Rodgers said.

Goldwyn, Disney Join To Make Fairy Tale

Samuel Goldwyn, who recently severed his bonds with United Artists, then lapsed into enigmatic silence on his future plans, will join forces with Walt Disney to make "The Life and Stories of Hans Christian Andersen," Mr. Disney announced in Hollywood this week. Production on the picture, a combination of cartoon and photography, will begin in June or July, it was indicated. No release has been set. RKO currently handles Disney shorts. Leo Spitz of the Chicago law firm of Spitz and Adcock negotiated the deal. The picture will probably not be released until July 1942.

RKO Convention in June, Officials Say

In New York, over the weekend, home office executives of RKO said the company would hold its annual convention for its sales personnel in June, with the date and place still to be chosen.

Sam Wood, RKO director, who directed Ginger Rogers in "Kitty Foyle" and Jean Arthur in the company's new "The Devil and Miss Jones," this week was disclosed to have organized his own producing company, and to have made a pact with George J. Schaefer, company president, for release by RKO of one or more pictures per year for the next three years.

It was added this pact would not interfere with Mr. Wood's freedom to make commitments for other companies.

This week, work began on the first of the short subjects for the 1941-42 season. The present program of 16 is completed. The new schedule calls for six Leon Errol shorts, four Ray Whitley musicals, and six Average Man comedies, featuring Edgar Kennedy.

It is expected 19 of the 16 pictures on the new program will be completed by January, 1942.

Columbia May Give "Penny" Roadshow

"Penny Serenade," Columbia Pictures' latest "big" feature, starring Irene Dunne, and Cary Grant, may receive road showings from the company, it was said in New York this week. There was to be an executive meeting at the studio on policy, this week, with, among others present, Harry and Jack Cohen, president and vice-president, respectively; Nate Spingold; and Abe Montague, general sales manager.

Fox To Have 50, Wobber Declares

Herman Wobber, general sales manager for the Twentieth Century-Fox, stated last week, in New York, following his return from a trip to the Coast which he combined with stopovers in key cities, that the company plans approximately 50 features for the 1941-42 season. Completion of plans for the new season awaits the return to New York of Sidney Kent, president of the company, he added.

Mr. Wobber said his company had not yet decided whether to hold a sales convention this year, and whether to add additional men to its sales force. The studio is presently concentrating upon completion of its current program, and confident of the reception probably to be accorded "The Great American Broadcast" and "Blood and Sand."

There is a definite business upturn in many sections of the country, Mr. Wobber said.

In another, and later interview, Mr. Wobber declared the studios would have to speed production in order to have product ready by August, in blocks of five. If they do not, he stated, they may have to sell singly.

Meanwhile, the company's Movietone News added a featurette series to its line: "The World Today." The first two are to have Quentin Reynolds as commentator. The first was to be released next week, titled, "Battle of the Atlantic." The second, to be released May 9th, is "War in the Dessert." Others of the series are to be released in June and July.

Paramount To Have 38 to 40

Paramount will produce from 38 to 40 films for the 1941-42 program, approximately the same number offered this year, Y. Frank Freeman, in charge of production for the company, said in New York last week, after his arrival from the Coast. The feature schedule will be supplemented by six Harry Sherman westerns.

Mr. Freeman added the studio would try to complete 15 new films between now and September 15th so that it may have enough product ready for the consent decree method of selling in groups of five. The first group, he said, the studio would try to have ready by July 15th; the second, by August 15th; the third, by September 15th. Three films for the first block are nearing completion, he said. The studio pace would, after September 15th, be slowed, with blocks being offered at intervals of six weeks instead of the four first contemplated.

Mr. Freeman said the studio organization was in readiness for the trial and that no changes were contemplated. He said the financial problem involved in holding pictures for the new type of releasing, was the main one now.

Sam Wood last week signed a contract with Paramount for three films in three years, his first to be "Miss Susie Slagle's." He has his own production company.

THEATRE PRESENTS NEWS BROADCASTS

As part of its evening program the Strand theatre in Scranton, Pa., a unit of the Comerford circuit, is experimenting with radio news broadcasts. Nightly at 8:55, Elmer Davis is tuned in through the sound system which is hooked up with station WGBI, the CBS outlet in that city. His comment is preceded by a brief trailer showing Mr. Davis in a closeup. The trailer fades out about 40 seconds after the voice comes over the amplifying system and from that point to the end of the broadcast there is partial lighting in the front of the house. The newsreel follows the broadcast.

Goldenson Appointed Paramount Chain Head

Leonard Goldenson, who had been working with Leon Netter and Sam Dembow in the Paramount theatre department, and who has been assistant to Barney Balaban, president of the company, in theatre activities, on Monday was disclosed to have been appointed head of the circuit.

The appointment climaxed a three-day meeting of the circuit's theatre partners, at Hot Springs, Virginia, which ended Saturday.

The meeting of the theatre partners, at which the consent decree as it affects circuit exhibition was discussed, was attended by the following from the home office, Mr. Balaban, Mr. Goldenson, Neil Agnew, Stanton Griffis, Mr. Netter, Mr. Dembow, Robert Gilham, Robert Weitman, and Y. Frank Freeman.

New season plans of the producing company, and of the circuit, were also said to have been on the agenda.

Warner Brothers has designated the period from Sunday through next Sunday, April 12th, as "Ad Sales Week," in conjunction with its currently running "20th Year for Sears" drive, which began in December, and ends April 19th.

Unveil Nelson Portrait

A Gainsborough portrait of Lord Nelson, British naval hero, was unveiled in the foyer of the Radio City Music Hall on Wednesday coincidental with the opening of "That Hamilton Woman." Gertrude Lawrence, British actress, unveiled the three-quarters length canvas loaned by Barker Brothers, Los Angeles art dealers, and announced that the canvas, valued at $100,000, would be auctioned for the benefit of the British Relief Fund following the theatre exhibition.

Color Patents Suit

Technicolor, Inc., and Technicolor Motion Picture Corp. are defendants in a $100,000 damage suit and injunction action started in Federal district court at New York this week by Percy Douglas Brewster. Mr. Brewster, founder of Brewster Color Film Corp., and a manufacturer of motion picture equipment alleges infringement of a patent on a "method and apparatus for color cinematography."

Would Ban "Moko"

"Pepe le Moko," French film starring Jean Gabin, will be barred from Providence because the national Catholic Legion of Decency has condemned it, Captain George Cowan, police censor of that city, said on Tuesday, answering exhibitor queries.

Wanger Has Busy Denver Schedule

The 26th anniversary celebration last week of the founding of the Rocky Mountain Screen Club, one of the nation's oldest and largest film clubs, attracted a record attendance and participation by Hollywood film folk. Walter F. Wanger, independent producer and president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences was guest of honor—and a busy one. Also attending the dinner-dance at Hotel Cosmopolitan were Alan Hale of Warner Brothers, Phil Regan of Republic, Marjorie Weaver of 20th Century-Fox, Governor Carr of Colorado, and Mayor Stapleton of Denver.

Arriving at six in the morning by plane, accompanied by John LeRoy Johnston and Earle Collins, Los Angeles United Artists manager, Mr. Wanger had newspaper interviews at breakfast, interviews by a group of club women at nine, a one hour talk with the 500 students of the Colorado State Teachers College at ten, a Chamber of Commerce luncheon at noon, a 31 station radio interview over KFEL at three, a meeting with exhibitors from five states at six, the banquet at eight and a national radio speech from the banquet at ten. Miss Weaver drove Denver's biggest fire truck to the banquet.

Theatremen and exchangemen from an exchange territory covering one-fifth of the area of the entire United States attended. They came from Montana, Utah, Idaho, Wyoming, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Texas, New Mexico and Arizona.

Mr. Wanger's radio speech dealt principally with defense and the contribution of motion picture folk to charity drives, defense and public morale.

File Counter-Suit In "Path" Seizure

E. H. Thomas, Howard Goldin, and Mrs. P. A. de Cenzia, operators of the Grand Wilshire Theatre, Los Angeles, have filed an answer and counter-complaint in the city's Superior Court, to the seizure and delivery suit filed March 4th by RKO Radio Pictures. They ask actual damages of $10,000 and punitive damages of $10,000, because of the seizure by the film company of the print of "The Primrose Path."

They further assert the RKO action forced them to suspend operations five days after the suit, and they aver RKO is wrong in its legal procedure; that it should have asked the court to restrain the "sex" advertising of the film, rather than seize the print with the sheriff's aid.

The theatre had advertised the film as a "sex" film starring Ginger Rogers. Mrs. Leila Rogers, the star's mother, endeavored to have the operators stop the advertising. She then requested return of the picture. The RKO action followed.

Butterfield in New Post

Allyn Butterfield, former managing editor of Pathe News, has been appointed supervising director, and Ralph E. Peckham, sales director of "King of The White Elephants," first Siamest film for export, which was to open Friday evening at New York City's Belmont Theatre.

AP LOOKS TO TELEVISION, FM AND FILMS AS NEW STORY OUTLETS

New Subsidiary Will Deal in Story, Patent, Transmission Rights for All Amusement and Communications Media

by JOHN STUART, Jr.

Associated Press, after gathering and disseminating news almost exclusively for member papers for more than 100 years, has established a merchandising subsidiary to retail its services outside the strictly limited circle of press franchise holders. Press Association, Inc., owned entirely by the Associated Press, was recently incorporated in New York to sell news, pictures, cartoons, feature material, laboratory developments and other by-products of the news service's extensive organization.

Radio news service, motion picture rights, and possibly television news service are expected by PA to prove important outlets for the new AP sales service. Transmission and reproduction mechanism and methods developed in the AP research laboratory will also be marketed by the subsidiary. Press Association has already taken over administration of the AP radio news bureau and the research division and will obtain material from national and regional AP news wires, the Wirephoto service, feature syndicate and the columns of member papers. Material from the three AP foreign subsidiaries, Associated Press of Great Britain, Ltd., Associated Press of Germany, (GmbH), and La Presna Asociada, Latin American wire service, will be available to Press Association.

Wide Scope Allowed

W. J. McCambridge, formerly assistant general manager and assistant secretary of AP, is the executive head of Press Association. Oliver Gramling, former assistant to the AP general manager and author of "AP—the Story of the News," best selling history of the news service, is assistant general manager. The board of directors includes Kent Cooper, general manager of AP, and the publishers of seven member papers.

Incorporation papers filed with the New York secretary of state at Albany define Press Association's purpose as to "obtain, procure, buy, sell, distribute, print and prepare for publication any and all kinds of news, information and intelligence, literary property and material of all kinds including illustrations, cartoons and drawings for publication and use in, or in connection with, newspapers, magazines, books, motion pictures, and radio broadcasts." It is also authorized to sell or lease present or future facilities and equipment for transmission and reproduction of such material. Power to obtain and lease or sell "copyrights, trademarks, . . . inventions, secret processes, formulae, patented devices and similar rights and property" is also conferred on PA.

Further permission to acquire, or associate with any other corporation or firm engaged in a similar field of activity is granted in the charter. It has been held that the subsidiary charter will enable the AP to enter new fields of activity and partnership with other firms in radio, film, or news endeavors. The unique membership structure of the Associated Press, under which it was originally chartered under the same laws as fish and game clubs, has hitherto limited such activity.

There is considerable speculation on the extent to which this may bring AP, and the newspapers which own and operate it, into the fields of radio, motion pictures, and the development of television. Televised newsreel programs, for presentation in motion picture theatres, have been widely mentioned as a possible development in the future of visual broadcasting.

Surveying Possible Markets

Press Association has established offices in the AP building at Rockefeller Center, New York. Current activities are centered chiefly on a survey of possible markets for news material salvaged from the million words a day issued on the AP wires. Radio, motion pictures, facsimile news systems, and television are among the fields being studied closely for possible users of Press Association services, officials admitted. No definite sales program, or exploitation, other than for the radio news wire, is under way as yet. It was indicated, however, that Press Association will evolve as a service organization rather than direct producer of news or related entertainment product. Definitely there will be no conflict with the spot news coverage of the daily press.

Radio, at the outset, will occupy the balance of Press Association's attention, Mr. Gramling indicated. It has taken over the radio news service formerly operated by AP for broadcasts in behalf of member papers. PA will sell specially written radio news copy compiled from AP wires and member papers to all broadcasters. Full AP wire service also will be leased to news broadcasters wishing to compile their own air reports. Approximately 400 stations have already signed for the new service and all three major networks are purchasing PA copy.

Thomas H. O'Neill, former assistant on the AP news desk, heads the special radio staff which will write copy at New York for the radio wire. A staff of ten has been working on air news technique since December. The Press Association radio news staff includes Bradford D. Ansley, former news announcer on WSB, Atlanta; Richard Clancy, former night manager for WHN, New York; N. Paul Neilson, WJBO, Baton Rouse, and recruits from AP regional bureaus. The latter include O. W. Clements, from Dallas; Mitchell A. Curtis, Oklahoma City; Robert S. Dudley, Nashville; Paul L. Martin, Harrisburg, and Jack R. Ryan, New York.

Public installation of news tickers, in newsreel theatre lobbies, broadcasting centers, and similar situations will also be handled by Press Association. Although available from competing wire services for several years, such service was formerly supplied by AP but rarely, and then only at the request of an AP member paper interested in a promotional tieup for elections, world series or other special events.

The extensive research division and its photographic, electrical and mechanical laboratories developed by AP have been taken over by the subsidiary and will hereafter be operated directly by Press Association. Study aimed at improving methods of news transmission, printing, wirephoto, photography and allied production problems will be continued and extended and many of the technical developments now reserved exclusively for the use of the 1,400 AP franchise holders in 746 U. S. cities will be adapted for general use.

Important Developments Reported

A number of important developments are unofficially reported to be nearing perfection by the PA researchers. Engineers on the laboratory staff directed by Harry M. Biele are known to be working on frequency modulation broadcasting and are said to have designed experimental circuits for the transmission and reception of electrical impulses capable of operating several news printers on one broadcast channel. The staff has refined the original wirephoto apparatus developed by Bell Laboratories and developed the portable transmitters and receivers now in wide use by the AP wire picture service. New methods of high speed engraving and typesettting are also rumored to be near the practicable stage.

Engineers on Mr. Biele's staff at the AP Building include James C. Barnes, Harold Carlson, Alfred S. Gano, Charles W. Hubley, Paul Vega, Charles E. Ryan, Charles A. Piper, and R. E. Benedict. Assistants include Henry D. Elling and R. R. Schlekser, and J. W. Burt is in charge of laboratory purchases.

PROBING PAPERS' FM OWNERSHIP

Mark Ethridge, general manager of the Louisville Courier-Journal and Times, which operates WHAS, has been named chairman of a committee to study conditions relating to newspaper operation of FM stations and the recent FCC order for an investigation and hearing on whether newspapers should be permitted to own FM stations. The appointment was made at a meeting of 85 publishers and their representatives of newspapers which operate standard broadcasting stations or contemplate operating FM stations.

Charles Goodwin, WOR production manager, was named manager of the station's new FM outlet, W71NY, when it began commercial operation on Tuesday, April 1st. The station has a full engineering crew including two announcers and the broadcasting schedule will be 8:30 A. M. to 11:30 P. M. daily. The station will operate under a 60-day FCC permit.

"Curb Patriotic Films," Says de Rochemont

Louis de Rochemont, producer of the "March of Time," warned the movie industry to guard against an avalanche of films edited and sponsored by various agencies of the Government, during an interview in St. Louis last week.

"The exhibitor finds it hard to refuse an army colonel who says the exhibitor should run a picture for patriotic reasons," the newsreel producer said. "But unless the industry puts a curb on these films, the audiences are going to rise in revolt."

The war has been unusually well documented in motion pictures except at the Dunquerke evacuation, Mr. de Rochemont said. He told of the school of pictorial journalism the "March of Time" is conducting for cameramen in the American armed forces, which has brought together students from the Coast Guard, marines and various army branches for a six months' course.

CLEARANCE THE TARGET OF 55% OF EXHIBITOR ARBITRATION COMPLAINTS

Total of 38 Complaints Filed in Two-Months Period; Four Decisions Made, 1 Appealed; Exhibitors Win Majority

Fifty-five per cent of all trade practice complaints filed to date by independent exhibitors under the arbitration system of the consent decree are aimed at clearance.

The "great adventure and great experiment" of arbitration in the motion picture industry under a system established by the consent decree concluded Monday its first two months of operations. The 31 local boards in as many key cities throughout the country opened for business on February 1, 1941. Fourteen of these local offices received no formal complaints during the first two months.

In the period a total of 38 cases was filed; four arbitrator's awards were made; the first appeal was taken to the arbitration appeals boards; hearings had been held on seven demands; two complaints were settled in advance of the hearing date by all the distributors named and in another two Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer worked out a compromise agreement. A total of 21 clearance cases were filed, 14 on "some run" and one on withholding prints.

As the third month of operations of the arbitration machinery run by the American Arbitration Association opened exhibitors had the edge, so far as awards were concerned. In two of the four decisions the exhibitor won the "some run" requested; in one clearance case the exhibitor had clearance cut in two out of three situations, and the fourth case which the exhibitor lost, has been appealed.

The arbitration record to date appears on pages 17, 18 and 27.

Exhibitors Win Two Cases; Third Appealed

Exhibitor complainants continued this week to fare better, so far as awards were concerned, than the "Big 5" distributor defendants, with a "some run" award given an exhibitor in the No. 1 Chicago case and the exhibitor having clearance cut in two of the three requested situations in the No. 1 Washington case. Also this week notice was given that No. 2 Chicago case, dismissed by the arbitrator, would be appealed to the New York appeal board.

Hearings were held this week on arbitration cases in Denver, Detroit, New Orleans, Cleveland and Philadelphia.

Charles Zane Henkle, the arbitrator in the Chicago Case No. 1, gave a "some run" award, on Friday of last week, to E. F. Van Derveer of the State, Morris, Illinois. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was the distributor named and the Anderson circuit was said to be involved in the controversy. The hearing was held on March 15th and Mr. Henkle, vice-president of the Continental Illinois National Bank, ordered briefs. During the testimony it was asserted that MGM had offered the State third run and this had been refused. However, according to the arbitrator's award MGM must sell Mr. Van Derveer "some run" of its current program. MGM was also directed to pay the costs of the arbitration hearing. The company has the right to designate the run and terms of the licensing.

ARBITRATION CASES

The following is a summary of the arbitration cases filed to date:

Filed This Week:

Boston—One on Clearance
Philadelphia—One on Some Run
New York—One on Clearance
Total in week 3

Previously Published:

Clearance	21
Some Run	15
Withholding Prints	1
Total to April 2	39

Hearings Held:

Washington Case No. 1
Denver Case No. 1
Detroit Case No. 2
Cleveland Case No. 1

Arbitrators' Decisions:

Some run granted in Chicago Case No. 1.

A split decision was given in the Washington Case No. 1, with the complainant getting clearance eliminated in two out of three situations.

Chicago clearance dismissal was appealed.

Ben Banovitz, operator of the Ken, Chicago (Case No. 2) has given notice through his attorney, Alvin Landis, that he will appeal the decision of Charles P. Megan, former president of the Chicago Bar Association, arbitrator, that his complaint involved a definite run and not clearance. Twentieth Century-Fox, Paramount and RKO were named in the dispute which was said to involve clearance. The Schoenstadt circuit was listed as an interested party in the original demand for arbitration. The hearing was held March 20th and the decision given a week later. See MOTION PICTURE HERALD, March 29th, page 17.

A compromise settlement of the Walbrook, Baltimore clearance action (Washington Case No. 1) has been ordered by E. Barrett Prettyman, arbitrator and former Corporation counsel for the District of Columbia.

A verbal decision rendered by the arbitrator shortly after the close of a four-day hearing last week held that the clearance granted by Twentieth Century-Fox and Warners to the Ambassador Theatre, a de luxe house and one of the three Durkee theatres involved in the Baltimore dispute, was reasonable but that the clearance granted the Forest and Gwynn Theatres was unreasonable and should be eliminated, the Walbrook having the opportunity to play pictures immediately after those houses.

It was reported there would be no appeal, all parties being reasonably satisfied with the award.

Hearings on the No. 1 Denver case, brought by Joseph J. Goodstein, operator of the Longmont, Longmont, Colo. against 20th-Fox, Paramount and MGM were held for three days last week and were to resume this week. The Intermountain circuit was also named in the complaint.

George D. Begole, former Denver mayor, arbitrator, admitted evidence concerning the bankruptcy proceedings of one of Mr. Goodstein's companies back in 1932, declaring it seemed necessary if the defense wishes to prove that Goodstein is not a "reputable and responsible" person, according to the decree. The defense in their opening statement by Albert J. Gould, Jr., attorney, declared they hoped not only to prove the "responsible and reputable" charge, but that they also hoped to show that Mr. Goodstein fell short of the "minimum standards of theatre operation", also as defined by the decree, and that because of these two, distributors could not be compelled to deal with Mr. Goodstein unless they so desired. In his testimony Mr. Goodstein declared that practically every distributor had done business with him during and since the bankruptcy, he having operated theatres continuously in Colorado for nearly ten years. Mr. Goodstein was on the stand most of the three opening days of the case.

In Detroit the hearing of the complaint of Julius London, operator of the Booth (Detroit Case No. 2) was adjourned from last Saturday to April 19 so that attorneys would have time to file briefs. If L. J. Carey, arbitrator, is satisfied with the briefs no hearing will be held on the 19th. Paramount, RKO, Warners and 20th-Fox were named in the clearance dispute.

In New Orleans this week, after a hearing on the first case filed in that district, a "some run" case brought by Charles K. Wollner against Paramount. Phillip E. James, arbitrator, said he would give a decision next week. A similar case brought by Mr. Wollner against MGM will be heard April 8th.

First Cleveland Case

A hearing was held on Friday of last week on the Cleveland Case No. 1. The action was brought by Louis Israel operator of the Ellet, Akron and requests "some run" from the "Big 5". The Ohio and Rialto theatres in Akron were also named in the demand which also involves clearance. Dan B. Cull, arbitrator, postponed the hearing to April 16th. The American Arbitrator Association was represented by S. S. Perry, assistant to J. Noble Braden, executive secretary of the AAA and director of the motion picture arbitration tribunals.

Hearings on the first complaint filed in the Philadelphia area were started Friday with Robert J. Callaghan, Philadelphia attorney, sitting as arbitrator in the clearance complaint filed March 3 by John Geyser, president of the High Bridge Corporation, operating the Florence Theatre in Florence, N. J. The complaint charges unreasonable clearance and names the five consenting major distributors in a situation involving the Fox Theatre at Burlington, N. J., operated by Ben Amsterdam, head of the independent Atlantic Theatres circuit, who will be an intervening party in the action. Mr. Geyser asks that the Fox Theatre have no clearance of produce over his house.

Milwaukee's first arbitration case, originally slated for hearing April 1, has been postponed until April 22 because several witnesses were out of the city. The action is a request by the Evansville Theatre, Inc., operator of the Rex at Evansville, that the Jeffris in Janesville, Wis., operated by the Jeffris Theatre Co., be not entitled to clearance on Paramount pictures over the Rex. In the second case involving the Grand in New London and the Rio and Appleton in Appleton, as well as Loew's, Inc., Paramount, 20th Century-Fox, RKO and Warner Brothers Pictures, lists of arbitrators were mailed March 27 to interested parties. This case also involves clearance.

The first Buffalo case filed by Richard De Toto, operator of the Genesee, Mount Morris,

AS WELCOME AS THE FLOWERS IN SPRING!

A thrilling box-office message from your pal Leo. Listen!

NEWS FROM THE WEST!

"Hang on to that Lion! Never a dull moment!"

Just arrived from the M-G-M Studio! A Showman Speaks!

Read every word on following pages of this EYE-WITNESS, PROJECTION-ROOM REPORT OF M-G-M's JOYOUS SPRING-TIME HITS!

(We wish you could go out there to see for yourself why every Studio in Hollywood is saying "WATCH M-G-M!")

"I SAW HITS!"

"I SAW 'MEN OF BOYS TOWN'"

(Projection Room Report)

I'll confess. I wept plenty. If a hard-boiled showman is turned inside out emotionally over a shadow play on a screen then you can take a tip: "Men of Boys Town" is headed for the biggest grosses of the year. By the time this gets into print many of you may have seen it. The trade press has previewed it and the verdict is in: "It tops the original Boys Town." Blessings on beloved Spencer Tracy for his performance of Father Flanagan! Orchids to that amazing trouper Mickey Rooney for his work as Whitey Marsh. It's obvious why the customers begged M-G-M to come through with this sequel. And the Wonder Studio of Hollywood has delivered a socko follow-up box-office smash that will do your showman heart good! Backed by M-G-M's national magazine and newspaper campaign this looks like money in the bank!

SPENCER TRACY • MICKEY ROONEY in "MEN OF BOYS TOWN" with Bobs Watson • Larry Nunn Darryl Hickman • Henry O'Neill • Mary Nash Lee J. Cobb • Original Screen Play by James Kevin McGuinness • Directed by Norman Taurog • Produced by John W. Considine, Jr., • An M-G-M Picture

LEO'S ON THE LOOSE AGAIN!

Running Wild!

"I SAW 'ZIEGFELD GIRL'"

(Projection Room Report)

I'm dazzled! I'm dazed! I'm delirious! These old eyes have glimpsed screen magic from the earliest of the leaping tintypes but never in all the years of motion pictures has there been anything of such loveliness, such beauty, such grandeur as overflows from this pageant of stars and song that will soon come to fame in "Ziegfeld Girl." Jimmy Stewart is simply grand—he always is! Wait 'til you hear Judy Garland sing "Minnie From Trinidad" and other numbers as only that little girl with throbbing heart-appeal in her voice can do it! You'll see Hedy Lamarr as you've never seen her before—oh lady you're gorgeous!—in the scintillating settings of the Ziegfeld dolls. And here's a prediction: Lana Turner zooms to top-ranking stardom in this big show. As the elevator operator who becomes a Follies girl and yields to the lure of glorified life and comes to a tragic end Miss Turner turns on dramatic power that's positively inspired. Highlights without end such as Tony Martin singing the "You Stepped Out of a Dream" number; Judy singing "I'm Always Chasing Rainbows"; the Gallagher and Shean number; "The Kids From Seville" number and plenty more than space permits to tell about. Let your eyes travel over the talent listed below! Take a tip from one who has seen it glorified in the finished show! For the big dough, gents!

"I SAW 'A WOMAN'S FACE'"

(Projection Room Report)

I'M ALL STEAMED UP ABOUT "A WOMAN'S FACE"! SO WILL YOU BE!

I can't stop talking about "A Woman's Face." I can't wait to see it again! You might as well get used to hearing about it because from now on the California grapevine is going to spread the tidings to every city, town and hamlet in America that the screen has added another mighty motion picture to the list of immortals. Before going any further I'll predict right here that it will be one of the Year's Ten Best. Although this picture is loaded with stars headed by Joan Crawford and Melvyn Douglas, yet it's not a starring vehicle in the usual sense of that phrase. It's a picture in which stars attain new, brilliant stature, in which every role is perfection, in which players, director, producer, writers, camera men have merged their talents to make a masterpiece of film entertainment. Hats off to you Joan Crawford—they've given you a role that ranges from tiger-ferocity to the beauty and tenderness of a lonely heart regenerated by love—and you've made it a living thing. Salutes to Melvyn Douglas, to Conrad Veidt, to each player whose performance becomes etched into reality by the magic of George ("Philadelphia Story") Cukor's direction. From now on when the boys tell me about big pictures coming I'm going to say "You haven't seen anything this year until you've seen 'A WOMAN'S FACE'."

FILE THIS AWAY!

Prediction:

"A Woman's Face" will be among the Ten Best Pictures of 1941.

The M-G-M Studio is All Smiles! So will you be!

I SAW "LOVE CRAZY"

(Projection Room Report)

Come to papa, Bill and Myrna! You're just what the doctor ordered! Oh how welcome this one is going to be! This is the ray of sunshine, the comedy relief from the headlines, the Spring tonic that every exhibitor asks for in his prayers at night! I didn't stop laughing from start to finish. I couldn't count the gags, the situations that piled up in endless succession, one topping the other—but I believe there are more real howls in this show than any comedy I ever saw. Bill Powell and Myrna Loy are celebrating an anniversary; Mother-in-law complications; old girl friend complications; the divorce court; Bill plays lunatic to stop the proceedings; and there's nobody can play a lunatic like Bill. When you see him masquerading in one of those Adrian-designed Alice-blue gowns you'll know what I mean. Put "Love Crazy" on your list of things-to-be-thankful-for. I can just hear packed houses in hysterics over it already!

"I SAW 'BLOSSOMS IN THE DUST'"

I've seldom been so absorbed in a motion picture as in this outstanding Technicolor production. Its power comes from the fact that it's an authentic, true-life narrative of a beautiful girl who fought for an ideal, to give an honorable name to unwanted, cast-off children. Perfect planning gives Greer Garson the leading role with handsome Walter Pidgeon who scored in "Flight Command" getting the opportunity that millions of feminine fans have wished for him. This is a woman's picture every inch of the way, there are emotional moments in it that stab the heart and when you recall how Greer Garson handled "Mrs. Chips" you'll know that another brilliant performance must be chalked up for screen annals. Director Mervyn Leroy who made "Escape" and "Waterloo Bridge" has delivered again.

This is an eyeful! And in Technicolor! This is an epic Western! This is roaring entertainment that's going to keep your packed theatre on the edg of the seats 'til the fade-out on a startling, breath-taking ending. I've neve seen its equal and I've seen Westerns of every description. First of all, tak off your hats gentlemen to Robert Taylor! What a performance! What memorable figure he creates dressed completely in black cowboy dress, ridin his own black mare superbly through neck-breaking adventure. Bob Taylc rates the admiration and gratitude of showmen for coming into top-fligh box-office position with one socko role after another, climaxed now by th one! M-G-M has literally poured a fortune into this show and it's reflecte on the screen just as the bigness of "Northwest Passage" was obvious i every foot of film. The locations are awe-inspiring, never such beauty cap tured by Technicolor and these backgrounds are worthy of the might wallop of this story of frontier days.

MONOGRAM PLANS 53; QUOTA OF $9,225,000 SET

Budget Increases of 50 Per Cent for 16 Films Announced at Sales Convention on Coast

Monogram on Friday was the third distributor to hold its 1941-42 pre-season sales convention, following Universal and Republic. Fifty-three features were announced with a 50 percent increase over current budgets for 16 films and a 30 percent increase for 12 others. W. Ray Johnston, president, made the announcement of the new season's schedule at the opening of the three day convention attended by over 100 Monogram franchise holders, home office, studio and branch executives held at the Roosevelt Hotel in Hollywood.

The company's program for 1941-42 includes four feature classifications. In the first group are two "premiere specials," "Navy Bound" based on the Colliers story by Talbot Josselyn, and "Land of the Sky Blue Water" inspired by the Charles Wakefield Cadman musical success. The second group comprises four "box office champions" starring East Side Kids, with Bobby Jordan, Leo Gorcey and Huntz Hall, the first to be "Ghosts in the Night," with Bela Lugosi and each of the other three also to feature an important adult star.

Ten in Third Group

Ten "Monogram Money Makers" are in the third group: "Aunt Emma Paints the Town," by Harry Heruey; "The Spy," by James Fenimore Cooper; "Night of Horror"; "The Kiss of Death"; "You Can't Beat the Law" by Al Jennings; "Top Sergeant Mulligan," by Bennett West; "Down Memory Lane," by Harrison McCord; "Here Come the Marines," by Howard Stoneman; "Trail of the Wolf," by Jack London, and "Sweetheart of the Campus," by Leona Dalyrimple.

The fourth group, called the "Ten Showmen's Success series," includes "Law of the Jungle," by Martin Fuller; "Sunshine Sal"; "Isle of Lost Men," by Frederick L. Nebel; "Man from Headquarters," by Geo. Bronson-Howard; "The Fighting Cadet," by Nicholas Barrons and Robert St. Clair; "False Colors," by Lew Lipton and James E. Grant; "Hill-Billie Willie"; "Li'l Louisiana Lady," by Fred Myton; "God's Country and the Law," by James Oliver Curwood; "Flame Fighters," by Eugene Patrick Hale.

In the new "Rough Riders" series Buck Jones will be starred along with two other western players. Eight features in the "Range Busters" series with Ray Corrigan, John King and Max Terhune will be produced. Eight John Wayne westerns are to be reissued, making a total of 24 outdoor action pictures on the schedule.

Three films will be reissued: "Hoosier Schoolboy," Mickey Rooney; "Boys of the Streets," Jackie Cooper and "Siren of the South Seas," with Movita.

Mr. Johnston told the delegates that the sales quota for the coming year would be $9,225,000, an advance of more than $3,000,000 since the re-organized company held its first convention in 1937, it was said. The convention keynote was, "A boom year for a booming company."

Commenting on the current movement to capitalize on the "friendly neighbor" policy of the Federal government, Mr. Johnston said several features on the schedule would have South American locales and others would feature Spanish orchestras, dancers and singers.

Distribution and production problems were discussed by home office executives and franchise holders on Friday. Steve Broidy, general sales manager, was to discuss selling methods, and Trem Carr was to give a general analysis of studio plans.

Talks scheduled for Saturday, the second day of the meeting, were to be made by Arthur Mayer, operator of the Rialto theatre in New York; William J. Gell, managing director of Pathe Films, Ltd., Monogram's distributor in the British Isles; Norton V. Ritchey, general manager of foreign distribution; John Mangham, president Monogram Southern Exchanges; Harry J. Thomas and Howard Stubbins, division sales directors. Production plans were to be explained by Scott R. Dunlap, George Weeks, Paul Malvern, Lindsley Parsons, I. E. Chadwick and Sam Katzman.

Among those attending the sessions were: Nathan Sodikman, Albany; John Mangham, Atlanta; Ben Welansky, Boston; Harry Berkson, Buffalo; Henri Ellman, Chicago; William Onie, Cincinnati; Nate Schultz, Cleveland; Ed Blumenthal and John Franconi, Dallas, F. E. Judd, Des Moines; William Hurlbut, Detroit; William Benjamin, Kansas City, Howard Stubbins, Los Angeles; Charles Trampe, Milwaukee; Ben Nathanson, Minneapolis; Harry H. Thomas, New York; Carr Scott, Oklahoma City; S. J. Francis, Omaha; George West and Robert Taylor, St. Louis; Mel Hulling, San Francisco, and L. T. Fidler, Denver.

Defense Opens In Schenck Case

The Government rested its case Monday in the income tax action involving Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox, and Joseph H. Moskowitz, company executive, being conducted before Judge Grover M. Moscowitz in New York federal court. The defense opened with chief defense attorney, Harold H. Corbin, calling character witnesses.

Between the conclusion of the Government's case and the opening of the defense, Judge Moscowitz denied a defense motion to dismiss the action.

Among the character witnesses were Charles Chaplin, Irving Berlin, Phil S. Gibson, chief justice of the supreme court of California; John Golden, play producer; Will H. Hays, president of the MPPDA; Dr. A. H. Giannini, banker; Denis O'Brien, lawyer; Benjamin Miggins of 20th Century-Fox, and Gene Fowler, screen writer.

The last Government witness before the U. S. rested was Lawrence W. Gibney, U. S. Treasury agent, who admitted under cross-examination of Mr. Corbin, defense attorney, that he did not know the reasons for the Government's disallowing an exact 50 percent of certain items.

On Wednesday, following the character witnesses, two accountants, who had analyzed the books of the old Fox Film Corporation from 1915 to 1937 told the court that Mr. Schenck had overpaid the U. S. $55,442 in 1937 on his income tax even if all Government figures were accepted.

Carol F. Hall and Myron A. Fink, the accountants, pointed out that an analysis of the old Fox books demonstrated that the company had a deficit of $22,271,754 on December 31, 1937, and that a payment of a dividend during the year was out of capital and not out of profit.

PREPAREDNESS

To the Editor of the Herald:

Your splendid editorial in the March 15th issue of the HERALD should make it evident that owners must anticipate their requirements and avoid delay which will inevitably result from the government's preparedness plans. Obviously delay might be a very serious matter to a theatre owner.

No matter how large or small the facilities of a manufacturer may be, every plant will be called upon to do its share of government work and any one who gives the impression that exceptions will be made is merely deceiving himself and deluding theatre owners.

New Arbitration Complaints Filed

N. Y. against 20th-Fox, Warners and naming the Family theatre has been withdrawn. It was reported that the companies reached a compromise agreement on the "some run" requested.

C. F. O'Donnell has been appointed arbitrator of the first Dallas case, the action filed by Joseph's Drive-In, Austin, Texas against MGM, 20th-Fox and the Interstate, Underwood and Ezell theatre in Dallas. The hearing has been scheduled for April 10.

Charles Meyerson last week filed the New York case No. 7. He is operator of the Lyric at Oyster Bay, Long Island. The "Big 5" were named in a clearance complaint which also cited the Glen Cove and Huntington in those towns. It was said that the theatres named enjoy 60 days clearance over the Lyric and day and date runs are requested.

In Boston Case No. 3 was filed by Lucien Des Coteau, operator of three houses in Manchester, N. H. against the "Big 5" in a clearance dispute.

The second Philadelphia complaint was filed Wednesday by David Silver, owner of the Earle theatre, New Castle, Del., naming MGM. Loew's Parkway theatre, Wilmington, Del., was listed as an interested party. Mr. Silver based his complaint on the alleged refusal of the picture company to sell him product, resulting, it was said, in loss of patronage and distracting from the proper operation of the house. He requested that MGM be directed to sell to him in the same manner and terms as the other major distributors, claiming that the physical requirements of his house were comparable to the Wilmington theatre.

Censorship by Police Asked in Los Angeles

"Strict censorship" of motion pictures by the Los Angeles police commission is asked in a resolution presented this week to the commission by city Commissioner Van M. Griffith, an attache of Mayor Fletcher Bowron's office. Questionable stage shows in the Los Angeles area precipitated the situation, in the very center of U. S. motion picture production.

The request went to Henry G. Bodkin, president of the commission, for study. Complete censorship of films by the police was proposed as an amendment to a pending ordinance drawn up by representatives of Archbishop John J. Cantwell and other groups to curb indecent stage performances.

SENATE REVIVES THE NEELY BILL; TNEC AGAIN HITS FILM INDUSTRY

Anti - Block Booking Proposal Is Pressed by Successor in Senate; Final TNEC Report Calls Films "Bad Example"

Unexpectedly, in the middle of the states-rights controversies over the blocks-of-five issue and while the Administration's Temporary National Economic Committee again lambasted film practices, the Senate, last weekend, revived the Neely bill which would outlaw all block and blind selling.

In the states-rights fight in legislatures to void the consent decree's requirements for blocks-of-five sales, bills are pending in Minnesota, where action is awaited shortly, and in Michigan, where a similar measure was introduced last week to maintain the status quo of present selling methods, that is, permitting large block sales, but allowing 20 per cent cancellation. Georgia, two weeks ago, rejected such a bill.

Senate Subcommittee To Hear Two Neely Bills

Speculation as to who would carry on the drive of former Senator Matthew M. Neely of West Virginia for block booking and theatre divorce legislation was set at rest this week with the announcement of the appointment of a subcommittee to the Senate Judiciary Committee, to be headed by Senator Harley M. Kilgore of the same state to consider the two Neely bills.

The measures, for which Senator Neely fought over a period of years, were reintroduced by him in January as he prepared to leave Washington to take office as governor of West Virginia.

The subcommittee, consisting of Senators Kilgore, Tom Connally of Texas and James H. Hughes of Delaware, Democrats, and Warren R. Austin of Vermont and William Langer of North Dakota, Republicans, will have directly before it only the bill for the divorce of exhibition from other branches of the industry, but Senator Kilgore asserted that he planned also to press the block booking measure.

Members of the subcommittee are expected to be called into session within the next few days to determine whether to hold hearings on the divorce legislation and, if so, to fix a date.

The subcommittee has discretionary power on hearings. It was expected the New York consent decree, and the anti-decree legislation in Minnesota, Michigan, and Georgia would be influential factors in all discussions of the Neely measures.

The March bulletin of the Motion Picture Research Council apparently commits it to support of the bills, inasmuch as it says, in part:

"Passage of the Neely Bill will in no way interfere with the operation of the consent decree, but rather supplement it by making its benefits permanent, and extending them to all producers, giving the public and the exhibitors even greater protection."

The Council's bulletin also remarked that the consent decree's provisions are merely "steps in the right direction."

In a new attack on the motion picture industry, the staff of the Temporary National Economic Committee this week held it up as an example of corporations achieving domination of their fields by the use of practices which put smaller competitors at a disadvantage.

In a new monograph on "Competition and Monopoly in American Industry," prepared by Clair Wilcox, professor of economics in Swarthmore College, the practices of the major companies as set forth in Department of Justice bills of complaint are outlined and the conclusion reached that "producers of motion pictures, by compelling exhibitors to book their films in blocks, have thus profited at the expense of competitors whose operations were narrower in scope."

The Committee, in a previous report to Congress three weeks ago (see the HERALD, March 8th, page 13) asserted the Department of Justice appeared to have resigned its powers of enforcing the consent decree arrived at in its New York anti-trust suit against the majors, to the majors; and that these powers appeared, also, to have been put, "to a considerable extent, on the weaker members."

That report had reminded Congress that ordinarily, enforcement of a decree is the function of the Department and it remarked that the subjection of certain decree provisions to arbitration, upon the petition of aggrieved exhibitors made "the extent to which these provisions will be enforced" rest "to some extent on the willingness of small exhibitors to risk money (for arbitration fees), which to them may be relatively important" and it added that "in many cases, the financial gain to be expected even from a favorable award, may be quite small."

The Wilcox monograph was given without comment.

A. T. & T. Practices On Patents Reviewed

Practices of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company also were reviewed, including those applied to its sound picture and radio patents, in a discussion of corporations which are approachng "complete monopoly."

The monograph also discussed the broadcasting situation, citing the National Broadcasting Company and Columbia Broadcasting System as examples of corporations which have "attempted to exclude their smaller rivals from the market by imposing upon distributors contracts forbidding them to handle goods produced by other firms." Eastman Kodak Company also is cited as a company following such practices.

So far as the monograph's review of the several industries was concerned it was entirely without original material, being based, with respect to motion pictures, upon Department of Justice complaints and, so far as radio broadcating and Telephone Company patents are involved, upon the investigations for the Federal Communications Commission.

CONDEMNED WITHOUT HEARING, HAYS SAYS

The recent monograph on the film industry, by the President's Temporary National Economic Committee was written "without any hearing or submission on the part of the producers, distributors, or exhibitors," Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, remarked, in his annual report to the organization's directors, delivered in New York City Monday. Mr. Hays also asserted the TNEC report is "so keen about the forest that it overlooks the trees."

Calling for the preservation of free enterprise, but making no recommendations as to how it shall be achieved specifically in the motion picture industry, the Temporary National Economic Committee on Monday submitted its final and general report to Congress, ten weeks short of three years after its creation on June 16, 1938.

The twelve-man board was not unanimous in its recommendations, four members contending that the legislative program laid down would not meet the problems which were submitted to it for investigation.

Historically, the work of the TNEC will be preserved in some 40 volumes of testimony taken at its hearings and more than that number of monographs written by members of the staff, including one on motion pictures.

The committee, however, did not investigate motion pictures during its hearings, largely because the film question was before Congress when it was created and later was before the court, culminating in the consent decree. The monograph on the industry was submitted for what it was worth by the committee staff, which investigated practically everything in sight. The report, prepared under the direction of Daniel Bertrand, was a scathing indictment of the industry and an unfriendly criticism of the consent decree, arousing the resentment of Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, Department of Justice member of the TNEC.

Most of the recommendations made in the final report already are before Congress in one or another of the 39 bills dealing with monopoly introduced this year.

Tax Reductions, Research Urged

Recommendations of the committee, for decentralization, halting the tendency toward concentration, and stimulating new enterprise, follow in part:

Tax reductions on income from investment in new, independent businesses.

Intensified economic research by the Commerce and Labor Depts.

Legislation to prevent American corporations joining international cartels and restricting world trade through use of patents.

Repeal of the Miller-Tydings Act which permits resale price maintenance contracts in interstate commerce.

Legislation prohibiting the "basing point system" by which steel companies regulate prices.

Establishment of a continuing committee to study interstate trade barriers and devise means of eliminating them.

Centralization of government purchasing and use of federal procurement "to obtain the needed goods at the lowest price and without dislocating the general economy."

Vigorous enforcement of the anti-trust laws including increased appropriations for the staff of the Justice Dept.'s anti-trust division.

Legislation to prevent the use of patents to restrain trade. This would include a law permitting anyone to use a patent "who is willing to pay a fair price for the privilege."

Registration of trade associations with the Federal Government.

Legislation to prevent one corporation from buying the assets of another unless it can demonstrate to the FTC that it would not tend to create a monopoly.

Prohibition of the acquisition of stock in or holding company control of competing companies.

An increase to $50,000 of the present $5,000 fine for violation of the anti-trust laws.

Authorization for the FTC to act as a "master in chancery" upon the request of the Attorney General.

'GREAT LIE', 'SIS HOPKINS' GET SPECIAL OPENING

Location Premieres Staged or Planned in New Hampshire, St. Louis and Mexico City

Special showmanship attentions this week centered principally around Warners' "Great Lie," Republic Pictures' "Sis Hopkins," the James Roosevelt-United Artists "Pot o' Gold," RKO's "Devil and Miss Jones" and Paramount's "Caught in the Draft."

Bette Davis, Warner Brothers' star, will celebrate both her birthday and the world premiere of her latest picture for the company on Saturday, March 29th, in Littleton, New Hampshire, near her home in Franconia. The picture is "The Great Lie," and it is scheduled to open on the evening of that day at the Premiere theatre in that city, to the accompaniment of the usual panoply of lights, celebrities, visiting newspapermen and politicos, banquets and balls; and after a torchlight parade in which many of the town's notables are expected to participate.

Tickets were sold out on Monday, the Warner Brothers home office announced early this week, adding that the Governor of the state, Robert O. Blood, would participate in the celebration, and would lead the grand march at the ball to be held at the Littleton Town Hall.

The schedule for Saturday, as it stood at mid-week, called for the arrival of a special train from New York and Boston, carrying newspaper and magazine writers, photographers and newsreel cameramen. A torchlight motorcade was to carry them that evening to Miss Davis' home in Franconia.

All funds realized from the premiere were to be given to the Littleton Hospital and to the Golden Rule Farm for Boys. Governor Blood last week invited top radio stars to "join in this celebration by extending happy birthday wishes to Bette Davis on their programs."

Miss Davis, on Friday evening, was to be guest of honor on the "Your Happy Birthday" program, broadcast nationally over the National Broadcasting Company Red Network. The premiere Saturday evening was to be covered by the Mutual and Colonial networks.

"Hopkins" Opening Benefits Greeks

The Greek War Relief is scheduled to receive proceeds from the world premiere Friday vening, at the Fox Theatre, St. Louis, of Republic Pictures' "Sis Hopkins," starring Judy Canova and Jerry Colonna. Miss Canova, Mr. Colonna, John Wayne, Ona Munson, Donald Barry and Lois Ransom, the latter persons also members of the cast, are to attend the premiere.

Mayor Bernard F. Dickmann has proclaimed Friday "Sis Hopkins Day." Local radio stations will broadcast the event. At important corners of the city girls in Greek costumes, and in booths, sold tickets to the premiere. At St. Louis and George Washington universities students this week participated in a contest to choose those who were to be escorted to the screening by a visiting Hollywood star.

One hundred theatres of the territory have been showing one-minute trailers advertising the show at the Fox, because the proceeds will go to the Greek war relief. It was thought Jack Benny, scheduled to be in charge at mid-week, might appear at the Fox, as master-of-ceremonies.

The Pan-American premiere of James Roosevelt's United Artists release, "Pot o' Gold," will be the evening of April 12th at the Chino Theatre, Mexico City.

Mr. Roosevelt will be at the opening as well as many Hollywood stars, and players and executives of the Mexican film industry. The opening of the film is also being marked by an official Motion Picture Festival, April 12th to 15th.

The film opened at the Roxy Theatre, New York City, on Thursday.

RKO's "The Devil and Miss Jones" was to open Friday evening in three theatres of Miami, the Paramount, Beach, and Sheridan.

Paramount will hold a press review of its "Caught in the Draft" May 2nd at Fort Ord, near Monterey, California. The newspapermen and persons from the company's studio are to make the trip in a special train, and also tour the fort in armored cars.

On Friday evening, "That Hamilton Woman," United Artists release on Thursday beginning a run at the Radio City Music Hall, was to play to a house the mezzanine of which was purchased by members of the Women's Auxiliary Board of the Home for Incurables.

200 Day and Date For "Night in Rio"

Following its four-week pre-release run at the Roxy Theatre, New York, and an engagement at the Lincoln and Surf theatres, Miami, Twentieth Century-Fox's "That Night In Rio" will have more than 200 day and date bookings on next Thursday and Friday, the company's home office stated this week. The film was to have two other pre-releases, one at the Ambassador, St. Louis, Thursday, the other at the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis, Friday.

On Sunday afternoon, at Lewistown, Pennsylvania, MGM is to hold a trade showing of "Men of Boys' Town" at the Rialto Theatre, for exhibitors east of Altoona and west of Harrisburg. In charge of arrangements are Paul O. Kindler, manager of the theatre, and Charles Baron, MGM exploitation man. A buffet luncheon is to follow the screening.

The film was to be shown in many key cities Wednesday, in connection with an NBC-Blue network broadcast from 4:15 to 4:45 E. S. T., from the MGM Culver City studios, and featuring part of a special luncheon there in honor of Bishop Ryan of Omaha, and Father Edward J. Flanagan, founder of Boys' Town, Nebraska. More than 300 notables of the film industry, and of Los Angeles civic and church life gathered at the luncheon, which was followed by a preview of the film.

Special Campaign For Benchley Short

A national advertising-merchandising campaign, sponsored by the Saturday Evening Post, and said by Paramount executives the most extensive given a short subject, will be given the company's Robert Benchley one-reel comedy. "The Forgotten Man," release of which is anticipated the first week of June.

Mr. Benchley was selected by the National Father's Day Council as "The Typical Father of 1941." The Post will carry in its June 7th issue a full-page advertisement boosting the short subject, and Father's Day. In addition, to one retailer in each of at least 500 cities, the magazine is to give a display and merchandising kit, with the proviso the store promise to give an advertisement, a window, and an interior display to the promotion.

AMPA Observes 25th Anniversary

All phases of the entertainment industry will be represented at the Silver Jubilee Ball of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers to be held Friday, April 4th, in the ballroom of the Hotel Edison in New York. By mid-week more than two-score personalities from the industry's branches had offered their services for the annual benefit and word from the entertainment committee said that they believed it would be the greatest affair in the history of AMPA.

Six or more masters of ceremonies will be on hand to introduce the notables. From the newsreel companies there will be as masters of ceremonies, Graham McNamee, Universal; Andre Baruch, Pathe; Bill Slater, Paramount, and others. Ed Sullivan, columnist for the New York Daily News and syndicated papers, and James Dunn, star of "Panama Hattie," are others on the toastmaster roster to date.

To open the evening's entertainment Lucy Monroe, radio artiste, will sing the national anthem. Louis Prima and his orchestra have been engaged for the affair and the band will feature Lily-Ann Carol, Connie Klaff, Jack Powers Frank Federico and "The Original Six."

Among the celebrities who will attend are Raymond Massey, stage and film star, Danny Key of "Lady in the Dark"; Willie Howard of "Crazy With the Heat"; Ezra Stone, radio and stage star; Arthur Treacher of "Panama Hattie"; Lyle Talbot of "Separate Rooms"; Carol Bruce, singing star of "Louisiana Purchase", and Leon Kairoff, concert and radio artist.

Also John Guerney, Metropolitan Opera star; the Martins, radio artists on Fred Allen's program; Pert and Gay, WHN Jewish Hour; Patricia Carroll, radio artist; Doodles Weaver, featured in "A Girl, A Guy and A Gob" and "Meet the People"; Norman Zeno, who will do a skit; Diosa Costello and Victoria Cordova of the motion picture, "They Met in Argentina"; Hazel Scott and the Golden Gate Quartet, night club entertainers.

The AMPA Silver Jubilee Committee is as follows:

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

THE U. S. Office of Production Management, war materials control board, at Washington, issued an order two weeks ago, placing authority in the hands of the Army and Navy to henceforth determine what industrial materials—including many used in the motion picture industry—will be restricted in their availability for non-defense application. And the same was duly reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, on March 22nd, page 34. But the situation is really more serious. It looks now as if the war and defense is about to cause a shortage of blondes; peroxide is getting scarce.

Red fingernails also are liable to disappear. The goo that makes them red is being used to make high explosives. Many a head of hair that's curly now will be straight tomorrow, because permanent wave solutions contain sodium and potassium, which the government is commandeering for gunpowder.

And so on, through the list of beauty aids. Max Factor, Jr., who gilds the Hollywood lillies, told United Press, this week that nearly every chemical that goes on a woman's face to make it beautiful is indispensable to bullets. Since bullets currently seem to be more important than beauty, the latter, he said, is beginning to suffer.

"All the big cosmetic houses have attempted to lay in supplies of as many things as they can," he said, "but right now we're even having to quit using brass tubes for lipstick. The brass is going into cartridge shells.

"It won't be long before we, and our customers, will feel the chemical shortage. Take the lipstick itself, whose color is built up through complex chemical reactions involving bromine and chlorine. These chemicals make poison gas. It will be only a short time before the list of lipstick shades will be shortened, and, if the war continues long enough, a woman will have to be satisfied, probably, with just plain red, if she can get that.

"The colors themselves are being commandeered by the defense forces. You'd be surprised how much red pigment it takes to paint one tank dark brown.

"These same colors go into the finger and toenail polishes, which consist primarily of nitro-cellulose. This mixture, smelling slightly of bananas, is being shunted from cosmetics factories to high explosives plants, he said.

Mr. Factor said blondes who depend on peroxide eventually will become brunettes, unless the war ends soon, while those women who credit vanishing cream for their smooth skins likely will be using synthetic glycerine without ever knowing it.

The same press wires which reported Hollywood-actor Jimmy Stewart's arrival, as draftee, at Moffett Field, Sunnyside, California, told of the discovery by a Chicago army officer that a local draft board had passed a draftee with a glass eye.

We suppose the motion picture industry will soon be solicited to use those new "blackout plants," which have no windows from which light can escape to direct hostile bombing planes. Air, lighting, sound and heat are all simulated and controlled in the windowless buildings. Modern Industry goes into long raptures over them in its new magazine.

In these days of vending machines vending this and vending that, in movie houses and every other place of public and private assemblage, a Chicago vending machine maker has come out with a vender that robots a red-hot, cooked-to-order hot-dog from a sizzling grill, places it on an automatically-slit and automatically-toasted bun, seasons the red-hot, wraps it in a paper napkin and delivers it to you—for a nickel.

There are also machines which deliver soaps, towels, razor-blades and handkerchiefs, collars and collar buttons, besides the usual venders of cigarettes, cigars, matches, perfumes, gums, candies and soft drinks of all kind and description. One estimate places the total annual vending machine cigarette sale at $30,000,000. One national vending machine gum vendor reputedly has gross sales of $5,000,000 from gum vended at a penny a stick!

One of the comparatively new venders is an automatic iceman, which, after receiving a coin, dispenses a chunk of real ice—either one large cake, or ice in cubes.

"What girl, that you have read about, would you like most to entertain for an evening," asked New York Daily News inquiring photographer, Jimmy Jemail of half a dozen New Yorkers selected—and they responded 'all-out' for Hollywood pulchritude.

Martin Okoshken, bookkeeper, selected Scarlett O'Hara. "Wouldn't I like to tame that charming shrew," he boasted. "Where Clark Gable failed, you can bet your bottom dollar I'd succeed."

Morris Silver, a lawyer, finds Myrna Loy has "the most appealing fascination." "One evening with Myrna," he sighs, "would be a milestone in any lawyer's career." At the same time he wished he could be sure that his crack to the press won't be a millstone around his neck when his wife reads it.

Leo Rea thinks Gypsy Rose Lee would be "very entertaining company . . . and I'm not boasting when I say that I could show her a good time. She's artistic . . ."

Charles E. Collins, who calls himself a crooner, would give five years of his life to entertain Carole Lombard. He, too, boasts that he could give Clark Gable "some stiff competition." Carole, says Crooner Collins, "is really an incentive for living."

Exhibitors are looking to the day, soon, when they will be able to double bill "ADAM HAD FOUR SONS" WITH "THE LADY EVE".

By pony express from the desk of our scout, E. H. Mayer, in Hamilton, Ohio, comes the following flash bulletin: "Fire, discovered during a strip tease number, caused $3,500 damage at the Mayfair Theatre, Dayton, Ohio. The audience and the performers, who had sufficient time to don clothing, left the theatre without confusion."

CARMEN MIRANDA, 20th Century-Fox's "Brazilian Bombshell", has been placed in stone by Hollywood. The other night, her footprints, handprints and faceprints were cemented into the sidewalk of Sid Grauman's Hollywood Chinese Theatre, an old Grauman custom, described by Fox Studio's Harry Brand as being the equivalent of knighthood in medieval England. Mr. Brand, it will be remembered, is a press agent.

Since the Chinese Theatre was first opened in May, 1927, and Norma Talmadge became the first to impress her feetprints, handprints and signature in the cement, a crop of traditions has developed.

First, there is the roping off of the forecourt with a thick golden rope. There is always a Chinese boy in costume to wheel in a table with two marble basins of hot water and a stack of towels with which the stars wash their cement stained hands, feet and faces—as happened to John (he would) Barrymore when he permitted Sid Grauman to push his features into the cement.

A guard railing, four square, shields the "sacred slab" of wet cement. This is broken apart as the star inductee approaches. Then planks, covered with black velvet and heavily padded are placed on short supports over the cement on which the star is assisted to a kneeling position.

Cement "executives"—even a cement worker is called an executive in Hollywood—attired in evening clothes hold their masonic trowels. Chinese theatre usherettes stand by in colorful brocaded costumes. Then, of course, there are the powerful searchlights roaming the star-lit sky over the theatre, the cameramen's studio lights in the forecourt, subdued music in the background and "good humored" police holding back the cheering crowds—Grauman's crowds always cheer.

One bluebird means contentment, but not two. For the past two years, a bluebird has been given the range of the Mayfair Theatre Building at St. John, New Brunswick. Flying and perching and warbling when and where he liked within the confines of the building, the pet was happy and contented and made no effort whatever to leave his "prison"—until Walt Disney's "Snow White" was brought back for a repeat booking.

In that Disney fantasy, a singing bluebird is given considerable screen attention, including close ups. The Mayfair bluebird went berserk at first glimpse of the screen bird, registering his hostility by shrilling at the likeness on the screen. Seeing this accomplished nothing, the theatre mascot, sulked into hiding.

Although it has never been definitely established, a number of theories as to the origination of the term "juke" or "juke-box" have at various times been given.

One theory is that the name derives from old-time music boxes bearing the label of the manufacturer "Julius Juke und Sohne," while another report has it that the term was derived from an African word for "dance" and was put into the Negro vocabulary in the southern part of the U. S. where any somewhat rowdy roadhouse has long been called a "jook joint." Automatic phonographs installed in these roadhouses became known as "juke-boxes."

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

Pot 'o Gold

(Roosevelt-UA)

Comedy, Song and Appeal

James Roosevelt's long heralded first production for United Artists has basic and proven ingredients artfully mixed and beaten to a light froth with the final seasoning done exactly to a turn. The result is as satisfying as that achieved by a superb cook with ordinary kitchen ingredients.

Apart from the story material the production has, for recommendation and exploitable value, James Stewart, lately winner of an Academy Award, and Paulette Goddard, equally in the public eye and prints since "The Great Dictator." Back of them, in performances which will add to both their statures, is direction by George Marshall, evident especially in those spots where the commonplace ingredients might be expected to show through the creamy frosting. An added circumstance is Mr. Stewart's recent Army publicity. Supporting performances by Mary Gordon and Charles Winninger make the flavor lasting.

To fill the exploitation cup to overflowing there is Horace Heidt and his orchestra, widely and well known especially to the young idea, and a title and story based on a radio program known to a conservative millions of listeners.

Song and dance predominate but they are kneaded through the story as unobtrusively as proper seasoning should be. The comedy is swift, straight and untiring. The lyrics and melodies are calculated to make an audience depart humming and whistling. Some could bear extra exploitation.

The plot is the one popular since Shakespeare and probably before. The young man has a rich uncle who is a bitter enemy of the young girl's family. Boy deceives girl concerning his identity, wins her even after she discovers who he is. Complicating the family feud are the supporting players, among them a poverty stricken orchestra.

The Lady from Cheyenne

Lloyd Frontier Story

Frank Lloyd for "The Lady from Cheyenne," his first independent production for Universal release, has taken a sophisticated story of the zany type and given it a background of Wyoming frontiers of the 1860's. The film deals with the fight of a native school teacher to obtain women's suffrage in order to end the rule of a ruthless town "Boss." It is a highly entertaining picture and has sufficient quantities of comedy, action, and romance to insure its wide acceptance.

Loretta Young, in the title role, essays the part of the school teacher whose faith in justice and determination to overthrow the criminal overlord carry her through a series of adventures which a press audience found highly amusing. She is supported by a cast of capable players such as Robert Preston, Edward Arnold, Frank Craven, Gladys George, Jessie Ralph, Stanley Fields, Willie Best, Samuel S. Hinds, Spencer Charters, Alan Bridfe, Joseph Sawyer.

Lloyd, who directed as well as produced, and his associate, Jack H. Skirball, have given the picture the production sheen for which Lloyd's pictures are noted.

The narration moves quickly throughout, from the auction sale of land on the town site, through the machinations of "Cork" to obtain all the water rights, the beating of a campaigning newspaper editor, the determination of the school teacher to have suffrage legislation passed, and her final victory through the duping of the Wyoming legislators.

Its is gay and modern in timing. Its "outdoor action" background will please the fans who prefer that type of picture but also it will not disappoint lovers of sophisticated comedy—a rare combination.

Mr. District Attorney

Radio Drama in Film Form

With its radio reputation as an added saleable attraction, this screen treatment of the air show, "Mr. District Attorney," has a pre-sold audience response. For customers not too well acquainted with the weekly ether fabrication, the film with its melodramatics of a crusading "Blackstone" sleuth out to bag a posse of crooked politicians, can stand on its own entertainment feet.

Dennis O'Keefe plays the picture's title role smartly. Florence Rice appears opposite in the role of female fourth estate member, who knows all the lines, whether off the record or on copy paper. The couple makes an engaging and talented pair. Peter Lorre, as the crux of all the trouble, is briefly seen as a wanted politician who has absconded with someone else's money. Despite his brief screen appearance, Mr. Lorre in the short time alloted him, chalks up two murders to his killer reputation. Stanley Ridges, as O'Keefe's superior and Minor Watson as the leader of the opposition to the forces of law and order deliver expert supporting assistance to the principals. Credit for a smooth and slick production job goes to associate producer Leonard Fields and the directorial handling of William Morgan.

The story involves professional jealousy in a district attorney's office, a mystery surrounding an absconded politician, murder and romance between the lawyer hero and a newspaper woman. The final roundup of the evildoers is staged via a wild car chase and the thrills are mixed with the comic effects resulting from escaping tear gas.

Horror Island

Mystery Comedy

Designed as a companion feature to the recent "Man Made Monster," and directed by George Waggner, who also handled the assignment on that film, "Horror Island" treats lightly of several murders occurring as a result of a treasure hunt.

The treasure hunt is an expedient used by a young man to evade bill collectors and also try and get his hands on some cash. Said young man is enacted by Dick Foran, his friend by Fuzzy Knight, a sailor who is convinced of hidden treasure on the island the lad owns, by Leo Carillo, and romantic interest supplied by Peggy Moran.

The expedition, once landed on the island and in the castle, discovers that others are also interested in the hidden treasure, to the extent of murdering several members of the party, to the apparently complete lack of concern of the rest of the group. All ends as well as could be expected under the circumstances.

Main support is provided by John Eldredge, Lewis Howard, Hobart Cavanaugh and Walter Catlett. Ben Pivar was associate producer.

Spare a Copper

(A. T. P. - A. B. F. D.)

Police Comedy

Entering now the ranks of producers, and guaranteed world distribution of his pictures by an American Major company, Britain's Box Office Champion, herein proffers his last film for Ealing. Very much to the formal pattern long established by the Lancashire comedian, it is likely to net very much the same attention and box office returns. Formby fans know what to expect, just what brand of slapstick, and where, how many songs and how sung, the chase and the explosive climax. It is the boy's own ingratiating personality which brings them in. Exhibitors here will sell on the star's already reinforced and riveted reputation.

George here wears the uniform of a War Reserve policeman, gets involved with a sabotage gang aiming to destroy a new battleship, is suspect of being one of the gang, but saves the ship from destruction as it is due to leave the slips. In between whiles the film takes him through the accustomed adventures, the spot of sheeplike romance with the girl, the unfortunate encounters with authority, and the chases. Formby does a good deal of motor cycling in the film and finally "makes" the slipway in a midget speedway car through country lanes, Clydside slums around a "Wall of Death," and at last over the rooftops of the shipbuilding yards. Now and again—about five times—he stops to grab a ukelele and sing a spicy song for no reason apparently other than that it is now part of the comedy pattern.

John Paddy Carstairs has done a workmanlike job directing the adventure, but he has been served with more resourceful scripts. However, such criticisms will hardly deter from the success of the film which will hang on Formby's own terrific pull. He is a naturally likeable personality and an enthusiastic worker.

Technical qualities are adequate but camerawork probably rates highest.

Seen in a London West end cinema the film obviously amused an audience bent on wartime relaxation—but it is not West End material.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Chinese Den

(Film Alliance of U. S.)

Oriental Romances

"Chinese Den," is a film adaptation of the stage play "The Chinese Bungalow" by Matheson Lang and Marion Osmond, with Paul Lukas in the leading role of "Yuan Sing," a wealthy Chinese land-owner who marries a white torch singer. Directed by George King, the picture lacks the intrigue and excitement that the title implies and concerns for the most part of the romance and unwelcomed advances of the Chinese millionaire whose white wife finds love only with another man of the white race.

In developing the tri-cornered romance a fourth party enters the picture and further complicates the situation. With murder as the only way to solve his romantic problems "Yuan Sing" finds that removing his obstacle does not resurrect the love of his wife and offers her freedom from harm and Oriental tortures if her sister will become his wife. At the last moment as the wife and sister are in the torture chamber, "Yuan" offers to chance his life with the lover of the sister in a drinking duel in which one of the drinks are poisoned. "Yuan" dies by his own hand.

Supported by Jane Baxter and Kay Walsh as the sister and wife, respectively, and Robert and Wallace Douglas as the naval officers, the picture has lost many of the elements that made it an enjoyable stage production, in its transposition to the screen.

Western

This fourth in the western series starring Tim Holt also includes Ray Whitley and Emmett Lynn in the cast, as did the others. Feminine interest is provided by Virginia Vale, with LeRoy Mason, Howard Hickman, Ernie Adams, Frank LaRue, Ray Bennett and Tom London also providing support.

Produced by Bert Gilroy and directed by Edward Killy, who worked together on the preceding films in the series, the story concerns efforts of a railroad representative to defraud local ranches out of their land. His technique includes the framing of murder charges against those willing to fight for their land. His plans are finally uncovered.

Action elements are plentiful and photography, by Harry Wild, takes advantage of the outdoor settings. Whitley sings a number composed in collaboration with Fred Rose.

City of Missing Girls

(Select Attractions)

Crime Melodrama

Here is another of the pictures that crop up to reveal to the public what happens to girls who leave their homes for fame and fortune in the big city. Produced by Max Alexander and George M. Merrick for distribution through Select Attractions, the production, like many of its predecessors, lacks the qualities of dialogue and direction to put it above run-of-the-mill exposes.

H. B. Warner returns to the screen as the police captain of the vice squad who, in aiding Assistant District Attorney John Archer, helps track down the disappearance of girls who believed they were headed for footlight success only to find they had become part of an underworld racket. Astrid Allwyn portrays the girl reporter "Nora Page" who poses as a show girl and helps local authorities to uncover the rackets as conducted by Philip Van Zandt.

Supporting the featured players are Sarah Padden, George Rosener, Katherine Crawford and Patricia Knox.

Ride On, Vaquero

The Cisco Kid in the Pink

Showmen whose customers have manifested liking for the adventures of the Cisco Kid, with or without the name of the character appearing in the title, are entitled to tell them that this picture is the pick of the series, from its start in years agone to now, unless all the journeyman journalists who scrutinize product in Hollywood made the same mistake when viewing the film at the studio. That could be, of course, the case, in fact occasionally is, but the unanimity displayed on this occasion is assurance beyond the common.

In this outing the character created by O. Henry and by Cesar Romero exercises his talents on the side of justice in pursuit of kidnappers whose operations have enraged the military, his captors of the moment. Agreeing with the soldiers that the art of abduction for ransom is no art at all and should be discouraged, the bandit invades the haunts of the villains who have been signing his name to their ransom-notes and, after a variety of adventures, brings them in, riding off into the sunset thereafter, perhaps on his way back to prison, perhaps on to other experiences.

It is to be mentioned to the feminine admirers of the O. Henry character and of Cesar Romero that his adventurings in this number include two sessions of dancing with Mary Beth Hughes, both of which support the syndicated-columnist's remarks about the actor's skill in the field of Terpsichore.

It is to be remarked to the men-folk that there is a plentitude of shooting, riding, deduction, pursuit, escape, turning of tables, all the things that constitute heroism in the field of melodrama.

And it may be said to the fathers and mothers that there is nothing in the picture to warrant them in keeping the kiddies at home on the day it's available at the neighborhood theatre.

Half a Century

Nostalgia for the days of trouping, and hope for the future of the profession were the keynotes at an event one day last week at which were gathered some of the great names which have served both stage and screen these many years.

The event was a luncheon staged by Universal, in behalf of George Barbier's 50th anniversary behind footlights and before spotlights. For on March 28th, 1891, Mr. Barbier, in Norwalk, Connecticut, made his debut as an actor. As he himself said, he played the juvenile lead, was a prop man, played the bass drum in the company band, distributed handbills and played the organ between acts, for $18.00 a week, which he never saw.

Among those gathered to honor the occasion were such troupers as May Robson, Cissie Loftus, Joseph Cawthorne, Frank Craven, C. Aubrey Smith, Hobart Bosworth, Grant Mitchell, Richard Carle, William Farnum. Chairman of the lunch was Ralph Morgan, former Screen Actors' Guild president, while Mischa Auer acted as master of ceremonies. Mr. Auer also appeared in "Sing Another Chorus," which picture provided Mr. Barbier's 805th role since that day in 1891. In the interim, he had appeared in such stage productions as "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" and "Front Page," such films as "The Big Pond," "The Smiling Lieutenant," "Old Man Rhythm," "The Adventures of Marco Polo."

Speaking at the luncheon, Miss Robson told the guest of honor and his friends that she had not missed an acting season since 1883, said that her 22 and a half years spent acting for Charles Frohman had been "without the scratch of a pen" whereas today "it takes all day to sign a contract for one picture." The proceedings were further brightened by an imitation of Fanny Brice's irrepressible "Baby Snooks," given by Cissie Loftus.

Admitting that Miss Robson "beat me by two years," Hobart Bosworth told of going on the stage in 1885, received tumultuous applause when he said that he and his confreres had "lived through the best years of the American stage." In similar vein were the remarks of William Farnum, who mentioned the great moment of his life as when Edwin Booth told him "I hear you are going to be a player," and gave him counsel about the profession.

Tribute to the late Al Levy, founder of the restaurant where the lunch was held, was paid by Grant Mitchell, while Frank Craven dismissed the guest of honor with a breezy "Barbier's still a boy."

Mr. Barbier himself told of his early days, when after preparing to attend Crozier's Theological Seminary at Chester, Pennsylvania, he had determined to go on the stage. What he had learned since then he gave as advice to the youngest generation, present as special guests in the persons of the Peters Brothers, Peter, 14, and Ronald, 11. The last act, and a glimpse of the future, was provided by the youthful pair, who did one of their song and dance specialties.

Vine Street was in agreement that it had been a happy celebration.

END OF THE SEASON

With the start, this week, of three pictures, Twentieth Century - Fox simultaneously began the new season's production and completed the old.

Ending the 1940-41 production season are "Sun Valley" and "Man with a Shovel". The former is a musical comedy with the Idaho resort as a background, and features Sonja Henie and John Payne as a romantic team.

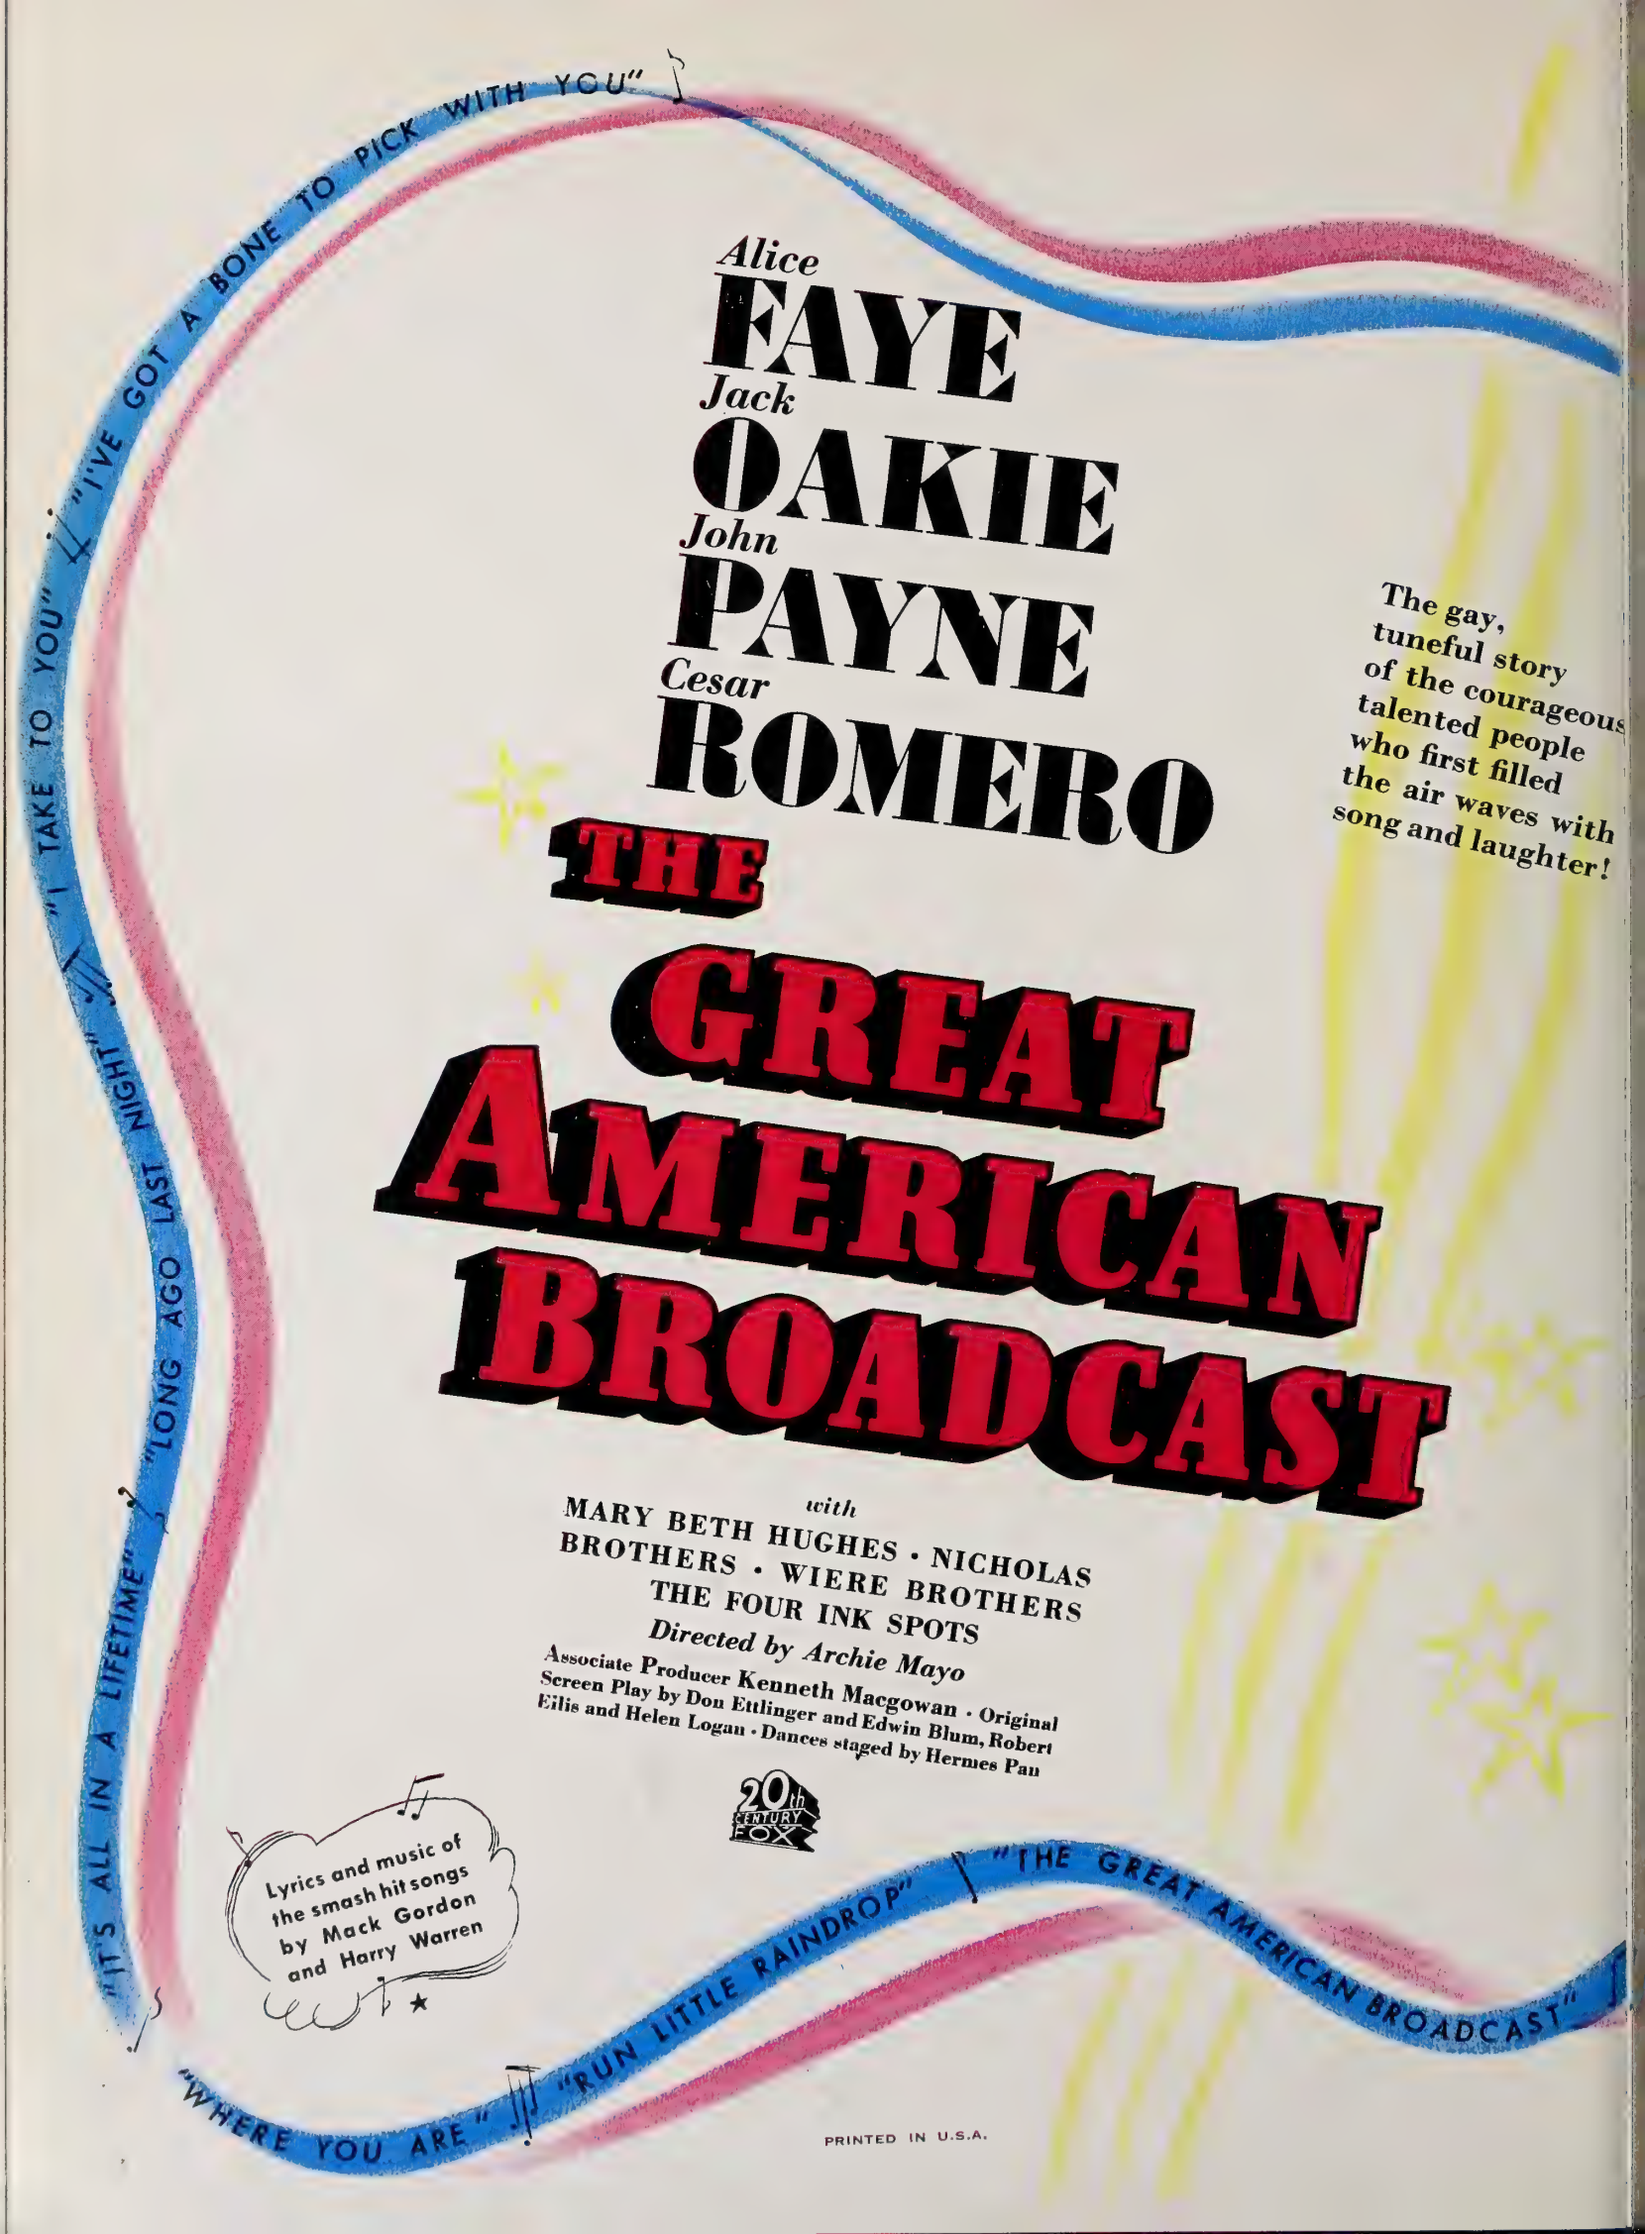
Casting on "Man with a Shovel" was to be completed this week, while the new season will be started with "Belle Starr", a technicolor film detailing the adventures of the famous American woman bandit.

Eight in April

Set to reach a production peak this month is Paramount, with eight films set to start, and another five carrying over from last month.

Started April 1st was "World Premiere," starring John Barrymore, Frances Farmer and Ricardo Cortez. The day after, work was begun on "Nothing but the Truth," Bob Hope-Paulette Goddard comedy. On April 7th, work is to begin on "Henry for President," third in the series of Henry Aldrich family pictures.

"Birth of the Blues," starring Bing Crosby, with Mary Martin, Carolyn Lee, Rochester and Jack Teagarden's band, will start on the 14th. "Among the Living," a horror picture, with Albert Dekker, will be launched April 21st, and Preston Sturges' new picture, "Sullivan's Travels," on the 28th.



Other Paramount releases starting this month include Harry Sherman's "Parson of Panamint," and the William Pine-William Thomas production, "Forced Landing," starring Richard Arlen and Eva Gabor.

William LeBaron, recently signed Twentieth Century-Fox producer, whose first picture, "Caribbean Cruise," will soon go before the cameras, has been signed to produce two additional films for the company. The films are "Miss Pilgrim's Progress" and "A Straight Left," both going into production during the summer.

HOLLYWOOD STUDIOS, LABOR ARGUE OVER $1,000,000 IN BACK WAGES

Usual Positions Reversed as Unions Claim Duties "Physical", Producers "Creative"; Briefs to Be Filed in 3 Weeks

With $1,000,000 in back wages the stake, Hollywood last week was treated to the unusual sight of unions deprecating their own members and studios emphasizing the workers' importance, a departure from the usual in employe-employer relations in which unions demand wage increases because of the irreplacibility of their members.

Site of the rare proceedings was Room 226 of the Los Angeles Federal Building; occasion was U. S. Government hearings of protests on the classification of various groups of workers under Wages and Hours Act. The hearings began Wednesday, March 25th, ended Friday, March 28th.

Result was the taking under advisement of both producer and union pleas as to the exemption or non-exemption of various classifications of workers, and the granting of three weeks' time to both sides to file written briefs supporting their contentions as to the status of the groups under question.

Duties Questioned

The unions contended their members did routine, physical work which required no artistic or creative ability and therefore should be placed under the provisions of the Wages and Hours act; the producers said the workers in question were professional or administrative types, and that they should not be included in the scope of the federal legislation.

On the witness stand before Merle D. Vincent, chief of the Hearings and Exemptions Branch of the Wage and Hour Division, U. S. Department of Labor, were studio executives and union representatives, who explained in turn the various duties of the classifications of workers whose eligibility under the Wages-Hours Act was questioned in the preliminary survey of the Motion Picture Industry turned in by E. M. Cocking, chief analyst of the division.

The $1,000,000 in back wages claimed by the various unions was overtime due workers whose employment falls in the categories and whose hours of weekly employment are limited by the act.

Mr. Cocking reported there were 545 classes of positions in the film industry, with 40 additional classes in the animated cartoon field. Forty-three unions and guilds were contacted in the preliminary survey he made, he reported. Two hundred and ninety-nine classes have been recommended for exemption, and 246 classes, for non-exemption, exclusive, of course, of the animated cartoon group. Under recommended exemptions are an estimated 4,191 employes, and in non-exempt categories are 14,260, exclusive of the cartoon groupings.

Also at stake are the contractual advantages over and above the advantages of the Wage-Hour Act obtained by the unions in years of negotiations for bargaining contracts with the producers. Such items include a 30-hour week, with time and a half for overtime, for some crafts; greatly increased pay for distant location work, free transportation and "keep" for location workers, and the like.

In short, the unions are trying to gain new advantages obtainable under the Wages-Hours Act, while holding on to the concessions gained through collective bargaining since 1926 and 1928, when the first closed shop contracts with the studios were signed.

Twenty-nine categories of workers in feature production and two in the cartoon field are being disputed by union and producer representatives as to exemption and non-exemption under the Act. Both sides were in complete accord on the classifications of the other groups of workers, Mr. Cocking reported.

The International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and Moving Picture Machine Operators, which forced the producers several weeks ago to restore the former status of its members and refrain from putting into effect provisions of the Wages-Hours Act which would be detrimental to existing relations, was represented by Joseph Padway, famed labor attorney high on the councils of the American Federation of Labor.

Eighteen Classes Disputed

The IATSE crafts in dispute included second, assistant and still cameramen; first, second and standby grips; gaffers, assistant gaffers and standby electricians; process projectionists; first and second company prop men; first, second and third class soundmen; fitters; first and second class costumers.

The producers contention, evolved mainly through Fred Pelton, producers' labor contact officer, was to the general effect that these groups of workers were administrative, professional or having artistic or creative ability. The Unions' general testimony was that their work was routine, physical and requiring no mental effort.

The only agreement on classifications reached at the hearing was the grouping of studio nurses as professional workers. The nurses were represented by Registered Nurses, first Aid Men and Women's Union, Local 22173, represented by Fred L. Vincent, president, who, at the conclusion of the hearings Friday, announced that a three week period would be given to permit attorneys and representatives of both sides to file briefs supporting their respective stands.

First to take the stand was Edward M. Gilbert, Screen Set Designers president, who argued against Mr. Pelton's contention that designers and assistants were neither executive nor administrative. David S. Garber, Universal studio operations manager, and former set designer and unit art director, testified otherwise.

Screen Cartoonists Guild Local 852, now affiliated with the Painters' Brotherhood, through William Littlejohn, president, and George Bodle, attorney, sought to restrain the classification of assistant cartoon animators and effects assistant cartoon animators. Herbert L. Lamb, Walt Disney production manager, was the opposing witness.

Another moot point was the status of second assisant directors, who, according to the producers, were administrative assistants. J. P. McGowan, executive secretary of both the Screen Directors Guild and Unit Managers Guild, contended they worked under the supervision of first assistant directors, and Fred S. Meyer, of 20th Century-Fox, upheld the studios' stand that the workers in this group were administrative.

Wayne R. Hackett, attorney, appeared for Leonard S. Janofsky, attorney for the Script Clerks Guild, and resisted attempts of producers to classify these workers as "minor administrative" employes.

Still cameramen perform only routine physical, mechanical work, Herbert Aller, business representative of the IATSE Studio Photographers Local 659, testified. Second cameramen, also, do 100 per cent physical work and their labors do not require any mental or creative ability, he said, in giving testimony.

Daniel B. Clark, C. Roy Hunter and John Arnold, camera department heads at 20th Century-Fox, Paramount and M-G-M respectively, testified otherwise.

Frances Perkins Attends

The hearing was attended for a short time by Frances Perkins, secretary of labor, who addressed the hearing upon her introduction by Examiner Vincent and complimented both union and producer representatives on the progress being made in the hearing.

"I am not here on this case," she said, in speaking of her trip to Southern California defense industries. "I merely 'happened to be passing by' and it is a real pleasure to watch the workings of democracy in such a proceeding as this, when labor and capital representatives can get together and without acrimony, before a fair and impartial judge, decide matters of importance."

Others on the stand included:

Albert Wilson, Warners prop department head; Thomas Little, 20th Century-Fox property department chief; Robert Bradford, "prop" man at Columbia; B. C. DuVall, business representative Prop Men's Local 40, IATSE; Douglas Shearer, M-G-M sound department head; Harold V. Smith, sound men's local 695 IATSE; John Aalberg, RKO sound department head; Steve Newman, international IATSE representative; Aubrey Blair, American Federation of Labor organizer for Hollywood.

HOMEWORK FOR TECHNICIANS

In the heat of controversy over sound technicians' classifications, Douglas Shearer, MGM sound department head, held the stand before Merle D. Vincent, examiner for the Wage-Hour Division of the U. S. Department of Labor. Irked by Mr. Shearer's testimony, Joseph Padway, representing the IATSE, demanded:

"Just how much brass polishing is performed by Class II sound men."

Mr. Shearer replied, calmly:

"I don't know. I never calibrated it."

Public Beats Triples

The 25 neighborhood houses of Wehrenberg-Kaiman Theatres, in St. Louis, will no longer play four-hour quadruple feature programs, Fred Wehrenberg, president of the area's MPTOA, decided this week. Reasons given were the unpopularity of the programs and the campaign by the city's Better Films Council for support among the state's women's clubs for its anti-triples bill introduced last week in the state Senate.

The four-hour programs in the Wehrenberg circuit began three weeks ago, in answer to Fanchon and Marco's triple features in some of its neighborhood houses.

Harry C. Arthur, Jr., general manager of the F. and M. circuit, now says he favors the Council's bill, but also wants giveaways eliminated.

IN BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN

Life of Penn

A Sovereign of Britain referring to a Churchill as a fighter, and a Lord Halifax arguing in favour of certain charters for the U.S.A.: these are but two topical parallels from "Penn of Pennsylvania," a screen story based on the life of the famous Quaker, now being produced at Elstree by British National, with Richard Vernon, young producer of the classic "Gaslight," in charge, and another young man, Lance Comfort, directing.

The film is an ambitious one, the idea of which was born in the mind of Vernon on hearing President Roosevelt's inaugural radio radio address to the U.S. The address, in fact, opens the film which switches back to London in the seventeenth century, and follows the life of the peaceloving idealist who is buried in the Chilterns of Britain in the secluded and modest Meeting House graveyard of Jordans.

Vernon sees similarity in ideas between Penn and Roosevelt, believes they are as true today as they were in the days of the Quaker. The scene of the film veers between Britain and America. Clifford Evans is playing Penn, with Deborah Kerr, George Parrish's discovery, as his wife. Anatol Grunwald, responsible for the scripts of "Major Barbara," "French Without Tears" and "Quiet Wedding" has done the screenplay. Anglo American will release.

Another major figure in British history—Pitt the Younger—is to be the subject of a British film—this time a 20th Century production, under Francis ("Bob") Harley's aegis. Robert Donat will almost certainly have the title role. The film will follow "Spitfire," preparations for which are in an advanced stage.

Meanwhile that other historical personality, Disraeli, is to be seen soon on British screens when Warner Brothers' Teddington production "The Prime Minister" is released.

Max Milder declares his intention of carrying on at Teddington with large scale films for world release. Says the Warner chief:

"We plan to follow "Atlantic Ferry" with a series of major pictures, each one of which will be selected from the finest stories, directed by the finest directors, and with a cast drawn from the cream of British actors and actresses."

Rats at five shillings a head were commissioned this week by John Argyle who is producing a film for Pathe at Welwyn, "This Man Is Dangerous." The rats had escaped from a set representing the hold of a ship, and Argyle offered the five "bob" for every one of the dozen which had got away. Fortunately the mishap did not result in any loss of time and the picture goes on to schedule.

Meanwhile, at the film studios in Denham, continuity of production is the policy of RKO-Radio producer William Sistrom who is currently putting finishing touches to "Dangerous Moonlight" there. The final settings represent a British Air Command Headquarters during the War. The thriller out of the way, Sistrom plans to start work at once on yet another Saint subject "Here Comes the Tiger."

"Yellow Caesar" is the title finally chosen by Cavalcanti for his half-hour biography of Il Duce Benito Mussolini which biography he has been making at the Ealing Studios. The title supersedes the provisional "Top Wop." The film is greatly inspired by Prime Minister Churchill's own reactions to Mussolini whom he has already described as "the Italian Quisling."

Cavalcanti selected the title from a passage in the film's commentary relating to Italy's entry into the war when France's capitulation was in sight: "Yellow Caesar declared war when he thought that peace was around the corner. He then rushed in to stab the wounded and steal from the dead." The commentary has been written and spoken by Michael Frank.

No time is to be lost in showing the picture to the public, and it will be released in Britain shortly.

BRITISH INDUSTRY BLAMES GOVERNMENT

British exhibitors placed responsibility for curtailment of the home film industry squarely on the government this week and stated that more British films would be the only solution to current trade difficulties. The Cinematograph Exhibitors Association and the Kinematograph Renters Society jointly informed the Board of Trade in answer to a memorandum that government release of personnel in services, and provision of studio space and technical facilities alone provided the solution, not revised trade practices. Sydney K. Lewis, CEA president, said he was sure American companies were anxious to use frozen monies to make British films, which is now impracticable. He expressed belief that only 50 per cent of British films in past three years were of first feature quality. KRS, Gaumont, and Associated British Corp. officials supported Mr. Lewis. CEA and KRS will send identical replies to the Board of Trade memo.

Air Documentary

One of the most ambitious war subjects essayed by a British production organization is likely to be Ealing Studios' "Ships With Wings," a dramatic but documentary picture about the Fleet Air Arm. The film, which will have a personal story as its foundation, will dramatize the work of Britain's naval airmen, and is to be made with complete official co-operation. Already Cameraman Roy Kellino has sailed 17,000 miles—mostly on the "Ark Royal," photographing material for the film.

More than 1,000 still photos have been collected by associate producer Sergei Nolbandov. They include an unique set of pictures of bomb damage to enemy vessels taken from the air.

Aircraft of Allied and enemy types will be used in the film, some of the latter, of course, being reconstructed in the Studio.

Among the Fleet Air Arm activities and incidentals which are to be recreated in the film are 'plane formations, smoke screens, aerial battles, landscapes, 'planes in relation to ground and other objects, aerial manouvering, land and naval bombing, types of bombs, Italian and German ships of all classes.

Particularly loving care has been manifest by the art department of the Warner Studios at Teddington in their recreation for "Atlantic Ferry," of the famous early steamship "Brittania," which is the scene of much of the drama and a material member of the cast of the film. The engine is actually driven by electricity and as the wheels turn, stokers are seen shovelling coal into the blazing fire.

One of the highlights of "Atlantic Ferry," is a Boston ballroom sequence, following the steamship Britannia's arrival at Boston after her record-breaking maiden voyage. The Ball, preceded by a banquet, is given by the Boston people in honour of Samuel Cunard, played by Hartley Power.

Michael Redgrave, Valerie Hobson, Margaretta Scott, Hartley Power, Edmund Willard and Bessie Love are among the guests.

As foreshadowed in these columns some weeks back, David Niven, now a Captain in the British Army, is to play the lead in a British film—Paul Soskin's epic of Fleet Street and its role in the War. Niven has been released at his request from his military duties, and will start work on the film in April.

Samuel Goldwyn has released Niven from his Hollywood contract for this one film which will have the benediction and practical aid of the Ministry of Information. "Soldiers of Fleet Street" was written by Frank Owen, Editor of London's "Evening Standard" and one of British journalism's most trenchant personalities.

BRITISH TRADE DEBATES QUESTION OF NATIONALISATION OF INDUSTRY

Cine Technicians' Association Gets Group Report Urging State Control of All Branches; Press Takes Up Discussion

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

The issue of nationalisation of the British film industry, the discussion of which in the trade press has aroused bitted debate, will be acted upon officially for the first time by an organized branch of the industry next Sunday when the Association of Cine Technicians will consider an official memorandum pressing for nationalisation.

The memorandum, drawn up by a committee of the Association, exhaustively examines the national industrial situation with special regard to American competition. It criticizes the present Quota regulations but recommends imposition of an ad valorem duty on film imports plus nationalisation of the industry in Britain. The report is understood to ask the Association to press for state production of features and shorts, state distribution if necessitated by competition, state control of studios and laboratories, a Government credit corporation, standard labour conditions and democratic representation.

Industry Opposes Changes in Draft

With zero hour for the reservation of studio technicians fast approaching, and the industry stuffing its ears against the threatened sound of its death knell, friends have appeared, ready to help its protection and plead for it in powerful places. In Press and Parliament the plea has been made for a reprieve. Ministers of the Government itself have promised to do their bit to prevent the ultimate disaster foreshadowed if Ernest Bevin's proposals are applied literally.

It would not seem improbable that the Minister of Information, Mr. Duff Cooper, and Captain Oliver Lyttleton, President of the Board of Trade, will use their influence to save the industry by saving its technicians from being called up. The Treasury with a canny eye on the financial significance of the British film as an export, is believed sympathetic to the trade's case. Members of the House of Commons, major figures of Fleet Street, have voiced forcibly and persuasively the case against Mr. Bevin—not without acknowledging that he has a difficult and complex task to perform.

Captain Lyttleton, whose department, the Board of Trade, includes among its functions the protection of the industry, which has been working to increase the production of British films, which has even promulgated a Films Commission to implement that purpose further, has, in the Commons declared how well aware his Department is of the difficulties which the industry is likely to meet in maintaining a reasonable level of production, has formally promised that he will give the matter his most earnest attention and will make the strongest representations on the industry's behalf to the Minister of Labour.

Mr. Duff Cooper for his part—and he has previously paid tribute to the role of the industry in the wartime scheme of things by dubbing it "the fourth arm"—has, too, promised his full support in pressing the Minister of Labour to maintain the technicians' reservations at their present degree. Other members of the Government are known to have realized the urgency of the situation and its illogic, to have already used their weight in persuading a reprieve.

As this is written the feeling exists in industry circles all this may portend an eleventh hour realization on the part of the Government that there may, after all, be a case against the dereservations, certainly portends that any action which will be taken will be preceded by serious examination of the position.

A great deal of the current persuasion is woven around the economic theory that the film as an export commodity is of incalculable value in attracting foreign currency to Britain. Treasury executives are known to be of the opinion that it possesses unique and valuable qualities in this regard.

Export commodities are urgently called for by the Government which has already launched an export drive with the collaboration of various industries. The film industry is not excluded. Compared to the sum total of dollars likely to be involved in any export process built around British films the total manpower available to the Forces by the dereservation of studio technicians is almost negligible. By the consistent export of British films to the U. S. and other foreign markets a constant flow of dollars and foreign currency—in which that of the South American territories plays no negligible role—is assured. It can be measured in millions of dollars at the lowest estimate. Yet the total of men likely to be released for military service if the Bevin proposals are materialized is not likely to exceed 1100.

Since the war some 50 high grade feature films have been made in Britain, gross earnings of which at home are measured at a minimum of 10,000,000 dollars. Quite apart from the obvious consideration that revenues not accruing to these would have gone to foreign interests, the foreign market income on them is not to be sneezed at, especially at a time when every dollar to the British exchequer is—to us a British colloquialism—"money for jam".

As a material export the film occupies next to no shipping space, despite its elastic earning capacity. If lost by enemy action it can be replaced automatically at the cost of a lavender print. How much might be lost in the event of a wipeout of the industry's manpower is to be calculated, not only in terms of voluntary films, but no less in terms of films made for world market distribution with the frozen dollars of the American majors.

Normally some 10,000 are employed in the whole British Studio field. War has reduced this figure to 1157, covering the five major studios. Of these 407 are aged over 40. 208 are under 30. Thus the raising of the age of reservation to 35 and its eventual removal completely would involve 690 men. Studio and documentary workers would not raise the figure about 1100—an infinitesimal figure compared to the total manpower involved.

Counter attack on the part of the industry's champions may take the form of a demand that the film business be placed in the "essential" category.

Trade Board Asks For More Screen Time

Currently with the pother over the new reservation schedules has come the Board of Trade's suggestion to renters and exhibitors that they explore the possibility of a complete overhaul of the trading practices applying to British films. Following the CEA suggestion that the current exhibitors' quota be reduced, the Board of Trade has asked both CEA and KRS to consider the possibilities of extending the screen time devoted to British pictures by removing bars, by abolishing the double feature programme, and by replacing bi-weekly by once weekly changes.

Both the exhibitor and distributor groups have considered the question. Goodwill exists on both sides and a joint statement, or at best a harmonious statement of views is likely. Though it is considered in certain distributor circles to be in the main an exhibitor problem the renters are agreeable to do their best to arrive at a satisfactory formula, not only because they would welcome any increased income which may be waiting exploration, but no less because there is an increasing feeling abroad that it will be better to take the Government lead, than to provoke direct interference and control by blank refusal.

Against the theory that such reforms would increase the amount of screen time devoted to British films, there is the widespread fear that there are but few films made in Britain which would merit extended showings or even rate as first features, that any of the more commercial films will still remain the commercial privilege of the circuits. Add to this the producer fears that the more such formulas are explored the less will be the incentive to produce more British films, and it will be clear that the problem is nothing if not complex.

In a list of British Ministry of Information short subjects reviewed in January 25th issue of Motion Picture Herald the film "Raising Sailors" was incorrectly attributed to British Movietonews. It was produced by Pathe Pictures, Ltd.

"Ghost Train," reviewed in the March 22nd issue, now has a General Audience classification.

NEW REGULATIONS EFFECTIVE AT ONCE

The new schedules of reserved occupations begin to operate as from April 1st. They divide industries into protected and unprotected. The entertainment industry is in the latter category.

Men who are not called up, under the new scheme will be concentrated as far as possible in protected work. Projectionists who are reserved at present at age 25 will only be reserved at 35 and over. In the studios, at present, producers, directors, cameramen, cutters, scenarists, sound engineers, commentators, librarians, etc., are reserved at 30 and over. On April 1st most of these grades will be reserved at 35. From an elastic date varying probably between June and July, reservation will be removed from them altogether, with certain rare and exclusive exceptions. Plasterers, painters, carpenters, and electricians who are reserved at present on a craft basis at 30 will be reserved at 35.

AAA APPOINTS 330 MORE 'JUDGES' TO RULE ON ARBITRATION CASES

New Appointments Bring 31 District Panels Over Minimum of 10 Names; Total of 809 Men Named So Far

The American Arbitration Association on Thursday announced the names of 330 additional "judges" to serve as arbitrators of cases brought by exhibitors against the "Big 5" in the system of arbitrating certain trade practice disputes established by the consent decree. Every one of the panels in the 31 key cities now has more than the required minimum of 10 arbitrators available to decide complaints according to the decree and in most cities enough arbiters have been selected to handle any possible rush of exhibitor complaints. (The story of the first two months of arbitration is told on pages 17, 18 and 27.)

A total of 809 motion picture arbitrators, all men who are said to have had no connection whatsoever with the idustry, as required by the decree, have been selected to date. Another 200 will be named later. The first list of 433 names was made public in the February 22nd issue of MOTION PICTURE HERALD with initial men named for 27 of the 31 tribunals. In the March 1st issue of the HERALD 25 men for two other cities were announced. Ten men for each of the other two arbitration "key cities" were named in the next two weeks.

For the New York panel, the largest in the country, 64 persons have been selected. Washington now has the second largest group with 58 arbiters named. Forty-three men were named for Washington in the list made public this week. Indianapolis and St. Louis had the smallest number of additional arbitrators selected in the supplementary list, with two men being chosen for each city.

Additional arbitrators for all 31 local panels follow:

ALBANY

(Arbitration district — central New York state.)

HENRY M. ANDERSON, trustee, City & County Savings Bank, retired business man, Glenmont, N. Y.
JOHN J. BRADY, JR., lawyer, 75 State St.
ALFRED I. SCHIMPF, banker; National Commercial Bank & Trust Co., 60 State St.
JUDGE H. MYRON LEWIS, lawyer; Associate City Judge of Utica, 33 Winston Building, 230 Genesee St.
ERNEST V. HOIT, president, E. V. Hoit Corporation, 111 Central Ave.
SPORBORG, EUGENE A., real estate broker, 78 State St.

ATLANTA

(Arbitration district includes Florida, Georgia, Alabama and most of Tennessee.)

W. NEAL BAIRD, lawyer, 1040 Hurt Building.
E. L. BOOTH, credit manager; Atlanta Milling Company, 196 Butler St. SE.
PROF. J. L. CAMPBELL, Professor of statistics, Emory University, Ga.
PROF. L. E. CAMPBELL, Professor of accounting, Emory University Business School.
T. ELBERT CLEMMONS, International Business Machines Corporation, branch manager.
LEWIS F. GORDON, SR., vice-president; Citizens & Southern National Bank, Marietta and Broad Sts.
GRANGER HANSELL, lawyer, 511 Trust Co. of Ga. Building.
BRYON P. HARRIS, CPA; Arthur F. Morton & Co., 1130 Candler Building.
A. W. HEDEN, district manager; Sinclair Refining Company, P. O. Box 1710.
MILLS B. LANE, JR., 1st vice-president; Citizens & Southern National Bank.

MOST ARBITRATORS ARE LAWYERS

More lawyers than any other single class were named in the second general list of arbitrators for the 31 local motion picture tribunals, as was the case when the first group was announced six weeks ago. Educators and bankers appeared next most frequently in the panel lists. Among those named who are not lawyers were:

William Randolph Hearst, Jr., New York Journal American;

W. A. Patterson, president of the United Air Lines;

Judge Stanley Matthews, Court of Appeals of Appellate District of Ohio;

A. De Bernardi, Jr., drama editor, Denver Post;

John Thornberry, director of Boys Club of Kansas City;

Col. Henry Barrett Chamberlain, director of Chicago Crime Commission.

CARL H. LEWIS, vice-president; Citizens & Southern National Bank.
HARRY S. McCOWEN, lawyer, 1111 Hurt Building.
BASTER N. MADDOX, vice-president; trust officer; First National Bank of Atlanta.
PROF. HAROLD G. MURPHY, Professor of Marketing, Emory University Business School.
F. J. O'GARA, vice-president; Davison-Paxon, 4175 Club Drive.
W. R. OSBORN, CPA; Osborn & Stribling, William-Oliver Building.
THOMAS HOWELL SCOTT, lawyer, 304 Grant Building.
HARRY SOMMERS, president, Harry Sommers, Inc., motor cars, 446 Spring St.
W. EUGENE HARRINGTON, vice president; insurance; Spartin, Harrington & Thomas, Inc., Rhodes Bldg., 72 Marietta St., N.W.
PARKER G. SANFORD, sales manager, Retail Credit Company, 90 Fairlee St.

BOSTON

(Arbitration district includes Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Rhode Island.)

PROFESSOR RAYMOND G. BALDES, lawyer, Boston University Law School.

ALUMINUM RESERVE COLLECTION PLANNED

James Van Zandt, connected with show business in Indianapolis for many years, has suggested to Congressman Louis Ludlow a plan for nationwide collection of aluminum if defense needs should call for a huge supply of the metal. One suggestion is for the job to be done through neighborhood and small city motion picture theatres, which would accept bits of the metal for child admissions.

"In many places I have seen the theatre managers admit children who bring groceries or any kind of canned goods," Mr. Van Zandt said. "These groceries were distributed to the needy. We have tons and tons of aluminum in our cellars, back yards and garages, considered trash, but worth plenty to our government provided it can be melted down and used again."

Fox West Coast Plans Theatres

Construction of three motion picture theatres in northern California at a cost of approximately $400,000 has been authorized by Fox West Coast Theatres, in line with its current building program. Theatres costing $150,000 each will be built in Richmond and Vallejo, across the bay from San Francisco.

Plans also call for the erection of a $100,000 theatre in San Luis Obispo.

Peerless Promotes Schwartz

Murray Schwartz, salesman of the Peerless exchange in Philadelphia, has been promoted to branch manager of the office under supervision of Bob Savini, of New York, filling the post recently vacated by William J. Heenan, who resigned to join Paramount in Philadelphia as a salesman.

Bioff Hearing Postponed

In Los Angeles Monday George Breslin and Michael Luddy, attorney for William Bioff, IATSE leader charged by the Government with income tax evasion, filed a motion for a bill of particulars. The hearing was postponed to April 21.

WM. FOX PLEADS GUILTY TO BRIBING U. S. JUDGE

Former Film Executive to Testify Against Federal Judge Accused of Fixing Decisions

The long, long trail of destiny which took William Fox up from a New York arcade and nickelodeon to dominant position, power and fortune in the motion picture brought him Friday of last week to bar in Philadelphia confessing to indictment for bribery of a federal judge and conspiracy to obstruct justice, defraud the United States.

The scene was the high ceilinged, windowless, air conditioned, walnut panelled fluorescent lighted courtroom presided over by white-haired, firm, stern Judge Guy K. Bard —a court notably preferred by the Government in such cases.

This case, the second in the history of the United States involving the honor of the federal bench, is the most spectacular to come to court in the cubical New Deal moderne Federal Building built in Chestnut street by Matt McCloskey, so newly that the stone carvers are still at work on the facade.

Along with William Fox the indictment included his former attorney, Morgan S. Kaufman, charged with being a go-between and J. Warren Davis, former U. S. Circuit judge in Philadelphia.

The end is not yet. There is to be a trial, presumably it is said in Philadelphia, with William Fox as a witness for the Government. Also the inquiries pertaining to other persons, all of whom may not yet have been named, continue.

Bribery Charged

Specifically, the Grand Jury charged that Judge Davis accepted in 1936 a $12,500 bribe from Mr. Fox through Mr. Kaufman to rule in favor of Mr. Fox in five appealed cases. Mr. Fox was present when the indictment was handed to the court, and in a surprise move, pleaded guilty to the conspiracy. And although a voluntary bankrupt, he peeled off five $1,000 bills from a fat bankroll and posted bail.

Judge Davis appeared later in the day and also posted the $5,000 bail set by Judge Bard. Mr. Kaufman surrendered on Saturday, also posting a $5,000 bond. He is a Scranton, Pa., attorney and former Federal bankruptcy referee for the Middle Pennsylvania District.

All would be liable, upon conviction, to two-year prison terms and fines of $10,000 each. The three defendants are all to appear before Judge Bard on April 14. Judge Davis and Mr. Kaufman will be arraigned then, and Mr. Fox, who once was reputed to be worth $20,000,000 in cold cash, will be sentenced. The former movie executive's plea of guilty and the fact that he testified voluntarily before the Federal Grand Jury led court observers to believe he would be a Government witness in the coming trial of his co-defendants. No trial date will be set, it was said, until after the arraignment.

That another Federal judge, as yet unnamed, will also come under investigation was indicated by Hugh A. Fulton, special deputy attorney general, who left for Washington to confer with U. S. Attorney General Robert H. Jackson. He said the Federal Grand Jury would reconvene to delve further into the official conduct of Judge Davis.

The case grew out of a voluntary petition by Mr. Fox for bankruptcy and a suit by his creditors to take over $6,000,000 in assets held by the Fox family trust, the All-Continent Corp. The indictment charged that Judge Davis agreed to induce Judge Joseph Buffington "to sign his name to majority opinions" in Fox cases before the Third U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Judge Buffington was senior member of the court. Now 84 and retired, he has appeared before the Grand Jury. Judge Davis retired last year in a cloud of insinuations at the age of 74, at that time threatening to sue several Philadelphia newspapers for libel.

The indictment said the conspiracy began about January 1, 1935. It charged that in July, 1936, Mr. Kaufman received $15,000 from Mr. Fox; that "in July or August" Mr. Kaufman turned over to Judge Davis an unspecified sum of money. The indictment added: "And further in pursuance of said conspiracy . . . in and during or about the months of August through December (1936) . . . Davis did take and receive from the defendant, William Fox, the sum of $12,500."

More Charges

The indictment also charged that, at Judge Davis' request, Mr. Kaufman, on November 14, 1935, loaned $10,000 to Charles Lee Stokley, relative of Judge Davis; that Judge Davis supervised the disposition of the money and that no repayment of the principal ever was made. The indictment named hotel and other conferences "in pursuance of said conspiracy"—the most recent between Judge Davis and Mr. Fox on January 17, this year, in the Governor Clinton Hotel, New York city. That was one day before the March Grand Jury began its investigation that led to the indictment.

Five times in the hearing on the bankruptcy petition, Judge J. Boyd Avis, in U. S. District Court in Camden, N. J., ruled against Fox and his interests. And as often, the Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia, with Judge Davis sitting each time, overruled the lower court.

It was disclosed that the Davis-Fox case developed from investigations made during the Manton case—Martin T. Manton the only other United States Judge in history who was criminally prosecuted. According to Mr. Fulton, special deputy attorney general, the Manton case uncovered a great deal of evidence on which the Philadelphia indictment is based.

Martin W. Littleton, of New York city, will be counsel for Mr. Fox. For the last 11 years, much of the story of the fabulous rise and equally fabulous fall of William Fox as a movie magnate and financier has been told in the interminable hearings involving the All-Continent Corp. This was one of no fewer than 28 corporations formed by Mr. Fox and his wife, Eva, who was president of 14. Creditors claiming $55,000,000 repeatedly tried to prove All-Continental Corp. was formed in 1930 to transfer assets out of their reach. Mr. Fox always maintained that he put $6,900,000 into the company and made it an irrevocable trust for his wife and two daughters, the three being the only officers, when he was "abundantly solvent."

Born in Hungary on New Year's Day 62 years ago, Mr. Fox built up a Brooklyn nickelodeon into movie and exhibition enterprises rated at $300,000,000 in 1929. A year following the stock market crash of 1929, he sold controlling interests in Fox Films Corp. and Fox Theatre Corp. In 1936, he told an Atlantic City bankruptcy court he was down to his last $100—and he gave that to a lawyer.

LeBaron Film Set

William LeBaron's first production at Twentieth Century-Fox will be "Caribbean Cruise," in color, starring Carmen Miranda and Betty Grable.

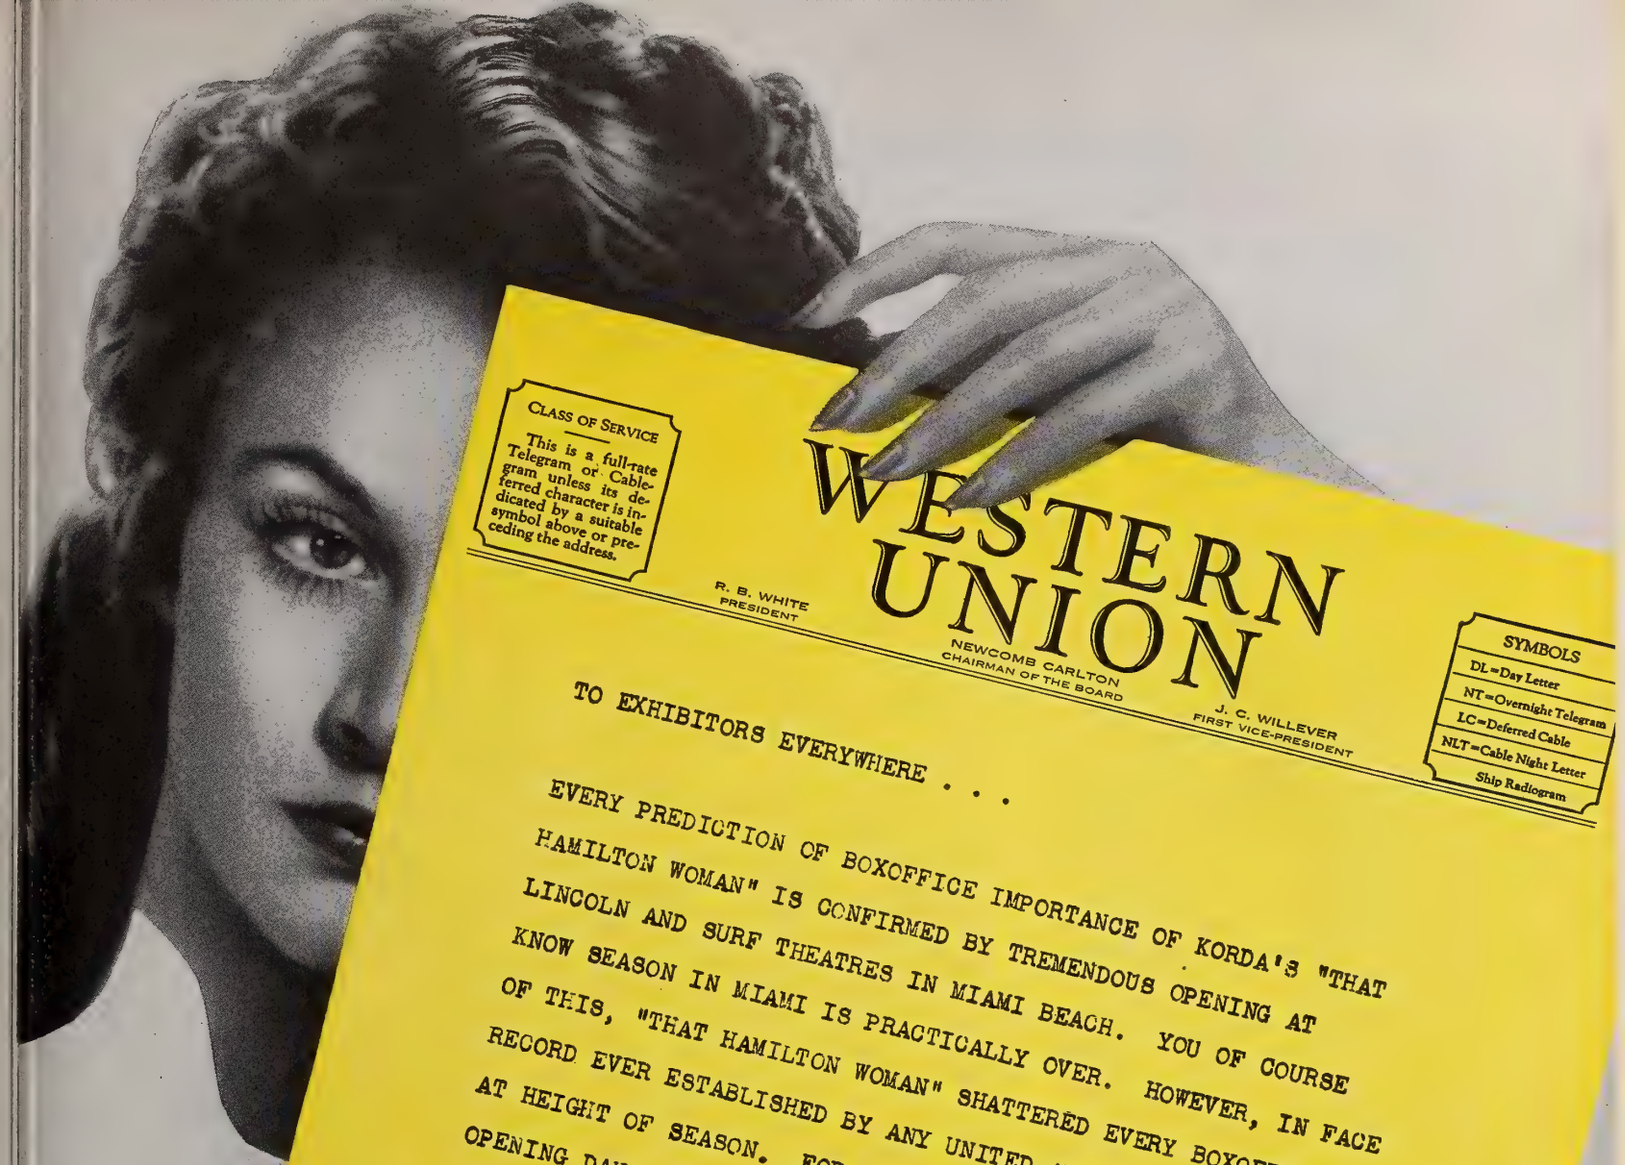
National Decency Legion Classifies Ten Pictures

Of the ten motion pictures classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week three were approved for general patronage, five for adult patronage and two were classified as objectionable in part. The films and their classifications follow:



Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "The Great Swindle," "Ride On Vaquero" and "Shadows on the Stairs." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "The Bad Man," "The Man Who Lost Himself," "Repent at Leisure," "That Hamilton Woman" and "Topper Returns." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "Chinese Den" and "I Wanted Wings."

Special MGM Screening

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will hold a special trade showing of the picture "Men of Boys Town," starring Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney, at the Rialto theatre in Lewistown, Pa., on Sunday, April 6th. The screening is planned for exhibitors east of Altoona, Pa., and west of Harrisburg, embracing both the Philadelphia and Pittsburgh exchange territories. Arrangements for the screening were made by Paul O. Klingler, manager of the Rialto, and Charles Baron, of the MGM exploitation department in Pittsburgh.

Long Distance Buying

British distribution of 24 Hollywood pictures in 1941-42 was purchased, Monday, in New York, from O. H. Briggs' Producers Releasing Corporation, by William J. Gell, of Pathe Pictures, Ltd., of London. In exercising an option, Mr. Gell also acquired PRC's complete feature program for the following five years, up to and including the season 1946-47, for the United Kingdom.

FILMS AND DEFENSE ARE FIRST IN HAYS REPORT

Stresses Industry Cooperation with Government in "Crisis"; Sees Self-Regulation Triumph

The obligations and opportunities confronting the motion picture as a vital element in the national defense effort keynoted the annual report of Will H. Hays, president, to the directors of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America at their annual meeting in New York on Monday.

Mr. Hays reviewed the film's position as an agent of morale and recreation during the current emergency and stressed industry leadership in cooperating with defense planning, and the move for Pan-American solidarity. The report listed the usual activities of the MPPDA and subsidiaries, noted an increase in the calibre of films and denied charges of propaganda and bias in the industry. Sharp criticism of the TNEC report was expressed in the conclusion, declaring the monopoly committee exercised none of the "intelligent and sympathetic study" which it recommended for the industry.

Consent decree operation, the loss of foreign markets and the status of domestic business were also analyzed by Mr. Hays.

Cites "Supreme Crisis"

The industry's 1940 record was written in a "period of supreme crisis" in world history, Mr. Hays noted, with many economies forced on picture makers through the loss of foreign markets, and radical changes impending in domestic distribution and sales methods. In 1939-40 American film activity ceased in 14 countries; Belgium, Danzig, Denmark, Esthonia, occupied France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Japan, Latvia, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Norway and Poland. In 13 countries film business has almost ceased: Bulgaria, China, Egypt, Finland, unoccupied France and French Colonies, Greece, Hungary, Rumania, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, and Yugoslavia.

The consent decree will affect everyone in the industry, Mr. Hays predicted, and it establishes an important and significant pattern of sales practices. Of particular importance, he added, are "the provisions that whatever is good under the consent decree and that whatever proves impracticable to the functioning of the screen in entertaining the millions at a price within the reach of the people may be corrected as the result of actual experience.

"Legislation and litigation may decide an issue but only self regulation can solve a problem" he pointed out, citing the industry's previous experience with arbitration. In six years of previous arbitration experience the industry settled 51,255 claims before arbitration; accepted 36,777 awards; and prosecuted only eight suits, to settle claims totaling more than $27,000,000.

Refuting charges of propaganda bias Mr. Hays observed that 16 per cent of news reels dealt with people and events related to national defense, while only 2.4 per cent of short subjects and 5 per cent of features approved during 1940 had any relation to European politics or the war.

"In the emergency which faces us today the universal entertainment of the screen is a definite element of total national defense," Mr. Hays said. The motion picture's service in providing not only relaxing recreation but its invaluable aid in maintaining national morale, among civilian workers and the armed forces, constitute not only an opportunity but an obligation for the organized industry. Exhibitors and distributors were among the first to organize in the task of national defense, the report declared, listing the complete membership of the Motion Picture Committee Cooperating for National Defense.

Furthermore, the industry has organized a special group through the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences to train Signal Corps officers in motion picture methods and is producing 50 films for military training use.

The report quotes from President Roosevelt's message to the industry and discusses the extensive film program for Latin American goodwill.

The Motion Picture Production Code has aided the motion picture in establishing itself as a full-fledged member of the arts, with a sense of social responsibility Mr. Hays said.

"Self regulation has made the screen a great transformer. Able critics have remarked upon picture after picture which from the artistic as well as the social standpoint, has shown remarkable improvement over the originating material of book or stage. Last year saw a great number of films which not only had been socially bettered in relation to the material from which they were developed, but had been greatly improved in entertainment value. This is a most significant phase in self-correction."

Only 20 films out of a total of 523 features and 707 shorts met critical objection on the basis of good taste last year, and in these few cases equally sincere critics were not all agreed, Mr. Hayes observed.

HAYS REELECTED FOR 20TH YEAR

Will H. Hays, for the 20th consecutive year, was reelected president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America at the annual meeting of the Association in New York on March 31st. Carl E. Milliken was reelected secretary. George Borthwick, assistant treasurer, was elected treasurer and a member of the board of directors replacing Colonel F. L. Herron, who is on leave for military service. F. W. DuVall was named assistant treasurer.

Present at the meeting were: Ralph B. Austrian, RCA Manufacturing Company; Barney Balaban, Paramount Pictures; George Borthwick, MPPDA; Jack Cohn, Columbia Pictures; Earle W. Hammons, Educational Films Corp.; E. B. Hatrick, Cosmopolitan Corp.; Will H. Hays, MPPDA; Joseph H. Hazen, Warner Brothers Pictures; Austin C. Keough, Paramount Pictures; W. C. Michel, 20th Century-Fox Film Corp.; Carl E. Milliken, MPPDA; Charles D. Prutzman, Universal Pictures; George J. Schaefer, RKO Radio Pictures; Nicholas M. Schenck, Loew's Incorporated; Maurice Silverstone, United Artists Corp.; and T. Kennedy Stevenson, Electrical Research Products, Inc.

Classification of films by the Production Code Administration were listed as follows:

Classification	1939 Number	1939 % of Total	1940 Number	1940 % of Total
Social Category	54	9.25	35	6.69
Crime and Horror	139	23.80	108	20.65
Musical	19	3.25	27	5.16
Western and Action	160	27.40	115	22.00
Miscellaneous	212	36.30	238	45.50
Totals	584	100.00	523	100.00

During 1940 Production Code Administration activities included:

	1940
Total number of books, synopses, plays and stories read	461†
Number of scripts read (including changes)	2595
Number of pictures reviewed	1362*
Number of consultations	1453
Number of opinions written, dealing with stories, scripts, pictures, etc.	4708

†Includes short subjects.
*Includes a number of pictures reviewed more than once.

On the basis of 523 feature-length pictures approved by PCA during 1940, it is noted that films based on original screen stories increased from 56.3 per cent in 1939 to 61.8 per cent in 1940; of these films 323 were made from originals. Pictures produced from stage plays increased from 5.8 per cent to 9.8 per cent with a total of 51 such pictures during 1940. There was a drop in biographical pictures, from a total of 17 produced in 1930 to 8 in 1940, whereas new sources for picture material included four radio programs and seven comic strips.

The Advertising Advisory Council increased watchfulness over the many new types of advertising designed to build up domestic theatre attendance. Of a total of 11,256 ads submitted 324, or 2.8 per cent, were rejected. Most were revised and less than one per cent proved actually objectionable. Statistics of the advertising submissions to the New York and Hollywood offices follow:

Material Considered	Discarded or Revised
95,090 stills (Hollywood)	1,196
3,243 stills (New York)	21
10,646 publicity stories	None
11,256 advertisements	324
9,011 exploitation ideas	11
4,796 miscellaneous accessories	16
1,759 posters	39
1,027 trailers	9
490 completed press book campaigns (403 members, 87 non-members)	None

Overseas, the reported noted, American films continue to supply 76 per cent of the British release. Currency restrictions have impounded approximately $34,000,000 in British receipts, necessitating corresponding allowances in American production budgets.

In the field of technical progress Mr. Hays listed the stereophonic systems of multiple sound recording, the new noiseless camera, anti-reflection lens coatings, and national self-sufficiency in photographic material.

Educational films are receiving more extensive use, with approximately 5,000 schools making consistent use of films in 1940. Teaching Film Custodians, Inc., in conjunction with the MPPDA Community Service division continued distribution of educational reels. Other educational film projects were carried on by the Progressive Education Association and the Museum of Modern art.

Central Casting Corporation in 1940 became the largest free employment agency in California, with 228,342 placements for an average daily wage of $11.08. The Call Bureau handled 4,362 calls for players and 2,800 engagements.

The Trade Press, Mr. Hays noted, continues to serve well the interests of the motion picture as an institution. Of the press he said: "It is not only a medium for the exchange of information among all branches of the industry, but it is able to survey our problems as a whole and render constructive service in the execution of our programs. It has a most important function that entails definite responsibilities and obligations, of which none is more aware than the trade press itself."

The concluding paragraphs of the report attacked the recent TNECV monograph on the industry as overlooking the essential factors in the film's development and failing to consult with producers, distributors or exhibitors.

BMI Moves to Win Favor with Theatre Owners

Broadcast Music, Inc., the organization formed by broadcasters to be the chief weapon in the radio music war with the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, this week, on its first anniversary, made new efforts to win over exhibitors.

Theatres, however, will have to have an ASCAP license as long as any film using music controlled by the Society is to be shown. Furthermore BMI also may be expected to require theatres to pay a fee when enough motion pictures using its music are being distributed. As one result of the radio music fight, unless complete peace is made and BMI ceases to exist as a performance licensing agency, exhibitors may be required to pay fees to two organizations instead of one.

Signs with Disney

The activities of BMI in the motion picture industry were advanced this week by the announcement of the company's most important film deal. Walt Disney has signed a contract giving the organization the rights to the title song of his forthcoming feature cartoon, "The Reluctant Dragon," which is to be released about May 1.

Last week Charles E. McCarthy, director of advertising and publicity for 20th Century-Fox, launched the first special major company exploitation of songs from an important musical, "That Night in Rio," without the aid of the hundreds of radio stations which will play only BMI music. The ASCAP-BMI radio war made it necessary for the company to seek other means of promoting the musical than through radio network plugs.

BMI has announced, "For the first time in the history of the licensing of music for performance, the music user has a choice between two agencies either of which has available and can produce ample music to meet the needs of any occasion." It was further claimed that the motion picture exhibitor and other users of music "need no longer pay any price which ASCAP sees fit to ask."

At the turn of the first year of operations Tuesday BMI announced that it was owned by more than 680 radio stations representing 95 percent of the total dollar volume of business on the air. It was pointed out that network ownership of BMI has been limited to 17.1 percent of the stock. In the past year BMI has acquired, it was said, the right to 250,000 songs of every variety.

BMI announced that the deal with Walt Disney for publication of the title song from "The Reluctant Dragon" was concluded after three months of negotiations.

It was also said that the new Dr. Christian picture (RKO) entitled "Interlude," will be 100 percent BMI, so far as the music is concerned. Four BMI songs will be used, "When Love Is New," "Make Believe Land of Dreams," "Get Alive" and "The Rhythm Is Red, White and Blue."

BMI songs are also to be used in the next Judy Canova picture (Republic), "Puddin' Head," it was reported.

"South of Panama," Producers Releasing Corporation, will include one BMI song, "Madame Will Drop Her Shawl."

The 20th-Fox promotion campaign on "That Night in Rio" was carried on despite the ASCAP-BMI radio fight. The first step in the campaign was to arrange to have leading orchestras make records of the film's song hits. Irving B. Kahn, on the staff of Rodney Bush, 20th-Fox publicity and exploitation manager, working through Miller Music Corporation, publisher of the songs in the picture, had Russ Morgan, Bob Crosby, Tony Martin, the Andrews Sisters, Xavier Cugat, Kay Kyser, Frankie Masters, Barry Woods, Freddie Martin and Leo Reisman make records for Decca, Columbia and Victor. Also a special Carmen Miranda Album was published by Decca.

The music selling campaign in connection with the opening of the film at the Roxy, in New York, included tie-ups and window displays at 17 local music stores. Cooperating stores featured records of music from the picture.

At the same time the campaign began in New York an album containing four songs from the picture was mailed to 166 stations throughout the country which have ASCAP licenses. The numbers included were "Boa Noite," "Chica Chica Boom Chic," "They Met in Rio" and "I, Yi, Yi, Yi, Yi." Accompanying the records was a letter explaining that the film company was "in the middle" of the ASCAP-BMI quarrel and requesting that the records be played. It was reported that over 100 acknowledgements were received with promises to use the records and credit the picture.

Another form of promotion through ASCAP-licensed stations was a 15-minute transcription from the film. It was reported that the practically 100 percent of the stations asked had agreed to broadcast the transcription. The offer pointed out that the combined radio salary of the stars featured in the transcription from "That Night in Rio" was $18,500.

ASCAP meanwhile completed preliminary work on a contract formula to be submitted to the negotiating committee of the National Association of Broadcasters. As requested by the radio stations and networks, the plan is based on a per program system of licensing instead of the flat fee method formerly used.

In about two weeks the first ASCAP board of directors' election under the system provided for in the music consent decree will be held.

ASCAP-BMI FIGHT HITS TELEVISION

The television station of the National Broadcasting Company in New York City and other stations which have no special experimental television license from the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers have been seriously handicapped, particularly so far as the presenting of motion pictures is concerned, by the ASCAP-Broadcast Music, Inc. fight. NBC has carefully eliminated all ASCAP music from films telecast since January 1, 1941 when the regular license with ASCAP expired and the music war officially opened. Practically all music in motion pictures is licensed through ASCAP so the problem has been difficult and the film television programs have been curtailed. When dialogue and background music are mixed in a motion picture, it cannot be considered for television while the ASCAP-BMI war is on.

Some television stations have special $1-a-year licenses from ASCAP and can present motion pictures with ASCAP music without any regard to the present radio music dispute. It was reported that when television is given commercial standing ASCAP will work out a special licensing arrangement.

PCC, MPTO Set Convention Plans For Los Angeles

June 9th to 11th has been set by the trustees of the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners for its second annual convention to be held at the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles. The trustees invited the MPTOA to hold its "goodwill all-industry convention" in Los Angeles at the same time. Ed Kuykendall, MPTOA president, left that city over the week end to confer regarding the matter with the board.

The invitation to the national organization resulted after the conference trustees named Hugh Bruen, Jack Berman, Rotus Harvey and Robert H. Poole as a committee to work out a plan so that no conflict in dates of the two conventions would result.

Nebraska-Iowa Election

Leading candidate for the presidency of the MPTO of Nebraska and Iowa is R. R. Livingston, owner-manager of the Capitol in Lincoln, Neb. The election will be held April 22nd in Omaha.

Mr. Livingston was interview by the national president, Ed Kuykendall, when he visited that territory in March, checking up on the vacancy left by the death of the late Charles Williams. The Capitol owner has been an independant operator for nearly 32 years in Nebraska, and now has the political affiliations in the state, having fronted for the industry before the legislature for years.

The Connecticut MPTO has scheduled a luncheon meeting for Monday, April 7th, at Ceriani's in New Haven, with Arthur H. Lockwood presiding. Herman M. Levy, executive secretary, will review the current legislative session to date as it affects theatres of the state.

Allied Theatre Owners of Connecticut met Tuesday noon at the HofBrau Haus for its regular bi-weekly luncheon meeting with Al Schuman presiding. Lawrence C. Caplan, executive secretary, covered legislation for this group.

Stuart, Powers To Australia

Herschel Stuart, field executive for Twentieth Century-Fox, and William T. Powers, chief film buyer for National Theatres, will leave for Australia to represent Twentieth Century-Fox, parent company, in connection with the operation of Hoyt's Australian circuit in the event Sidney R. Kent, president, and Spyros Skouras, operating head of National Theatres, approve.

Mr. Kent will return from a Florida vacation about mid-April. In the meantime, Mr. Stuart who has been operating out of Salt Lake City for Fox Intermountain, is reported to be on the coast for conferences with Charles Skouras and other headquarter officials of National Theatres, prior to receiving his embarkation orders.

Spyros Skouras has been giving the Australian matter much consideration in recent years. More recently, Dan Michalove went there as an ambassador for the company and to make a report on conditions in Australia. He returned several months ago.

INDEPENDENTS CONTINUE MONOPOLY ATTACKS

New Trust Suit Filed in Georgia; Columbia Answers "Little Three" Questionnaire

Neither the relief promised from the consent decree settlement nor the system established thereunder for arbitrating trade practice complaints, has halted Federal court attacks on the majors by independent exhibitors on charges of violating the anti-trust laws. Another suit was filed during the week, by Martin Theatres, Inc., in Georgia.

The action was filed at Valdosta, Ga., with the U. S. District Court by Southland Theatres, Inc., and seeks $106,458 from Martin Theatres as damages for alleged monopoly and restriction of product. Loew's, Twentieth Century-Fox, RKO and Columbia were named as defendants in the anti-trust action along with Roy E. Martin, Roy E. Martin, Jr., and Edward D. Martin.

The Martins operate three Valdosta theatres, two of which are exclusively for white persons. The Palace, operated for white persons and negroes, provides approximately 240 seats for negroes. There are approximately 7,500 negroes in the area. The complainant who operates the Grand Theatre at Valdosta exclusively for negroes charges the defendants conspired to restrict the supply of pictures.

John I. Kelley, of Atlanta, and Franklin and Eberhardt of Valdosta represent the plaintiff.

Columbia Answers 'Little Three' Suit

Columbia Pictures in New York on Monday filed a 110 page reply with the U. S. District Court answering the federal anti-trust action against the "little three" distributors.

The reply, prepared by Schwartz and Frolich, Columbia counsel, listed numerous exhibitors and stars with whom Columbia has contracts, and declared that they should be named in the Federal anti-trust complaint as "indispensable parties to the action," and co-defendants. Columbia declares the Federal complaint would nullify existing contracts with players and theatre operators, and thereby makes them party to the anti-trust suit.

The Radio City Music Hall, Loew circuit, Irene Dunne and Cary Grant are among those whose Columbia contracts would be affected by Government victory in the suit. The Schwartz & Frolich reply sets up the Government's failure to name them, and other contractors as a separate defense in the suit.

The answer also cites the Interstate Circuit anti-trust action, which it declares tried the same issues, leaving them res adjudicata and rendering the New York action unnecessary. A third defense says amended government complaints against the Little Three in Nashville, Oklahoma City, and Buffalo, are a bar to the New York suit by reason of prior filing.

Asking the court to dismiss the federal action the reply enters a general denial of the government allegations.

Columbia told the court it had only six stars and eight feature players at the time of the action and is forced to borrow stars to continue production. The company reported a sharp rise in production costs, citing expenditure of $9,683,600 for 1939-40 product and attributed radio competition as part of the need for increased production expense.

The reply also says that local monopolies in some 5,400 localities where eight or less theatres are controlled by a single exhibitor force "harsh and unreasonable terms" on distributors. Boycotts are common against distributors, it alleges. Block booking is the result of agreement with distributors, not of force, and frequently the distributor splits its product in locales where there are more than one first run theatres, the reply states.

Take Schine Testimony; Delay Crescent Action

The U. S. District Court at Buffalo has authorized the Department of Justice to take depositions from attorneys of the Big Five at New York on April 7th as testimony in the prosecution of the Little Three (Columbia, Universal and United Artists) and the Schine Circuit at Buffalo.

Edward K. Hessberg, Warners; Felix Jenkins, 20th Century-Fox; Austin Keough, Paramount; William Mallard, RKO; and Leopold Friedman of Loew's will give depositions to assistant U. S. Attorneys General Herbert Borkland and Seymour Simon in New York. The companies were recently dismissed as co-defendants in the Schine action.

An indication that consent decree negotiations between Schine, the Little Three and Department of Justice are proving fruitless was seen this week in the retention of Frederick W. Wood, of Gersdorff, Swaine, and Wood to assist Willard S. McKay in the Schine defense.

At Nashville the suit against the Crescent Amusement Company and the Little Three was docketed for trial on July 7th. Defendants still have 30 days to answer government interrogatories. The July date was set when the case was called on March 11th. Owen W. Hughes and Allen A. Dobey will represent the Attorney General. In New York it was believed, however, that the case would be killed by decisions in similar actions prior to the trial date.

Query Theatre Executives In Philadelphia Suit

Pretrial examinations in the $225,000 damage suit by the Lansdowne Theatre Company against Warners and other major distributors in Philadelphia will be taken in New York. Among executives for the major distributors who will be queried before the trial starts are: William F. Rodgers, MGM; Joseph Bernhard, Warners; Thomas J. Connors, MGM; Abe Montague, Columbia; and Harry M. Warner.

Earlier pre-trial testimony was taken in Philadelphia from Lester Kreiger, chief Warner circuit booker, John Turner his assistant, and William G. Mansell, Warner exchange manager. The trial will open in Philadelphia on April 21st.

Malco Opens Three

The Malco circuit of the Tennessee-Arkansas area on Saturday opened three theatres, two in Little Rock, one in Memphis. One in Little Rock is new: the Park, in Park Hill, suburb; the other is a drive-in, recently purchased. The Memphis house is a drive-in.

Rivers Joins RKO

Eddie Rivers, former Northwest theatre executive, and for the past six years director of publicity for the Hamrick-Evergreen theatres of Portland and Seattle, has resigned to join Terry Turner's staff as a field publicity man for RKO, working out of Minneapolis.

Closed Shop for Actors, Musicians

Vaudeville actors and musicians reached a working agreement this week in Pittsburgh, agreement which may foreshadow pacts to be concluded between their locals everywhere, and which may mean a virtual closed shop for musicians and those actors in every hotel, night club, tavern, and vaudeville house in the country.

All booking agents in the Pittsburgh area were informed that, beginning Tuesday, acts must carry membership in the American Guild of Variety Artists, and musicians must carry membership in the American Federation of Musicians. Vaudeville actors will not perform in a place hiring non-AFM members, and musicians will not play in a place hiring non-AGVA members.

The Variety Artists Guild has franchised 16 booking agencies in the area with the KDKA Artists Service the only major holdout. More than 450 members in the territory are claimed by the Guild, the local of which is permitted by its charter to retain 60 per cent of its fees, and which, hence, is little affected by the financial difficulties of the national organization, and its squabble over officers.

Disney Before NLRB

In Hollywood late last week, the Society of Motion Picture Editors filed charges of unfair labor practices with the National Labor Relations Board against the Walt Disney Productions. The union asserted the cartoon studio refused to bargain with it, despite its NLRB certification as bargaining agency for cartoon editors, assistants, and librarians.

The Disney studio this week began a five-day, 40-hour week schedule, thus eliminating work-Saturdays. Announcing the change, studio officials said it was dictated by their findings, from a survey, that two-thirds of the Disney employees were subject to provisions of the national Wages and Hours Act.

Also in the production capital this week it was reported the standing committee on extra players, established by the Screen Actors Guild and the producers in their bargaining contract, might be abolished because of its expense.

In New York, the Actors Equity Council was asked, on Friday, March 28th, by the quarterly membership meeting, to investigate employment of actors, and relationship of employment statistics to the number of members admitted. Alfred Harding, editor of the magazine Equity, was thanked for his plan to bring high school students in New York City to special 25-cent admission matinees. A nominating committee was chosen to prepare for the annual elections in June.

Local 288, East St. Louis, of the IATSE, has issued a membership card to Clyde A. Weston, former business agent of the St. Louis projectionists' union, Local 143, who now is at liberty under bond pending an appeal from a five-year sentence and a $10,000 fine given him by a St. Louis Federal Court, for violation of the Federal anti-racketeering act.

It was said the card was issued him after the Local 143 refused his application, and that the issuance was the result of intervention in Mr. Weston's behalf by the international officers of the IATSE.

In the same territory, the MPTOA and the Theatrical Employees' Union, Local B-2, are negotiating a contract. Louis Ansell, chairman of the MPTOA committee said a five-year contract was offered tentatively, maintaining the present wage level for two years, and providing for increases the third and fourth years. The union is said to have rejected the contract, asking instead raises each year.

Music Hall Nets $35,250 for Greeks

Largest of the special midnight shows given by the country's theatres last week during their drive to help the Greek War Relief Association, that at the Radio City Music Hall, New York, Friday, March 28th, garnered $35,250, the 6,000-seat house being completely sold out. Tickets ranged from two to ten dollars. Many people stood during the four-hour show. From the sale of souvenir programs, and from the advertisements in the programs another $1,200 was collected, the Association reported.

W. G. Van Schmus, managing director of the Music Hall, opened the performance, which was directed by Leon Leonidoff, and produced by Marvin H. Schenck. Many stars appeared; there were skits from Broadway hits, musical numbers, and the like. Raymond Massey did a scene from "Abe Lincoln in Illinois." Among other stars present were Madeline Carroll, Judy Garland, Luise Rainer, and Loretta Young.

Open Air Show

On three days of last week, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, March 27th, 28th, and 29th, an open-air show was staged on 46th Street and Broadway, New York City, featuring stage, screen, and radio players, and solicitation of funds by attractive models; and sponsored by Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association.

In the Providence area, the benefit show Friday evening, March 28th, at the Loew's State, garnered $1,500. There were 12 vaudeville acts contributed by the Fay's and Metropolitan theatres, and by the Providence Biltmore; a preview of "The Trial of Mary Dugan"; and the March of Time short, "Greece Fights Back." Head of the exhibitors' committee was Edward Fay; secretary-treasurer was William Pragg. The city's theatres cooperated in boosting the show at the State. Master of ceremonies was Martin Toohey, manager of the Leroy, Pawtucket.

From New Haven this week it was reported the midnight benefit shows in 20 towns of the area were successful, and demonstrative of the practicability of cooperation for a cause, among competitive theatres.

Iowa Benefit Successful

The midnight show at the Orpheum Theatre, Davenport, Iowa, Saturday, March 29th, was a success, the Quad-City Theatre Managers Association reported on Monday. The Association comprises 18 independent and circuit theatre owners and managers in Davenport, Rock Island, Moline, and East Moline; and it is their cooperation which "put the show over," Association officials said Monday.

Approximately $1,500 was raised at the special show, H. D. Grove, district manager for the Tri-States circuit, and general manager of the show, reported. Because of the admission price of $1 and the type territory, this figure is considered excellent.

The show lasted two hours, and included night club acts, seven dance orchestras, and local acts.

Collections were also taken in all other theatres in the four cities; and it was estimated these would add another $1,500 to the relief fund.

On Wednesday evening, at the Civic Opera House, Chicago, there was to be another special show, with Jack Benny serving as master of ceremonies.

The midnight show at the Marlow, Helena, Montana, Saturday, March 29th, and the collections there and at the Rio, same city, are said to have gleaned more than $500.

Hutchinson Named Paramount Sales Head in England

Fred Hutchinson, currently in Metro Goldwyn Mayer's sales department in London, has been named Paramount's general sales manager for Great Britain. He succeeds D. E. Griffiths, who resigned last week. Mr. Hutchinson is scheduled to take over his new duties next week.

Showmen's Club Officers

Elected officers, last week, of the new Showmen's Club of Baltimore and vicinity were the following: Robert Marhenke, president; Henry Matcher, vice-president; Edward Silver, recording secretary; Michael Robert, financial secretary; and Jack Bock, sergeant-at-arms.

MGM Wins Q.P. Trophy

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer basketball team of the New York home office has finished the second consecutive season undefeated and is again champion of the Motion Picture League. The Quigley Publications trophy will be presented to the team which won all 41 games played during the season.

Reinheimer Signs with Altec

L. Reinheimer has renewed his agreement with Altec Service Corp., for sound and repair-replacement service, and booth parts service, for his Roseland, Parkway and State theatres in Chicago, the Pupage theatre in Lombard, Ill., and the Calumet in Hammond, Ind. R. C. Gray negotiated for Altec.

Mullin Outlines Variety Program

Martin J. Mullin, chief barker of the newly formed Boston Tent No. 23, of the Variety Clubs of America, announced in that city this week that the national convention to be held in Atlantic City from May 15th through 17th, would have the following program:

Thursday, May 15th: Registration at Traymore Hotel; meeting of national officers and canvassmen; luncheon; fishing and boating, monster boxing and wrestling exhibition. Friday, May 16th: business session, report of charitable activities for the past year, announcement of commitments for the ensuing year, report of national officers and committee men; lobster dinner; night club party for all delegates and guests combining a show of outstanding names of screen, stage and radio with name bands. Saturday, May 17th: Golf tournament and an exhibition golf match between outstanding professional and amateur golfers, guests of National Variety; boardwalk parade and pageant; farewell banquet for members and guests.

The officers of the new Boston tent, whose members include approximately 200 showmen throughout New England, are: Mr. Mullin, executive head of M. & P. Theatres, chief barker; Albert M. Kane, branch manager of the Boston Paramount Pictures Exchange, assistant chief barker; Ted Fleicher of Interstate Theatres, second assistant chief barker; Harold E. Stoneham of Interstate Theatres, dough guy; and William H. Erbb, New England district manager for Paramount Pictures, property master. Inductions were held Tuesday night.

LEGISLATURES PROPOSE ADDITIONAL FILM TAXES

Iowa Exhibitors Win Exemption from New Levy; New York Considers Tax on 16mm. Film

Iowa exhibitors seemed more free this week from the threat of new taxation by their state government after the House last week exempted film theatres from the provisions of a special bill taxing amusements. All other amusements, however, will suffer heavily, if the Senate pushes the bill to gubernatorial signature; for it calls for a one cent tax on admission tickets from 26 to 49 cents; two cents on those from 50 to 99 cents; and five cents on those over two dollars.

Meanwhile, the New York legislature on Friday, March 28th, received a bill to tax 16mm films $6 for each 1,000 feet or fraction thereof, on original prints; the Connecticut House judiciary committee favorably reported an amendment to existing statutes, exempting 16mm machines used for the home from certain restrictions; the Wisconsin legislature is considering a bill to tax films at 50 cents per 1,000 feet or less, and another to levy 10 per cent on all film rentals of more than $500; and the Michigan Senate passed a bill repealing the state's "blue laws," which theoretically ban attendance at amusements or exhibitions on Sundays.

The Iowa special tax on amusement admissions is declared to be for replacement of a portion of public school property taxes and it is expected to raise $9,000,000. Film theatres were the only amusements exempted.

New York Studies Bills

The New York state bill to tax 16 mm films was given the Senate by William Bewley, of Lockport. The tax is not only on original prints; it is also on copies, at $4 per 1,000 feet, or fraction thereof. Furthermore, it would preserve the 1927 law, which taxes 35 mm original film at $3 per 1,000 feet or fraction thereof, and 35 mm copies at $2 similarly. The bill's passage would seem, according to capitol hill observers, to affect the coin-operated film machine field seriously.

Governor Herbert Lehman, of that state, this week approved the Moffat bill, allowing a city of one million inhabitants to levy a 1/20 of one per cent tax on gross receipts of all businesses except financial. Therefore, theatres are included.

The Assembly passed the Andrews anti-discrimination bill. By this, no person may be discriminated against, in civil rights, by any firm, corporation, or institution; penalties are provided.

Assemblyman Harold Ehrlich's child performance bill requiring boards of education to exercise control over child acting, on Wednesday passed the Assembly unanimously.

16mm. Exempted

Projection machines using only cellulose acetate film not more than 16 mm. wide, and non-theatrically, are exempted from certain restrictions under which 35 mm. machines operate, according to an amendment of the Connecticut General Statutes, last week favorably reported by the state's House judiciary committee.

The same state's legislature last week voted down horse racing and chance games bills. The latter bill would have allowed cash prizes to be distributed instead of merchandise, in games. The legislature was to hear still another bill, to permit theatres to give cash prizes, but with no "gambling element."

Senator Taylor Brown last week introduced into the Wisconsin legislature a second bill to tax motion pictures. The new measure would assess them 50 cents for each 1,000 feet or fraction thereof. Earlier last week, Assemblyman Leland S. McParland asked for a tax of ten per cent on all film rentals over $500.

In Senator Brown's bill is a provision that all film distributors make quarterly reports to the state treasurer, showing the number of feet of film sold. They would be taxed on the basis of these reports.

Daylight Time Defeated

The Murray bill, asking for state-wide daylight saving has now been defeated by the Senate four times, but may be reconsidered. The last vote was last week, being 18 to 13. Exhibitors opposed the idea.

In Fond du Lac, that state, the City Council has approved a Municipal Board of Electrical Examiners recommendation that the city electrical appliances ordinance be amended to exempt motion picture projectionists from its provision requiring them to have an electrician's license.

The Michigan Senate has repealed an 1846 law prohibiting public attendance at shows or exhibitions, on Sundays. The House was to vote on the measure this week.

In Missouri, the Senate has sent the House a bill to repeal the 1885 law prohibiting third and fourth class cities from licensing opera houses. The legislature has received this bill because the state Supreme Court recently ruled that modern film theatres in cities of such classification are in the category of opera houses, and therefore should not pay the license fees usually demanded.

The Massachusetts General Court has been considering the so-called Winslow measure giving local authorities complete control over billboards. The Court heard testimony last week from Philip Nichols, representing the state federation of planning boards, that billboards advertising theatres had been erected and maintained many years illegally, in certain sections of the state. He asserted the State Division of Outdoor Advertising has permitted billboard erection over the objections of local officials, in many instances. His viewpoint, and the bill itself, are being opposed by exhibitors, and supported by hotel and local officials.

Rhode Island Closed

The Rhode Island General Assembly will not hear any more new bills this session, thus relieving some of the state's exhibitors. Two bills affecting theatres have been left in committee. They are a Senate bill to permit local licensing authorities to permit legitimate shows on Sunday; and a House bill amending the state fire laws to require all "institutional buildings" designed for the use of 25 or more persons, to be connected with the community's fire alarm system.

The Pennsylvania legislature has been considering a bill to set up a state roadside zoning commission, power of which will be to regulate outdoor advertising. This power was attacked last week by Richard Maxwell, secretary-manager of the Pennsylvania Motor Federation, who described it as possibly a discriminatory weapon against the "legitimate advertiser".

The United Mine Workers of America has renewed its opposition to daylight saving time in the hard coal regions of Pennsylvania. The city council of Pottsville has already voted to have its business men prepare for a change to daylight saving, probably this month. The legislature at Harrisburg has been considering a state-wide referendum on the idea.

Equity Sees 52 Army Theatres

Agitation by Actors Equity for the erection in army camps of theatres with adequate facilities for stage entertainment appears to have promising results, although the War Department has not as yet acknowledged Equity's offer to supervise presentation of stage entertainments for soldiers, Bert Lytell, president, informed a meeting of the actors in New York this week. He said 52 theatres, each with 4,500 seats, would be erected at army cantonments by next October.

As reported in Motion Picture Herald last week the theatres will be erected with a $5,000,000 appropriation earmarked by the war department to provide motion picture and other entertainment at Army posts, and to expand recreation and morale facilities. Mr. Lytell credited his information to Robert Sherwood, playwright and member of the ex-officio Joint Army and Navy Committee on Welfare and Recreation.

Hits Amateur Shows

At the Equity meeting, Paul Dulzell, executive secretary, reported that the union was planning a vigorous protest to Los Angeles police against risque amateur theatrical productions which have been competing with established theatres. In New York, he said Equity would demand that managers demonstrate the advantages of Sunday operation, when the Sabbath show plan now on trial comes up for a further consideration on June 1st.

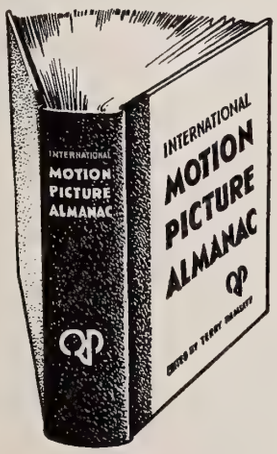
A vote of praise for Alfred Harding, editor of Equity Magazine, and others instrumental in arranging a plan whereby New York high school students may witness special matinees next year at 25-cent admissions, was passed by the 300 actors at the meeting. A request to consider dropping exclusive service clauses from actors' contracts was referred to Equity Council. The change is desired in order to permit actors to participate in radio and film engagements outside of their stage commitments.

No less than six theatres are under construction at Fort Leonard Wood, army training center near Kansas City. Five of the houses will show motion pictures, while one is designed for stage entertainment. To date the soldiers at the camp are without entertainment.

At Fort Benning, Ga., site of the army infantry school, three cinema theatres are in operation with two more scheduled to be constructed at an early date. The three already open seat 1,000 soldiers each. They cost $50,000 apiece and are reported to be playing to capacity audiences, adding to the woe of exhibitors at nearby Phoenix City, Ala., who have counted on Army patronage.

Interstate Circuit, with L. D. Brown, of Brownwood, Texas, will build a new 400-seat house to augment the Queen and Gem in accommodating soldiers from Camp Bowie, near Brownwood. At Fort Sam Houston, Texas, the army negotiated a contract with Homer Sessions, of Arp, Tex., to build a 1,100-seat house costing $39,975.

Cut Rates for Soldiers



Walt Disney and the Broadway theatre instituted the first special price sale for service men in uniform at New York this week when prices for "Fantasia" were cut in half for all performances from Monday through Friday. The policy will apply also at "Fantasia" engagements in Philadelphia, Boston, Washington, Los Angeles and other cities.

Baltimore exhibitors have been asked to institute special admission scales for army and navy enlisted men from Fort Meade, and other nearby posts. The request came from officers of the Baltimore Committee on Social Agencies.

Trust Suit Dismissal Sought by Drama Guild

In an application filed in the New York supreme court last Friday, March 28th, the Dramatists' Guild asked for a dismissal of the New York anti-trust suit brought against it by the League of New York Theatres. The application, based on the ground that the complaint fails to state a cause of action, will be heard on April 7th.

The League's suit, brought under the New York anti-trust laws, charges the guild with imposing arbitrary terms in its new basic pact governing the production of plays, which went into effect March 1st. The suit claims the members of the guild combined illegally, and are threatening to drive the stage managers out of business.

Venue Change Denied In Casanave Suit

The motion by Herman Robbins, president of National Screen Service, and other officers of the company and its subsidiaries, for a change of venue of Charles Casanave's suit against them, from the Westchester County Supreme Court to the New York County Supreme Court, where a suit is pending by Mr. Robbins and N.N.S. against Mr. Casanave, was denied this week by Justice Mortimer B. Patterson, of the Westchester court, at White Plains.

Louis Nizer, of counsel for Mr. Robbins, and the other defendants, said on Wednesday in New York Judge Patterson's ruling would be appealed.

Still to be decided were motions for consolidation of Mr. Casanave's suit, which asked of the defendants and their companies a declaratory judgment that his contracts with them were valid. Pending in New York Supreme Court is the suit by Mr. Robbins and Toby Gruen, directors of National Screen Service, against Mr. Casanave, as vice-president and general manager of National Screen Accessories, asking an accounting of alleged secret profits made in a stock purchase and manufacturing agreement between N.S.A. and the American Display Company, Inc.

Injunction Filed

In a suit filed in the United States district court on Friday, March 28th, Olympic Pictures Corp., Feature Distributors, Inc., and Morris J. Kandel, Olympic president, were named defendants. The suit was filed by the Twickenham Film Studios, Ltd., of London, and Roddison Douglas Brewis, receiver of Twickenham, which seeks an injunction to restrain the defendants from distributing 30 pictures allegedly belonging to the plaintiffs.

Dietrich Suit Transferred

The $90,000 suit of Jack Forrester, French producer, against Marlene Dietrich for breach of contract was transferred to the United States district court in New York from the city court on the application of Schwartz & Frohlich, counsel for Miss Dietrich. Mr. Forrester alleges that the actress contracted to appear in a picture which he was to produce in France in 1939, but failed to do so.

Warners Sued on Film

Irving Gaumont has filed a $50,000 damage and injunction suit in the New York supreme court against Warner Brothers, claiming the plagiarism of his story, "You've Got to Swing It," in the film, "My Love Came Back."

Copyright Renewal May Be Sold, Court Says

In issuing a temporary injunction against Fred Fisher Music Co. and George Graff, restraining them from selling copies of "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling," Judge Edward A. Conger of the federal court in New York ruled that a composer may sell the copyright renewal rights to his musical composition prior to the expiration of its 27-year period.

The suit was brought by M. Witmark & Sons, on the ground that Mr. Graff had assigned the renewal rights to it in 1917 and that the company already had received an assignment from the widow of Chauncey Olcott, composer of the lyrics.

The Fisher Music Co. had received its rights from Mr. Graff in 1939 and contended that the Federal copyright laws prohibited Mr. Graff from making a valid assignment until the 28th year after the first issuance of the copyright.

The court, in pointing out that the question had never been squarely decided previously, said that Mr. Graff's assignment would not have been valid if he had died before the expiration of the original copyright. In that event Judge Conger said the rights to renew would have been vested in Mr. Graff's widow and children.

Lewen Pizor Sues Partner, Segall

Two prominent Philadelphia exhibitors this week exposed their financial affairs to the world, in a falling out over joint theatre operation. Lewen Pizor on Tuesday filed suit in the Common Pleas Court of that city, charging Charles Segall with fraud. Named also as defendants are Louis Segall, a son, and Katherine Segall Sabolsky, a daughter; also Eastern Theatres, Inc., and Boro Theatres, Inc., theatre operating companies in which the fraud was allegedly committed. There will be a hearing before Judge Louis Leventhal on next Monday, on a motion to appoint a receiver for the theatre companies.

Mr. Segall had previously entered a judgment in the same court against Mr. Pizor, for $55,124, on alleged default of a lease on the Apollo Theatre for four month's rent. The Apollo is owned by the two Segalls, who had leased it to the Segall-Pizor partnership. That partnership had been in the operation of four theatres.

Cohn Testimony Ordered

Justice Aaron J. Levy of the New York supreme court on Friday, March 28th, has ordered Harry Cohn or any other Columbia Pictures officer to testify before trial on April 8th in reference to the $100,000 damage suit of Minnie Saltzman-Stevens, who claims her picture was used by the film company without her permission in the film, "I'll Take Romance."

Dismiss Boswell Suit

The Louisiana supreme court has dismissed a $7,300 suit brought against the three Boswell sisters by Joseph J. Davilla, New Orleans agent, for alleged breach of a verbal contract. The plaintiff claimed the sisters broke a verbal contract in April, 1926, to sing behind movie screens to give the impression of talkies, which were still in their infancy. In dismissing the suit the court upheld a previous decision that the plaintiff failed to show existance of a contract.

File in Bankruptcy

Charles and Hazel Holze, owner-operators of the California theatre in Sacramento, have filed a voluntary bankruptcy petition. Mr. Holze formerly managed various theatres for the Joe Blumenfield circuit before opening the California.

OBITUARIES

Shaftsbury Brint, Empire Universal Sales Head, Dies

Shaftsbury Brint, general sales manager for Empire Universal Films in Toronto, Canada, died Monday, March 24th, in Ottawa while on a business trip in that city. He was 49 years old.

Mr. Brint entered the film business in Parry Sound in 1915. In 1917 he went to Toronto and joined the Mutual Film Company, which at that time was one of the major distributors of motion pictures. Later he joined the Exhibitors Distributing Association and upon terminating his contract with that company went with the Canadian Educational Films Limited, which was one of the first motion picture companies to specialize in short subjects and comedies and became their branch manager in Winnipeg. He then went to Fox Film Corp. and from there to the Canadian Universal Film Company, which was later taken over by Empire films for Canadian distribution when the company became knows as Empire Universal Films Ltd.

He is survived by his widow and a daughter.

Lee Morrison, Stage Actor and Producer

Lee Morrison, actor, playwright and producer, died Sunday, March 30th, at his home in New York. He was 65 years old.

Connected with the theatre since he was 17 years old, Mr. Morrison helped produce a dramatized version of the Elinor Glyn novel, "Three Weeks," for which he won much recognition. He later produced "Temptation," "The Sixth Commandment," "The House of Bondage," "Better Be Good," and "Go Easy Mabel." He was company manager for several years for the Lee Shubert Productions and had been a director for Gaumont, Ltd., in England.

Surviving are a son, his mother, a brother and a sister.

William Vollman

William Vollman, 67, president and treasurer of Strand Enterprises, Inc., in Cincinnati, and manager of the Strand office building and Strand theatre in that city, died in General Hospital, Saturday, March 29th.

H. Dudley Hawley

H. Dudley Hawley, an actor on the American stage for 46 years and who appeared in a few motion pictures, died in New York, Saturday, March 29th. Mr. Hawley's last stage appearance was in the role of the doctor in "The Man Who Came to Dinner," which closed in Pittsburgh, March 22nd. During his career he appeared in the films "The American Widow" and "Young Man of Manhattan." He was 62 years old.

Bernard Falk

Bernard Falk, assistant manager of the Century Circuit theatre, the Avalon, in Brooklyn, N. Y., died Thursday, March 27th, of pneumonia. He had been associated with the theatre for the past six years.

New Trenton Theatre

An announcement made this week said that ground has been broken in Trenton, N. J., for a new 1,000-seat theatre. According to RKO officials, this theatre is being built by the Trenton-New Brunswick Theatre Co., in which RKO Theatres owns a 50 per cent interest. Walter Reade and the Frank Storrs estate own the other 50 per cent. William I. Hohauser is the architect. H. D. Best McCaffery Co., will build the theatre.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

ADAM HAD FOUR SONS: Ingrid Bergman, Warner Baxter, Susan Hayward—We played this too new, so no one saw this very, very good picture. Wonderful acting by the entire cast, and perfect entertainment for young and old. Do not be afraid to boost it. Word-of-mouth advertising will help.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

ANGELS OVER BROADWAY: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Rita Hayworth, Thomas Mitchell—I still wonder what this is all about and so did the ones who came to see it. Doug, Rita and Tom all did fine acting but no story to the picture at all. If I had not used it on Cash Nite, no one would have been there, as had many complaints. It might have been an angel but it should have been left in the can. Very poor business outside of cash nite drawing which helped. Running time, 80 minutes. Played March 19.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

ARIZONA: Jean Arthur, William Holden—A good western picture. Will please the action fans.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

ARIZONA: Jean Arthur, William Holden—A fine action picture and pleased all.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

DEVIL COMMANDS, THE: Boris Karloff, Amanda Duff, Richard Fiske—Novel horror show. Some children scared. Very good for double bill. Double featured with "Bury Me Not on the Lone Prairie." Running time, 65 minutes. Played March 13-15.—R. F. Netzel, Palace Theatre, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

MEET BOSTON BLACKIE: Chester Morris, Rochelle Hudson—A very fast moving action picture. Do not fail to step on this picture if your patrons like fast moving action. Running time, 62 minutes. Played March 22.—H. L. Capers, New Deal Theatre, Gorman, Texas. Rural patronage.

THIS THING CALLED LOVE: Rosalind Russell, Melvyn Douglas—Very sophisticated story. Nothing outstanding. The fans like Rosalind and Melvyn.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

First National

FATHER IS A PRINCE: Grant Mitchell, Nana Bryant—Just an ordinary program picture without any star value that I used on a double bill with "Haunted Honeymoon" for one day and failed to take in film rental. Both pictures rate the cellar position. Running time, 59 minutes. Played March 18.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

HIGH SIERRA: Humphrey Bogart, Ida Lupino—Very good action picture.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

SANTA FE TRAIL: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Raymond Massey, Ronald Reagan—Better than average. The folks enjoyed it.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

SANTA FE TRAIL: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Raymond Massey, Ronald Reagan—Fine picture. Tons of bullets shot. Everybody enjoyed it. Running time, 110 minutes. Played March 9-11.—E. H. Malone, Alma Theatre, Alma, Wis. General patronage.

STRAWBERRY BLONDE: James Cagney, Olivia de Havilland, Rita Hayworth—Lots of our patrons were disappointed in this picture. There is something missing in its entertaining value somewhere.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

STRAWBERRY BLONDE: James Cagney, Olivia de Havilland, Rita Hayworth—They really had something in the Gay 90's that appeals to people now. Here is a grand picture, fine cast, good story and swell music. Your Cagney fans will be a little dumbfounded at the part he plays, but when you see the smiles, and hear the favorable comment, as they leave the theatre, you'll be very happy about the whole thing. We enjoyed a nice business, and so will you. Running time, 97 minutes. Played March 9-11.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

ANDY HARDY'S PRIVATE SECRETARY: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Ann Rutherford, Ian Hunter, Fay Holden, Kathryn Grayson—Another good Hardy picture. Pleased everyone.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

ANDY HARDY'S PRIVATE SECRETARY: Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Ann Rutherford, Kathryn Grayson—Perhaps the best of the Hardy pictures to date, and Mickey has competition from the other stars, which is all to the good. Miss Grayson has an exceptional voice, true and full on the higher registers, but on the debit side for the director of this new star, he did not have the savvy to give her only one popular number, and the other was undoubtedly an aria from opera, that was just so much voice exercise to our audience. I don't qualify as a music critic, but I do know that the pictures that have hit with us, where a singing star has a role, that the public wants songs with which they have some listening acquaintance. That was the success of "Tin Pan Alley." The familiar songs give a lilt to a picture that all the arias of opera can't impart.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

BITTER SWEET: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—"Bitter" at the B.O. There are not enough patrons in a small community that care for these "high notes." We stepped into this one with our eyes wide open so have no one to blame but ourselves. We are still kicking ourselves for not using our cancellation privilege on this.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

COME LIVE WITH ME: James Stewart, Hedy Lamarr—Adult entertainment. Pleasing. We hope James Stewart will not like the Army so well that he will forsake Hallywood.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

COME LIVE WITH ME: James Stewart, Hedy Lamarr—We played it Sunday and it gave splendid satisfaction. Much better than we expected from the reviews. Played March 9-11.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

COME LIVE WITH ME: James Stewart, Hedy Lamarr—Your patrons will enjoy this picture from beginning to end. Don't be afraid of it in a small town. People like to laugh anywhere in the country, and James Stewart with Hedy Lamarr race through a highly amusing and thoroughly entertaining picture. Hedy Lamarr, finding it necessary to get a husband, or be deported from this country, asks Stewart to marry her, and pays him a weekly sum for doing so. Since his financial status is at low ebb, he takes her up on the proposition which furnishes the plot for this delightfully different story. Hedy Lamarr is at her best. James Stewart climbs another rung in his ladder of success. Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 5-6.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

COMRADE X: Clarke Gable, Hedy Lamarr—Nothing to it. Just a fair comedy. They will come to see the stars, but will not be entertained very much. —Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

DULCY: Ann Sothern, Ian Hunter—Very good picture but I think Miss Sothern miscast in this. She is more of the "Maisie" type and is liked much more in that series. Running time, 73 minutes. Played March 16-17.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

ESCAPE: Norma Shearer, Robert Taylor, Nazimova, Conrad Veidt—A satisfactory picture to a little above average Sunday-Tuesday business. Propaganda type of show but not poured on as thick as most of the others in this class. Very dramatic with practically no comedy relief.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

ESCAPE: Norma Shearer, Robert Taylor, Nazimova, Conrad Veidt—Played this after "Night Train." There is no comparison between the two pictures except almost the same story. Otherwise the acting, directing, photography and recording is so far superior in "Escape" that the British made picture seems mediocre.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

HAUNTED HONEYMOON: Robert Montgomery, Constance Cummings—See review on "Father Is a Prince," First National.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

LAND OF LIBERTY: Historical—The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America will help you exploit this picture, when you book it. Get your local organizations behind it. Run a special show for school children, at a reduced price, or have it sponsored by your American Legion. Every American man, woman and child will enjoy this picture, and feel like a better American for having seen it. We did above average mid-week business, but most of all, we are proud to have done our part, and glad to have given our patrons something to think about, in this present crisis. The picture is edited with skill, and highly entertaining. Running time, 98 minutes. —Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Wonawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

LITTLE NELLY KELLY: Judy Garland, George Murphy, Charles Winninger—Terrific March storm with temperature below zero killed our Sunday business and, if you don't get them on Sunday, you just don't get them. Playing on March 16-17-18 we had a perfect date, as the picture features a St. Patrick's Day parade. This picture rates as excellent and will please everyone everywhere. Winninger acting in this should give him a shot at the '41 Oscar. He runs away with the show.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

LITTLE NELLY KELLY: Judy Garland, George Murphy—Everybody liked "Nelly Kelly." A very good family picture.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

MAISIE WAS A LADY: Ann Sothern, Lew Ayres, Maureen O'Sullivan—Another good "Maisie" picture. Ann and Lew top the whole show.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

PHILADELPHIA STORY, THE: Katharine Hepburn, James Stewart, Cary Grant, Ruth Hussey, John Howard, Roland Young, Virginia Weidler—One of those pictures everyone seems to have heard about and wants to see.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

PHILADELPHIA STORY, THE: Cary Grant, Katharine Hepburn, James Stewart, Ruth Hussey, John Howard, Roland Young, Virginia Weidler.—A good picture that did fair at B.O. Cary Grant should have received Oscar if there was to be one given for anybody's work in this picture. Running time, 112 minutes. Played March 20-21.—H. L. Capers, New Deal Theatre, Gorman, Texas. Rural patronage.

PHILADELPHIA STORY, THE: Cary Grant, Katharine Hepburn, James Stewart—This is supposed to be one of the big pictures of the year and it is a clever story, produced on a very elaborate scale, but we had a great many tell us they enjoyed "Come Live With Me" much more than this one. Business very poor because of bad weather. Played March 16-18. —N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

PHILADELPHIA STORY, THE: Cary Grant, Katharine Hepburn, James Stewart—This is not a small town picture, where action is necessary to get the patrons in your theatre. It is, however, very entertaining considering the fact there is nothing but dialogue and clever situations to hold it up. All things considered, Ruth Hussey overshadowed Hepburn, in her part. Cary Grant is well cast, but James Stewart is the whole show. He deserved the Academy Award for his performance in this. We gave this picture some extra publicity, and did extra business, but the picture is allocated too high for small towns. It brought out people who rarely come, so that's something. Running time, 110 minutes. Played February 27-28.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

RAGE IN HEAVEN: Robert Montgomery, Ingrid Bergman, George Sanders—Different but very entertaining. Miss Bergman is very attractive and likable. —Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

THIRD FINGER, LEFT HAND: Melvyn Douglas, Myrna Loy—Not a bad picture, but Myrna and Melvyn deserve a better story.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

TRIAL OF MARY DUGAN, THE: Laraine Day, Robert Young—Very pleasing mystery story. Excellent performance by the whole cast.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

WILD MAN OF BORNEO: Frank Morgan, Billie Burke—This one is terrible. The poorest thing Frank Morgan ever worked in. Better leave it on the shelf. Played February 25-26.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

WILD MAN OF BORNEO: Frank Morgan, Billie Burke—Leo should hide his head in shame. I did. Running time, 78 minutes. Played March 2-3.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

WYOMING: Wallace Beery, Leo Carrillo, Marjorie Main—Second biggest draw we have had during the first three months of 1941. Picture is above Beery's usual high average and packed with thrills and laughs. Just the right combination for the small community. —L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

Monogram

RIDERS OF THE FRONTIER: Tex Ritter—A very good western. Running time, 62 minutes. Played March 15.—Harry Shaw, Ritz Theatre, Aberdeen, Miss. Small town patronage.

SON OF THE NAVY: James Dunn, Martin Spellman, Jean Parker—They seemed to like this one. It was quite funny in some spots but as a whole it went over alright on Cash Nite. We billed it as a swell picture to go in line with defense and so they turned out fairly well. Some of Monogram's pictures are O.K. but others not. We usually pick the top ones when we play them. Many times though a programmer will out do a top bracket, as has been proven. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 12.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

TOMBOY: Marcia Mae Jones, Jackie Moran—This is just about "tops" for a Friday-Saturday double bill. Certainly the best we have ever had from Monogram. Had a lot of very nice comments. It is 100 per cent entertainment all the way and will go over very big with those that come to town on Saturday night.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

Paramount

ARISE, MY LOVE: Claudette Colbert, Ray Milland—Very good war picture, if your patrons like such. Mine do not. Title misleading. They thought it a comedy and as soon as the war propaganda started, the "walkouts" were quite nummerous. Some said they got all that stuff they wanted in the newsreels and radio. Running time, 109 minutes. Played March 12-13.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

HARD BOILED CANARY, THE (tentative title): Susanna Foster, Allan Jones—Good for family trade. Young people orchestra excellent. Fine singing by Susanna Foster.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

LOVE THY NEIGHBOR: Jack Benny, Fred Allen, Mary Martin, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson—An excellent picture and pleased all.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MAD DOCTOR, THE: Basil Rathbone, Ellen Drew, John Howard—Just a program picture which pleased those few who came to see it. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 18.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MONSTER AND THE GIRL, THE: Ellen Drew, Red Cameron—While just a program picture, this drew very well on a week-end date, and there were no complaints. Running time, 64 minutes. Played March 21-22.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MOON OVER BURMA: Preston Foster, Dorothy Lamour, Robert Preston—Just another headache as usual. But hats off to Paramount's advertising men who write and make up those terriffic punch lines in all motion picture magazines. They use apples, peaches, nuts in their campaign but I think they should use lemons instead. Running time, 71 minutes. Played February 18.—Mario Battiston, Ritz Theatre, Export, Pa. Small town patronage.

NORTH WEST MOUNTED POLICE: Gary Cooper, Madeleine Carroll, Paulette Goddard, Preston Foster, Robert Preston—This production in beautiful color, spells entertainment and box office all the way. It is a wonderful piece of merchandise that you will be proud to run. Give it the gun, then set back and watch the shekels roll in. Running time, 125 minutes. Played March 23-24.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

SECOND CHORUS: Fred Astaire, Paulette Goddard, Artie Shaw and his Band, Burgess Meredith—Astaire and Rogers should not have been separated as they used to be very good drawing cards. Little dancing in this picture. Only fair picture.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

SECOND CHORUS: Fred Astaire, Paulette Goddard, Artie Shaw and His Band, Burgess Meredith—A very good show. Very well acted on the parts of Miss Goddard and Artie Shaw. Burgess Meredith did also one swell piece of acting. All together, a show darn hard to beat. Running time, 88 minutes. Played March 17-18.—Harry Shaw, Ritz Theatre, Aberdeen, Miss. Small town patronage.

TEXAS RANGERS RIDE AGAIN: John Howard, Ellen Drew, Akim Taamiroff, May Robson—Just another western.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

VICTORY: Fredric March, Betty Field, Sir Cedric Hardwicke. Very satisfactory.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

VICTORY: Fredric March, Betty Field—Just fair, and that is all. It has some modicum of plot and some action, but it takes better pictures than this to satisfy the public in these days.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

VIRGINIA: Madeleine Carroll, Fred MacMurray, Stirling Hayden, Helen Broderick, Carolyn Lee—Pleased all. Color beautiful and so is Miss Carroll. "Pretty" (Carolyn Lee) stole the show.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

VIRGINIA: Madeleine Carroll, Fred MacMurray, Marie Wilson, Carolyn Lee—Good picture and good business. Good story, good cast, good color and everyone was pleased. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 19-30.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

YOU'RE THE ONE: Bonnie Baker, Orrin Tucker and his Band, Jerry Colonna, Edward Everett Horton—Fairly good comedy with music. Ayerage draw on double bill. Played February 21-22.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

YOU'RE THE ONE: Bonnie Baker, Orrin Tucker and his band, Jerry Colonna, Edward Everett Horton—This is not a big picture, but it pleased. Fair businesss, most of which was the jitterbug trade. Running time, 80 minutes. Played March 23-24.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Republic

ARKANSAS JUDGE: Weaver Brothers and Elviry—We did a big business on this one. I don't think it as good as some of their others. But it pleased. Running time, 72 minutes. Played March 14-15.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

BEHIND THE NEWS: Lloyd Nolan, Doris Davenport—Newspaper story which reminded me of "The Front Page." This is a good action picture and business was satisfactory. This should please any day in the week, even Sunday, if you are stuck for a picture. Running time, 75 minutes. Played March 21-22.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RANCHO GRANDE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey, Mary Lee—This Autry was very good and everybody liked this one. The little girl, Mary Lee, in it should be groomed for good parts as she can sing swell as well as a good job of acting. The best one of the Autrys I have ever used was "South of the Border" from the B.O. standpoint and I think due to the song of the same name. Running time, 70 minutes. Played February 19.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

RIDE, TENDERFOOT, RIDE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Mary Lee—This time Gene is a meat packer. He has been most everything but what he should be, a cowboy. Don't think he will be popular very long with this type story.—E. H. Malone, Alma Theatre, Alma, Wis. General patronage.

RIDIN' ON A RAINBOW: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Mary Lee, Carol Adams—Excellent. Did good business. People that never come to see westerns came to see this. Many favorable comments from the "upper-crust," and from the rural patrons, too. One of Gene's best pictures.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

RIDIN' ON A RAINBOW: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Mary Lee—Ridin' on a gold mine for us. Business very satisfactory. Some thought his best. —Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN RANGERS: Three Mesquiteers (Robert Livingston, Raymond Hatton, Duncan Renaldo), Rosella Towne—Good western and usual western business.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

ROVIN' TUMBLEWEEDS: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Mary Carlisle—This Autry was not quite as good as some of them. However, it pleased the patrons on cash nite. Running time, 65 minutes. Played March 5.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

SCATTERBRAIN: Judy Canova, Alan Mowbray, Ruth Donnelly—Boy, oh boy, what a show. Can this gal sing! Just what the doctor ordered for anyone down in the dumps. I could see this picture again as I sure did enjoy it and so did everyone that saw it. It had some hill billy in it and some modern shots but it had what it takes for the small town. Running time, 80 minutes. Played February 22-23.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

SCATTERBRAIN: Judy Canova, Alan Mowbray, Matty Malneck and his Orchestra—Just a piece of junk, in my estimation. Print poor. Judy has a wonderful voice. Most of the audience thought it was good, so it must be. Played March 14-15.—E. H. Malone, Alma Theatre, Alma, Wis. General patronage.

RKO Radio

KITTY FOYLE: Ginger Rogers, Dennis Morgan, James Craig—A good picture for the ladies. Excellent acting.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

LADDIE: Tim Holt, Virginia Gilmore, Joan Carroll—This one is very good and will especially please the farmer patrons. Doubled with "The Gay Caballero." We feel that we ran a very satisfactory twin bill. The small girl (Joan Carroll) that plays the part of "little sister" is especially good.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

LI'L ABNER: Granville Owen, Mona Bay, Johnnie Morris, Martha O'Driscoll, Buster Keaton—Drew good first night, but just about the poorest show we have run in a very long time. "Mammy Yokum" and "Pappy Yokum" are made up so ridiculously that the whole thing falls flat. Should be used on a double bill with something very good.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

MELODY FOR THREE: Jean Hersholt, Fay Wray, Schuyler Standish—A very nice little picture, featuring some wonderful violin music by Schuyler Standish. Enjoyed by everyone. Played March 12-13.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

MEN AGAINST THE SKY: Richard Dix, Wendy Barrie, Edmund Lowe—A good program picture.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MEN AGAINST THE SKY: Richard Dix, Kent Taylor, Edmund Lowe, Wendy Barrie—Everybody liked this. We played it the coldest night of the year to enjoyable business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

MEXICAN SPITFIRE OUT WEST: Lupe Velez, Leon Errol—Below average production. Played February 28-March 1.—E. H. Malone, Alma Theatre, Alma, Wis. General patronage.

MR. AND MRS. SMITH: Carole Lombard, Robert Montgomery, Gene Raymond—Too silly to be entertaining. Good stars wasted on such poor story material.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

NO, NO, NANETTE: Anna Neagle, Richard Carlson, Victor Mature, Roland Young, Helen Broderick, Zasu Pitts—Good enough comedy, but a little too sophisticated for a rural situation. Allocated too high and we lost a little on it.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wis. General patronage.

NO, NO, NANETTE: Anna Neagle, Richard Carlson—A very good picture despite the fact that it has a little English accent. Running time, 96 minutes. Played March 12-13.—Harry Shaw, Ritz Theatre, Aberdeen, Miss. Small town patronage.

RAMPARTS WE WATCH, THE: March of Time —I really thought I had something here, bought as a special in the top brackets. I had a very small opening on Friday and the lowest gross receipts in ages on Saturday. People would come up and take one look at the advertising, then run away. My conclusions were Hitler means poison as an attraction; the people just don't want to be annoyed by his presence even in the movies. Running time, 90 minutes. Played

REMEDY FOR RICHES: Jean Hersholt, Dorothy Lovett—Just fair. Only a programmer. Weak. Played February 26-27.—E. H. Malone, Alma Theatre, Alma, Wis. General patronage.

STAGE TO CHINO: George O'Brien, Virginia Vale—Some few weeks ago I read a report of an exhibitor who said that a western is always new until you have run it, which is right. This one rather old, but what a western with all the action that the small town goes for. This being the first George O'Brien that I ran, I hope that the balance of them is like this one, well liked and fair business. This western puts some that I have run to shame. Running time, 60 minutes. Played March 15-16.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

TOO MANY GIRLS: Lucille Ball, Richard Carlson, Ann Miller, Desi Arnaz—A fair musical offering that failed to spell box office for me. However, those that came were satisfied. I used it on Bank Nights to low grosses and unable to find the answer. Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 19-20.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

YOU'LL FIND OUT: Kay Kyser and Orchestra, Peter Lorre, Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi—Nothing much to this picture.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CHAD HANNA: Henry Fonda, Linda Darnell, Dorothy Lamour—Excellent color adds a lot to this story of small-time circus people. Very poor title.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

GAY CABALLERO, THE: Cesar Romero, Sheila Ryan—Doubled with "Laddie." We feel we ran a very satisfactory twin bill.—L. V. Bergtold, Westby Theatre, Westby, Wiss. General patronage.

GREAT PROFILE, THE: John Barrymore, John Payne, Mary Beth Hughes—Terrible. I'm thankful that John Barrymore is not in any more of our pictures. Running time, 70 minutes.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

HUDSON'S BAY: Paul Muni, Gene Tierney—Very pleasing picture. Full of adventure and excitement. Worthy of your best days.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

HUDSON'S BAY: Paul Muni—The public must have a sixth sense. They evidently spotted this one for what it was. Paul Muni with a synthetic French patois, that after it got through his beard was just so much mush, and much of it unintelligible. All I know is that it just was not there, and the box office reached a three-year low for the weekend.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

JENNIE: Virginia Gilmore, William Henry—Good little picture suitable for double bill. Played February 19-20.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

MICHAEL SHAYNE, PRIVATE DETECTIVE: Lloyd Nolan, Marjorie Weaver—Small picture, and smaller grosses.—Leon C. Balduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

NIGHT TRAIN: Margaret Lockwood, Rex Harrison—Lots of praise is being given to this picture by the critics, but we did not think it was as good as they said. Poor recording.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

ONE IN A MILLION: Sonja Henie, Don Ameche, Adolphe Menjou, Jean Hersholt, Ritz Brothers—Second run and no business.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

STREET OF MEMORIES: Lynne Roberts, Guy Kibbee—Nothing much to this picture.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

TALL, DARK AND HANDSOME: Cesar Romero, Virginia Gilmore, Charlotte Greenwood, Milton Berle—Here's a sleeper. Plenty good enough for any day of the week. Don't waste it. This Gilmore girl looks like a real comer.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

TALL, DARK AND HANDSOME: Cesar Romero, Milton Berle, Virginia Gilmore—A fair program picture. Belongs in bottom allocation and would get by, but that is all.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

TIN PAN ALLEY: Alice Faye, Betty Grable, Jack Oakie, John Payne—Very good picture to very good business. Everybody seemed to enjoy this one. This company continues to make the best musicals. Played February 16-18.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

YOUTH WILL BE SERVED: Jane Withers, Jane Darwell, Robert Conway—Another week high allocation picture. In fact, this picture is too weak for Fox bottom allocation.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

United Artists

BLACKOUT: Valerie Hobson, Conrad Veidt—This was a real blackout for our show. Running time, 80 minutes. Played March 10-11.—Harry Shaw, Ritz Theatre, Aberdeen, Miss. Small town patronage.

LONG VOYAGE HOME: John Wayne, Thomas Mitchell, Ian Hunter, Barry Fitzgerald—The critics or what have you may have praised this picture, but the patrons did not, the few who saw it. No entertainment whatever.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

OVER THE MOON: Merle Oberon, Rex Harrison—Color. Not a bad picture. Played March 5-6.—E. H. Malone, Alma Theatre, Alma, Wis. General patronage.

ROADSHOW: Adolphe Menjou, Carole Landis, John Hubbard, Patsy Kelly—Rather silly and ridiculous, but audience had quite a few laughs over it.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

SO ENDS OUR NIGHT: Fredric March, Margaret Sullavan, Frances Dee, Glenn Ford, Anna Sten—Owing to storm, it was a low grosser. But it is a very fine production and suitable for Sunday. Many favorable comments. Running time, 120 minutes. Played March 16-18.—E. H. Malone, Alma Theatre, Alma, Wis. General patronage.

SON OF MONTE CRISTO: Louis Hayward, Joan Bennett, George Sanders—Very good successor to "Count of Monte Cristo." Keeps your interest throughout. Fine acting by everyone. We would like to see Hayward oftener. In our opinion, he could get to be a great favorite.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

THIEF OF BAGDAD, THE: Conrad Veidt, Sabu, June Duprez—Spectacular color picture. Weird phantasy, but pleasing to young and old.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

THIEF OF BAGDAD, THE: Conrad Veidt, Sabu, June Duprez—A masterpiece of trick photography and beauty of color and scenes, but it is going to be hard to sell, and so it proved. But, if its type, it is still a credit to some that have preceded it.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

WESTERNER, THE: Gray Cooper, Walter Brennan, Doris Davenport—Everybody liked this, but did not do business anticipated. Walter Brennan steals the show.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Universal

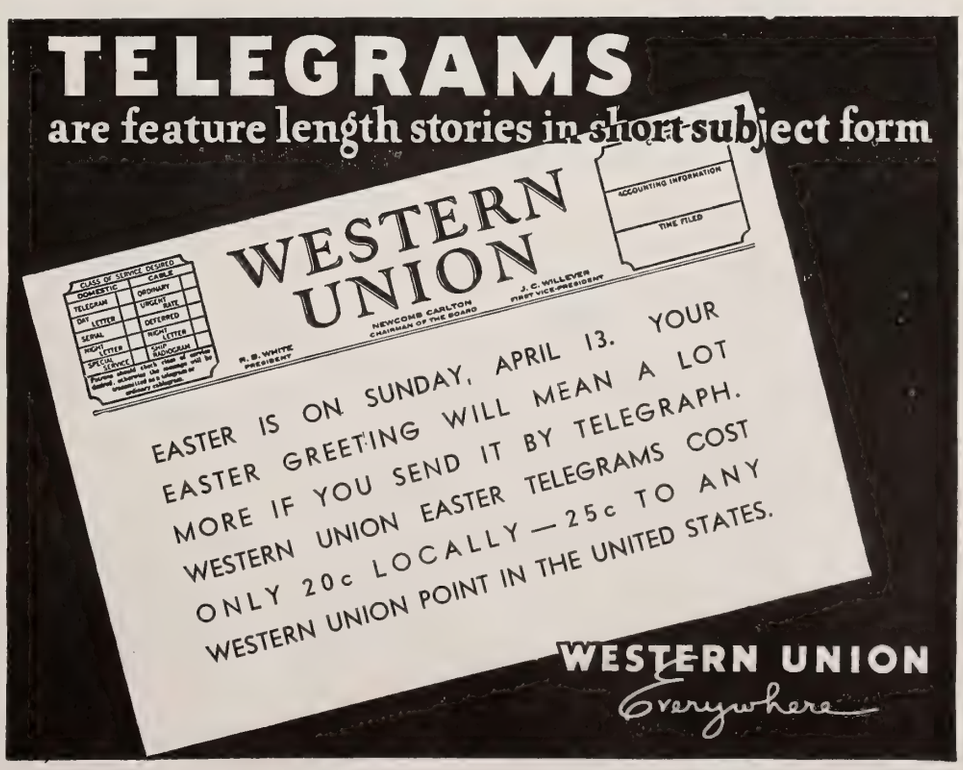
BLACK FRIDAY: Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi—Here is one of the best horror type pictures for quite some time. A story of the doctor who transfers a brain from one man to another and quite a few complications set in. Picture done up good and everyone seemed to like it. Business fair due to Lent and other festivities. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 22-23.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

NEXT TIME WE LOVE (reissue): Margaret Sullavan, James Stewart, Ray Milland—This picture was a good one, but not for the small town. I thought it a swell show and so did some that saw it; others did not care for it and complained. I did not get to see it when it was first issued, so picked it up figuring to do some extra business, but didn't; but still I am not sorry. Running time, 80 minutes. Played February 26.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

NICE GIRL?: Deanna Durbin, Franchot Tone, Walter Brennan, Robert Stack, Robert Benchley, Helen Broderick—A replica of "Little Women" and faithfully carried out in the main from start to finish of "Little Women" over again. Deanna's puppy love for Franchot Tone was changed to Robert Stack when she finally ascertained the fact that all's not gold that glitters. One of the screen's most interesting stories of the year and a picture that's guaranteed to please all seeing it. Running time, 95 minutes. Played March 20-26.—William Noble, Midwest Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

FOOTSTEPS IN THE DARK: Errol Flynn, Brenda Marshall, Ralph Gellamy, Alan Hale, Allen Jenkins—Not a big special. Warners let Errol Flynn down in casting him in this picture.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.



FOOTSTEPS IN THE DARK: Errol Flynn, Brenda Marshall, Ralph Bellamy, Allen Jenkins, Alan Hale—A very exciting detective story, full of thrills and the end not in sight till the end is reached. Allen Jenkins, Alan Hale and others, excellent good actors, contribute their might in helping to bring a very excellent picture before your eyes and you'll enjoy seeing this one. Running time, 93 minutes. Played March 19-25.—William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

FOOTSTEPS IN THE DARK: Errol Flynn, Ralph Bellamy, Brenda Marshall—This picture is thoroughly entertaining, a very clever mystery comedy, that has all the elements necessary to make it a surprise hit, and start a series of amateur detecting for Errol Flynn, but it failed to draw patronage, and I think the trouble lies in its title. Play up the mystery-comedy angle, and it will click. It's small town entertainment, with Errol Flynn doing a swell job. Running time, 96 minutes. Played March 16-18.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

as good as the others of this series. Played March 12-13.—E. H. Malone, Alma Theatre, Alma, Wis. General patronage.

GREAT MR. NOBODY, THE: Eddie Albert, Joan Leslie, Alan Hale, John Litel—Here is a dandy little program picture that will surprise your patrons with its genuine entertainment. It is a family night fare, that will bring them in. I ran this one day, Tuesday, to supplant the third day of "Wild Man of Borneo," and I am sorry I didn't book it in the latter's place. It would have done more business than "Wild Man," and given much more satisfaction. Running time, 71 minutes. Played March 4.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

HONEYMOON FOR THREE: Ann Sheridan, George Brent, Jane Wyman—Just fair.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

HONEYMOON FOR THREE: Ann Sheridan, George Brent, Jane Wyman, Charlie Ruggles—Some enjoyed it, but the majority said it was no good.—E. H. Malone, Alma Theatre, Alma, Wis. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

BARNYARD BABIES: Fables Cartoons—This one from Columbia happened to be okay and kind of cute. It was done a little differently than most of them. Columbia does make good ones a lot of the time. Running time, seven minutes.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

ICE CAPERS: World of Sport—Outstanding short. Played it in our cold wave. People enjoyed it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

MOUSE EXTERMINATOR, THE: Fables Cartoons—Not bad as a cartoon. Quite a few laughs from the mouse and the cat. Running time, eight minutes. —H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

ODD VOCATIONS: Cinescopes—Another oddity that should please all in the small towns. They like anything different, I have found. Only they want a change quite often. Running time, eight minutes.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

PARK YOUR BABY: Fables Cartoons—These cartoons or any of them are okay, but they do not make them long enough, so the kids say. Running time, eight minutes.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

PRACTICE MAKES PERFECT: Fables Cartoons —Not bad for a cartoon. It does give quite a lesson, though, on how to practice on the piano as well as being quite funny and entertaining. Running time, seven minutes.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

SCHOOLBOY DREAMS: Phantasies Cartoons—A fair cartoon.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

GOOD BAD BOYS: Our Gang Comedies—Fair. Running time, 11 minutes.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

MRS. LADYBUG: Technicolor Cartoons—Excellent. Running time, nine minutes.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

MORE ABOUT NOSTRADAMUS: Miniatures—A strange, weird tale. The prophecies of centuries ago were true. Will the prophecy that there will always be an England—will Hitler be defeated as prophesied over 400 years ago? Everyone should see this truly interesting picture. Running time, 10 minutes.—William Noble, Midwest Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

PROSPECTING BEAR, THE: Technicolor Cartoons—Good cartoon in color. The finale more than pleased the kiddies when it showed fireworks in vivid color. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RESPECT THE LAW: Crime Does Not Pay Series—Very good. Running time, 20 minutes.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

Paramount

FISHING FEVER: Grantland Rice Sportlights—A good sport reel.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

OLIVE'S SWEEPSTAKE TICKET: Popeye the Sailor—A lost Irish Sweepstake ticket which was elusive and bent on getting away. But the capital prize was a bird in a cage. Popeye's antics in trying to help capture the fast reappearing and disappearing ticket very funny and amusing. Running time, nine minutes.—William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

PINKY TOMLIN AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Headliners—Orchestral reel okay.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

POP AND MOM IN WILD OYSTERS: Animated Antics—A cat, dog, mouse and osyter story. The oysters were really wild and kind of clammy. Picture full of adventure and very interesting. Running time, 10 minutes.—William Noble, Midwest Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

SACRED GANGES, THE: Fascinating Journeys—Very interesting. Running time, 10 minutes.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

RKO Radio

COURT FAVORITES: RKO Pathe Sportscopes—These reels we have been running for two years and they seem to all be different. Some are very good; others are not so good. This one on tennis is okay if there are enough tennis fans in the house. Most of the younger people like these sports reels as they follow the sports. Running time, 10 minutes.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

DRAFTED IN THE DEPOT: Edgar Kennedy—A very good Kennedy comedy.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

FLY CASTING: RKO Pathe Sportscopes—This one about flycasting in the trout streams. Not being a fisherman, I could see how it was done, though. Those people that fish like it. Running time, 10 minutes.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

FOX HUNT, THE: Walt Disney Cartoons—This one of Disney very good. Donald, of course, was in charge of the hounds and they give him a merry chase. He also found the fox or foxes and the skunk, too, in the end. They liked it very well. Running time, eight minutes.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

INFORMATION, PLEASE: No. 3—Not so good. Seen better.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

MOTH AND THE FLAME, THE: Walt Disney Cartoons—This one okay, too. Most of the Disney please our patrons as well as the grownups. Some are very funny and others are just good to look at and rest your mind. Running time, eight minutes.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

OFFICER DUCK: Walt Disney Cartoons—Plenty good. Running time, eight minutes.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

PENNANT CHASERS: RKO Pathe Sportscopes—This is another Sportscope reel that had about the big league baseball teams. Very interesting for the baseball fan. I ran it when we should have had basketball, but gave them an early break with it. Running time, 10 minutes.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

PICTURE PEOPLE: No. 2—Very good. Fairly good entertainment.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

MIDGET MOTOR MANIA: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—Good. Running time, 10 minutes.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

MISSISSIPPI SWING: Terry-Toons—A very good cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MOVIETONE NEWS: I believe this has a little edge on the other newsreels.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

RODEO GOES TO TOWN, THE: Sports Reviews—Entertaining one-reeler about how rodeos are organized as staged. Was very much liked here, as this is the home of the annual Dewey Roundup, one of the big rodeos of the Middle West held each year on July 4th.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

TEMPERAMENTAL LION: Terry-Toons—Not much. Running time, seven minutes.—Ray Peacock, Onalaska Theatre, Onalaska, Wash. Loggers and mill workers patronage.

Universal

GOING PLACES: No. 69—I never ran much of any kind of shorts, only cartoons, until this year and these Going Places are okay. Similar to "believe it or not" and some of the things are very good. Running time, eight minutes.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

Vitaphone

CLIFF EDWARDS AND HIS BUCKAROOS: Melody Masters—A real hillbilly band with songs and tricky steps galore. Running time, seven minutes.—William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

MALIBU BEACH PARTY: Merrie Melodies Cartoons—Excellent. Give us more.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SNIFFLES BELLS THE CAT: Merrie Melodies Cartoons—Good cartoon in color. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Serials

Universal

JUNIOR G-MEN: Dead End Kids—So far, pretty good serial. I've seen very few really good serials in last two or three years.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Republic

DAREDEVILS OF THE RED CIRCLE: Charles Quigley, Herman Brix, Carole Landis—We are finishing up this chapter play and as it did not bring any extra business it did hold what we have had this winter due to bad roads and business condition. This is a pretty good serial with plenty of action in each chapter. Most serials from Republic go over in our particular situation. Running time, 20 minutes.—H. D. Furnice, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa. Rural and small town patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

REFLECTIONS

Back to the "fireplace" after hectic jaunting here and there about the nation, your Chairman takes time out to look back over what happened and finds much for which to give thanks.

Mostly, the thanks have to do with the reception accorded the Quigley Grand Awards by Hollywood and warmth of greeting to the Awards party. Previous issues tell all of it. What may be added is opinion in high places that the Grand Awards now assume sufficient stature in Hollywood to measure up to the importance with which production regards the Academy Awards.

The fabulous Hollywood glamour, sneered at by too many people, is nothing to laugh off. It was in evidence at the premiere of United Artists' "Lady Hamilton" at the Four Star Theatre, in Los Angeles. It was doubly in evidence at the premiere of Warners' "Sea Wolf," on the S. S. America, en route to San Francisco, on the tremendous publicity-building junket staged by the Charlie Einfeld-Bob Taplinger forces.

Stars, lights, grandstands, broadcasts, personal appearances and what not were shrewdly employed for fat dividends. The paying customers loved it all. They are the ones to be pleased.

Not the least part of a San Francisco day was spent with Charlie Schlaifer and in study of advertising turned out by the expert ad head of Herman Cohen's United Artists Theatre. Called upon frequently for aid in laying out national campaigns, Schlaifer's displays have long established themselves as ticket-sellers of unusual power.

The current visit to the Golden Gate cosmopolis affirms an impression gathered last year that San Francisco theatremen are generally allowed to proceed on their own and with little homeoffice interference. That is immediately apparent in the morale of the managers, the pleasing condition of their theatres and the business they are doing.

Stamping grounds of more top showmen than one can shake a stick at—including Louis Charninsky, the perennial effervescent—and the home of that tremendous Variety Club, where the showmen gather, Dallas is always a spot to stop at. Not the least of its reputation as a grand show town comes about through the newspaper support given by such stalwarts as famed John Rosenfield, of the News; Jim Lovell, of the Times-Herald, and Eddie Barr, of the Journal.

Applicants for membership in the Round Table sometimes ask what the yearly dues come to, or what might be the costs of joining.

May we repeat, gentlemen: There are no dues to pay, no payments of any kind to make. Membership in the Round Table is free.

There is only one obligation, one that the members voluntarily take upon themselves:

To report their boxoffice activities to this department, at not too infrequent intervals.

IT HAPPENS RIGHT ALONG

Often enough to speak about it here is the gracious gesture made by Round Tablers in reporting campaigns to this department. The boys ask that their assistants or other personnel, by name, be credited in print for a fair share of the job.

The manager who believes in a helping hand to lesser members of the staff frequently finds his boost for the other fellow a boost for himself. The manpower situation being what it is, home-office heads have long learned that the man smart enough to train personnel for heavier responsibilities is equally at ease in a bigger job to do it on a larger scale.

THE LONG OF THE "SHORT"

The exploitation fire touched off by Besa Short on Interstate's male cooking contest for Pete Smith's "Penny to the Rescue", now sweeping the country, currently waxes hotter as Paramount adds fuel with a nationwide Father's Day tiein on the Robert Benchley short, "The Forgotten Man". Saturday Evening Post copy and a raft of solid merchandising ideas are offered by Paramount. Fine campaigns will result.

Thus, time and again are demonstrated the profit possibilities in the exploitation of short subjects. Knowing showmen have often discovered sufficient power in these added units to carry the heaviest share of the boxoffice load.

Round Table In Pictures

(Above) Conceived by Phil Laufer, publicist, N. Y. Criterion, for date on "Monster and the Girl," was 24-foot beaver board cutout of a gorilla. Animation caused the eyes to blink.

(Above) Promoting several varieties of fern, Carmon Phillips at the Onate, in Belan, N. M., planted them on table out side for gag stunt on "This Thing Called Love." Copy overall read: "Warning, do not touch. This plant, is thought to contain poison oak. That's what got Douglas & Russell" in, etc., etc.

Effective lobby setpiece was arranged by U. A. exploiteer in Auckland, N. Z. for date on "Foreign Correspondent" at the Plaza Theatre. On-the-spot camera recordings of world events were tacked to easel with guest tickets awarded to those submitting correct list identifying each.

Patrons at Loew's Theatre, in Dayton, Ohio, were invited by Round Tabler Sam Gilman to step up to typewriters in lobby and try their skill at typing messages at the rate of 75 words a minute as did "Andy Hardy's Private Secretary." Usher in attendance timed the entrants, awarding guest tickets to winners. Scroll card over display carried explanatory copy.

Sportsmen's Show Goes Over Big

Reported by Stan Benford, chairman of the publicity committee, Steve Barutio's No. Philadelphia district Warner theatres, was the All-American Sport Show conceived by Matty Rosenbluth at the Colonial there. Held for two days, the theatreman, in addition to his feature, booked in the following shorts: "Bowling for Strikes"; "Diving Demons"; "Fly Fishing"; "Golfing"; "The Trouble Shooter"; "Quail Quest" and "Wacky Wildlife."

Contacting local sporting goods store, golf clubs, recreating centers and rifle clubs, Rosenbluth promoted membership list and circularized them in advance. In addition, special trailer was run and lobby displays featured. Picture of "Rosy" and Stoney McGlinn, WIP sports commentator, was taken at the station in front of mike and then planted in dailies four days ahead with story to the effect that prominent newspaper and radio personalities congratulated Rosenbluth on his first Sportsmen's Show.

Contest angle was brought in through tieup with bowling alleys, whereby perfect scores received trophies from the respective alleys, which were presented on stage. Theatre contest featured distribution of tinted cards, guest tickets going to those finding corresponding numbers and color cards posted on lobby easel. Plugs on the show were landed over Stations WPEN, WFIL and WIBG, in addition to various stores displaying copy.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

"Foyle" Blotter Herald Tied to Academy Award

Effective was the blotter stunt used by A. J. Kalberer at Switow's Indiana, in Washington, Ind., for "Kitty Foyle." In addition to carrying cut of Ginger Rogers and picture copy, small box at lower right hand corner was devoted to announcement of Miss Rogers having recently landed the Academy Award. These were circulated at doctors, dentists, insurance and other offices.

For "Gone With the Wind," Kal featured a newspaper contest in which he ran four scene stills. Guest tickets were awarded here to those submitting best reasons why they preferred one scene over another.

LAGUARDIA PROCLAIMS FLYING CADET WEEK

In connection with the premiere of Paramount's "I Wanted Wings" at the New York Astor, Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia inaugurated a "Greater New York Flying Cadet Week," urging citizens to spread the word of the importance and honor attached to flying service in our Air Corps.

Blowup of proclamation for window cards and three color one-sheets was used throughout the city. Also in connection with the opening, pursuit ship and recruiting truck appropriately bannered were stationed at Duffy Square.

Amateur Radio Emergency Council Set by Smith for "Ham" Amateurs

Searching for an idea that would gain attention publicitywise, Cass Smith at the United Detroit Annex, in Detroit, presented a plan through local dailies, whereby local "hams" were invited to set up their paraphernalia in the theatre lobby and send messages free of charge to any part of the country. Bill Hendricks of the advertising department assisted to the extent of tying the Navy into the stunt.

Plans were made for a convention of all amateur radio operators in the metropolitan area of Detroit to meet at the theatre during a specified two-week period and talk over the air nightly advertising the stunt. Tied into the Council itself were the Western Union, F. C. C., Red Cross, Michigan Bell Telephone Company and Lou Schmidt of the 73 Club of Dearborn.

Day ahead of convention, spot announcements were arranged at no cost over Stations WCAR, WWJ, WJLB, WJBK and WJR, copy running something like this: "You are urged to attend a mass meeting of the Michigan Amateur Radio Emergency Council at the Annex Theatre," etc. Newspaper breaks came throughout the exhibit and local prominents from the cooperating organizations were on hand to address the aggregation.

Reporter-Draftee Bet Arranged by Rubin

What sweeter combination could one have than a reporter on a local daily getting ready to join Uncle Sam's Army, while the theatreman is readying his opening on "Buck Privates"? "None," says Harry Rubin at the Tivoli, Michigan City, Ind., who immediately set about his exploitation campaign by wagering Draftee-reporter Gleason five bucks that he couldn't sit through the show without laughing.

Opening gun a few days ahead was front-page story by-lined by Gleason, who claimed he didn't see anything funny about joining the army, defied Rubin's claim and countered with a retort that he'd take on the bet and his laugh would come when he collected the five dollars. Conversation continued in the paper until after the showing, when the reporter came through with front page again and admitted Rubin had licked him and he would gladly pay up.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Photos of Localites Used for Theatre Tieup

An unusual bit of institutional advertising has been instituted by Karl Kelly at Warner's Parkway, in Milwaukee with the theatreman clipping pictures of people appearing in newspapers, pasting photos on a prepared form letter and mailing them to the individual. Copy in letter read:

"We saw your picture and decided we would like to see you as a regular patron of the Parkway. Kindly accept the enclosed ticket and be our guest at your earliest convenience.

We are making this friendly offer to you for two reasons. First, we want to see you as a regular customer, second, we want you to become acquainted with the high grade of entertainment offered.

The Parkway Theatre offers the best in sound, projection and service. All the leading films produced in Hollywood are bought for the Parkway and we are proud to present these pictures to you.

We hope to have the pleasure of greeting you personally at the Parkway Theatre soon."

Smalley Invites Navy to "A Girl, A Guy, A Gob"

Ted Smalley of the Garde Theatre, New London, Conn., capitalized on the navy atmosphere of the community for his big campaign on "A Girl, A Guy and A Gob," outfitting his house staff in navy uniforms well in advance, covering the naval bases with posters and literature and had as guests officers of the New London Submarine Base. Ted also posted an honor guard at the theatre front on opening night, entertained a committee of the Navy Wives Club, set up a recruiting station in the lobby and used displays with navy colors for his theatre front and merchants' windows.

The radio campaign consisted of six spot announcements daily over Station WNLC and a lobby broadcast. The out-of-town newspaper coverage was thorough and posting consisted of six illuminated 24-sheet stands placed at junctions of all roads leading into New London. For school coverage there was material placed on bulletin boards at the Connecticut College for Women, the U. S. Coast Guard Academy and Bullard Academy and the latter also sent a detachment of men in uniform.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Lobby Tea Broadcast Held by Campbell

Reported as catching on with better than anticipated results, is the tea hour broadcast arranged by Leslie V. Campbell and emanating from the lobby of the Strand Theatre, in Trail, B.C., with proceeds going to the local Red Cross chapter. Taking place each Friday afternoon from 3.15 to 3.45, tea is served after the broadcast by members of leading woman's organization, who make a small charge for the tea.

Club pays the line charges, radio station donates the half hour and secures the talent for the programs. By having the broadcasting lines in the theatre, Campbell reports that he can use them during the week at no extra charge. All the stunt costs the theatreman is the light used, and he secures plenty of advertising, since the current and coming attractions are announced after each number.

'Nice Girl' Double Sought by Curley

Opening gun of Jules Curley's "Nice Girl" campaign at the Strand, in Albany, started 10 days in advance with a Deanna Durbin "Doubles-for-a-Day" contest in the Times Union. Among the promotions effected were a spring outfit; suite at leading hotel, plus dinner and luncheon for winner and chaperone, court of honor and press; beauty treatments, corsage and jewelry. Winner and party attended the preview and were later hosted at night club, also a promotion. Saturday before opening, winner modeled her outfit at local fashion show and made appearances at hotels. Radio coverage included guesting of winner on Quiz program few days ahead and interview over WOKO's Sound Stage program.

Newspaper featured daily stories and art in addition to fashion stills. Each of the merchants tied into the contest came through with co-op ads, window and storewide displays with appropriate credit cards.

Another highlight was a Kiwanis Night which was held at the theatre to honor two local Kiwanians who had written "The Great American Way," one of the hit tunes in the picture. Invitations to attend as paying guests were mailed to all club members.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Schultz Promotes Broadcast Of "You're the One" Tunes

Radio coverage for "You're the One" as arranged by John Schultz at the Liberty, in Sharon, Pa., consisted of a special 20-minute program day ahead of Orrin Tucker's tunes from the picture. Four portables planted at strategic spots around town picked up the program, announcer advising folks to "Listen to WPIC opening day at 2:10 and see if You're the One." Twenty names were announced on the programs and if these persons went to the boxoffice, guest tickets were awarded. Program was costless. In addition, regular plugs were laid on the station's daily "Name the Melody" program. Record player in lobby week ahead played hit tunes and various music stores cooperated with window and counter displays of sheet music and scene stills.

For "Long Voyage Home," Schultz contacted Sea Scouts, who marched to the theatre in uniform. Round Tabler further furnished radio station with quiz program questions contained in press book, receiving liberal breaks on station's "Stump the Staff" program.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Barnes' "Story" Letterhead

Signing himself as "Minister of Propoganda for Mirth, President Association for Promotion of Laughter and Manager of the Capitol Theatre," Round Tabler Harold Barnes, of Clinton, Ia., sent letters to special mailing list containing gag selling copy on "Philadelphia Story." Opening paragraph read: "You are being drafted to spread good cheer. In these troubled times we need more laughter. As a self-appointed Minister my first official duty is to bring to you," etc., etc. In addition special cards were printed up with cut of Hepburn plugging the reserved seat policy.

METROPOLITAN DIVISIONAL CONTEST BRINGS AWARDS TO RKO THEATREMEN

Managers in Four N. Y. Divisions Voted February Drive Prizes for Outstanding Campaigns; Unique Competitions Stressed

Chosen for the best all-round showmanship in their respective divisions, four managers in the RKO Metropolitan theatres were awarded the top prizes in the recently completed Division Managers' drive. Announced by J. J. O'Connor, RKO Theatres vice-president and general manager, the winners are: James O'Donnell, manager, New 23rd Street, in the Charles B. McDonald division; Leon Kelmer, manager, RKO Kenmore, in the Louis Goldberg division; Ansel Weinstein, manager, RKO 58th Street Theatre, in the S. A. Schwartz division, and Jerome Baker, manager, RKO Capitol, Union City, N. J., in the H. R. Emdee division.

The contest, running through February, highlighted smart contests, comprehensive newspaper breaks, extensive window displays, street stunts and other devices found to be potent ticket sellers. "Four Mothers," as an instance, was ingeniously treated, as illustrated by the contest put on by Manager James O'Donnell, who in conjunction with the date featured a baby dressing contest between married and single couples, youngest and oldest mothers and husbands and wives. For "Tall, Dark and Handsome" on the same bill, O'Donnell stressed an offer to women patrons to pose alongside of a full-size cutout of Cesar Romero. The best posers were rewarded with photos.

"Rock Baby" Contest Draws

On "Hudson's Bay," the theatreman made extensive tieups with book stores and also an Indian Ambush contest directed at children. This was in the form of a puzzle herald with prizes awarded for the best entries in the 500 received. The date also was called to the attention of history instructors in nearby schools with a strong selling letter. O'Donnell celebrated Valentine's Day with a party on stage which included an audience sing fest, amateur contest and novelty acts.

Winner in the S. A. Schwartz division, Manager Ansel Weinstein, inaugurated his drive with the full cooperation of his house staff, all members by letter pledging their unanimous support in maintaining the theatre service and equipment at the highest standard. Weinstein followed this with a unique promotion on "Four Mothers," wherein prizes were offered for the most unusual birth announcement cards. These were displayed in the lobby.

On the same picture, Weinstein stressed a "rock the baby to sleep" contest on the Saturday night previous to the opening. Three male patrons were persuaded to compete and a life-size doll was used. Patrons were also encouraged to attend the showing by a checking service for babies at the theatre and a street ballyhoo had four women wheeling bannered baby carriages along the main streets. For "Lady With Red Hair," the theatreman intrigued his public with a contest on stage, prizes awarded to women patrons with the longest and prettiest red hair. On the same date, display of what Weinstein termed the "personal diary of the Lady With Red Hair" was planted in the lobby. The diary contained stills, press book clippings, etc.

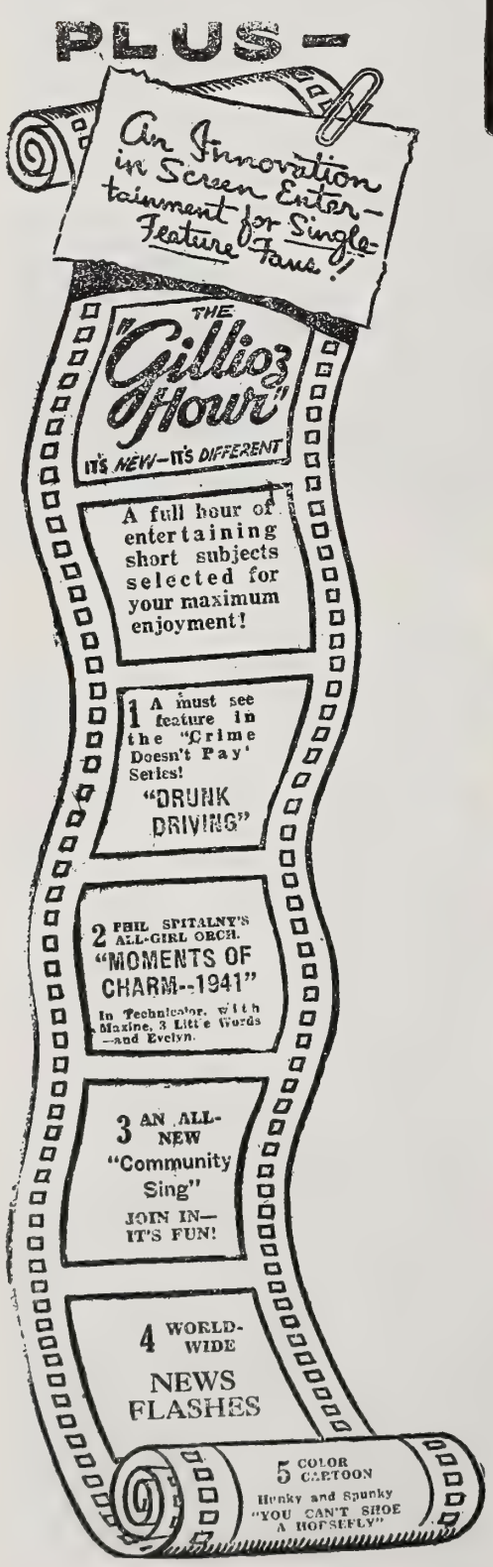
WEINSTEIN'S "FOYLE" RESEMBLANCE CONTEST LOBBY SETUP

"Kitty Foyle" was introduced with a resemblance contest, wherein local girls were invited to compete for $250 cash prizes, promoted Royal typewriter and additional awards. Tiein was made with local photographer to take pictures of entrants which were displayed in special setpiece constructed by theatre staff (see cut). Patrons were given ballots to be deposited in box beneath photo they chose. Ten girls receiving most votes appeared on stage with three winners chosen by audience applause. Business girls were further intrigued by promotion of girl in lobby working at typewriter and on day before opening, a "Kitty Foyle" dictation contest was held on stage.

Patrons "Roll Own" for Prizes

In Brooklyn, winner of the Louis Goldberg division, Manager Leon Kelmer spotlighted the contest angle on "Santa Fe Trail" with a "roll your own cigarette" competition on stage, explaining that it was the custom in the good old days along the Santa Fe Trail to "roll your own." Both men and women entered to provide novel entertainment. On behalf of the same date, Kelmer held a singing jamboree staged by his organist both at the kid matinees and midnight shows. This featured a special set of slides for the song "Santa Fe Trail" which gave the picture an extra plug. Local merchants were promoted to pay for heralds on the date distributed at busy subway stations and other traffic spots.

On "Four Mothers," Kelmer sponsored a Stork Derby, wherein free gifts were offered to the four mothers whose babies were born nearest to the hour of noon on the day ahead of opening. On "Here Comes the Navy," the manager promoted a naval cadet parade.



For "Kitty Foyle," the local girls were also given an opportunity to participate in a resemblance contest tied into the neighborhood paper. Seven of the best entries appeared on the stage for the prizes. A stenographers' contest was also held, wherein the entrants took down in shorthand extracts from "Kitty Foyle's" diary read by the master of ceremonies.

Lobby Menagerie Plugs "Hanna"

At the Capitol, in the H. R. Emdee division, Manager Jerome Baker stressed a lot of effective promotion on his stage shows, landing considerable publicity and art in the local papers. Exploitation as potent was employed on "Chad Hanna," when the lobby was given over to a circus animal display, following a series of classified ads in the local dailies requesting the loan of circus animals for the date. Baker played this angle strongly through the showing of what he termed a "mystery animal" selling one of the papers on a "name the animal" contest. Circus ballyhoo was good enough to be featured in the widely read editorial cartoon page of the Hudson Dispatch, first time the manager reports, that a theatre had been able to effect such publicity. Bannered circus clowns and circus wagons made the main streets, calling attention to the date.

REPRESENTATIVE NEWSPAPER ADS

To build up the added shorts with the single bills at the Gillioz, Springfield, Mo., Manager Joe Ruddick tagged the shorts program as the "Gillioz Hour", using a film art background as illustrated for an extra 115 lines on one col., under the feature copy.

Planted extensively in campaigns on "The Dictator", the above 125 lines on 4 col. is being promoted by theatremen playing the date, working with the United Artists field men, as a house ad buildup for newspaper classified advertising. Display reproduced here was one of the promotions made for the engagement at Loew's State, Louisville, Ky.

To take the pressure off the heavy drama of the picture on the showing at Herman Cohen's United Artists, San Francisco, Charlie Schlaifer, ad head, featured smiling heads of the four leads in the art, and remained away from the Nazi slant in the copy. Added panel lines from "U. A. Charley", the theatre's ad trademark, aimed to laugh off the rainstorms current during the run.

Comedy Romance

Executive producer, Hal B. Wallis. Associate producer, Mark Hellinger.

SYNOPSIS

Richard "Rickey" Mayberry (Dennis Morgan), a foreign correspondent of sorts, receives a cablegram in Lisbon, Portugal, that his wife, Sue (Merle Oberon) has divorced him and is going to marry again shortly. Despite his ardent attentions to a fellow correspondent, Irene Malcolm (Rita Hayworth), Rickey loves Sue. He takes the Clipper for America. Irene also takes the Clipper.

In America Irene chases Rickey, Rickey chases Sue and Owen Wright (Ralph Bellamy), who is to marry Sue, is bewildered. Rickey's ingenious schemes fail to win Sue back so in desperation Rickey kidnaps Sue and takes her to an old pier for a picnic dinner to revive old memories. They fall into the water and end up by sharing a hot mustard foot bath in Sue's bedroom. Owen arrives and he and Rickey exchange punches.

While Rickey is plotting to get his wife back, his editor and Irene have joined forces to pry him away from Sue. They even enlist the aid of Pasha, Rickey's Turkish news photographer (George Tobias). Meanwhile Rickey has kidnapped Sue again and takes her to the pier with Owen in pursuit. The three of them fall in and wind up in Sue's room again.

Rickey is making progress but then Irene "accidentally" drops a picture showing herself and Rickey in an intimate pose. Irene and the editor have Rickey "detained" but he escapes by turning on a sprinkler system, which in turn sets off a fire alarm. Dashing to a telephone he has Pasha call Sue and tell her of an auto crash. Then he wrecks his car to make it look on the up and up. Rickey and Pasha are denied entry into the hospital as they have no reservation. They sneak into the hospital and when Sue arrives, Rickey is bandaged but Sue realizes it is all a fake when she accidentally tastes the strawberry jam "blood." But this time she breaks into gales of laughter. Rickey laughs, Pasha laughs, and backs out of the room. Closing the door behind him Pasha hangs a sign on it which reads: "Maternity Ward—Quiet Please."

REACHING FOR THE SUN (Paramount)

Drama

Produced and directed by William A. Wellman.

Russ Eliot (Joel McCrea), a strapping young clam digger from the Michigan Peninsula, gets a job on the assembly line of the Crane Motor Company in order to earn money to buy an outboard motor. He meets Benny (Eddie Bracken) and Rita (Ellen Drew), a dancehall girl. When Russ gets his outboard motor he and Eddie test it out in their boarding house bathtub, much to the consternation of the other boarders.

Russ has a tough time in the assembly line, at first, but gradually gets the hang of it. With him on the assembly line are Amos (Billy Gilbert) and Jerry (George Chandler). Russ falls in love with Rita and they are married. They rent a small cottage and Benny moves in as a boarder, sharing the extra room with the outboard motor. Rita is jealous of that motor. A son is born to Rita but Russ is far from happy. He hates to think of his son growing up to be a laborer in the assembly line.

Russ, however, gets a better job. He now operates a huge, pincerlike machine that loads and unloads metal from the furnaces. He soon becomes the master of his giant machine. Then his feud with Herman (Albert Dekker), which has been brewing for a long time, flows over. Herman, who operates a traveling bridge crane, and Russ fight each other with their machines. When Russ comes to in the hospital he has lost a leg.

Rita, who has left Russ in a fight over the outboard motor, rushes to the hospital. Recovered, Russ with Rita, their son and Benny go to Oskegon Bay, whence Russ started. The life is too quiet for Benny and he leaves the now happy Eliots for other places.

BILLY THE KID (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Saga of the Outlaw (Technicolor)

Produced by Irving Asher. Directed by David Miller. Suggested by the book "The Saga of Billy the Kid" by Walter Noble Burns.

Into the Lincoln, New Mexico, of 1879 rides a young outlaw, Billy Bonney (Robert Taylor), alias Billy the Kid. Following some by-play with the sheriff, Billy meets Dan Hickey (Gene Lockhart), czar of the countryside, in a saloon. Hickey, who is organizing the cattle ranchers into a "combine," hires Billy as one of his "persuaders."

Their first victim is to be Eric Keating (Ian Hunter), an Englishman. When Billy and the gang try to run off Keating's cattle, the herd stampedes. Billy ambushes an attacker and discovers him to be an old friend, Jim Sherwood (Brian Donlevy), now foreman for Keating. They part still friends but Sherwood warns Billy not to return. Back in town, Billy meets Keating. When he discovers that Keating never carries a gun, Billy rides back with him to the ranch to protect Keating from the gang. Later Billy quits Hickey and joins Keating, a move that is bitterly resented by Sherwood.

Keating and his sister, Edith (Mary Howard) go out of their way to make Billy feel at home. When the Hickey gang kills a guitar-playing Mexican friend of Billy's, the outlaw is dissuaded from seeking revenge by the Keatings. Then Keating is killed and Sherwood has himself sworn in as sheriff. He jails Billy to prevent the Kid from taking the law into his own hands. But Billy learns from Ward (Henry O'Neill), the town editor, where the murderers are hiding and escapes.

Billy trails the gang and kills five of them, including Hickey, before he is trapped by Sherwood. Billy emerges with unloaded guns and is killed by Sherwood, who believes he is giving the Kid a better than even chance.

THEY DARE NOT LOVE (Columbia)

Love and the Gestapo

Produced by Sam Bischoff. Directed by James Whale.

Austria is in imminent danger of falling to the Nazis. Prince Kurt (George Brent), the Heir Apparent, is fleeing the country but before he leaves he stops to join Dr. Keller (Egon Brecher), an old friend; Marta (Martha Scott), his daughter, and Wilhelm Erhardt, her finance, in a restaurant. Wilhelm, jealous, phones the Gestapo. Kurt escapes with Marta and Dr. Keller and they travel to America. Aboard the boat is Von Helsing (Paul Lukas), a Gestapo agent, who intends to return Kurt to Germany.

In America, Kurt is besieged by socialites, including Barbara Murdock (Kay Linaker). Many of his old friends, now in America, resent his activities. In order to regain their friendship Kurt offers to help free prisoners interned by the Reich. Von Helsing offers to have all the prisoners on Kurt's list freed if Kurt will surrender himself to Germany. Kurt agrees. Meanwhile, Marta learns that Wilhelm is a member of the party. From him she discovers the plan to which Kurt has agreed.

Marta rushes to the dock. Once on board the ship she is held presoner. The boat sails but a British destroyer halts it and a prize crew board the ship. Kurt and Marta are free to start anew on English soil.

I WANTED WINGS (Paramount)

Aviation Drama

Produced by Arthur Hornblow, Jr. Directed by Mitchell Leisen.

The time is the present. A blackout is being simulated over Southern California. Overhead the Army Air Corps is having its war test. In the midst of the war games a flash is received that a bomber has crashed—with the body of a woman aboard. A court martial is held. Jeff Young (Ray Milland), pilot of the bomber, is placed on trial for disobeying orders of Captain Hunter (Brian Donlevy). Also in court are Al Ludlow (William Holden) and Carolyn Bartlett (Constance Moore). Young won't talk. The scene changes. . . .

It is April 10, 1938. Young, a polo playing socialite; Tom Leonard (Wayne Morris), ex-All American football star, and Ludlow, a lad with an indifferent past and little social background, are taking their physical examinations for entrance into the Army Air Corps. The trio go to Randolph Field. Under their instructor, Captain Hunter, they learn the rudiments of flying a plane. Then Carolyn Bartlett, a magazine staff photographer, arrives. Carolyn and Young are attracted to each other.

Sally Vaughn (Veronica Lake), a night club singer whom Ludlow had met previously in another city, moves in on Carolyn. Ludlow proves himself a hero when he saves a fellow cadet from a burning plane as Young hesitates. Young gets drunk with Sally across the border. Ludlow gets Young back in time to pass his examinations.

They are graduated to Kelly Field, near Randolph, for secondary training. In a final flight before graduation, Leonard, Young and Ludlow "strafe" their old field, Randolph, for laughs. The plane crashes. Ludlow, in command, is dismissed. Sally tells Ludlow that she's going to have Young's baby. Ludlow marries her but later learns that her baby story was a fake.

Meanwhile Young has become an officer and is engaged to Carolyn. Then, with war raging in Europe, America starts to prepare. Ludlow returns to the corps as a member of the bombing crew of a plane commanded by Captain Hunter with Young as assistant. Sally turns up at the field just before the war games. Involved in a murder of a gangster, she seeks money of Ludlow. When she spies detectives approaching she hides in the bomber. The bomber takes off and during the games Sally accidentally sets off a flare, which Hunter releases through the bomb bay before it explodes. Hunter loses his balance and falls through the bomb bay with Ludlow after him. They parachute to the ground. Young makes an emergency landing to pick them up. On the take-off the ship crashes, killing Sally. . . .

Ludlow has told his story in court. The court justifies Young's disobedience of orders to help Hunter. Ludlow gets another chance at being a pilot.

THE HUMAN GHOST (Monogram)

Former Title—At the Villa Rose

Mystery Melodrama

Directed by Walter Summers. Based on the novel by A. E. W. Mason.

Madame Dauvray (Ruth Maitland) is murdered at a seance held in her home. Celia Harland (Judy Kelly), Madame Dauvray companion, is abducted when the murderers cannot find jewels worth $250,000. Harry Wethermill (Peter Hill), persuades Inspector Hanaud (Keneth Kent) to take the case. An old woman is murdered while on her way to Hanaud to give information about Celia's abduction.

Hanaud finds Celia in a neighboring city just as she is being spirited away unconscious. Hanaud also finds the jewels in a safe overlooked by the crooks. He apprehends Celia's kidnappers and re-enacts the crime, proving that Wethermill, who has been with Hanaud during the search for the criminals, planned the murder. Wethermill commits suicide.

THE BLACK CAT (Universal)

Comedy Melodrama

Produced by Burt Kelly. Directed by Albert S. Rogell.

SYNOPSIS

At the old Henrietta Winchester estate The Cat crawls along the bough of a tree in the light of a full moon. Meanwhile, the wails of hundreds of other cats mingle with the howl of the wind. Eduardo (Bela Lugosi), keeper of the cats who seems almost feline in air and manner, is summoned to the gates by the arrival of Mr. Penny (Hugh Herbert), an absent-minded antique dealer, and A. Gilmore Smith (Brod Crawford), small town real estate salesman who is allergic to cats. Hearing that old Mrs. Winchester (Cecilia Loftus) had died, they have come to make a deal for the place.

The wealthy recluse is still living, however, and reads her own will. She is murdered immediately after. Suspect are all the family, including Elaine (Anne Gwynne), the selfish granddaughter; Myrna (Gladys Cooper), a middle aged woman; Montague Hartley (Basil Rathbone), the latter's suave husband; Margaret Gordon (Claire Dodd), his mistress, and Richard (Alan Ladd), his son.

Also suspected are Abigail Doone (Gale Sondergard), the sinister-looking housekeeper who is to be the sole owner of the estate during her lifetime, and Eduardo. Then Abigail is murdered. Lead by Gil Smith the trail leads through secret passages and intricate plot and counterplot as Mr. Penny goes about his befuddled way. The trail leads to The Cat.

IN OLD CHEYENNE (Republic)

Western

Associate producer-director, Joseph Kane.

SYNOPSIS

Steve Blane (Roy Rogers), newspaperman, is on his way to Cheyenne to report upon the nefarious activities of one Arapahoe Brown (George "Gabby" Hayes) when he meets Dolores Casino (Joan Woodbury). She reveals that she was born Della Casey and that it is her father, Tim Casey (J. Farrel MacDonald), whom Steve intends to contact. Their train is held up by a crew led by Davidge (William Haade), who is an underling of Sam Drummond (George Rosener), the real ringleader. Arapahoe is blamed for the hold-up.

Steve goes in search of Arapahoe and he is ambushed by Drummond's men. Steve is rescued by Arapahoe who convinces the reporter that he is innocent of all the charges made against him. Steve suspects Drummond and sets a trap. He draws Drummond's men after him and pretends he has been killed. When Drummond tries to blame the "murder" on Arapahoe, Steve and Casey expose Drummond.

WASHINGTON MELODRAMA (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Murder and Blackmail

Produced by Edgar Selwyn. Directed by S. Sylvan Simon. Based on a play by L. du Rocher Macpherson.

Calvin Claymore (Frank Morgan), millionaire philanthropist, is the leader of a movement to send American food to war victims in Europe. In this he is opposed by the "Daily Tabloid," the editor of which, Hal Thorne (Kent Taylor), is engaged to Claymore's daughter, Laurie (Ann Rutherford). Laurie and Mrs. Claymore (Fay Holden) are vacationing in South America.

A friend takes Claymore to a night club where he meets Mary Morgan (Anne Gwynne), a dancer. They become friends; a friendship encouraged by Whitney King (Dan Dailey, Jr.), who handles the night club shows. When Claymore's wife and daughter are due to return he pays a farewell visit to the dancer and insists she accept a gift of $10,000. On leaving Claymore forgets one of his gloves.

King, who has been watching the apartment, appears and demands the money. A struggle ensues and the dancer dies of a head injury. An investigation is started in which the glove left by Claymore plays an important part. King meanwhile obtains blackmail money from Claymore. Laurie, learning of her father's predicament, strikes up a friendship with King. His dancing partner, Teddy (Virginia Grey), in a fit of jealousy, tells newspapermen that King is the killer. King is overpowered and jailed and Claymore, penitent, resumes his campaign to feed war-torn Europe.

THE GREAT AMERICAN BROADCAST (Twentieth Century-Fox)

Radio and Romance

Associate producer, Kenneth Macgowan. Directed by Archie Mayo.

Rix Martin (John Payne), World War I ace, is trying to make ends meet at a little one-man airport on Long Island. When telephone linemen from New York begin stringing wire at the edge of the flying field, Rix orders the men away and starts a fight. Outnumbered, Rix is losing the battle when one of the lineman, Chuck Hadley (Jack Oakie), comes to his rescue. Chuck loses his job and he and Rix go to Chuck's rooming house. There Chuck shows Rix a radio set on which he has been working, a primitive model with a receiver and transmitter.

Chuck leads Rix into the room of Vicki Adams (Alice Faye) to demonstrate. The impromptu radio experiment is interrupted, however, when Vicki, enters and orders Rix out of her room. Chuck comes in and explains. Vicki is a singer in a speakeasy. They talk over the possibility of regular broadcasts. Rix takes Chuck to a swank apartment house to meet Bruce Chadwick (Cesar Romero), another war pilot. Chadwick, a playboy who has financed Rix on more than one occasion, puts up the money for the venture.

They set up a station in an abandoned sausage factory on the Jersey flats. A storm wrecks their first broadcast. They decide to broadcast the Jess Willard-Jack Dempsey championship fight. The broadcast is a success but it brings an unexpected aftermath. Vicki and Rix have fallen in love. Chuck knocks Rix down and walks off with Bruce.

Chuck and Bruce set up a radio station of their own and it soon becomes the biggest thing in radio. Things go from bad to worse with Rix and Vicki, who have married. When Vicki borrows $25,000 from Bruce, Rix quarrels with Vicki and gets a flying job in South America. Vicki becomes a singer on the station Chuck and Bruce operate. Vicki, miserable and heartbroken, consents to marry Bruce. Chuck, realizing that Vicki still loves Rix, sets to work to bring Rix home, which he does by a ruse. He arrives on the anniversary of the first broadcast which he, Vicki and Chuck had attempted.

SOUTH OF PANAMA (Producers Rel. Corp.)

Melodrama

Produced by T. H. Richmond. Directed by Jean Yarborough

Jan Martin (Virginia Vale), sister of a government chemist, Paul (Hugh Beaumont), realizing that she is being followed, ignores her brother and embraces a stranger, Mike Lawrence (Roger Pryor), at the airport. Enemy agents, Lake (Warren Jackson) and Wilton (Jack Ingram), convinced that Mike is the brother, attempt to trap the pair. They escape and Jan, donning a black wig for a disguise, becomes a singer at a cafe under the name of "Dolores."

They meet again but Mike is unaware that "Dolores" is Jan. Captured by the spies they are held captive. They escape and in an automobile chase, Mike gets the drop on the spies. Mike and "Dolores" watch the spies plunge to their death from a cliff.

The threat to Martin's secret formula having been taken care of, Mike confesses to "Dolores" that he is in love with an American girl named Jan. "Dolores" takes off the wig and reveals that she is Jan.

ROBBERS OF THE RANGE (RKO Radio)

Western

Produced by Bert Gilroy. Directed by Edward Killy.

Framed by a crooked land agent for a murder he did not commit, Jim Drummond (Tim Holt), a young rancher, is being taken to Blue Mesa, the county seat, for trial. James Rankin (LeRoy Mason), representative of a railroad and instigator of the murder charge against Drummon, has his henchmen attack the stage with intent to kill Jim. He, Deputy Sheriff Brady (John Dilson) and the other occupant of the stage, Curly Yantis (Malcolm McTaggart), a notorious killer, fight back. Brady and Yantis are killed. Arriving in Blue Mesa, Drummond impersonates Yantis and is hired as a gunman by Rankin to fight the newly formed Ranchers' Protective Association, headed by Roy Tremaine (Howard Hickman).

Drummond contacts his two pals, Smokey (Ray Whitley) and Whopper (Emmett Lynn). Through a ruse they force Rankin to accept payment on a mortgage due on Tremaine's ranch, the money being raised by Tremaine's daughter, Alice (Virginia Vale). Rankin then frames Tremaine on a murder charge similar to the one he framed on Drummond. Drummond obtains a confession from Rankin's gunman and presents it in court. Rankin and his henchmen stage a court fight but they are overpowered by the ranchers.

TWO-GUN SHERIFF (Republic)

Western

Associate producer-director, George Sherman.

SYNOPSIS

"Mom" McKinnon's (Marin Sais) two sons, Bruce (Don "Red" Barry) and Jim (also played by Barry) took different paths. Bruce became sheriff of his county and Jim, as The Sundown Kid, became an outlaw and acquired hatred for his brother. Marc Albo (Jay Novello), ostensibly an honest cattle broker but actually head of a smuggling ring, has Bruce abducted by his henchmen and sells Jim the idea of impersonating his brother as sheriff. As sheriff Jim signs the necessary clearance papers permitting Albo to ship his stolen herds.

Jim's masquerade passes off successfully until he is recognized by his girl friend, Nita (Lupita Tovar), a cantina dancer. Nita agrees to keep the secret but when Jim is about to marry Ruth (Lynn Merrick) fiancee of Bruce, in lieu of disclosing his true identity, Nita exposes him. Albo throws a knife at her and kills her. The killing changes Jim who saves Bruce and prevents Albo from shipping his cattle, meeting death through his bravery.

THE RETURN OF FRANK JAMES (Twentieth Century-Fox)

Saga of an Outlaw (Technicolor)

Produced by Darryl F. Zanuck. Associate producer, Kenneth Macgowan. Directed by Fritz Lang.

Frank James (Henry Fonda), living quietly as a farmer under an assumed name, although shocked to hear of his brother Jesse's death at the hands of the Fords, decides to let the law take its course. The Fords are convicted of murder but are pardoned by the governor. Frank sets out alone to settle the score.

Having no money, Frank robs the railway office as he blames McCoy's (Donald Meek) railroad for Jesse's death. During the robbery, Clem (Jackie Cooper), a boy Frank has befriended, blunders in and a watchman is killed. Frank and Clem escape to Denver. With the aid of Eleanor Stone (Gene Tierney), daughter of a newspaper publisher, they spread the news that Frank is dead.

The Fords, Bob (John Carradine) and Charlie (Charles Tannen), come out of hiding and are confronted by Frank. In a blaze of gunfire the Fords escape with Frank after them. During the chase Charlie is accidentally killed. Bob escapes. Returning to Denver Frank gives himself up to save the life of Pinky (Ernest Whitman), his colored servant, who is accused of the railroad robbery.

THEY KNEW WHAT THEY WANTED (RKO-Radio)

Drama

Produced by Erich Pommer. Directed by Garson Kanin. From the play by Sidney Howard.

Tony Patucci (Charles Laughton) through the years has built up a profitable grape ranch in California. Leaving the ranch in charge of his foreman, Joe (William Gargan), boisterous Tony goes to San Francisco for a vacation. He meets a waitress, Amy Peters (Carole Lombard), and falls in love. Too shy to speak to her, he returns to his ranch and has Joe write her a letter. Amy answers and the correspondence warms to the point of proposal. Tony, afraid Amy might be disappointed sends her a picture of Joe and arranges for her to come to Napa.

On her arrival Tony confesses the truth and Amy agrees to marry him, nevertheless, but at the fiesta he has arranged to celebrate the affair, Tony, showing off, breaks both legs. While Tony is bedridden, Amy and Joe become interested in each other and in a moment of weakness, Amy gives herself to Joe. Tony gets well and the wedding date is set again. Then, after a fainting spell, Doc (Harry Carey) informs Amy she is to have a baby.

Joe wants Amy to marry him but she won't have him. Tony, overhearing their conversation, batters the unresisting Joe. As Tony's anger leaves him he decides to marry Amy after all but Father McKee(Frank Fay), priest and friend of Tony's, tells Tony, that some day, perhaps, if he still wants to, Tony can marry Amy but for the present he (the priest) will see that Amy is taken care of.

DOWN ARGENTINE WAY (Twentieth Century-Fox)

Musical Comedy (Technicolor)

Produced by Harry Joe Brown. Directed by Irving Cummings.

Ricardo Quintana (Don Ameche), of an illustrious Argentina family, is in New York to sell some of his father's horses. He meets Glenda Crawford (Betty Grable) at a horse show. Although Ricardo had promised to sell Glenda a horse, he sells the horse to Glenda's rival, Helen Carson (Katharine Aldridge), when he learns Glenda is the daughter of his father's rival.

Glenda, accompanied by her aunt, Binnie Crawford (Charlotte Greenwood), follows Ricardo to Buenos Aires to square accounts. In the Argentine city, Glenda tours the night clubs with Tito (Leonid Kinskey), a gigolo. The sensation of the Argentine night life is Carmen Miranda (herself). Glenda, after a skirmish, makes up with Ricardo and he takes her to his father's ranch and introduces her under an assumed name.

When Don Diego Quintana (Henry Stephenson) discovers Glenda is a Crawford he orders her off the ranch. Don Diego relents when Ricardo's horse wins the big race and when Ricardo convinces his father that the feud with the Crawfords was all a mistake.

HER FIRST ROMANCE (Monogram)

Musical Drama

Produced by I. E. Chadwick. Directed by Edward Dmytryk. Based on the novel, "Her First Daughter," by Gene Stratton-Porter.

Linda Strong (Edith Fellows), a typical student girl, gets her first bid to a college dance. When her older sister and guardian, Eileen (Jacqueline Wells), through selfishness, refuses to buy Linda a formal dress, Katy (Marion Kerby), the cook, buys the dress. The night of the dance comes and Linda discovers that she has been invited as an initiation stunt. She refuses to go, but Philip Niles (Wilbur Evans), a concert singer, persuades her to go with him.

Linda is the belle of the ball, but Eileen meets Niles and makes plans for another conquest, forgetting about John (Alan Ladd), whom she had taken away from their cousin, Marian (Judith Linden). Eileen offers to drive Niles to San Francisco to a concert. At the same time Marian plans to leave town to try and forget John. When John hears that both Marian and Niles are leaving he assumes they are leaving together, and, becoming jealous of Niles, stages a fight.

Niles, in spite of Eileen's efforts to lure him, finds himself in love with Linda. John and Marian are reunited.

PALS OF THE PECOS (Republic)

Western

Associate producer, Louis Gray. Directed by Lester Orlebeck.

Stevens (Robert Frazer), transportation line owner, and Buckley (John Holland), an unscrupulous attorney, conspire to prevent honest Dan Burke (Pat O'Malley) from completing his overland coach line. They enlist the service of Keno (Roy Barcroft), ruthless saloon keeper. Dan's son Larry (Dennis Moore) is killed in a battle in which The Three Mesquiteers take part. The Mesquiteers, Stony (Robert Livingston), Tucson (Bob Steele) and Lullaby (Rufe Davis) are blamed for the murder and jailed.

When they learn that Dan has agreed to sell the land the Mesquiteers break jail, find the missing payroll in Keno's possession and the road construction is resumed. The day of the first Lone Pine-Sacramento nonstop trip arrives. Forcing Buckley to accompany them on the trip the Mesquiteers start off. The terrified Buckley tells them that the stagecoach is scheduled to be dynamited. The explosion blasts a chasm but the Mesquiteers bridge the gap. Then the Mesquiteers run into Keno and his men. The battle is raging when a posse appears on the scene.

BILLY THE KID'S FIGHTING PALS (Producers Rel. Corp.)

Western

Produced by Sigmund Neufeld. Directed by Sherman Scott

SYNOPSIS

While riding to the town of Paradise, Billy (Bob Steele), Fuzzy (Al St. John) and Jeff (Carleton Young), witness a murder. In town they learn that Paradise is ruled by a gang headed by Burke (Curly Dresden). Burke and Badger (Charles King), a henchman, force the newspaper editor to auction his plant, but Billy outbids the others. Badger starts a fight but is whipped. The editor is muredred before Billy can speak to him. Ann Hardy (Phyllis Adair), ward of the town banker, offers to help run the newspaper and then deliberately destroys the type for the next edition. Ann is in love with Badger.

Attempts are made to ambush Billy, but Fuzzy and Jeff rout the attackers. Badger is captured and left with Ann, who frees him. Billy learns that another outlaw gang, haded by Hardy (Edward Peil, Sr.), is smuggling through a tunnel dug under the Mexican border. He tricks the two gangs into accusing each other of double-crossing. The Sheriff arrests them, believing one of the gang to be Billy. But Billy has made his getaway.

MORE TRIFLES OF IMPORTANCE (MGM)
Passing Parade (K-283)

In this Passing Parade issue, John Nesbitt tells the story of three simple things—a rolled parchment, a country flower and a cup of tea. In early days when doctors were not allowed to touch the skin of some patients, they would roll a parchment and place one end on the patient's chest and listen through the other end, a fore-runner of the stethoscope. The country flower is foxglove, which contains a substance that is today known as digitalis, and the cup of tea came to the rescue of a girl burned in a gas stove. A doctor, weary from searching through medical books for a cure, burned his finger with a match and stuck his finger in a cup of tea. The quick relief led to the discovery of the tannic acid treatment.

WHEN WIFIE'S AWAY (RKO)
Leon Errol Comedy (13,704)

Mrs. Errol (Sally Paine) leaves town and while she is away Mme Fifi (Geraldine Ross), a vaudeville actress, asks Leon Errol to play a grandpa role in her act. She goes to Errol's apartment to rehearse the act. Mrs. Errol unexpectedly returns home and finds strange hairpins on the floor. Errol explains that his grandpa just dropped in with his red-headed girl friend. Errol then has to disguise himself and pose as his own grandpa. Mme Fifi returns for her phonograph, while Errol phones an escort service for a redhead. The redhead arrives. The situation becomes too confused and Leon realizes the game is up.

IT HAPPENED ALL NIGHT (RKO)
Edgar Kennedy Comedy (13,405)

To Constable Edgar Kennedy, nothing ever happens in Fairview. Edgar fails to read a poster offering a reward for the capture of two crooks who broke jail and are now in Fairview to recover gems they buried in a vacant lot. A building now stands on the lot and in the building is Edgar's father-in-law, the towns lamplighter. Bothered by the street light Edgar's father-in-law turns it off not knowing the crooks are using the light to work by. Edgar turns it on and after some by-play with his father-in-law the crooks use Edgar as a shield to protect them from rival hi-jackers. FBI men capture all the crooks but Edgar is still in the dark as to what went on.

GOOFY GROCERIES (WB)

Merrie Melody (Color) (6715)

A grocery store shelf, peopled by the various cans and packages, comes to life and there is plenty of merriment until a ferocious inmate of the animal cracker box breaks loose and almost succeeds in total destruction, but is finally overcome by the clever gag tricks of the threatened victims.

Release date, March 29, 1941 7 Minutes

ALLURING ALASKA (MGM)

Traveltalk (Color) (T-218)

Alaska, the scene of James A. FitzPatrick's latest Traveltalk, is approximately one-fifth the size of the United States and is inhabited by some 60,000 persons, half of whom are white and the other half Eskimo and Indian. Shown are the famous Spencer Glacier, Matanuska Valley, the city of Fairbanks, which is located only a hundred miles south of the Arctic circle, and Mt. McKinley and McKinley National Park.

Release date, March 8, 1941 9 Minutes

WATCH THE BIRDIE (WB)

Bob Hope Re-issue (6905)

Bob (Bob Hope), a practical joker, having fallen in love with a girl on board an ocean liner bound for the U. S., asks the father for permission to marry her. He is turned down. The ship's captain agrees to have Bob delayed at the Customs in order that Dorothy's father may attend a board meeting in New York and then entrain west. The father is delayed and Bob turns up to find the big executive demonstrating some of Bob's gags. Bob takes his revenge by drenching the group with water, and escaping with the daughter.

Release date, April 26, 1941 18 Minutes

JOE GLOW, THE FIREFLY (WB)

Looney Tune Cartoon (6608)

Joe Glow, the firefly, sets out for adventure and comes across a hunter asleep in his tent. Joe proceeds to explore the contents of the tent getting himself into considerable difficulty from which he finally extricates himself and decides that he had better return to more familiar surroundings.

Release date, March 8, 1941 7 Minutes

PUBLICITY SPORTS (RKO)

Sportscope (14,308)

Photographed in Miami, a sporting paradise is pictured here. Among the sports are skiing on the sand, tub racing, racing speed boats, bicycling on land and water, archery, tennis, golf and horse racing. Personages appearing in the reel include Gar Wood, speed boat racer; Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion; Mary Hardwick, English tennis star, and Jack Redmond, golfer.

Release date, March 14, 1941 9 Minutes

THE CAT'S TALE (WB)

Merrie Melody (Color) (6713)

The little mouse gets tired of being continually chased by the cat and decides to have a show down. He proceeds to tell the cat to quit chasing him and tells the cat to make the dog stop chasing him. The cat agrees and pays a visit to the dog, but the dog refuses to listen to reason and gives the cat a good beating. The cat retaliates by taking it out on the mouse.

HOW TO USE IT

On the opposite page appears the cumulative alphabetical index to another issue of Motion Picture Herald's new and valuable exhibitor service section, Product Digest. It is a master index to all information available to date on 1940-41 product and which has been published in the several preceding issues of Product Digest.

Check the title of any feature that you want to look up, turn to the designated page or pages, and you will find all buying and booking information available up to this very minute — synopses, casts, credits, release dates, production numbers, running time, review references, Round Table references and Legion of Decency ratings.

Product Digest is published every other week alternately with the regular Release Chart.

The Release Chart carries, as always, an alphabetical index of titles, a breakdown by companies, star information, release dates, running time and review references. The Release Chart, published every other week, is a compact compilation of certain important booking information.

Product Digest, on alternate weeks, is cumulative, a more extensive compilation of similar information. The Release Chart is complete in itself. Product Digest carries only current information, but if you maintain a complete file of Product Digest, you will have, at your instant service, synopses, casts and other detailed data which could not conceivably be compressed into one issue. The cumulative alphabetical index of Product Digest, however, is a reference to all information that has been printed to date in all the issues of Product Digest.

An introductory issue of Product Digest was mailed to exhibitor subscribers of Motion Picture Herald. If you misplaced your copy or have not saved the subsequent issues, write for duplicates.

Use PRODUCT DIGEST

A history-making date because it marks the release of what we predict will be one of the great pictures of this or any other year....

Seattle, Washington

Dear Roy:

I wish to congratulate you upon the installation of our new BRENKERT BX-80 PROJECTORS at the St. Helens Theatre. In all of my twenty-seven years in a projection room, I have never seen such marked improvement in projection.

It gives me pleasure to make a few personal remarks about the BRENKERT. The lubricating system is very unique and, in my opinion, exceptionally practical. I particularly like the ease of threading, especially the special framing aperture. There is much more room on the film side over other type projectors. The specially built-in ventilating fan does very well in keeping the aperture cool.

The engineering on this projector is commendable and the workmanship excellent. I believe that due to the rugged construction of the projector, it is apparent that it will give long wear. The idea is clever the way the sprockets are attached to the spindles, which simplifies turning them when need be.

The Projection of Technicolor with our BRENKERTS is beautiful; there isn't a trace of side sway or unsteadiness in the picture, and the flicker is practically cancelled out. Since the installation we have reduced our amperage ten percent.

Our most cynical critic admits it is as near perfect projection as he had ever seen, quoting him: "It hangs up there like a Valentine."

Several of the boys from the surrounding towns have been in to see the BRENKERTS and have gone away singing its praises. I am sure that all the fellows working on BRENKERTS find them a keen pleasure.

Incidentally, we have heard much praise from the patrons.

With kindest personal regards, I am

Sincerely,

HAK/AMM.

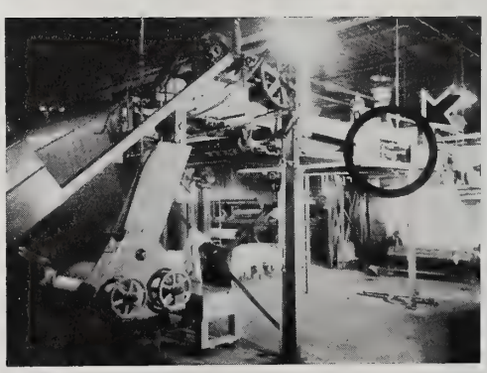
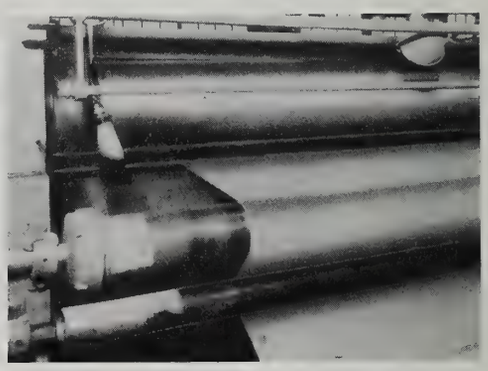
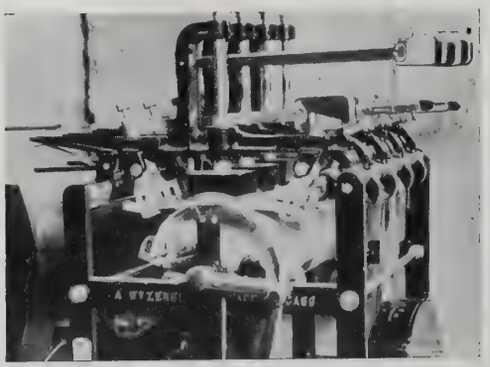
Rubber-Base Simulated Leather



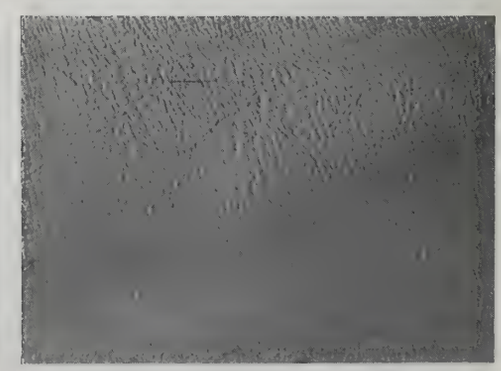
¶ A pictorial visit to the plant of the U. S. Rubber Company at Mishawaka, Ind.



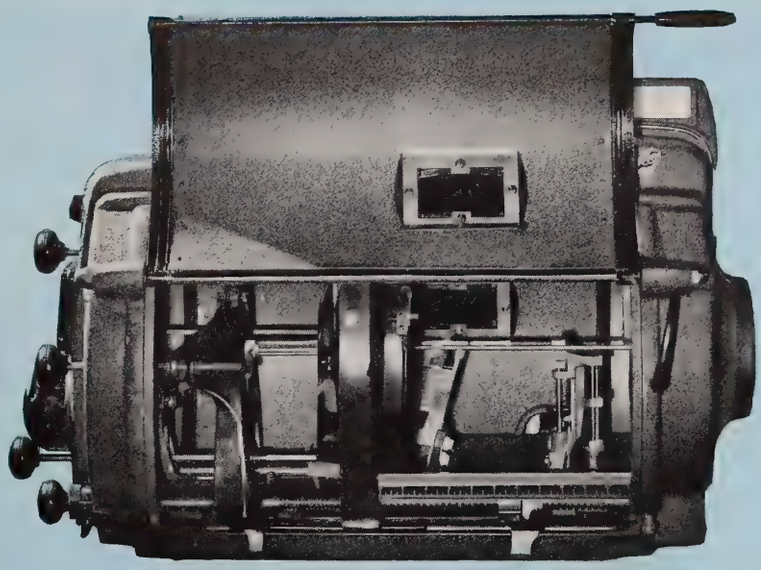
Crude rubber received from immense plantations in the Far East is first thoroughly washed to remove impurities and foreign matter, leaving it absolutely clean. This shows one of the machines which break down blocks and do the cleaning.



The cleansed rubber is prepared by mixing and compounding with chemicals into a batter which is spread on woven fabric base. Passing under a knife, it is pressed into the fabric, later dried over. This coating provides anchor for following coats.



Next a calendar coat of rubber and ground leather is applied by a machine which produces a smooth surface. A series of rolls are adjusted to give proper gauge, and enormous pressure exerted by them unites the fabric with anchor base.



For further attractiveness the material is embossed, the rubberized fabric passing through two engraved rolls. The top roll, made of steel, carries the engraved design; the bottom roll is grooved; these fit together and produce raised pattern.

Testing with an abrasing machine. A clamp at either end of the sample holds it rigid while the cylinder is rocked back and forth. Padded blocks keep sample pushed against cylinder, simulating actual use. Flexing and other tests are made.

. . . and here is Naugahyde simulated leather installed on a cushion, pictured in a detail view that clearly shows the grain. As the processes noted here have indicated, Naugahyde is of the rubber-base type of simulated leathers.

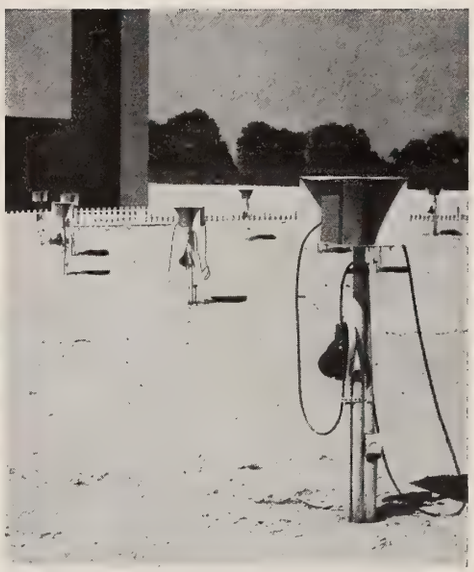
Better Theatres



ISSUE OF APRIL 5, 1941. VOLUME 143, NUMBER 1

The Drive-In Situation And How and Why It Is

THE DRIVE-IN theatre situation has changed rather substantially since the last time a report was offered on it in these columns. With a new season for these "theatres" upon us (a few, in the deep South, of course can operate the year around), we launched quite a conscientious checkup and found that 60 of these enterprises are now in or ready for operation, with about 20 under construction or to be built this spring and early summer. All told, the number being built and projected for construction in 1941 and 1942 number a little over 40, presenting the prospect of more than 100 drive-in theatres in the United States to be in operation two years from now.

This odd offspring of the motion picture business has grown much more slowly than some predicted when it was born eight years ago in a countryside adjoining Camden, N. J. Yet it is a matter of some surprise to other persons (those reflecting on the picture-presentation and viewing conditions) that the youngster did not succumb to its own crudities. During just the past year, however, there has been a little flurry of interest in it on the part even of regular theatre interests (Sparks, Saenger, to name only two); licenses granted now cover every Southern State, while the Middle West appears to be showing an interest comparable to that of New England, where the idea attained much of its early acceptance.

The two individual speaker systems which have largely supplanted the screen horn system. At left is a drive-in (Phoenix, Ariz.) with the underground system (note grilles); at right is shown the post method, as at George Wilby's Charlotte, N. C., drive-in.

By license is meant a grant of right from Park-In Theatres, Inc., of Camden, a subsidiary of the Hollingsworth interests, manufacturers of automobile maintenance products. Park-In Theatres, under the direction of W. W. Smith, built the first of these automobile theatres in 1933 with an engineered ramp system laid out in progressively elevated tiers according to sightlines. Certain patents on this system and other features, some of them developed since the first theatre, are held by this company.

There are other parking-lot "theatres," of course; some even preceded the Camden experiment. Most of these are not much more than pasture with movie privileges, however. With 60 drive-in theatres sufficiently equipped to be reported by the manufacturers of sound equipment, 50 of those now operating were built under license.

The sound equipment manufacturers have also been devoting some attention to the automotive-movies. Originally the sound came from speakers above the screen, which is placed in a special structure normally about 125 feet ahead of the first row of cars. Suburbanites began to complain of the output, so the individual speaker method was instituted, placing a small speaker on a post to serve a pair of cars. Now the new theatres are using an underground system, which places a speaker in a concrete receptacle in the ground, the receptacle being shaped to baffle the speaker, and covered over with an iron grille. More recently RCA, whose equipment is used in most of the drive-in's, has developed a speaker suited to placement inside of every car, while Motiograph has just announced an individual speaker method for drive-in's employing the radio principle. The sound would be "broadcast" on an exclusive radio frequency, and each speaker would be exclusively tuned to that frequency (no dialing).

The principal operators of drive-in theatres to date are E. M. LOEW, prominent Boston theatre operator, who has five of the outdoor houses in New England, Maryland, Florida, and Virginia.

PHIL SMITH, also of Boston, has eight in Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, Missouri and Wisconsin.

GEORGE WILBY and associates also operates eight, located in Georgia, Florida, North Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia.

The SPARKS circuit in Florida now operates several and has plans for a number of others. E. V. RICHARDS, head of the Saenger interests, is building drive-in's in Florida, Louisiana and Mississippi. CLAUDE EZELL, formerly a prominent film distributor, and W. G. UNDERWOOD have several of the Texas drive-in's, while INTERSTATE operates one.

Trying to find the answer

In addition to the apparent absurdity of having the sound come at you from a speaker immediately in front of you, while the pictorial source is from 135 to 500 feet away, there is the matter of viewing distance itself. While exhibitors in the past did not worry too much about viewing distance, there has always been some definite limit to the distance between the last row and the screen, and today a distance of more than six times the width of the image is frowned on. A drive-in theatre, however, usually has a maximum viewing distance of ten times the width of the image. And you see the picture through a windshield.

Why do so many people patronize such "theatres"? Perhaps just because they do. One encounters an effort among regular exhibitors to dismiss drive-in's with an, "Aw, the kids like 'em to neck in." But that doesn't account for the adults, and they go, too, in goodly numbers. Besides, few majors make a practice of servicing drive-in's, and in all cases clearance puts them 'way behind the last subsequent run, despite which fact admission prices are from 20% to 30% higher than those of subsequent-run's (and any ingenious young fellow with a co-operative girl can do all right in the rear side seats of a darkened auditorium).

Treasurer and directoresses—cashier and ushers, to you—of the new Today newsreel theatre in Chicago (see "Showplace" insert). A designer, an educator, and a speech expert picked 'em (they did all right, too!) They match in height and weight as well. And, they're all brunettes.

Adding up all the reasons given why drive-in's are well patronized in some sections, multiplying by three and subtracting any odd number, you get the answer that people mostly go because they are out for a drive and a drive-in suggests a pause for a kind of picnic, with hot-dogs, pop and a bit of screen music and drama.

And Mr. Smith of Park-In Theatres, Inc., predicts that two years from now there will not be merely 100 or so, but at least 150 drive-in theatres in operation.

Emphasizing New Sound

Control-track, multiple-horn sound will get the emphasis at the next convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, according to the organization's latest available report of the projected program. The spring meeting will be held at the Sagamore Hotel in Rochester, N. Y., from May 5th to 8th, inclusive.

With arrangements for joint sessions of the SMPE and the Acoustic Society of America, which will meet in Rochester at the same time, papers and demonstrations by the Telephone Company's Bell Laboratories will be given on May 7th, devoted to modified stereophonic sound.

Some Figures

Several people have asked for the cost figures on a false lounge window arrangement like that "Suggested" by Charlie Burton in the March issue. Local prices and wage scales differ, but with the wiring already in, as Mr. Burton presumed, this is about what it should run: Venetian blinds, $7.25; drapes, $2.98; wiring channel, $12; two fluorescent lamps, $2.50 (with discount); flower box, $5; millwork, including cut lumber, $3; metal rods for "vines" to run up, 50c; labor, $6. An actual job of this kind looks like $125. But the above items add up to just $39.23—and those who can get special discounts, and use a staff handyman for the labor, can do the job for less. —G. S.

Getting the Theatre In the Newspapers

¶ The average motion picture theatre lives on publicity, and not all the material is on the screen. The physical theatre is full of news, needing only recognition

By GEORGE SCHUTZ

WHAT IS NEWS? No definition of it can be too restrictive; about as good a definition as any is that news is anything timely that is interesting. The trick is to discern something interesting in what is timely. The person who can do it is said to have a nose for news. It is something that many showmen have and all can use, for the theatre lives on news. But to confine the use of news (or publicity, if you prefer) to selling current and coming attractions is to ignore many promotional opportunities. The motion picture theatre, even aside from the program, is full of interesting things, and whenever occasion makes them timely, they can be turned into news.

Nowadays when an exhibitor opens a new theatre, or reopens one that has been remodeled, he is indeed likely to see that he gets good space in at least one of the local newspapers, perhaps making quite a splurge of the event, with a special edition or section in which, in return for the paper's co-operation, "pressure" is put on the supply houses and contractors to take advertising space. Such events in the life of a single theatre are, however, few and far between. Replacement of equipment, installation of some new facility, redecoration, recarpeting, come oftener. Is there news in it—not only enough for a mere announcement, but for follow-up items, or even a feature story? . . . It has been said that news does not happen, that it is made. The epigram, like most such sayings, is not quite true, but it contains truth. What is true is that news does not merely happen—it usually must be found. This is where the showman's "nose for news" comes in.

This news-discerning faculty is so akin to what is generally meant by the term "showmanship" that it would seem to be possessed by most people of any responsibility in showbusiness. In many cases it may be undeveloped from lack of exercise. In any case, there is no deficiency of it that recognition of its importance, observation of one's patronage, knowledge of the theatre, and an eye to business cannot supply.

"Planting" the Story

Whether the "planting" of the story means merely a telephone call to the paper, or a prepared story (even though the paper may have it rewritten), depends upon the nature of the news, the form the story should take, the importance of the paper itself. It seems safe to say, however, that the average newspaper (specifically ruling out the general metropolitan dailies) is hungry for strictly local news. The plan or action or happening that has inherent news value will find the average local newspaper ready to write it and print it; the "plant" story (publicity based on a news angle, sometimes of a sort to be done in "feature" style) usually can get sympathetic editorial consideration (even though personal contact and advertising factors do

REDECORATION

One of the latest and most remarkable inventions of modern illuminating science, which has already revolutionized lighting in many fields and is also recommended for the home, is being installed in the theatre as part of the complete redecoration of that playhouse operated by ..... so at (location).

The new lighting scheme will utilize the new Fluorescent Lamps, which give off light, not by wires inside a bulb, but by powders that are made to glow, not by ordinary means, but by ultraviolet rays.

The remarkable thing about these lamps, which are tubular in shape instead of bulbous, is that the ultraviolet rays are themselves invisible, so that invisible light really causes visible light. The rays, which are similar to the x-rays used in medical science, act on the special powders placed inside the glass, so as to cause them to give off light rays that illuminate the room.

The light can be given various colors according to the kind of powders used. The entire lobby of the ..... theatre will be illuminated with these lamps, which will be concealed in troughs between the ceiling and walls. The work is being done by (local dealer or contractor).

RESEATING

Complete replacement of the chairs in the auditorium of the ..... theatre will begin in a few days, according to..... ..... manager, in order to take advantage of the latest developments in auditorium seating design to provide perfect comfort. Not only is the design of the chair itself involved, Mr. ..... points out, but a new system of placing the chairs will be used to make the screen clearly visible from all points and allow greater ease of passing between rows.

The new seating arrangement of the..... .....theatre will follow ideas that have resulted from recent studies.

"Today," said Mr. ....., "the motion picture industry and the lines of business which serve it are giving greater study to the relationship of physical comfort and emotional response. The theatre business has always endeavored to provide comfortable conditions, but we know more about the precise nature of these conditions than we used to, thanks to the research work that has been going on. And one can safely say that no furniture that goes into the home even today is as carefully designed with respect to body posture and anatomical characteristics as the seating of theatre auditoriums."

The type of chairs that are to be installed in the ..... theatre, said Mr. ....., are the result of efforts to design seating specifically for motion picture theatres.

"Perhaps it should be explained," he continued, 'that movie theatres originally used chairs that had been developed for stage-show theatres, halls, and so on. The motion picture business, however, became the biggest user of such chairs, and finally the manufacturers began to make new designs based on the special needs of the movie theatre. You see, people go to the movies oftener than to stage shows and similar entertainments, and instead of only sitting for a half-hour or so at a time, as people do at a stage play, a movie audience remains seated until the performance is over. To meet such demands for bodily support and comfort the seating manufacturers developed a type of chair especially for motion picture theatres. In fact, the theatre chair today is a perfect example of the modern scientific approach to design that we see in the automobile, home appliances, etc."

The new chairs in the ..... theatre, which will number ....., will be wider than those being removed. They will be fully upholstered with springs especially developed for theatre chairs and fabrics chosen to fit into the color scheme of the auditorium. Even the aisle standards, which will be modern in style, will have colors selected to harmonize with the general color scheme. (Add here any other features, according to the type of chairs being installed and procurable from manufacturers, dealer or catalog, which may be worth citing.)

To make passing in and out easier, the rows in the new arrangement will be spaced ..... inches apart. (If stagger system is used, add statement explaining this.)

Example of News Story on

AIR-CONDITIONING

When the hot, muggy days arrive this year, patrons of the ..... theatre will enjoy motion picture shows without a thought of the weather. In fact, they will be able to use the theatre as a ready means of escaping from the heat and humidity, according to ...., manager of the ....., who announced today that contracts have just been signed for the installation of the latest type of theatre air-conditioning equipment.

PICTURE OF EXHIBITOR OR MANAGER

The apparatus to be installed, which will cost even more than the elaborate equipment that projects the picture and reproduces the sound, is not of a kind that merely cools the air; instead, Mr. ..... pointed out, it controls all the atmospheric conditions inside the theatre, each in relation to the other. Additionally, dust and the pollen that causes hay-fever are filtered out before the air ever gets into the theatre.

The system in the .....theatre will accomplish all of this automatically, by means of delicate instruments which are sensitive to the changes taking place at any time in the atmosphere and which "telegraph" those changes electrically through "control relays" connected to the machinery.

The "conditioned" air will be carried to the various parts of the theatre by hidden ducts along which, at certain intervals, there will be outlets that scientifically mix the new air with the air already in the theatre. At the same time, Mr. ..... explained, the air in the theatre will be drawn off also through ducts, so that fresh, conditioned air will be circulated through the theatre all the time. The rate of this circulation will be such, he said, that ..... cubic feet of fresh, conditioned air will be brought into the theatre for every patron every minute.

"Air-conditioning science has made tremendous strides the last few years," Mr. ..... declared. "We all know how much better home refrigerators are today than they used to be. The air-conditioning system we are installing in the ..... theatre could hardly be compared with home refrigeration, of course, but some processes of each are similar

"But in a theatre you don't merely control the temperature, which is only one reason why we feel uncomfortable in some weather. The amount of moisture in the air must be nicely adjusted to the temperature, and then you have to distribute that air throughout large space with such precision that there is continual mixing and change of air without any drafts. This is what the air-conditioning industry has been working toward for many years."

Mr. ..... added that when the equipment is ready for operation, which will be about (date), he will be glad to show the machinery to any patrons interested in getting an idea of how science accomplishes such "weather control."

not apply) if the news angle, however slight in itself, has been shrewdly developed with interesting background, which may call for written copy prepared by someone connected with the theatre.

What Makes News?

The simple, "spot" story giving the news of some plan or happening concerning the theatre or its management is the most obvious means of getting the theatre into the papers (aside from the routine program announcements and related player publicity). In recent years exhibitors have been somewhat more alert than formerly to the publicity opportunities in such affairs as the installation of new sound equipment, new seating, and general modernization; press books have even made their appearance to encourage showmen to seek space in their local papers on sound system installations. While this article is intended to deal only with the procuring of newspaper publicity, one may note too a greater tendency to apply some of the picture-ballyhoo stunts to new equipment installations. Such activity, spread thin though it is, nevertheless indicates that at least some showmen are occasionally looking beyond the program for promotional material.

But, pardner, thar's more news in that thar theatre, mebbe, than you're a-gettin' out of it if you ain't a diggin' fur it. Much depends, of course, upon your town, your section of town, the papers available to you for your particular job. Precisely how one goes about getting his theatre into the local papers as often as possible naturally must be designed according to specific local conditions. But there are few places where the affairs of the physical theatre cannot get consistent "coverage" in newspapers of some kind.

Installation of, or contracting for major items of equipment; provision of some new facility such as a larger, more beautiful lounge; redecoration, and so on, make "spot" news that readily finds its way into the small paper or community columns of the larger city paper. Less often than need be, however, what might have been a sizeable yarn of some memorable interest and conviction is an obscure little squib seen by few. In such instances what the news may have lacked was "the old build-up."

Some news subjects supply plenty of material in themselves to build up an interesting story—redecoration, for example, which suggests description of the scheme adopted. The position or personality of a person connected with the redecorating job may also make good copy for building up the main story (as well as for a following story, perhaps in "feature" style, like an interview).

The "Science Angle"

There are many such "angles," and yet another one, too often overlooked, is the possibility of associating theatre improvements with modern science. This does not mean getting into technicalities that lay-

PROJECTION

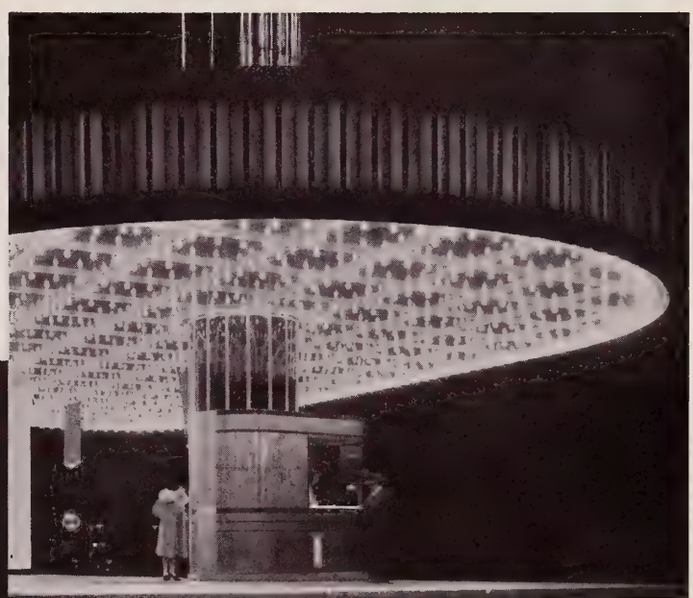
Thomas Edison lived to see motion picture theatres flourish throughout the world and become today's great popular theatre, but even since his passing the invention to which he was one of the first contributors has been greatly refined by the technologists of the motion picture industry.

"Yes, improvements have been made just during the last few years that give the motion picture greater reality and beauty," commented ....., chief projectionist at the ..... theatre, who is now supervising the installation of the latest type of projection equipment in this theatre, which is operated by ..... "And the funny part of it is," Mr. .... added, "Mr. Edison did not have much hope that the motion picture show—that is, the projection of motion pictures before a large group of people—would ever amount to anything. He regarded motion pictures at first as a peep-show affair by which a person could see a 'moving picture' a few minutes long in a slot-machine."

The type of equipment being installed in the ..... theatre has been designed to meet the radical advances that have been introduced into motion picture production in Hollywood, the subtle lighting, the details of glance and gesture necessary to the finest dramatic art, and the naturalness of Technicolor films.

"Most of the public thinks only of sound if you mention the progress of motion pictures," remarked Mr. ..... "Sound certainly created a revolution, but to one in my job there have certainly been great strides in reproducing the picture itself, as the new equipment in the ..... will soon show. Of course, the improvement in the image, or picture, has been more gradual, so that the public is not so conscious of it, but if patrons saw the same picture projected with both old-type and modern equipment in the same evening, they would quickly see the difference. The equipment we are taking out is still serviceable; however, it does not do full justice to the artistry of today's films, so out it goes."

Mr. ..... recited a long list of things about shutters and gears and other gadgets and devices which make the motion picture projector of today, together with its "arc lamps" and "soundhead" and whatnot, a marvel of modern industrial science, as finely adjusted as a watch in spite of its great size. Then he chuckled.



"Speaking of the image, as distinguished from the sound part of the show," he said, "here's another funny one about Mr. Edison. He never thought projected motion picture shows would be a success without sound. As everyone knows, he was the inventor of the phonograph, so he naturally thought of motion pictures as only adding action to the sound. With him, the sound came first. Of course, today we couldn't do without sound. But a big business was built up with just the picture a long time before sound ever became practicable."

The new projection equipment in the ..... theatre will be ready for operation on (date).

ARCHITECTURAL FLUORESCENT TUBE LIGHTING

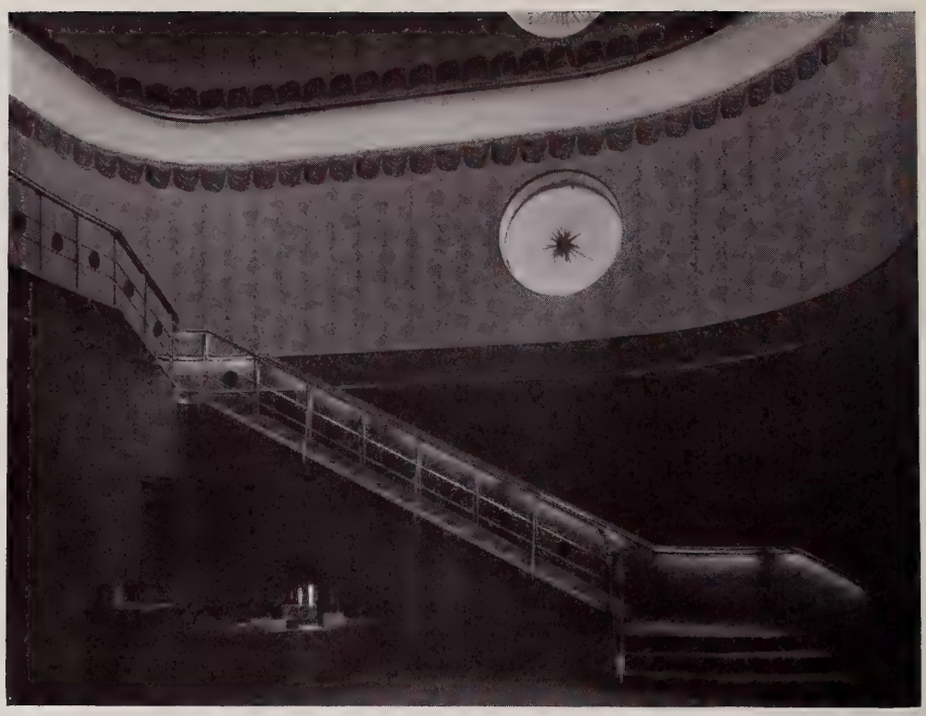
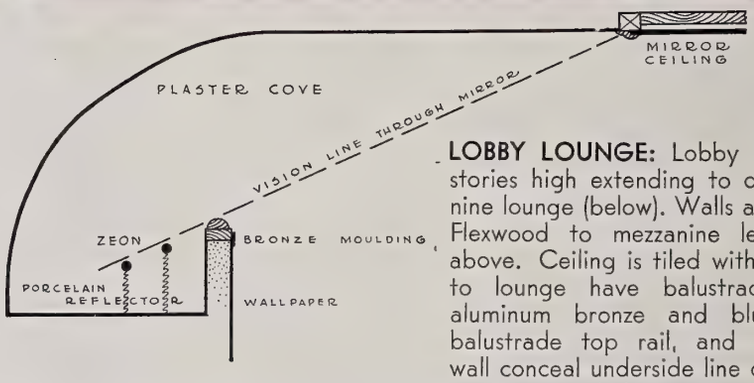
BELLE MEADE THEATRE
Nashville, Tenn.

MARR & HOLMAN, Architects



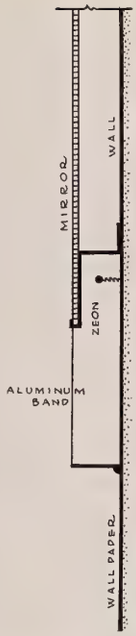
■ Operated by the Crescent Amusement Company, headed by Tony Sudekum, the new Belle Meade theatre is located in a fine outlying residential section (the site was a parcel of Mr. Sudekum's own country estate) and is housed in a building including ten stores to form a community shopping center. Parking space for 400 cars is provided behind the building, which is set back 50 feet from the street for additional parking. The building is faced with Georgia marble trimmed with aluminum.

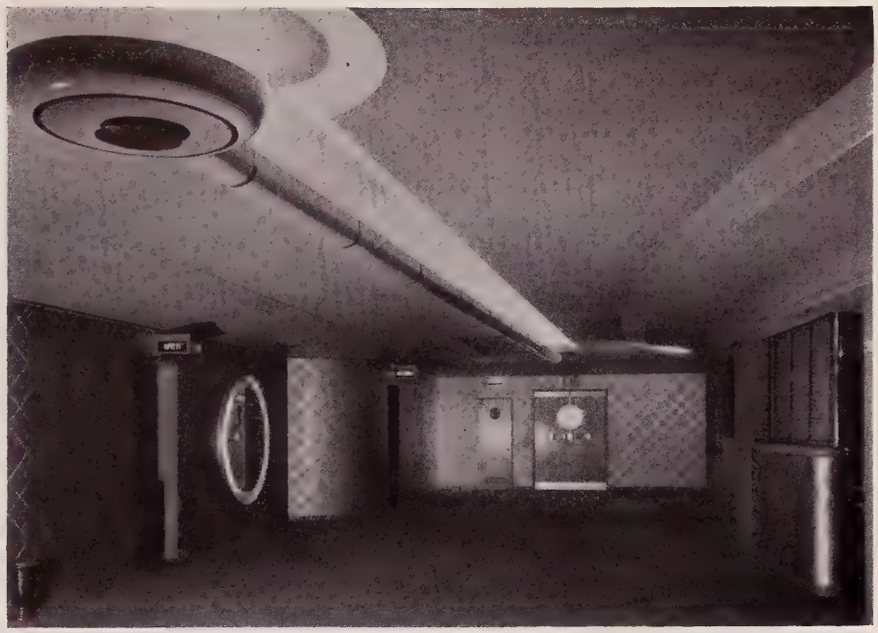


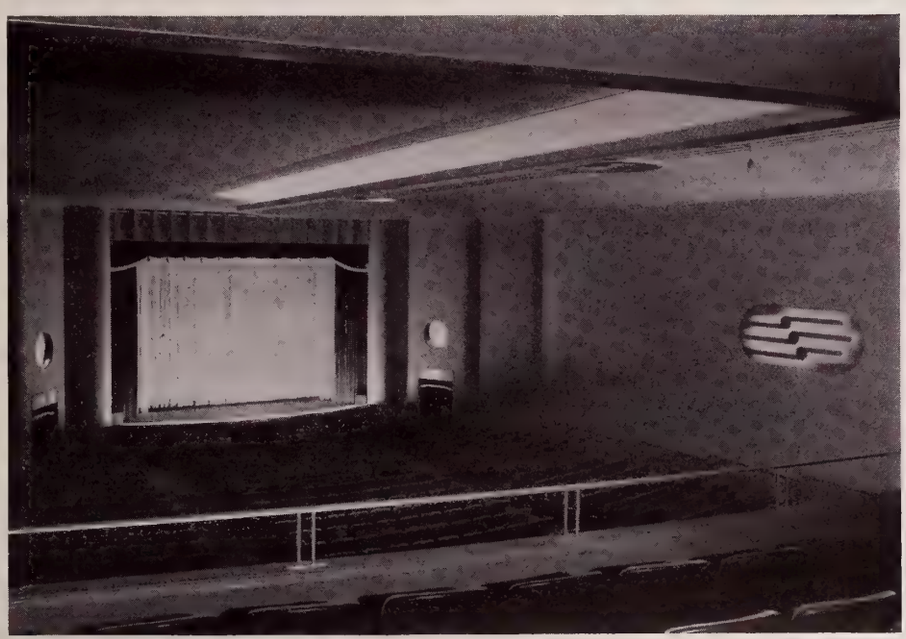
FRONT (see photographs preceding page): Theatre facade is dominated by 90-foot triangular tower of porcelain steel illuminated with red and blue fluorescent-neon tubing and red floodlights. Name is in porcelain steel channel letters carrying 10-watt flashing bulbs, and letter background is flooded with green indirect fluorescent-neon contrasting strongly with yellowish cast of the letter lamping. Tower is crowned with porcelain ball, 3 feet in diameter, studded with 350 ten-watt flashing lamps; porcelain wingback illuminated with fluorescent-neon links tower to building. The marquee is porcelain enamel faced with vertical flutings lighted with indirect gold and red fluorescent-neon and has Wagner silhouette-type panels lighted by blue fluorescent-neon and using 4-, 10- and 16-inch letters. Marquee, cantilevered to tower shaft, is 80 feet long, 40 feet wide, with end projecting over parking lot drive. Marquee soffit lighting is by 850 fifty-watt lamps on 12-inch centers in 4-foot squares. Over entrance doors are gold mirrors reflecting soffit light; glass block wall to right of entrance is set 2 feet out from panel painted in various bright colors; lighting of this space makes colorations appear blended in glass blocks. Ticket booth is faced with Ludlite corrugated stainless steel on felt backing, glued to plywood sheeting, and with copper trim.

FLOOR PLANS
Entrance Area and Second Level

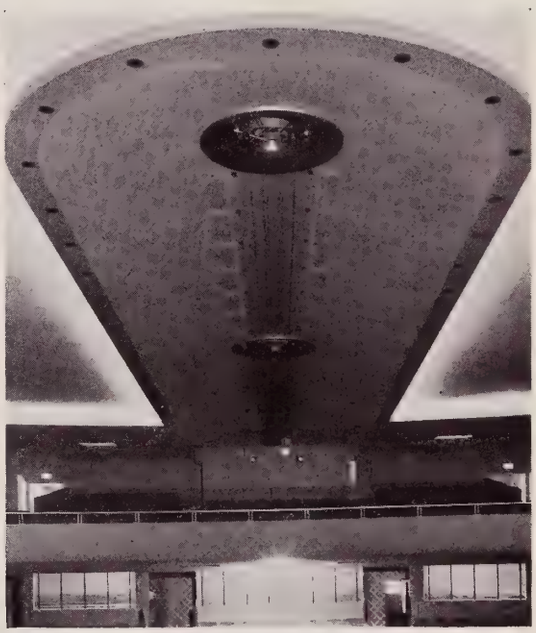
Adapted from Architectural Record



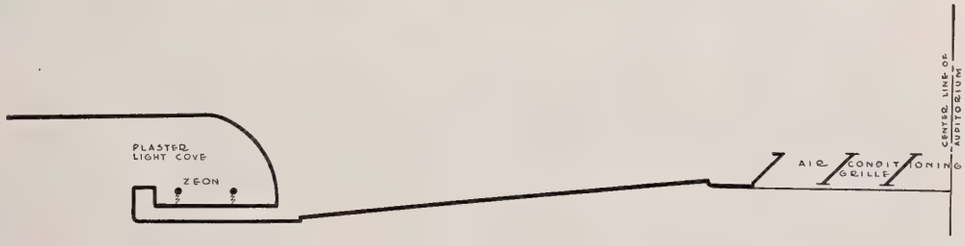




LOBBY LOUNGE: Lobby (above) is two stories high extending to overlook mezzanine lounge (below). Walls are of lacewood Flexwood to mezzanine level, wallpaper above. Ceiling is tiled with mirrors. Stairs to lounge have balustrades combining aluminum bronze and blue glass, and balustrade top rail, and handrail along wall conceal underside line of gold fluorescent-neon to light stairway. General lobby lighting is by fluorescent-neon in ceiling cornice cove (see accompanying drawing of section through this cove). The lobby is carpeted in rose-quartz-colored "carved" (self-patterning effect in varied pile heights) fabric, which is used in all carpeted areas, except in women's powder room the color is blue. Lobby furniture is built in, with simulated leather covering. Lobby candy case has walnut base, and doors are walnut with blue glass panels and aluminum push-bars. Mezzanine lounge is papered like upper lobby, and lighted by central ceiling trough of porcelain steel concealing fluorescent-neon tubing. All draperies in lobby and lounge are of spun glass fabric. This area looks out on the street through a broad, patterned plate glass window.



FOYER-STANDEE: Walls (also facing of standee rail) are covered in especially made copper wallpaper protected by clear lacquer. Venetian blinds over rail are aluminum. Illumination is by fluorescent-neon in porcelain steel ceiling trough, while additional lighting is provided by a decorative source consisting in circular mirror at center of wall (at left in picture at right) rimmed with cove containing blue fluorescent-neon tubing (see drawing of section through this feature at right). The mirror is 6 feet in diameter. Men's and women's retiring rooms of the foyer-standee (see floor plan) each has small lounge. . . . Men's smoking room has plaster walls with built-in seats and wainscot covered in simulated leather. Women's cosmetic room is papered in silver and blue, carpeted in dusty blue, carved pattern, mahogany tables and chairs. Natural butternutwood doors. Lighting of both rooms is covered fluorescent-neon.



AUDITORIUM: Walls and ceiling are acoustic plaster tinted rose, blue and gray (shades following the color scheme of lobby and foyer-standee). Only wall ornamentation consists in fluorescent-neon sources concealed in a pattern series of porcelain steel troughs. Main lighting is by a ceiling plaque extending from rear to rounded terminus near proscenium containing flush-type Anemostat air diffusers, rimmed by a cove concealing three lines of fluorescent-neon, one blue for running light, and a white and an amber for house lighting (see drawing of half-section through plaque). This cove continues across rear. . . . The Belle Meade seats 1,000 on two floors, with three banks and four aisles. Main center bank is staggered, using alternate extra-width method; the other chairs are 22 inches wide. Rows are spaced 36 inches back-to-back. Chairs have foamed latex seat cushions and are covered in light rose mohair, with arm rests covered in dark blue mohair. . . . The entire theatre is air-conditioned for all-year operation.

E. W. BICKLE

■ On the east coast of Vancouver Island in the Canadian Province of British Columbia lies the little town of Courtenay, population 1,400, about 90 miles by water from the city of Vancouver. Courtenay is a trading center for a good farming area, and it is also the gateway to a scenic vacation region. Here E. W. Bickle, operator of two other theatres in that area, recently completed the E W theatre, a 450-seat house with spacious, tastefully appointed lounge and foyer and an unusual auditorium seating plan. The distance between the first row and the screen is 30 feet, over twice the width of the screen image. Even so, the side banks of the three-bank plan converge toward the center, further keeping all seats well within the area of no distortion. The building is of frame construction, with light green stucco facing above black tile base. Entrance is immediately into a carpeted lobby with a fireplace and fluorescent-neon lighting from a pendant fixture. This room enters into a foyer with doors at the aisle heads and lighted by fluorescent-neon in a ceiling trough. The auditorium is finished in fibreboards and tiles in two tones, and is also lighted by fluorescent-neon in a ceiling trough.

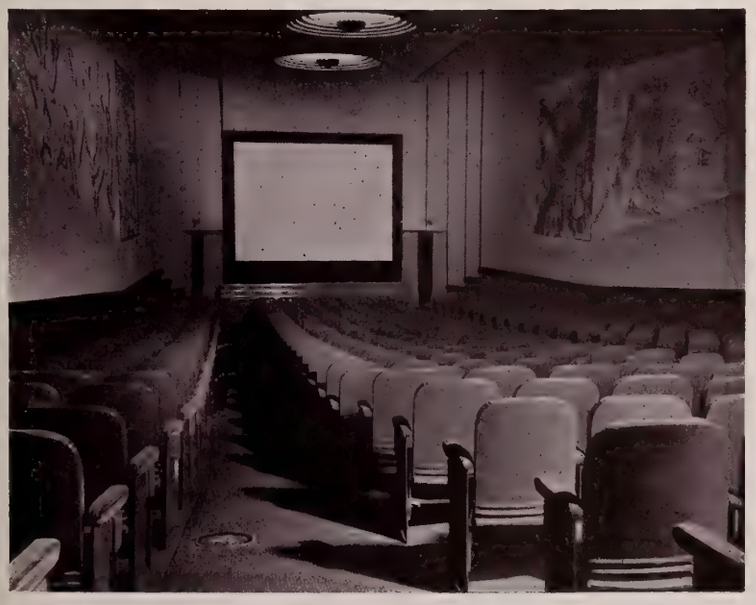
RICHARD E. BECK



■ Chicago's second newsreel theatre, called Today and located on Madison Street in the heart of the Loop, is not far distant from the first on State Street; both are something less than a block from State and Madison, center of Chicago's famed department store and clothes shop district. Recently opened under the operation of Richard E. Beck, the theatre seats a little over 300 and presents interesting applications of modern lighting technique to interior design. A relatively narrow and deep vestibule finished in black structural glass, including ticket booth abutting sidewalk on one side, has a ceiling continuous with the marquee soffit (see picture on page 36) having light sources in a directional pattern arrangement. Scaled to provide 100 foot-candles at eye-level, this scheme consists in continuous panels of Louverglas (a transparent synthetic sheet "ribbed" to direct light rays perpendicularly) flush over recesses containing white fluorescent lamps (130 eighteen-inch, ten 48-inch), each backed by a plano-parabolic white enamel reflector; and eight flush-set reflectors, 26 inches in diameter, with suspended spherical baffle, for 300-watt incandescent lamps. The lobby, done in wood veneers of brown tones, has cornice coves all around containing pink fluorescent lamps. The auditorium, finished in Spray-Acoustic (mineral fibres and asbestos in a clear adhesive, and sprayed to desired thickness), has a series of side-wall murals in luminescent paints activated by concealed 100-watt mercury lamp units; these and screen light provide chief running illumination. Additionally, five bowl units suspended from reflecting recesses are spaced down middle of ceiling and contain low-wattage lamps on dimmer. All exit lights consist in metal units concealing red lamps and holding half-inch Lucite (light-transmitting plastic) letters. Kroehler retracting-seat chairs are arranged in three banks, with rows spaced 36 inches on a combination-bowl ("reverse") floor. A main lounge, with photographic murals and leather-covered built-in seats, is in the sub-level; men's and women's rooms adjoin and are equipped with Sterilseat ultraviolet germicidal lamp toilet seats. All floor coverings are Klearflax flax-fibre matting. Projection is by Brenkert mechanisms with Brenkert Senarc-type lamps, while the sound system is RCA. An interesting entrance area detail is the use of a modern pattern in terrazzo from curb to entrance doors, with the terrazzo treated with Alundum, an anti-slip compound.

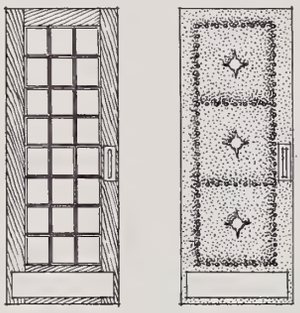
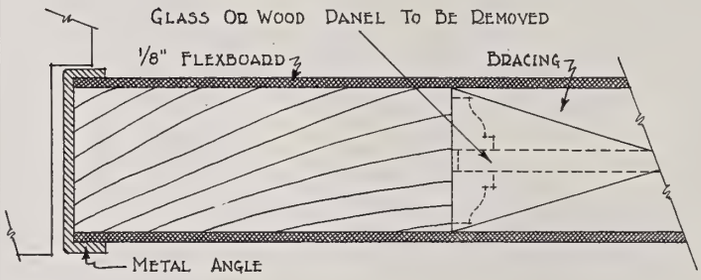
SIMPLE METHODS FOR MODERNIZING OLD THEATRE DOORS



CHARLES C. BURTON
Architect & Engineer, Paramount Theatres Service Corporation



■ Offered in this group of schematic sketches are a dozen different ways one can remodel, at a moderate expenditure of time and money, the doors of the lobby, foyer, lounges, and divisions of the theatre with which the public comes in contact. Various materials can be used; in these schemes I have applied Flexwood, imitation leather, and linoleum, in addition to cabinet woods and glass. Any competent carpenter and glazier is familiar with the applications indicated for wood lattices, etc., and glass, while I have added sketches to show the application of flexible wood veneers, leatherette and linoleum. Many of these very schemes I have used in modernizing theatres, with results considered altogether satisfactory with respect to both costs and decorative effect.

ADDED SELECTIONS

SELECTION of carpeting to give the floor its full effect in a specific theatre interior scheme, presents a problem only when a representative choice of designs is not conveniently available. Actually, there are many hundreds of patterns to choose from; to the older ones new designs are consistently added. Those illustrated here have been selected from among recent additions to contract lines. To indicate them in order:

One—acanthus leaf scroll in reds on a black field; two—large-scale figured design in tans and red; three—an open, airy feather pattern in tan and brown on a burgundy ground (these three are from the Alexander Smith group of Crestwood Velvets); four—modern geometric scheme in blue, gold, tan and red; five—abstract-modern floral design in black, grey and beige on red ground; six—another abstract modern in delicate shades of green (the latter three are Bigelow-Sanford Wiltons); seven—a Mohawk Wilton of open, colorful pattern having tan, turquoise and brown figures on rose-cedar ground; eight—another Mohawk Wilton, smaller in scale, presenting a modernized leaf figure in varied rose shades on burgundy; nine and ten are Bigelow-Sanford Wiltons, the former having a complex scheme of abstract floral devices in shades of red from dark ground to bright figures, the other a delicate check design in maroon, rose and tan.

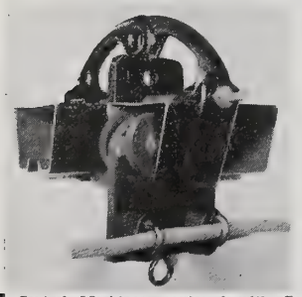
GROUND CREW . . . Back of every airplane pilot is a ground crew of men in grease-stained overalls.

There's very little glamour about these men. The public rarely sees them. Yet you couldn't get an airplane off the ground without them. That's how important they are.



Every industry has its ground crew that the public never sees. In your theatre it's the projection and sound, for without them you couldn't put a picture on the screen. That's how important they are.

Simplex Projection and Simplex Sound make the best ground crew for any theatre.

men don't understand or care about; if it did, the Sunday supplements and popular magazines wouldn't be printing some of the things they do print. The public (that portion well out of the 'teens) is rather enamoured of the "marvels" of modern science. Even country weekly "boiler plate" carries items on the new "wonders" of our age—"Gleanings from the Scientific World"! And if the motion picture theatre isn't itself a marvel of Man's recent gadgeteering, then what is? And not only are the processes of projection and sound marvelous, but the theatre uses many products that are equally interesting as a new trick of modern industrial magic. A number of such "angles" are observable in illustrative stories accompanying this article.

Characteristics and processes are not to be described, of course, for the sake of explaining them; they should be merely referred to with just that minimum description necessary to tie them up with the wonders of this scientific age (and just think, your theatre is going to have such a thing!). The necessary information usually has come to the theatre operator merely as a result of his trade paper reading and contacts with the market; catalogs are another source of information; and should these sources prove insufficient, a letter to the manufacturer, or a minute's chat with the dealer would supply more than enough.

"Features" for Extra Space

Such "tieups with scientific marvels," so to speak, lend themselves excellently to "feature-style" articles. Stories of this type are useful to give an uncompleted installation or renovation job another whirl in a local paper after the original "spot" news announcement. A story purporting to be an interview with the owner or manager, or it may well be in some instances with the projectionist, is another type of "feature" yarn. Maybe there's a "feature background" in the owner of the theatre—or of the man who built it—which can stand an airing now that the house is being remodeled after all these years.

Are you installing new curtain control equipment? How many people know that when the screen curtain closes so promptly and smoothly that there isn't some employe pulling a rope backstage, just like in the old Opera House days? They don't care? No . . . but it might be of passing interest to many that the curtain can be made to close, open, stop in the middle, go back again, merely at the touch of a button 'way up in the projection room.

Remodeling the auditorium, with new acoustic treatment? Isn't it rather curious how sound moves like water, and bounces off a wall like light, and has to be controlled so that it won't bounce all over the place, and that this control is accomplished by modern acoustical science with materials that are hidden or appear to be just part of the decoration?

To indicate the publicity possibilities in a general way is all that an article can do. There are many ways of dealing with the same subject—the time, the place and the subject determine what one can do in any instance. Publicity being what it is to the theatre, the ways and means of taking advantage of the news columns of the local newspaper need cultivation. And not all the news of your theatre is on the screen.

Example of Feature Story on SOUND

A new scientific principle will be applied in the sound at the ..... theatre, according to Manager ..... with equipment soon to be installed. Although mechanically a complete apparatus with its full supply of amplifiers, loudspeakers and "electric eyes," the new equipment, which has just been contracted for, will be the "other half" of a whole system of which the other part is in Hollywood. The practical result of the new principle is to connect up the ..... theatre intimately to every shade of voice spoken and tone of the music played in making the picture.

The equipment previously installed in the ..... theatre, as in others, was designed more as an independent unit. The photoelectric cell, or "electric eye," takes the sound off the film and converts it into an electric current so weak that it could be compared to one-50,000th the strength of a fly. This is then made stronger, or "amplified," until it is strong enough to fill a theatre with sound. Some imperfections in the work of the amplifiers and of the photoelectric cell were inevitable, Mr. ..... explained.

Hollywood also takes approximately one-50,000th "fly-power" from a microphone, amplifies it enormously and records it on the film. The studio apparatus was built as the most perfect unit possible to engineering science, but it had some flaws, nonethe-less. Under that older arrangement, therefore, the sound was subjected to a double distortion before the audience heard it and was never as completely natural as the motion picture industry wanted it.

"This problem was tackled by experts of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences," said Mr. ..... "They decided that studio equipment and theatre equipment must be designed together as two halves of a whole unit, with electrical characteristics fitting into each other like hand and glove. The imperfections of one half would thus be cancelled by exactly equal and opposite imperfections intentionally built into the other."

All the studios, following this recommendation, some time ago installed new recording equipment. Manager.....expects to have the new theatre equipment in the .....ready for operation on about .....

What the Simple Ventilation System Must Be to Do Its Job

¶ The ordinary type motion picture theatre air supply is not complicated, yet too many installations prove faulty because of skimpiness, oversights or uninformed operation. Here are the requirements if genuine ventilation is to be got

THIS IS THE time of year when exhibitors having simple ventilation and blower systems, with or without air washers, are wont to give them some thought, due to the approach of warm weather. They should begin now to lay any plans they may have for replacements and improvements, for these take time.

The scope of a simple theatre ventilating system is quite broad, and every exhibitor should familiarize himself with the fundamental operating characteristics. This article is prompted by the mistakes the writer frequently observes.

There are also terms that are used by salesmen and engineers for the purpose of designating the different types of ventilating equipment. Before discussing the practical side of a simple ventilating system, a few most important definitions of the terms generally used will be given, according to their common usage.

C.F.M. is the total volume of air moved by a fan or blower and is measured or expressed in cubic feet of air per minute. This volume, or c.f.m., of air is dependent on the speed of the fan or blower, its size, and the resistance offered to the flow of air.

A fan is a machine especially designed for creating a rapid movement of air, and for theatre use it should not be confused with the simple circulating fan, as used in homes, offices, etc. A fan is sometimes called a blower, depending on how it is used, whether to exhaust the air from the theatre, or to "blow" air into it from outdoors.

A duct is an enclosed passage made of metal or composition material to direct the flow of air from the blower to the outlet deflector.

A deflector is a device made of wood or metal which is installed at the end of the duct where it terminates in the auditorium. It directs the flow of air over the auditorium by its horizontal and vertical blades, which can be moved to any postion desired and then set in place.

A louvre is a device made of metal which is installed in the wall of the fresh air intake opening in the blower room. The blade of the louvre should be adjustable to keep out the rain, to control the amount of air taken in, to prevent large foreign materials from being drawn into the blower, and to keep out cold air in winter.

A grille, in the sense used here, is an ornamental panel of metallic open-work placed in front of a duct or deflector, mostly for decorative purposes. The use of such a grille is best avoided whenever feasible to do so, since it sets up some resistance to the flow of air, especially if the openings are very small.

Velocity is the speed of the air movement and is referred to as F.P.M., or feet per minute. The velocity of the air in theatre ventilating systems is very important, for when it is too fast a whistling noise will be noticed at the deflector blades, which might interfere with the motion picture sound; if it is too slow, poor ventilation will be noticed within the theatre.

A drive is a device consisting of several V-shaped belts that transmit mechanical power from the motor to the blower. These belts are placed over grooved sheaves, or pulleys, or the shafts of the blower and motor.

The motor is of course the electrical machine that powers the blower.

R.P.M. is the speed of the revolving motor pulley, and the pulley of the blower, and means revolutions per minute. The r.p.m. of the blower pulley, which is always of a relatively large diameter, is slower than that of the motor pulley, which is smaller in diameter. The motor r.p.m. is usually from 1,200 to 1,800, and the blower r.p.m. from 150 to 350.

Getting True Ventilation

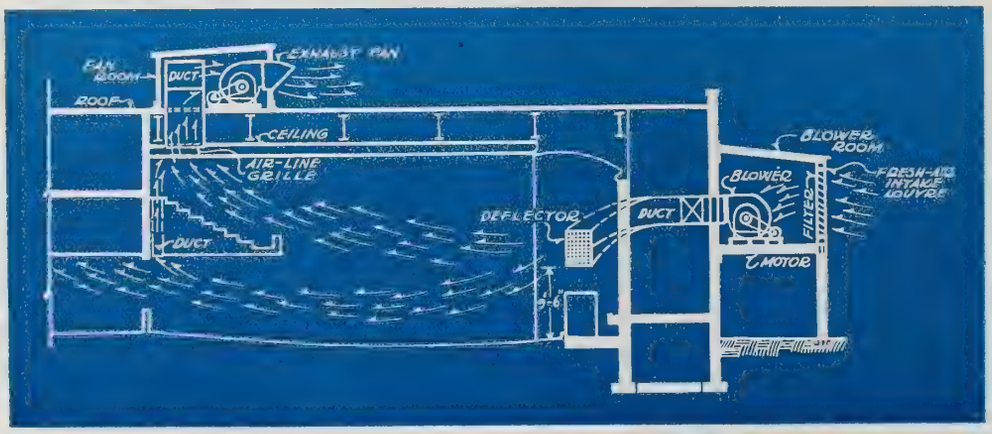
In purchasing and installing a simple ventilating system, care must be taken that the many items that make it an efficient year-around system are not overlooked. The theatre owner should never provide for a smaller amount of air than will be actually needed at any period of maximum requirements. When a blower is purchased that delivers a small volume of air, even with almost perfect distribution a bad condition will result in the rear and at the entrance of the theatre; the air as it leaves the deflector picks up heat, moisture and odors passing over the patrons, then goes through the lobby and is disagreeable to incoming people.

To prevent this bad impression of the theatre, it is necessary to deliver a greater volume of air inside the auditorium, so that the air will seem to be fresh, and in summer, not unduly warm. In some States, 30 cubic feet per minute per person is prescribed by law for minimum ventilation. From the writer's experience in theatre ventilation 75 cubic feet per minute per person must be delivered in order to have an agreeable condition within the auditorium on hot, sultry days. Calculations for the c.f.m. of air required should be made on the total number of seats, rather than on the cubic area of the auditorium.

The flow of air should always be from the deflectors at the stage, across the entire length of the auditorium, then to the outside by means of exhaust ducts at the rear. These ducts should have exhaust fans to pull out the warm, used air, which will accumulate at the rear, especially where there is a balcony.

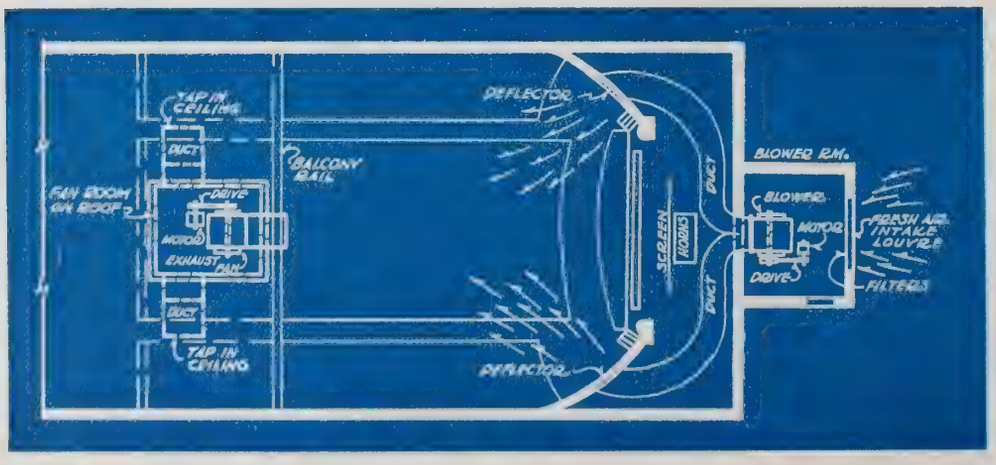
The area below a balcony, and above it, especially with a low ceiling, is usually very hot and stuffy, in both summer and winter. Patrons sitting under such conditions will soon find it impossible to enjoy a picture regardless of how good it is. Exhaust fan or fans at the rear of the auditorium must be regarded as necessary in order to have true ventilation.

In the average-sized theatre the bottom of the air supply deflector should always be located between 9 and 10 feet above the auditorium floor at the stage. In this way best results will be obtained, the air moving directly over the patrons' heads, not too low to blast them in the face, and not too high to affect the picking-up of heat and moisture.



Blower Room Provisions

The blower room should be located in the best possible location at the stage. Where a theatre auditorium is quite wide, two such blower rooms must be provided, together with necessary blowers, drives, motors, deflectors, louvres and duct work. The size of a blower room for a 25,000 c.f.m. capacity blower should be about 8 feet deep, 7 feet wide, and 7 feet high. The fresh air intake louvre area should be 36 square feet.



The size of a blower room for a 45,000 c.f.m. capacity blower should be 10 feet deep, 9 feet wide, and 8 feet high. The fresh air intake louvre area should be 51 square feet.

The size of a blower room for a 65,000 c.f.m. capacity blower should be about 12 feet deep, 11 feet wide, and 9 feet high, while the fresh air intake louvre should always be adjustable for different settings of the blades; also, there should be a mesh screen on the intake. A very good practice is to install inexpensive "throw-away" air filters at the fresh air intake to filter out particles of dust, dirt and other small foreign bodies always present in outside air. Extreme care should also be taken that the fresh air intake opening for the blower is not located at or near a busy sidewalk, restaurant kitchen, large boiler room chimneys, and loading platforms for coal.

The duct work from the blower supply "mouth" to be the outlet deflector should always be of metal properly reinforced for rigidity and long life. Under no circumstances should canvas ducts be used, for they deteriorate fast, leak air and collect dust. The blower and motor should have good sound-absorbing bases to cut down mechanical noise to the minimum.

Basic layout for simple ventilation system in theatres. The upper drawing shows a section through a theatre having a balcony, the drawing below shows the same system in plan. Arrows indicate the direction of air flow. The various elements of the system are pointed out, and the methods illustrated in these drawings are explained in the accompanying discussion.

Motor Requirements

The motor should be a two-speed, multiple-speed, or slip-ring variable speed machine in order to allow adjustment in the volume of air delivered to the auditorium according to changes in the weather. A single-speed motor may be cheaper in initial cost, but when colder weather sets in it will be almost impossible to use because of the terrific volume of cold air that will be delivered to the auditorium. Mostly all power companies require motors of 5-horsepower and above to be connected to power circuits of 2- or 3-phase a.c. This practically eliminates single-phase a.c. motors from consideration for ventilating systems. Furthermore, single-phase a.c. motors are made standard single-speed, and a special single-phase motor for multi-speed work would be almost prohibitive in cost. However, if single-phase single-speed motors must be used, flexibility in speed can be attained by installation of hydraulic or mechanical variable speed drives. These are not as efficient, however, as multi-speed motors. These multi-speed features should also apply to the motor of the exhaust fan, since there will be times, especially in winter, when it will be desired to remove only a small amount of air from auditorium.

Setting the Deflectors

When the ventilating system is completely installed, proper adjustments of the deflector blades must be made for the correct flow of air throughout the auditorium. The ventilating system can be of the proper type and size for the particular needs of your theatre, but if the air is not distributed evenly throughout the auditorium the system is not doing its job. The supply blower should be turned on "full-blast," also the exhaust fan, so as to have conditions within the theatre as nearly as possible like normal operation during show hours, then two or three people should sit in different sections, beginning at the front row—but always in the same row—each with a toy pin wheel or a stick with a streamer of silk or other light material attached to it, in his hand. One man should be at the deflector (or two men if two supply deflectors are installed) ready to adjust each individual blade as directed. The men sitting in the auditorium should lift the pin wheel or streamer stick about 2 feet above their heads, and when the pin wheel begins to turn or the streamer begins to lift, notify the men at the deflectors. When the front row is done they should move to the fourth or sixth row, and so on, until the seating area has been covered.

Care should be taken by the man at the deflector blade that he does not move the blades too much, for an inch in either direction will deflect the air flow substantially. When these adjustments are completed the blades should be locked tightly in place. This does not mean that the air flow has been absolutely, perfectly adjusted forever, since some changes will be advised with a full audience in the auditorium, due to the heat and moisture given off by the people. "Dead" spots should be noticed carefully, and the blade or blades controlling each particular spot should be turned ever so slightly until a movement of air is felt in that "dead" spot. Two or three such adjustments are necessary, in some cases, before a relatively even air distribution in the auditorium is accomplished.

And Don't Overlook These—

A little item that is most important and quite frequently overlooked is the installation of a metal drip pan under the motor base for catching the overflow of oil. Without this oil pan the overflow oil from the motor will soak into the floor and will constitute a fire hazard. Another important precaution is to make sure the blower bearings are greased and the motor bearings oiled with a good grade of oil before starting the system. Many bearings have been ruined in this way when the installation men assumed the manufacturer had oiled his equipment at the factory. A good trick is to pour some light grade oil into the blower bearing grease cup before forcing heavy grease into them. In this way the oil will provide a smooth path for the grease to follow to every moving part of the bearing block.

One always should be sure to make adequate provision in the blower room for hoisting and inserting the blower. In a lot of cases the blower room is completely finished, and then it is found that the opening left in the wall is not large enough to permit the blower to go through.

. . . A DEPARTMENT DEVOTED TO CANDY AND POPCORN SALES AND VENDING OF ALL KINDS FOR EXTRA THEATRE INCOME

Beverage Vending, and Refreshment Sales Promotion

• The third and concluding article of a series on methods that make confectionery selling an appropriate service and worthwhile source of extra income

BEVERAGE dispensing must be included among the extra-income possibilities of a theatre, and it has the sanction of custom quite as much as candy and popcorn. In classes of theatres allowing the active sale, or hawking, of confections, the "ice-cold drink" has always had a place; even in New York stage theatres today, orangeade is commonly available in the lounge or from an attendant passing up and down the aisles between acts. Providing a refreshing drink may be properly regarded as a service to motion picture theatre patrons, and equipment now available makes such a service convenient and unobtrusive.

We have observed in the two previous articles in this summary of extra-income methods suited to theatres, the main considerations in vending candy and popcorn. There is never any need for the theatre to handle such vending through a concessionaire; beverage dispensing, however, can be operated profitably by the theatre management itself only in certain circumstances.

Maintenance and servicing of the dispensing equipment really require, if there is to be a profit on beverage sales, that a single operator have not less than ten machines. These of course must be located within an area small enough for proper servicing at minimum expenditure for trucking and labor. In most cases, therefore, the theatre offers merely a location for one of the machines of an outside operator, or concessionaire; however, it is obvious that a circuit with at least ten theatres within a radius, say, of 20 miles, could operate its own beverage machines.

Equipment and Its Location

The servicing requirements are basically much the same regardless of the kind of machine used. There are two general types—one serving a drink prepared at a carbonating station (syrup and carbonated water mixed and barreled), and one which carbonates the water and mixes the syrup with the water at the moment of dispensing. With both types the dispensing is fully automatic upon insertion of a coin, and the drink is dispensed in a paper cup. The theatre operator's percentage from a concessionaire runs, as a rule, from 10% to 20% of gross sales, depending on volume.

As to the type of beverage, the selection would be determined by preferences among a theatre's patronage, and the availability of specific kinds of beverage. The popular cola drinks are of course available in almost any community of the United States.

In locating a beverage machine in a theatre, considerations are similar to those applying to candy dispensing equipment—that is, the drink equipment should be close enough to traffic lanes to be noted, yet not be so conspicuous that the theatre-proper looks as much like a confectionery store as a theatre. There is yet a special factor presented by beverage vending: whereas a bar of candy or box of popcorn is carried away from the point of purchase, a beverage is consumed on the spot, so that the location (this would apply particularly to the smaller theatres) must be where a group of purchasers (as might easily happen on hot summer days) would not interfere with traffic.

Confection Sales Promotion

The controlling consideration as to what and how much can be done by the theatre management to stimulate purchase of candy, popcorn and beverages would seem to be one of clientele. The theatre has a certain character derived from the general character of its patronage. What may not be out of place in a "shooting gallery" would be offensive, or at least crudely obtrusive, in a well-appointed theatre serving, let us say, a fine suburban community. In general, vending should not seem to be an important part of the theatre business.

For the promotion of confectionery sales within the theatre, the service-to-patrons idea is legitimately adapted to screen announcements. The copy thus confines itself to the functions of a reminder, in some such words as, "Patrons wishing a refreshment during or after the performance will find candy, popcorn and a cold drink of Cola available for their convenience in (indicate locations)."

For extra stimulation of candy and popcorn sales on occasion, the "gift package" idea, with the gift a pass to the theatre, has been used successfully, and in the average situation it may be considered appropriate to the character of the theatre. It certainly makes confectionery vending no more of an intrusion on the real function of a theatre than money contests and giveaways. The method follows practically any of those commonly used in distributing "gifts."

The interests of maximum refreshment sales in the theatre are most appropriately and consistently served, of course, by the appearance and location of the equipment and displays, the attractiveness and courtesy of attendants, the selection, quality and freshness of the goods. Like everything else in the theatre, if a job is to be done, refreshment sales under the proprietorship of the theatre management itself, need regular, informed managerial attention. Where this is given, refreshment vending is usually a highly worthwhile source of extra income as well as an appreciated service to patrons.

REFRESHMENT SHOPS AND SMALL CASES TO MEET LOCAL NEEDS

One of the Interstate refreshment shops. This one is at the Lyric theatre in Brownwood, Tex. At left it is shown from the street; at right, from the lobby. It contains booths seating four to six people. Each such store is staffed by four girls, two to a shift. The popcorn machine is placed at sidewalk during operating hours to serve pedestrians as well as patrons.

IN THE CONDUCT of confectionery sales among theatres of the Interstate and Texas Consolidated circuits in the Southwest, methods are more or less adjusted to the specific needs of the individual theatre. In some instances the vending facilities are provided entirely within the immediate public areas of the theatre itself, in others small shops adjoining the lobbies are provided.

There are other special provisions to meet local conditions. In the smaller houses, in order to save on staff overhead, the doorman is expected to take care of candy counter sales during certain hours, leaving another member of the staff to attend to the popcorn machine. For this purpose a small candy case has been developed, riding on castors, which is wheeled over to the entrance doors. It is 24 inches long and 22 inches wide at the bottom, and slants to 16 inches wide at the top, while the height is 48 inches. Construction is of plate glass on a wood base, and there are three shelves accommodating about 40 candy items.

A ticket booth with special candy case for handling candy sales by cashier. This one is at the Palace in El Paso.

At yet other small theatres candy sales are taken care of by the cashier. A special type of case has been designed for incorporation in the ticket booth plan, with a glass shelf arrangement so placed that the patron can readily choose the item wanted, which is dispensed through the ticket window slot.

LAFE R. PFEIFER

In practically all of the houses in these circuits, the confectionery sales of which are managed by Lafe R. Pfeifer, popcorn is a profitable item.

"When possible," Pfeifer points out, "the popcorn machine should be located as near the sidewalk as possible and on the side of the box office which is used as an entrance to the theatre. Location of the machine, the technique of operating and staffing it is all a matter of common sense and public psychology and none of the questions present any technical points.

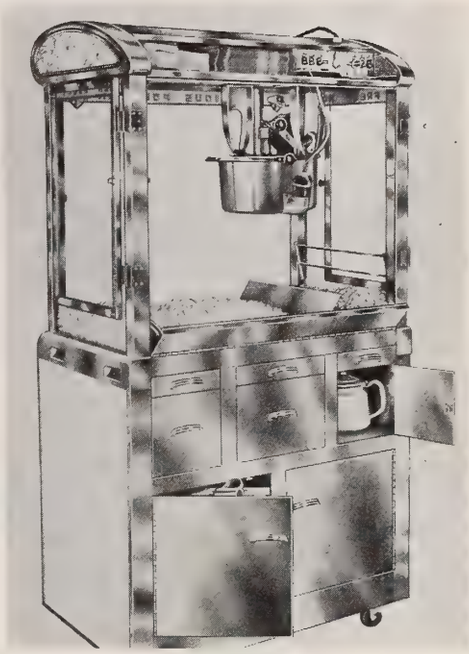
"If it is necessary to place the machine inside, it should always be in the same relative position and face the theatre patron as he enters. If there are balcony stairs in the lobby, the machine should be placed with reference to patrons entering that section as well, because frequently balcony customers furnish a large portion of the trade.

"There is no odor connected with the proper operation of a popcorn machine and never in any of our theatres does the odor of popcorn permeate the theatre. Odor arises only when the machine is not properly cleaned and when the theatre operator employs a person to operate a popcorn machine who will not keep it clean."

Under Mr. Pfeifer's system every machine is thoroughly cleaned every night, not only the popping mechanism, pots, etc., but the entire machine. Even the top accumulates vapors which must be wiped away, and the wiring must be cleaned. Pfeifer said a bountiful supply of clean towels should be kept handy for this purpose; he discourages the use of wiping rags as generating a poor psychology in the trade.

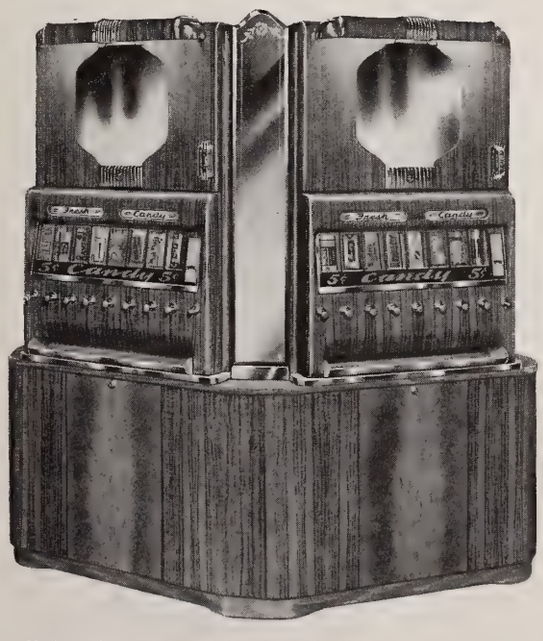
If the theatre is one catering to large crowds, he believes it is unwise to throttle the candy business by expecting one attendant to care for candy and popcorn. Common sense in the staffing of these units on the part of the management will decide. Pfeifer usese women only for candy sales, but either men or women for popcorn machines. In either case the attendant must be a person who is tidy to the point of mania, or one who has an unusually clean and tidy appearance.

Mr. Pfeifer says best results have been obtained by attiring popcorn machine operators in white, which must be kept clean and spotless. Candy counter girls are not provided with uniforms except in the large "deluxe type" theatres.



Some of Mr. Pfeifer's do's and don'ts are to wipe the outside of the kettle with clean towel after each popping, keep the exterior of the popcorn machine dusted and clean at all times, never allow hands to touch the corn, even in sampling to use a scoop, to keep nails and hands clean every moment of operation.

Pfeifer never uses any promotional stunts with any of his product. He believes customers get their money's worth in every purchase and he discourages the placing of passes or other premiums in packages.



Neither the vending of popcorn nor candy presents a maintenance problem according to Mr. Pfeifer's experience.

"I have never seen an instance where upholstering or carpets have been damaged by popcorn and candy. The packages and wrappers of popcorn and candy can be removed later in the course of normal daily cleaning routine."

Planning the theatre so as to provide space for vending equipment as part of the design is urged by Ben Schlanger in his regular column "Plan and Materials" in this issue. On page 35.

THE PLACE OF

Unit Air-Conditioning in Theatres

By J. T. KNIGHT, JR.

WITH THE development of comfort air-conditioning, it was natural that the larger theatres and business establishments should be in the front rank of the enterprises accepting and installing air conditioning. As the larger market for central air-conditioning plants began to reach a certain degree of satisfaction, the air-conditioning manufacturers were forced to turn their eyes to smaller stores, homes, apartments and subsequent-run theatres to complete their prospective market, and as a result of this, most of the large manufacturers and several other companies have placed on the market within the past several years, equipment variously described as "package air-conditioning," unit conditioners, and "spot coolers."

Some years ago the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers, I believe in conjunction with the Association of Manufacturers of Air-Conditioning Equipment, established a definition of air-conditioning. To rephrase this, though keeping its exact meaning one may say that air-conditioning is "the simultaneous and exact control of temperature, humidity, and air motion within an enclosure." The unit type of air-conditioning leaves out one-third of this definition—namely, air motion—unless the unit can perform in the manner of a central plant serving a properly designed duct system.

To describe unit air-conditioning or spot coolers, one may say that they are within themselves a complete air-conditioning system. They are comprised of a compressor, refrigerating piping, cooling coils, and a shell and tube condenser, or a shell and coil condenser, or an evaporative condenser. This equipment, combined with a blower and all housed in one unit, is purchased and installed just about as you would install a large refrigerator for your home. In brief, it is assembled at the factory, charged at the factory, and has a minimum number of controls established basically within the equipment, with the exception of a thermostat to be located at some point within the conditioned area.

Unit Equipment Performance

There are, as we said, a number of types of such equipment available today. Let's take one of them for purposes of examination, a 20-horsepower unit. This means a nominal 20-ton capacity in refrigeration effect. This unit is 8 feet, 2 inches long, 34 inches wide, and 6 feet high (the 15 h.p., nominal 15-ton capacity, has the same dimensions except it is 6 inches shorter). You can see from these dimensions that most any theatre could find room to install two, possibly three of these units. Air-conditioning units have been designed (though not exclusively) especially to eliminate the rather costly run of duct work usually necessary in a theatre in order to get proper distribution of conditioned air, and in eliminating the duct work we naturally are following the methods of simple ventilating systems with blower fans, and perhaps air washers. It is quite true that vast improvements have been made in the design of delivery grilles, and it is believed that the improved design of grilles permits, with unit air-conditioners, much more satisfactory distribution than formerly with the excessively large volume of air handled for ventilating and for air-washer cooling.

I have available a report from an unbiased source on the performance of a spot-cooler unit, and the most striking finding in my opinion is that 1.32 tons of refrigeration was produced per kilowatt of power consumed. It seems to me that this is an exceptionally good unit for those of us in the theatre business to talk about, as any theatre manager, even though he may not know much about applied electricity, can to some extent estimate his cost of operation in terms of tons of refrigeration effect produced by the use of such a unit. It appears very likely that this type of air conditioning is to be the answer to the problem of lower initial cost for the air-conditioning or scientific cooling of the subsequent-run theatres, especially of the small neighborhood or small town type.

In installing this type of equipment, a substantial item that comes into every central plant job in an existing theatre, that of building alteration, is minimized to such an extent that in some instances it is eliminated. Where the costly duct system ventilation ducts can also be eliminated, then other than the cost of our equipment about the only items we have to consider is that of bringing into the theatre sufficient electrical power, effecting water connection to the condensers, and installing a short discharge duct from the condenser to the outside. Many times even a fresh air duct connection can be eliminated by use of existing openings in the theatre.

Simplification of Installation

With a 20-ton unit, which weighs about 4,000 pounds, the load on any floor is about 170 pounds per square foot. In most every instance this load can be distributed over a larger area by the use of either timber or metal beams laid on the floor, and most all floors are designed for a live and dead load of approximately 100 pounds, so that it would probably be only in the very old buildings that it would be necessary to reinforce floors to carry this equipment.

Isolation from the standpoint of vibration is taken care of in the equipment itself so that basically the equipment could be set on a floor and permitted to run with reasonable expectation of no disturbance from vibration. It appears that this type of equipment can be installed in theatres for around $110 to $125 per ton of effective cooling, as compared with a central plant installation, which generally runs be-

TURN TO

All the topnotch air conditioning equipment you need to rebuild your system correctly — or to install new apparatus from beginning to end—is available from General Electric.

Whether it's a new condenser, control, compressor — or oil or gas heating equipment that you need—you can rely on G-E apparatus to do the job right. Theatre managers everywhere will testify to that. G-E equipment has been solving problems for people in commercial refrigeration and air conditioning since the industry's infancy more than 25 years ago.

tween $225 and $250 per ton of effective cooling.

It should be thoroughly understood by any who contemplate purchasing and installing such unit equipment, without a duct system, that for 80% to 85% of the time it will give the equivalent of air-conditioning; for the remaining 15% or 20% of the time it will give substantial cooling effect without complete air-conditioning. In brief, this type of equipment provides well engineered and scientifically put together relief cooling, which sometimes serves.

These unit equipments can be procured generally in ranges from 3, 5, 7½, 10, 15 and 20 horsepower, and even some of the larger manufacturers are turning out units of 25 and 30 horsepower. This means that it would be possible to meet almost any load with a multiple group of these units.

But Don't Underestimate Needs!

On the other hand, if a theatre operator should desire to install units to meet 100% of the correctedly calculated cooling load, he will be then defeating the purpose of initial economy in that installation. We have much data to show that designed conditions upon which we calculate air-conditioning, are actually required for the average theatre less than 5% of the time during the cooling season. When we stretch this over the marginal periods we can definitely afford, I believe, to install well-made "package air-conditioning" for 80% to 85% of our calculated load. I therefore am of the opinion that it should be upon this basis that calculation should be made to determine whether unit air-conditioners can serve our purpose in any specific instance.

My only point in bringing this to the attention of theatre operators and managers is to indicate what to expect if such equipment is installed, so that they will not be disappointed if on a very hot afternoon they should have a capacity house and the temperature should rise slightly above what they feel is good air-conditioning. However, peak outside conditions seldom occur at the hour of peak load inside the house.

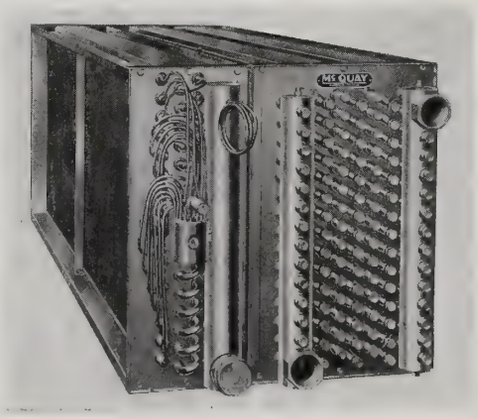
McQuay Coils

HEAT TRANSFER coils are the specialty of McQuay, Inc., of Minneapolis, and accordingly McQuay coils are available for every regular and special air-conditioning application.

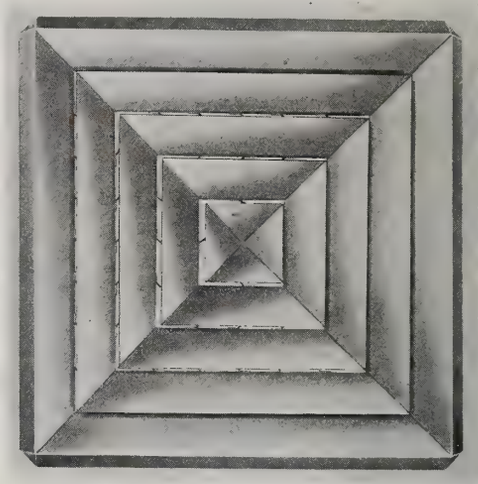


McQuay water coils are recommended for theatre cooling when a sufficient supply of cold water is available. In some installations it is possible to utilize the coils for both heating and cooling, thereby saving the additional cost of separate heating coils.

If water conditions are such that cleaning of tubes is necessary, the McQuay RP (removable plug) coil is recommended. The non-ferrous removable plugs at both ends of all tubes provide easy access for internal cleaning of tubes without removing pipe connection.

McQuay water cooling and heating coil.

McQuay direct expansion coils for cooling with refrigerants are equipped with distributing headers or thermostatic expansion valves with integral distributing arrangements to insure proper distribution of refrigerant to all tube circuits (with this type coil for cooling, separate coils for heating are of course necessary).



Water coil with removable plug for cleaning.

McQuay heating and cooling coils assure (?) effectiveness of contact between collar and tube by polishing of the inside surface of the fin collar during the spinning operation. McQuay coils are made of copper, aluminum, brass, admiralty metal, etc. Over 10,000 standard sizes are available from 1½x1½-inch to 60x120-inch, and may be had in any number of rows deep.

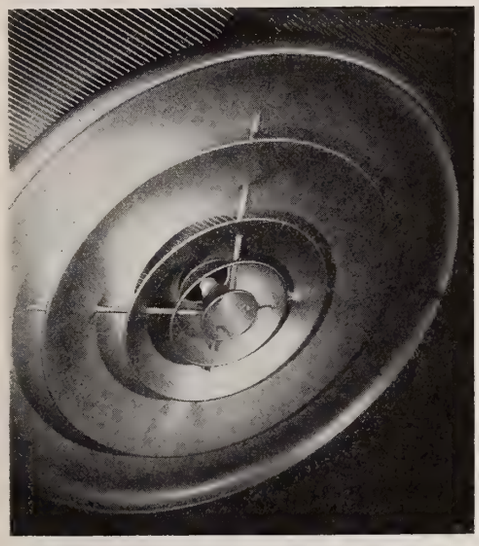
Tuttle & Bailey Outlets

THE LINE of air diffusers manufactured by Tuttle & Bailey, Inc., of New Britain, Conn., embraces both a flush type of aspirating ceiling outlet, and damper-controlled and ornamental grilles.

The flush type ceiling outlet, called the Aerofuse, consists in a group of concentric cast aluminum rings providing passages delivering the air in concentric jets, so influenced by the design that on leaving the diffuser each jet of air turns outwardly, creating an aspirating effect. Aerofuse outlets, which can be associated with lighting fixtures, are made in diameters from 4½ to 54 inches.

The Aerofuse flush type ceiling diffuser.

Air-deflections bar grilles include one type with bars fixed for predetermined deflection of the air, and another with adjustable bars for setting on the job. In both the bars may be arranged horizontally or vertically according to air dispersion requirements, and both types are also manufactured with arrangements of valves or deflecting blades to meet any need of side wall distribution.



The ornamental grilles are obtainable in over 400 patterns in cast and stamped types.

Anemostat Diffusers

WITH THE introduction last year of a wall type Anemostat, the line of aspirating-louver air diffusers manufactured by the Anemostat Corporation of America, New York, permit application of this type of air diffuser (which was introduced into the United States by the Anemostat company) to horizontal as well as vertical air dispersion systems. The principle of the action of Anemostats is the production of many air currents traveling "blankets" at a variety of angles to each other, together with the production of a multiplicity of counter-currents of air

(the whole result being an aspirating effect to assure thorough mixture above the breathing zone of room air and conditioned.

Anemostats are available in various types of ceiling diffusers as well as the wall type, with the variation conforming to the particular distribution problem involved in the installation. Anemostats can be obtained to

This is one of the Venturi-Flo line of outlets, while this company also has a complete line of damper and ornamental grilles and registers (trade-named Uni-Flo). All are available in types and sizes for noiseless dispersion of air at a full range of quantities and velocities of air. The Venturi-Flo diffusers are obtainable with either direct or indirect lighting fixtures.

Outling the Do's and Dont's Of the Spring Cleaning Job

ANOTHER SPRING is here, bringing us again to the time for those cleaning jobs which need to be done only once or twice a year. Owners, managers, and house staff members have been doing them for many a year, but there is always the newcomer, not only to the industry but to the position involving that particular responsibility. And reminders covering a job done so seldom are never wholly amiss.

Plaster Surfaces

Oil paints are harmed (dissolved) by any detergents containing free alkali. This characteristic of alkalis is exactly the reason why they are used as cleaning agents, and accounts for part of their efficiency. Alkali dissolves grease, hence it promotes cleaning. By the same token, it will dissolve the oil in oil paints, at least enough to damage the surface. Unless the cleaning of such surfaces is done preparatory to immediate repainting, only perfectly neutral detergents should be used, which means that the usual cleaning compound will very likely be found unsuitable.

Expensively finished surfaces are often protected by a film of starch—ordinary starch, which was applied as a solution in water after the surface was painted, stippled, stencilled or otherwise ornamented. The starch protects the surface. Starch is dissolved by hot water. It is reasonably insoluble in cold water. Cold, or at most tepid, water, should be used in dealing with surfaces so protected. If the starch coating has been washed away, replace it with lacquer, which is permanent.

Marble Surfaces

Marble is not attacked by the alkalis of ordinary detergents, but it is seriously harmed by any agent whatever that tends to crystallize on drying. In solution, the agent penetrates into the pores of the marble, and when the water dries off the crystals in forming push outward, causing the surface to flake or become pitted. One source of this trouble lies in the use of "hard" water not previously softened. Pure, neutral soap and soft, warm water are safe.

Bicarbonate of soda and whiting, mixed to a thick cream, applied to discolored marble surfaces and left eighteen to twenty-four hours, will often remove discolorations from marble surfaces. It is washed away with a sponge and tepid water, and will carry much of the discoloration with it.

Calcimined Surfaces

Calcimine cannot be cleaned. It is washed away with a sponge and water, and the surface re-calcimined.

Fabrics

The best treatment for fabrics is to send them out to a first-class cleaner, if that can be done. If it is impracticable, or too great a strain on the budget, they may be brushed with a clean painter's dust brush. The more softly-woven kind will not withstand even a whiskbroom without taking material damage. Fabrics of any value should never be beaten or shaken to remove dust.

Lighting Fixtures

Large glass surfaces of course may be washed with any soap and warm water, and polished dry. For small objects, such as the crystal pendants of some lighting fixtures, alcohol and water is far preferable. No carelessness or neglect can result in the alcohol forming a soapy, dirty film, but soap will do this, especially with those small pendants which cannot be removed from the fixture for really thorough rinsing.

Tips on Cleaning & Sanitation

By S. BRAVERMAN

Easy and Effective Moth-Proofing Methods

MOTHS ALWAYS seem to be troublesome, but we are getting into the period when they are especially so. Most fabrics are susceptible to attack by the larvae, but they can be protected without much trouble.

S. BRAVERMAN

There are two general types of moth sprays—one is a food for moth larvae rather than a death-dealer. For obvious reasons we won't deal here with that kind. The kind we would recommend is a spray that will kill the egg-laying moth as well as the hatched larvae, and will keep the fabric moth-proof for about twelve months with one thorough spraying.

An ordinary sprayer is used, and no odor remains. Saturation is not necessary in spraying fabrics in moth-proofing but every bit of the surface should be covered. To assure this with drapes, they should be spread out.

There is another type of moth-proofing liquid which is especially indicated for fabrics that are stored (such as uniforms after dry-cleaning). This type forms snow-like crystals as it is sprayed on. The material should be kept in a box or wrapped in heavy paper, or it may be kept in a closed closet; otherwise the compound loses its strength. This type is cheaper than the first-mentioned spray and is entirely suitable for moth-proofing fabrics of all kinds that are to be stored.

Para nuggets (rather than crystals, which evaporate quickly) are also suitable for stored fabrics. They are sprinkled on just as you would use moth balls. Urinal cakes can also be used effectively in storing materials; however, they are perfumed, and all perfumes contain essential oil, which might spot the fabric. If used at all the cakes should be used sparingly or hung in a porous bag in the storage closet, or placed in a ventilated metal container in the storage box. This precaution does not apply to the para crystals; but as stated, these evaporate rapidly.

These methods are simple ones, easily carried out, and therefore encourage timely moth-proofing. And they are entirely effective.

It's a good thing that seat's upholstered with CAVALON*

A FELLA isn't accountable for his actions during tense moments in the movies ... even to the tearing apart of the upholstery with his fingernails! That's one reason why it pays to make sure your seats are covered with CAVALON.

CAVALON is the result of years of Du Pont research. It resists general abrasive wear, edge wear, cracking and peeling. It has sufficient strength to prevent tearing and puncturing. The surface coating of CAVALON is treated with a patented "case-hardening" process that makes this rugged material unusually resistant to flexing and wear, yet does not harm its leather-like characteristics and pliability.

CAVALON is available in many good-looking colors that are highly resistant to crocking, bleeding and fading. The American Seating Company uses CAVALON on their American Bodiform Chairs. Whether you are buying new equipment or reupholstering old seats, make sure you specify CAVALON. For samples and complete information, write E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. (Inc.), "Fabrikoid" Division, Fairfield, Conn. Or get in touch with your nearest authorized CAVALON dealer, listed below.

THE STAGE...VENDING

IT SEEMS rather difficult for the average exhibitor to get along without a stage or stage platform in front of the screen, even though it has been proved over and over again that such a platform does not have any real purpose whatever (with the exception of theatres that actually do have small acts or bands occasionally).

The exhibitor is probably tradition-bound in this respect. A platform the entire width of the front of the screen (or so-called proscenium) opening, is entirely unnecessary for announcements or contests. Such works can be done from a small moveable or permanent platform strategically placed. The advantages of leaving the large platform out wherever possible are:

1. The open, free space at the screen is always close to the emergency exits, and free area around the exits is highly desirable in the case of emergencies.
2. The cost of the stage construction is eliminated.
3. High-lighting of the screen curtain can be achieved more successfully from pockets in the ceiling at a distance farther away from the screen than would be possible from the usual position of the traditional stage footlights. Lighting from the ceiling can be done more economically by the use of a few silvered reflector lamps pocketed in the ceiling.

Planning for Vending

First as to location: Vending machines should, if at all possible, be located elsewhere than in a part of the auditorium proper or standee area which is directly connected with the seating area, since any activity in and around the machine may prove objectionable to the seated patrons. Nor should they be placed in the immediate direct line of traffic, but rather in a space just outside of the main lines of traffic. This leaves the foyer and lobby space as being most appropriate. A lounge is not ordinarily to be recommended as a location since it is, if properly planned, too distant from the main artery; besides a vending machine is apt to break up the desirable furniture scheme.

It is best to create a small alcove, rectangular or curved, to provide a space where a few people could stand in using the machine, so that there is no occasion for interference with traffic.

Attraction Displays with a Readable Message

¶ A group of recent installations of silhouette-letter display equipment and how they are being used to place arresting, legible attraction selling copy on the street

Two marquees, to catch two avenues of vision, on the Circle theatre in Brighton, Mass., using Adler continuous, curved panels with 10-inch letters in a display depending for effect on space. In other displays the Circle combines 16-inch letters with 10-inch.

The Earle theatre in Philadelphia now has a huge 7-line Adler panel high above the marquee. Varying its form, this display typographically uses four sizes of Adler letters.

Hawking the news in displays taking advantage of varied letter sizes to overcome limitations of marquee dimensions. Above is shown the Newsreel theatre in Los Angeles, while at left is the Today newsreel theatre in Chicago. Both using Wagner panels and letters, the marquee display above combines three distinctive sizes, while 30-inch letters are used on cross-panel. The Today uses 10- and 12-inch with 30-inch.

Installation schemes are presented in pictographic fashion understandable to laymen, with various equipment locations and duct systems indicated.

Aluminum Ladders

A LINE OF aluminum ladders is described in a new 44-page catalog issued by the Aluminum Ladder Company of Tarentum Pa. Types described and illustrated include various sizes adapted to the maintenance work of theatres. Being constructed of aluminum, these ladders are especially light in weight.

Complete Lathe Catalog

A NEW CATALOG describing and picturing the complete line of lathes manufactured by the South Bend Lathe Works of South Bnd, Ind., has just been issued. This make of lathe is used in a number of theatres for stage set and lobby display fabrication, and several models suited to such work have been added.

Rewinder brought out by the Armstrong Company of Charleston, Ill., makers of a number of projection devices. Uprights are set at angle so gravity hold reels on spindles, according to the specifications. The equipment has a clutch built into the main drive controlled by knob at base; turning knob half-round disengages the clutch to stop or start rewind. Drive is by 1/4-horsepower motor. Finish is black wrinkle enamel.

A LINE O' LAW OR TWO

Avoiding Liability for Injury in Fires

By RUDOLPH ALLEN
Member New York Bar

IN the examination of statistical data for the purpose of determining the number of fires which have occurred in motion picture theatres, it becomes apparent that fewer fires happen at theatres than in other types of commercial buildings. The infrequency of the event has lulled the exhibitor into a false sense of security, and has at times blinded him into forgetfulness of the imposing duty placed upon him by the State for the privilege of operating a theatre. That duty requires him to take every human precaution for the safety of his customers.

When a fire does sweep the interior of a theatre, it is then too late for the exhibitor to admonish himself for his inertia and his indifference. The law will penalize him severely should any of his patrons sustain personal injuries. He must at all times be alert to the ever-present danger and take every precaution against it.

An exhibitor cannot avoid, for example, his duty in this connection by merely flashing a warning on the screen to the effect that, in case of fire, patrons should walk and not run to the nearest exit. This is a safety measure, but is not sufficient unto itself.

Recently a fire happened in a theatre in Mount Vernon, N. Y., and several persons were severely burned. They recovered substantial damages from a jury by charging the owner of the theatre with two acts of negligence:

1. That there were fire extinguishers present in the theatre which were not used.
2. That the employees of the theatre did not supervise the exit of the patrons.

The owner carried the case to the Court of Appeals (Tapley vs. Ross Realty Corporation, 275 N. Y., 144) and this high court sustained the verdict of the jury. On the first point, the court, in maintaining that the failure to use the fire extinguishers constituted negligence, had this to say:

"The use of a fire extinguisher would have been a matter of seconds. Two of these things were within easy reach when the curtain broke into flames. We think it might fairly have been found that, since such an appliance was required to be provided, it was to be used on a burning curtain, if it was ever to be used at all."

The court rejected the defendant's contention that failure to use the extinguishers was a mere error of judgment, by quoting Tantillo vs. Goldstein Bros. Amusement Co., 248 N. Y., 286. In this case, a patron was invited to the stage to assist a performer in a vaudeville act. While so engaged the patron received personal injuries. He sued the theatre owner for damages on the theory that the owner should have anticipated the possibility of danger and protected him. Although this case does not involve the question of fire, it is interesting because of the fundamental rule of law set forth by the court as follows:

"Patrons of theatres are frequently invited upon the stage to be used as foils for the actors. Sleight-of-hand performers and acrobats avail themselves of the services of spectators as accessory to their tricks and feats. The management is bound to know whether the character of the act is dangerous. Patrons are entitled to protection against acts which by their nature might cause a menace to safety. One who collects a large number of people for gain or profit must be vigilant to protect them."

On the second point, as to whether the theatre employees neglected to supervise the exit of the patrons, the court found that this was a proper question for the jury to decide and refused, therefore, to disturb the verdict of the lower court.

It would seem, therefore, from this momentous decision, that it would be very wise for exhibitors to keep a constant check-up on their fire equipment. It certainly would not be required of them to maintain fire drills in the same fashion that these drills are maintained in schools and on boats, since it would be most difficult and expensive to subject a theatre audience to such a drill.

What would be required, however, would be careful and frequent examination of all fire apparatus, every exit, and every mechanical device which might aid or interfere with the egress of the patron in the event of fire. Since the courts have decided that failure to use a fire extinguisher constitutes negligence on the part of a theatre owner, it would follow as a matter of logic that the failure of a fire extinguisher to function properly in the case of a fire would establish the liability of the theatre owner beyond any question of doubt.

While Better Theatres cannot perform the service of legal counsel, inquiries from readers are invited and will be answered as fully as permissible.

Notes on Sound Control

C. C. POTWIN, Consultant in Acoustics
Fellow, Acoustical Society of America

AMOUNT OF MATERIAL

THE AMOUNT of acoustical material needed for a motion picture theatre depends not only upon the desirable times of reverberation of different frequencies, but also upon the relationship of wall and ceiling surfaces to the source of sound at the screen.

If the cubic foot volume of the theatre is correct in relation to the number of seats, and if efficient upholstered chairs are used, the analysis may show that the times of reverberation fall within the desirable values at all frequencies, without the addition of acoustical material; however, if the theatre is designed in such a way that the rear and side walls, for example, are large plain surfaces and do not present sufficient irregularity to break up the sound waves, acoustical treatment may be required even though the analysis shows that the times of reverberation will fall within desirable limits without this treatment.

Calculating Correction

In other words, planning for a desirable time of reverberation throughout the frequency range is only a part of the acoustical problem in motion picture theatres. It is equally important to know the conditions under which treatment may be required, even when the reverberation time is already correct.

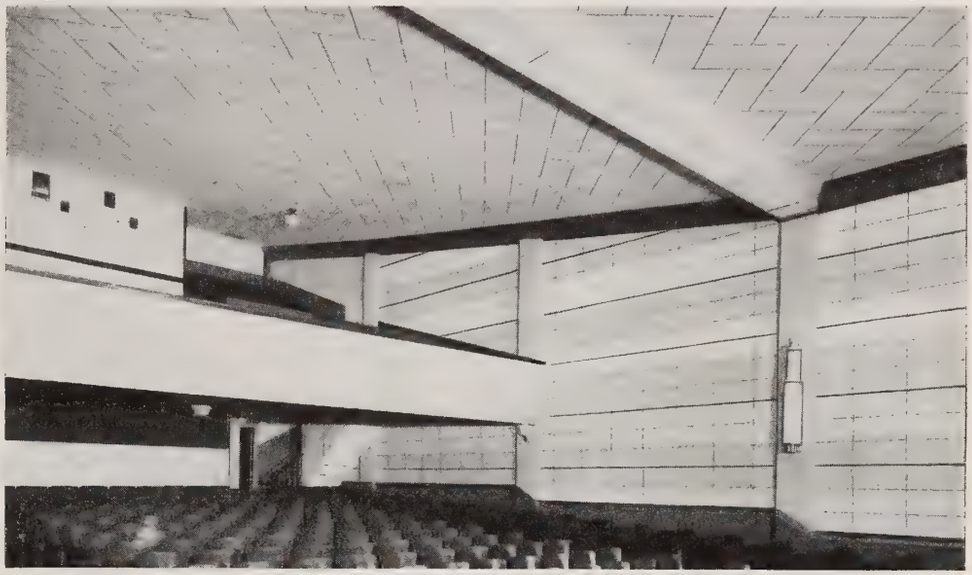
Herein lies the crux of the acoustical design problem. If the theatre is so planned, fundamentally, as to have a correct reverberation time as a result of controlled cubic foot volume and quality of seating, the walls and ceiling can be designed in such a way that no objectionable sound reflections will be produced by these surfaces. Thus the correct reverberation time can be maintained without adding more acoustical material than the analysis indicates as desirable.

Avoiding a "Dead" House



If, on the other hand, treatment must be added in order to eliminate certain objectionable reflections due to improper shaping, when the reverberation time is already within desirable limits, it naturally follows that the result will be an overtreated or "dead" house. Theatres of this type are not at all uncommon wherein a favorable acoustic relationship between cubage and seating capacity was obtained in design, yet absorbing materials were needed only to overcome the basic and original defects of improper shaping.

THEATRE PLANNING SERVICE

¶ Better Theatres is glad to answer the questions of exhibitors concerning theatre planning. Better Theatres' Service Department annually deals with hundreds of inquiries regarding planning problems.

¶ In order that questions may be dealt with effectively, they should be specific, and all conditions bearing upon them should be clearly given. Often a rough sketch is helpful. It is of course understood that this service is in no way intended to supplant that of licensed architects and Better Theatres cannot supply working plans, design sketches, etc.

¶ Although Better Theatres' Service Department has leading specialists regularly available for consultation when and as an inquiry may advise this, all inquiries are answered by this department and should be addressed to it, as follows:

PROJECTION SOUND REPRODUCTION THE SCREEN

LET'S RAISE SOUND STANDARDS WITH THE EQUIPMENT WE HAVE

By F. H. RICHARDSON

AT the risk of being called a saboteur of the works of progress, I submit for consideration some points about the so-called "new sound" which are not at all in its favor, at any rate for the present. Shortly after Walt Disney's "Fantasia" was shown to the public we were promised somewhat similar methods of reproducing sound, to be less expensive and to come "soon." The "Fantasound" method was pretty complicated; the type of system which would be adopted for general use would be far less so, but it would still apply the control track principle, and employ three speaker systems.

The control track operates in such a manner as to expand the volume output at certain pre-determined points which will increase the loudness of music or sound effects, as the script may call for. Although this type of reproduction requires considerably less equipment than that of "Fantasound," it does require the installation of certain new equipment, such as additional photoelectric cell compartment to operate the control track, additional amplifiers to increase the power, and two additional sets of loudspeakers, at an average expenditure, including installation, of around $3,000 per theatre (this figure is an estimate, but I believe it is a fairly accurate one).

If it can be shown beyond a doubt that this new sound will definitely mean something to the boxoffice, then such a revolution in sound and the necessary expenditure of money are warranted. But we ought to be sure that we are not merely looking for the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow.

Now, it was only in the latter part of 1936 that all sound manufacturers agreed to change the design of their equipment over to the present two-way system, including the cellular type horn plus other new design features and greatly improved film pickup and increased amplifier power. Early in 1937 numerous theatres began to install this equipment, which since has represented the acme in sound reproduction. Certainly at least five years should elapse before any great changes are made in equipment requiring theatres to spend thousands of dollars—unless, as we have said, such changes will show definite boxoffice improvement.

And now we come to the point of this discussion: There are a little over 15,000 theatres in the United States, and out of this total there are about 4,000 theatres (so manufacturers say) which have installed the new two-way system, including everything that goes with it. Therefore some 11,000 theatres are reproducing sound today in about the way they were in 1928. It is our belief that some campaign should be instituted whereby these 11,000 theatres would bring their equipment up-to-date equal to that of the first 4,000 theatres that are equipped to present pictures at their best. This would bring a tremendous amount of improvement in sound reproduction for the entire industry.

With so many theatres still operating with antiquated equipment, it seems rather ridiculous to adopt something entirely new and possibly revolutionary when it will be financially impossible for the majority of theatres throughout the country to reproduce such sound, at least for a long time. For example, if the new control track equipment will cost, for equipment alone, an average of $2,500, it will also be necessary for about 11,000 theatres first to bring their present equipment up-to-date in other respects. That would add to the cost of the control-track equipment.

I say, gentlemen, this does not make for logic. Let us repair or replace such antiquated projection and sound equipment that may be in existence, first!

I know that all the engineering organizations in the industry are trying to arrive at certain standards. But new equipment, representing today's standards, are available now.

Group Hearing Aid System Requiring No Wiring of Seats

[It is authoritatively estimated that not much more than 1% of the country's motion picture theatres have hearing aids. The majority should have them; they provide a fine service to people otherwise denied the pleasure of the theatre—and their admissions usually mean others as well. But setting aside certain seats for them may make their ailment painfully conspicuous; anyway, some exhibitors find this practice a "headache." That is why we think hearing aids that do not require it an important development—if they are otherwise successful.—THE EDITOR.]

SOLUTION OF many of the problems involved in making the theatre attractive to hard-of-hearing patrons is offered by a radically new hearing aid device which requires no wires and enables the deafened patron to sit anywhere in the auditorium. He can even hear the entertainment while walking about, yet is protected against audience noises. The new hearing aid is an English invention, brought out in the United States through Charles H. Lehman of New York.

This group hearing aid system, called Telesonic, is completely portable, not wired to a sound source in any way, yet it does not use a microphone or respond to sounds in its vicinity. Its principle of action approaches that of radio, but it is not radio.

The system consists in two subdivisions, which may be regarded, by the analogy of radio, as broadcaster and receivers. The "broadcaster" is merely a sound amplifier

Cut Your Carbon Costs 10% to 25%

USE DROLL PROCESSED NATIONAL CARBON COMPANY SUPREX AND *HIGH INTENSITY CARBON

No short lengths of carbons need be thrown away.

By the Droll Process, a carbon is so drilled on one end as to make a female opening; the other end is drilled for a male opening. The projectionist need only join the carbons together and clip them with a metal sleeve of pure copper.

ALL DROLL PROCESS CARBONS REACH THE PROJECTION ROOM FULLY PREPARED AND READY FOR USE

When the positive carbon is about 3 or 4 inches long, you simply insert the next carbon in the milled-out part, slipping the copper sleeve over the stub. This copper sleeve matches exactly the copper coating on the carbon. That's all there is to it. Replace it in the projector. It is consumed, sleeve and all, giving light of unaltered quality and intensity.

Every joint a perfect fit. No delay. No dirt. No machine to buy. No work to do.

Now used in over 600 theatres and spreading fast.

Droll Patented Process carbons are now available to users of the following carbon trims:

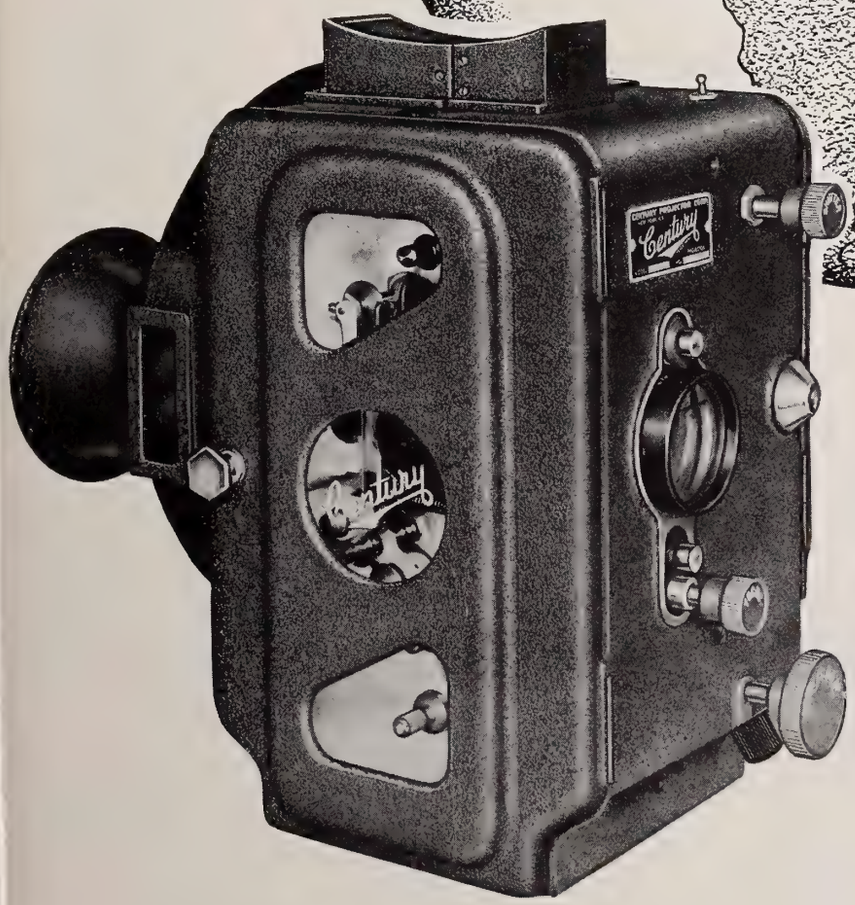
with low impedance output. Sound from stage performances is obtained from microphones located on the stage in the usual way; sound for film reproduction may be obtained through connection with the sound system, or alternatively through microphones that may be located near the stage speakers.

Layout for a Telesonic hearing aid system in a theatre audience (based on an actual installation) . The Telesonic amplifier is connected in parallel with sound system (this may be made at any point in system). The loop layout in the seating area to form the magnetic field is made by running copper wire through telephone conduit from output of Telesonic amplifier to baseboards along sidewalls and under carpet along aisles (under-carpet lines may be of copper foil). Crossovers in aisles may be at any point, and main floor loop is connected in series with balcony loop. Loops are shown in drawing by heavy lines, and arrows indicate current flow.

The output of the amplifier is wired to what may be regarded as a broadcasting antenna, consisting in a loop of wire or copper foil, or several such loops connected in series. The wire or foil is laid under carpets, along the aisles, along baseboards, or in any other convenient and inexpensive arrangement which will leave every deafened person within 30 feet of some segment of the loop.

The Receiving Set

The receivers are loaned to deafened patrons in the same way hearing aid units are loaned under present system. Each receiver is about the size and weight of a cigar box and thus will fit into a jacket pocket or a woman's handbag. It does not have to be exposed; it contains no microphone. It does not respond to sound at all, but only to sound currents circulating in the "antenna" loop. Each receiver is fitted with a volume control, and with an air-conduction or bone-conduction hearing unit. Each is powered by self-contained batteries of flashlight size, and utilizes tiny "peanut" tubes for amplification.



The entire system can be understood most easily by considering that a portion of the sound currents of the normal sound system (or currents picked up on the stage by microphones) are wired to a radio transmitter and broadcast to portable receivers within the theatre, but actually the system is not radio. The currents circulating in the theatre loop are audio frequency, not modulated radio frequency, and will not radiate more than about 30 feet or so from that loop. They cannot be heard on an ordinary radio—unless the radio is not shielded in the usual way, in which case some of its circuits might respond accidentally. Similarly, there is no reaction with the normal sound system, which is always thoroughly shielded.

Mr. Lehman demonstrates use of patron's set, holding the individual amplifier and using handphone.

F. H. Richardson's COMMENT

Suggestions to Help Brother Projectionists

FROM A BROTHER in Canada who protests he has been behind the scenes for so long a time he has become a veritable shrinking violet when it comes to seeing his name in print, comes a suggestion which he hopes will help the many projectionists who seem to be in the center of an epidemic of Green Filmetis. The same suggestion has reached me before but this brother elaborates somewhat on the exact procedure to be followed. He says:

F. H. R.

"I am chief projectionist at our theatre and it seems all such troubles should have respect for my title and pass me up, only appearing when I am not on duty. However, on the contrary, if there is a piece of machinery that can possibly get out of kilter, or any other trouble that can come up, it perversely waits until I am on duty and then pops up. The latest bit of difficulty I have encountered (and licked, by golly!) is green film, the emulsion of which adheres to the tension shoes. Inquiry from others taught me to use wax on these shoes, and from the time I learned to apply it correctly I have had no further difficulty.

"There are, however, a few don'ts which I had to learn the hard way. (1) Don't wax more film than the edge on which the tension shoes rest. (2) Don't apply more than a very thin coat of wax or the excess may and probably will be deposited on guide rollers and slit in sound gate. (3) After every reel has been waxed, clean off wax else particles of dust and dirt may and probably will scratch the film."

This sounds like very good advice and I believe, if followed carefully, trouble with green films will be licked; however, there is the factor presented by the careless projectionist. I am sorry to say that some men feel that if they can get the film through their own projectors without too much trouble to themselves, the next man can worry about whatever trouble they have caused. In other words, I am very much afraid that too many men would not take the trouble to remove the wax that careless methods have permitted to be deposited, before shipping the films back.

Staying Where the Fields Are Green Enough

ALMOST EVERY week I receive letters asking advice as to the advisability of leaving one place and attempting to locate in another. Often there are complications, such as non-membership in the I.A., even though efforts were made to join. Some days ago I replied to such a communication; I now have an answer. It is truly remarkable by reason of the fact that its writer is willing to accept the advice sought. He says:

"I am glad to say your reply to my letter lies before me. I thank you for the advice it contains. Yes, as you say, I am fortunate in that I have a job. I shall accept your advice and hold it. Quite true, it is not tops, but at least it is steady, provides a living and, with care, something to spare.

"I work for one of the Skouras theatres. It is a first-run house and the manager is tops to work for. For a town of this size, populated for the most part by retired farmers, the scale does seem just a bit unnecessarily low; including overtime, I average only around $26 a week. In a larger town, just 40 miles from here, the scale is $49, and that is quite a jump, but I guess I should not squawk too much and maybe not too loudly, for there are many things to the good. The company is a nice outfit to work for. It keeps the equipment in quite good shape, though not so up-to-date as we might wish.

"We have a small local here, only eleven members, six of whom are regularly employed in the six 'good' houses; two on relief work. The other three are employed at other than projection work, so we have perfect harmony in our little gang. True, there are several small houses in our jurisdiction which we are not attempting to organize. They operate in such small villages that the theatres cannot possibly pay a living wage.

"In early editions of your Bluebooks of Projection, at the end of each chapter, you closed with a sort of proverb that could be applied to projection. Would it be possible to republish them? (I'll have to think about that.—F. H. R.)

"I have read with much interest and benefit all the letters published in your department, and your answers to them. It is very seldom indeed that I fail to find something in them to help me in my work. By-the-way, I finally discovered the cause of the trouble I wrote you about, which was scratched film. I'll pass the information along for possible benefit to brother projectionists.

"As of course you know, at the top of the film chute (Simplex) are two heavy guide shoes between which the film passes. I checked them several times before discovering a tiny pitted place in the heavy nickel plating. It was necessary to use a magnifying glass to discover it. Upon replacing the injured part the trouble stopped."

It is well to examine the parts that contact the film under pressure, rather carefully once each day. One will usually find everything okay, but after all little time and effort is spent, and one day something is found that might cause trouble.

As to your sticking to a steady job that pays considerably less than a city job would, in my opinion you are wise. All is not gold that glitters—and you undoubtedly should find that living conditions in a city would tend to eat up the difference in your wages pretty substantially.

Herman A. DeVry—One of Film Art's Great

THESE LINES are written just after receiving a telegram from Chicago, saying, "Your friend H. A. DeVry passed away suddenly yesterday afternoon [March 23]."

Sad, sad news, indeed. One by one the older ones who began many years ago to mould this great industry of the motion picture, pass from the scene. Herman DeVry brought to the technology of the film a fine genius and a great honesty in his workmanship and in his dealings with his fellow men. He was proud of his products and jealous of the good name they represented. In both attitudes he was well justified.

Herman DeVry was one of the earliest members of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers and was a generous contributor to its work. Neither in the sessions of the SMPE nor elsewhere was Herman DeVry a man to dodge an issue. He fought friend and foe alike for what he considered to be right and just. His passing will grieve all who knew and loved him, and these are in many places of this world.

A London Message: "We're Carrying on!"

I HAVE received a letter from Stanley Perry, projectionist of the Empire theatre, Metro house in Leicester Square, London, who is official head of the projectionist's organization in England. While space is at a premium, I shall, as I am certain a great majority of our readers would wish, quote from Mr. Perry's letter, as follows:

"I received your letter and note your remarks regarding the war situation, with which I fully agree. I hear you have been ill. This will never do, you know, and I hope you are now on the mend. The years fly by and you must take it a bit easy. You can afford to rest on your laurels. You've done well, Pop, and when I say this I know I speak for thousands of the "boys" who make the shadows sing and dance on the screens, even through these sad, war-torn days. . . .

"You ask regarding conditions as applied to the industry, particularly projection. I can only say it and we are carrying on much the same as usual, in spite of air raids, 'Alberts' and 'Blitzes' from time to time. Quite a number of houses are closed for various reasons, both in the city and elsewhere, but those open are carrying on much the same as usual, except that they close at 7 p.m. in the West End, and 9 or 10 o'clock in the outer districts. Stuff [presumably films are meant] is getting short in some places, but up to now we have enough in our district.

"Well, F. H., I hope to pop over the big pond and pay you all a visit soon after the war. True, it will be a long deferred visit, but it is something pleasant to look forward to in these terrible times."

Well, that's a fine letter to come from a man who works nightly, as also do his fellow projectionists, with bombs dropping from the sky all around.

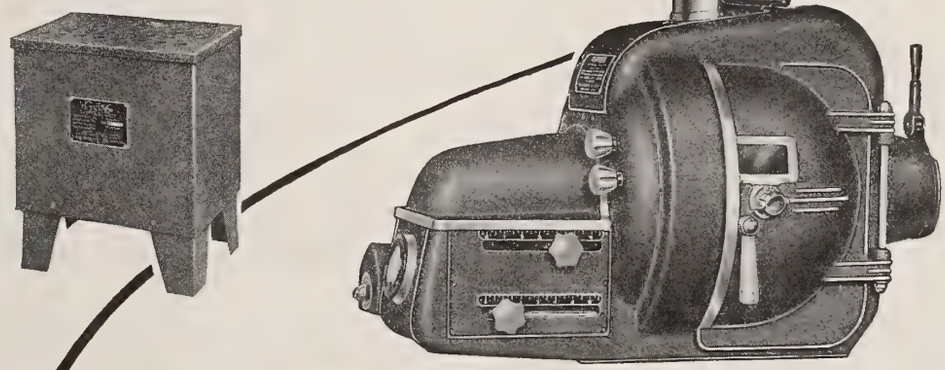
Marking a Milestone In a Notable Career

LESTER B. ISAAC, formerly projectionist, now director of projection for Loew's, Inc., operating several hundred motion picture theatres, completed on February 16th a quarter of a century of service with the Loew circuit. He began his notable career as a projectionist in a small theatre in Washington, D. C., in 1912.

LESTER B. ISAAC

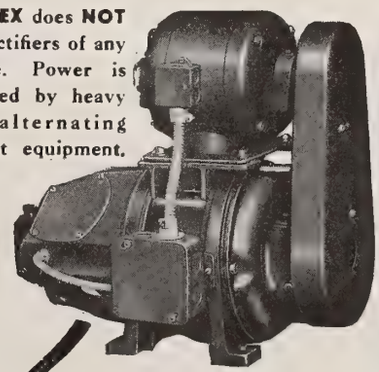
In 1926, Mr. Loew's deemed it expedient to create a projection department and to give it authority over all projection matters, save only those coming rightfully under the direct supervision of the theatre manager. After some time spent in investigation, the company selected Lester B. Isaac to head the new department. M. D. O'Brien was later chosen by Mr. Isaac to be second in command.

Mr. Isaac has remained a member of Washington's Local 224, IATSE and MPMO, and to mark his Silver Anniversary with Loew's, and his even longer period in projection, Local 224 has presented him with a gold life-membership card, signed by T. D. Bittenbender, president; and Frank R. Baker, secretary.



Expressing the High Standards in Canada

AMONG RECENT letters from Canada is one from a person who apparently preferred to have his remarks published anonymously, for no name is signed. The letter says, in part:



"I have often wondered why our big film corporations and exchanges have not taken the matter of mutilated trailers more seriously. My own idea of handling trailers is as follows: Fade in and fade out by means of standardized photographed cues

"YES, SIR, Cyclex REG U S PAT OFF GIVES ME THE FINEST PROJECTION AT THE LEAST POSSIBLE COST"

CYCLEX does NOT use rectifiers of any nature. Power is supplied by heavy duty alternating current equipment.

★ Each 14-inch carbon will project 21,600 feet of film with pure white light.

★ The highest overall efficiency of any rotary power supply.

★ Absolute dependability of all Ashcraft products.

For large size screens, ASHCRAFT TYPE D (65 ampere), TYPE E (50 ampere) are recognized as tops in projection lamps.

have plainly marked splice leads at head and foot of every trailer so that when they get too short another can be spliced in and marked by the exchange. Such a method would give a nice effect on the screen; also it would avoid the present unsatisfactory method of cutting the trailer.

"Penalties could and should be imposed upon any projectionist who violates good ethics by cutting or scratching cue marks on trailers and on theatres which permit the outrage. I wish to go on record as a self respecting projectionist as being against scratching cue marks. I wish also to say that no man who has the least respect for his profession will commit such outrages. They are an absolute proof of carelessness, lack of respect for his work and, in one sense, incompetency.

"If each person involved would consider what it means to have a scene marred by avoidable faults, he must agree. I have projected prints which were defaced by from two to half a dozen such disfiguring, unnecessary sets of changeover marks or motor cues. Personally, I use a templet if there are no cue marks and take pains to make them standard. If for some reason the latter is not possible, I use a black china marking pencil on the back of each print, removing the marks before the prints are shipped out.

"Projectionists of the circuit I work for must take care of the prints, otherwise they will receive a dressing down from our chief inspector, which means mend your ways or else."

You know now, why, despite the absence of identification, I have published this letter. To all he says, I say, Amen.

A Plea for Better Small Town Conditions

A PROJECTIONIST down Georgia way, who's name it is thought best not to disclose, writes concerning a matter which has for many years deserved consideration. It is commended to the attention of all fair-minded men. The letter runs as follows:

"I most sincerely wish I might talk to you personally but since I am denied that privilege, the written word must serve. Why is it the IA is so reluctant to admit men working in small towns, regardless of their ability to prove theirthorough competence? Also, why is it that the IA, or at least many locals thereof, refuse to examine into small town problems in projection and extend help that is so sadly needed? It would seem that were you to get in touch with the IA about it you might secure attention, whereas the small-town projectionist is utterly unable to do so.

"I believe you very well know, whether true a large percentage of the small town or not the IA does, that whereas it is quite men may justly be presumed to be somewhat lacking in ability, nevertheless in many hundreds, if not indeed thousands of towns too small to support enough theatres to enable the formation of a union, it would be quite possible to combine the men in several adjoining small towns into a union and thus obtain some degree of justice for them. The net result very possibly, might in the end be beneficial to all concernd, including the exhibitors.

"In th elong run it may well be argued that this would work no degree of hardship on the exhibitor. In fact, because of the low wages paid and the worse than bad working conditions (multiplicity of tasks imposed) which deter men of ability from entering the projection field, or at least from remaining in it as soon as they have reached early manhood."

This letter evidently comes from a man of ambition and one who presumably has in him the makings of a high-class projectionist—and, I suspect, is one right now. He is only one of many who is discouraged because of the conditions with which he is confronted. He feels these conditions to be unjust (as they very often are) and not such as will encourage him to do a good job by himself, his employer, or the public. As to dy approaching the IA on the plight of small town men, it would do little it any good. While it is of course desirable that members do good work, still that is not primarily the problem which confronts the union (though possibly it should be). Rather, it is the duty of the theatre manager to see that the projectionist does his work well. The IA should merely supply exhibitors with men who can do a good job.

Altogether too many managers regard keeping the expense account low as the only important thing, and wages are a substantial part of this account. Such managers will sacrifice, to some extent at least, excellence in results to make a good showing on the cost sheet.

But the unions—that is, some of the locals—do not always care whether they can supply good men or not. Yet when a union ties up the labor market, forcing exactly the same wage scale for all its members in each class of theatres, by what right can it supply any but thoroughly competent workmen?

I well know the explanation offered by unions for admitting to membership men lacking real competence, and it is a good explanation, too, based on a fact not at all complimentary to the exhibitor. But it does not in any way excuse unions for failure to elect officers who will place fairness to both the union and the employer, the public and the industry they serve, ahead of their own convenience and material interests. It is the duty of every union either to admit to membership none but men who can prove their competence, and to make periodical honest checkup.

I well know that might be difficult, but also it is extremely "difficult" for a great industry to have its product presented carelessly.

Communications for F. H. Richardson will reach him if addressed to him either at BETTER THEATRES, Rockefeller Center, New York . . . or at No. 3 Tudor Lane, Scarsdale, N. Y.

The Buyers Index

A catalog of theatre equipment, furnishings, operating supplies and architectural materials, listing dealers by states, and manufacturers according to product classes

The Buyers' Index is divided into two sections, one listing territorial dealers of the United States by States and of Canada by Provinces, the other section listing manufacturers alphabetically by classes of product.

Territorial dealers which are commonly the immediate source of supply, are designated as dealers either in general theatre equipment and furnishings or in some specific kind of theatre supplies. Manufacturers listed are those catering to, and active in servicing, the theatre.

In referring to The Buyers' Index, it should be noted that a cross-reference index of advertisers appears on page 74.

ACCOUNTING SYSTEMS

CONVENIENT means of keeping daily and periodic accounts, receipts and expense records, tax data, film service cost and insurance figures are available in simplified bookkeeping systems especially designed for the average theatre. One system, with a set of sheets covering a year, makes provisions for all types of taxes now applying to theatres.

ACOUSTICAL PRODUCTS AND ENGINEERING

THE ENTIRE sound transmission system of the theatre is to be regarded as including the auditorium itself, the acoustical character of which bears directly and fundamentally upon the naturalness of the sound to all of the audience.

Acoustic characteristics can be controlled by the architectural design of the auditorium; the designer, however, is often limited by other considerations (even in a new building, notably by site, capacity and desired style), necessitating general or partial recourse to acoustic-correction materials.

Such materials may be divided into two general groups: Materials which are concealed, and those which have decorative qualities of their own. Acoustic treatment properly takes note of the entire range of available sound frequencies, hence the use of more than one type of material is sometimes advisable, since some are more efficient as absorbents of low frequencies than of the high frequencies, while others have contrary characteristics.

These materials are available in various forms and substances. Those most frequently used in motion picture theatre auditoriums are vegetable fiber and mineral tiles, rock wool and felt blanket, pressed wood veneers, and acoustic plaster (which latter may be tinted in mixing so as to eliminate painting). Ornamental fabrics are commonly applied over those materials which (like rock wool) are not decorative, but perforated tiles may also be used. Before painting any materials, the manufacturer, or competent acoustics engineers, should be consulted so as to make certain that the absorption efficiency be not too greatly reduced.

The decorative acoustic materials are also well adapted to the finishing of foyer and lounge areas that are immediately off the auditorium, where noise reduction may be importantly indicated.

AIR-CONDITIONING AND VENTILATING EQUIPMENT

AIR-CONDITIONING facilities consist in means of controlling automatically the temperature and relative humidity of the air, and of distributing the air so that it reaches all breathing zones at a temperature, percentage of relative humidity, and rate of motion representing comfortable and healthful atmospheric conditions for normal people. Dust, pollen and other particles suspended in the fresh air should also be filtered out before it is introduced into the distribution system.

All-year air-conditioning of course signifies equipment providing mechanical control of temperature and relative humidity of the distributed air no matter what the condition of the air may be outdoors.

SUMMER AIR-CONDITIONING

For summer air-conditioning, some measure of mechanical refrigeration is usually indicated; however, in areas of low relative humidity, a cooling-tower evaporative system may be employed, while well water (rarely water from city mains) may be used as the cooling agent for coils over which the air is passed, if a sufficient quantity of water at a low enough temperature (maximum 55°) is available.

A method designed to reduce the mechanical refrigeration capacity that would otherwise be necessary, is that of storage refrigeration, by which a relatively small compressor is operated a large part of the day to "build up" the air-cooling agent to a quantity sufficient for the load during performance hours.

The self-contained units of the general type used in stores and similar spaces (filters, mechanical refrigeration plant and fan equipment housed in a cabinet) are adapted to the summer air-conditioning of small auditoriums and several units of suitable capacity can be combined to serve medium-sized auditoriums, though it is commonly found that the distribution requirements of the latter advise other methods.

AIR DISTRIBUTION

Distribution systems for the air-conditioning of theatres practically always consist in ducts with fans of proper capacity, and outlets, or grilles, providing control of air motion.

Fans—those of the multi-blade ("squirrel-cage") type are usually preferable—must be of a capacity and design to move the required amount of air against the resistance of the duct system, with the least expenditure of electric current, and without transmission of noise to the auditorium and other rooms. Air outlets should be of a design to assure thorough mixing of cooled air with room air before it is allowed to descend to the breathing zone.

AIR CLEANSING

Filtering equipment, which is installed as part of an air-conditioning system but which usually needs to be replaced from time to time, is of various types. Some filters use spun-glass fibers, some steel wool, others paper, hogs' hair, wood shavings, etc. The filtering material is held in a frame which is inserted into the duct or intake. Filters of this type are thrown away and replaced with a new one as the accumulation of dirt requires. Also available, however, is a self-cleaning type of air-filtering device, but it is seldom adapted in price to theatre installation. (See also Air Purification, Electric.)

CONTROL EQUIPMENT

Efficient operation of an air-conditioning plant requires dependable automatic control specifically adapted to the operating characteristics of the plant. Control equipment available ranges from a simple cut-in for a single compressor to a motor-operated monitoring cabinet inter-relating all operating elements of the system, including the heating plant.

Two accessory instruments of value in theatre operation should be cited here. One is the recording thermometer, which provides continuous temperature readings automatically transcribed on paper, thus permitting the development of a "log" for guidance in determining load requirements and other operating factors.

The other is an "Effective Temperature" thermometer (marketed under the trade name of "Therhumiter"), which ingeniously combines response to the temperature of the air, moisture in the air, and the motion of the air so as to give a direct reading of their relative and aggregate effect upon the comfort conditions of the air, which reading is that of "Effective Temperature"—that is, the true temperature from the point of view of comfort. It thus eliminates the calculation necessary with dry-bulb and wet-bulb thermometers to determine what the Effective Temperature is, and it also provides a simple means of determining the percentage of relative humidity.

[The functions of air-conditioning and air distribution equipment and systems, their critical factors and operating considerations, etc., form too broad a subject for comprehensive discussion here; they have been, and are being, constantly dealt with in special and departmental articles in BETTER THEATRES.]

SIMPLE VENTILATION

Simple ventilation of theatres requires blower equipment of suitable capacity to draw in the fresh air and propel it through ventilators (normally located adjacent to the proscenium arch or screen opening), plus any direct draft exhaust fans and duct contacts with the outside (as from toilet rooms) that the structural plan of the building may require. The blower equipment of course is of importance; it should be of a capacity to ensure the required supply of fresh air, be durably built, and be quiet in operation.

A simple ventilation system may provide air cooling for an auditorium by passing the outside air through a cold-water spray chamber (air washer evaporative cooling). This also cleanses the air.

AIR PURIFICATION: ELECTRIC

THE MOST effective method of removing dust and bacteria from outside air upon its introduction into the theatre ventilating system is by electrostatic precipitation. This is effected by special equipment consisting, essentially, in an electrical power pact and collector cells of the specific capacity required by the amount of air handled. This method also is highly efficient for the removal of the irritating and odoriferous particles of tobacco smoke.

A simple and relatively inexpensive method of reducing odors in the air is that of ozone generators. Ozone is a specific, unstable form of oxygen which, upon breaking down, oxidizes impurities in the air, including many forms of bacterial life. Ozone generators for theatres, which are of electrical discharge type, are available in various sizes, suited to lounges, toilet rooms and to installation in air ducts.

AMPLIFYING TUBES

AMPLIFIERS

AN AMPLIFIER, as part of a sound reproducing system, is the arrangement in an electrical unit (panel or cabinet) of electronic relays (see Amplifying Tubes) with suitable controls.

Amplifiers today contain their own power supplies, needing only connection with an a.c. or d.c. power line, and dispensing with all auxiliary batteries, generators or rectifiers; and in addition commonly supply polarizing voltage to photocells, and sometimes current to exciter lamps and loudspeaker fields. Modern pre-amplifiers and monitor amplifiers commonly draw this operating power from some other amplifying unit of the sound system.

Very small, low-power amplifiers may be mounted on the projector or on the wall of the projection room, deriving their operating power from the main amplifier. They provide preliminary amplification of the weak photocell current before it reaches the main amplifier.

Amplifier arrangements in a small theatre may consist in a single, compact, combination amplifying and power supply unit mounted on the projection room front wall, between projection ports; or alternatively, of such a com-

• FORMICA for Theater Walls, Doors, Paneling..

THEATERS are made more attractive by Formica sheets used for surfaces. This plastic material is very hard and durable, easily cleaned and maintained, and extremely colorful and decorative.

There are more than 70 colors, and inlays in color and metal make the widest variety of decoration possible. So striking theatrical effects have been attained with it by leading theatrical architects.

Formica is not brittle and will not chip or crack. It is inert chemically and will not spot or stain with ordinary cleaning solutions. It can be washed with soap and water or cleaned with alcohol or other solvents if that is necessary.

Once Formica has been installed the surfaces do not need to be refinished and maintenance is practically nothing for many years. In hundreds of fine new and in remodeled theaters Formica has been used for many purposes.

bination unit plus a small pre-amplifier which receives the initial current from the photo-cell. In larger systems, a number of amplifying network and power supply units are mounted on a steel rack or frame, or in a steel cabinet, which is located at the rear or one end of the projection room, or occasionally built into the wall dividing the projection room from another room of the projection suite. Medium and large-size systems today include a separate monitor amplifier-speaker cabinet, often suspended from the projection room ceiling by steel straps. The monitor amplifier is sometimes self-powered; sometimes, like the photo-cell amplifier, derives its operating current from the larger system amplifier.

Volume control and sound changeover equipment is today commonly associated with the photo-cell pre-amplifier.

Modern amplifiers or amplifying racks are often equipped with decibel meters for accurate measurement of sound output and quick servicing. Emergency amplifiers may be exact duplicates of the normal amplifying system, or smaller, less elaborate apparatus, and in some systems the monitor amplifier is utilized to supply sound to the audience in an emergency.

ARCHITECTURAL MATERIALS AND DESIGN SERVICE

PROGRESS IN chemistry and in manufacturing technique have made available a wide variety of decorative materials to supplement or supplant the familiar marble, stone, brick, ceramic tiles, etc., to which facade architecture was formerly largely restricted. Glass and the plastics known as phenolics are now obtainable in a great variety of colors, and also in patterns.

Porcelain-enameled metal is now well adapted to the creation of colorful fronts; it may be obtained in plates for facing, or attached to concrete masonry blocks. Concrete blocks are also available with facing of architectural glass.

Architectural glass can be had in both facing tiles and structural blocks. The tiles offer a complete selection of colors and a number of patterns (some of them simulating marble). Glass blocks are also available in colors and patterns; they are not only adapted to the construction of architectural features like towers and window effects (admitting light, but assuring privacy), but also to interior partitions. Translucent glass blocks lend themselves to interesting luminous treatments.

Mirrors, in large panel effects (sectional or otherwise) as well as in smaller sizes of various shapes, are effective decorative elements while at the same time contributing a sense of spaciousness. Glass murals provide a striking embellishment of a wall in color abstract or pictorial designs.

For treatment of doors, pilasters, display case framing, and also ticket booth and vestibule finish, a phenolic like Formica provides a wide choice of colors and texture effects (while also having certain weather-proofing qualities). This material may be obtained with metal inlays for decorative relief, and also in a fluorescent type permitting luminescent pictorial and abstract patterns under "black light."

Fabric (usually cotton-rayon damask) is frequently used to conceal sound-absorbing blanket. Wall paper of the more durable types (such as Tekko and Salubra) merits consideration for limited areas, as do leatherette and linoleum. Then there are the tiles, wood veneers, and so on, many of them to be considered for their acoustic values as well as decorative qualities (see Acoustical Products and Engineering; also refer to Curtains and Drapes).

Lighting today is a principal source of decorative effect, by means of either built-in sources (coves, troughs, etc.) or fixtures, possibly employing several colors (commonly amber, blue, red or green, in addition to white) with circuits controlled to permit gradual mixing (see Dimmers). So-called "black light" also permits interesting decorative effects, such as glowing figures in darkened niches, or ornamental patterns picked out in fluorescent paint (see "Black Light" Materials and Lighting Equipment; also see Lamps, Incandescent for Theatre Lighting, and Lighting, Architectural and for Public Areas).

Statues and bas-reliefs based on classic, patriotic and other themes, are available in stock reproductions, many of them relatively inexpensive and well adapted to theatres of modern as well as traditional style.

"BLACK LIGHT" MATERIALS AND LIGHTING EQUIPMENT

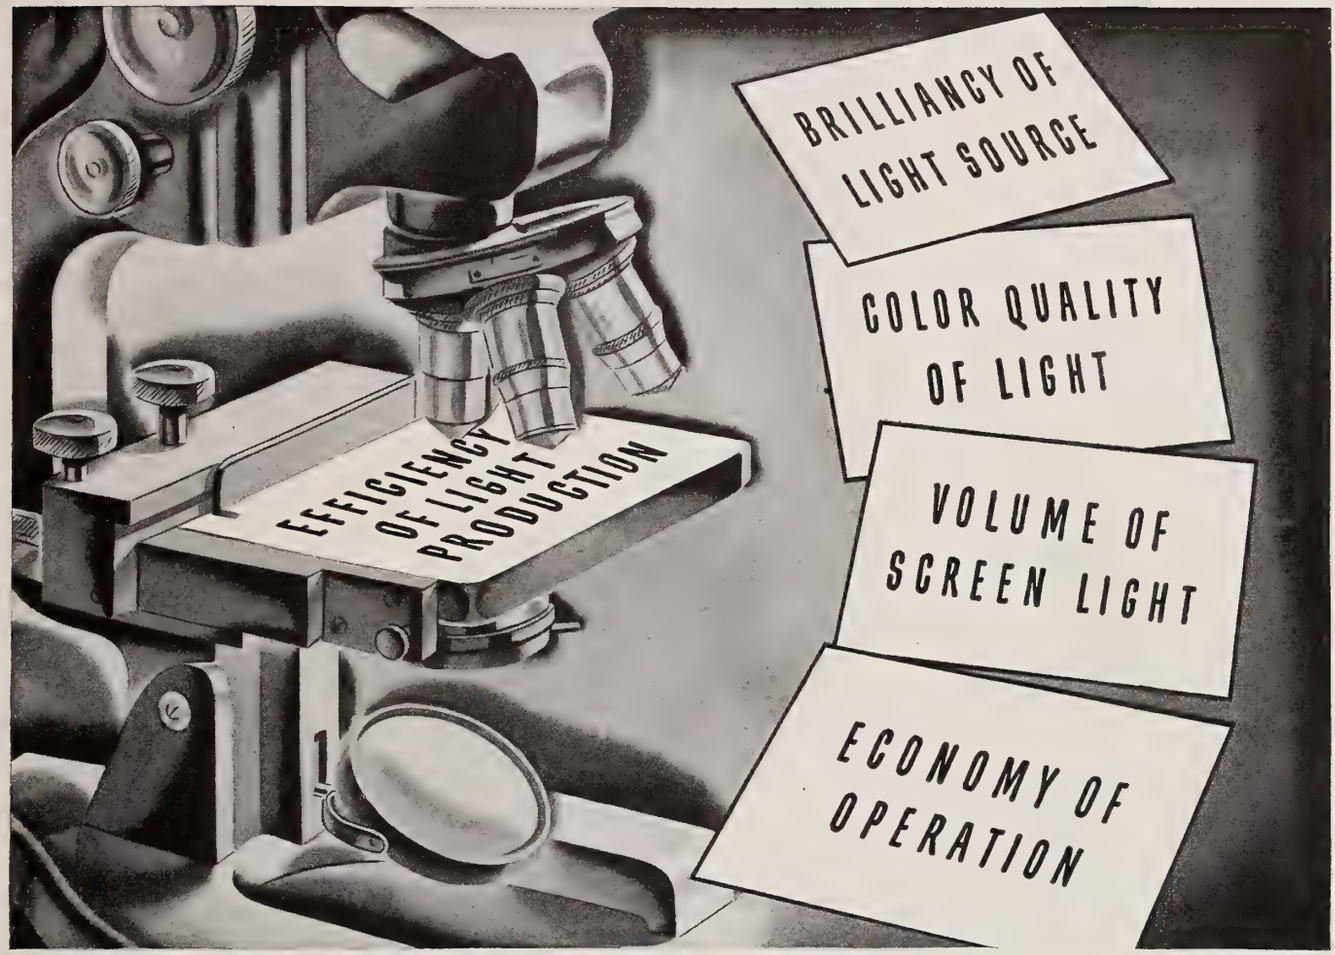
"BLACK LIGHT" is the term popularly applied to the application of "radiant energy" that is not itself visible, to surfaces treated with certain chemicals which this energy causes to glow. It provides decorative effects of a character peculiarly associated with the theatre, and in addition has many utilitarian applications such as in connection with advertising matter, fluorescent carpet, etc.

Luminescent materials are found on the market today in the form of transparent lacquers, opaque lacquer enamels, dyes for carpets and other fabrics, inks, water colors, plastics, liquid solutions, etc. The materials in paint form may be readily applied with either brush or sprayer. A variety of colors are now obtainable.

The radiant energy required for "black light" effects is radiation in the near-ultarviolet region which extends from 3,200 Angstroms to the visible violet. This energy is not harmful to the eyes; it is only radiation shorter than 2,800 Angstroms appearing in quantity from which the eyes must be protected.

Mercury discharge lamps are best for "black light" effects. The type of lamp most proper depends upon the nature of the application. The latest types of lamps of capacity usually required for theatre applications are the Mazda 100-watt type known as the AH-4, BH-4, CH-4, and EH-4. The CH-4 and EH-4 are spot and flood lamps respectively of the projector type; they need no other reflector equipment as the bulb itself is an integral reflector hermetically sealed. The 250-watt type MAZDA AH-5 is also applicable for theatre use. Each of these lamps are available in connection with fixtures especially designed for various conditions of mounting as a unit including the transformer.

These lamps are all equipped with red-purple filter glasses such as Corning No. 587 to screen out the visible light. The amount of light in the visible region passed by the filters is so small that it is negligible in theatre uses.



Special types of lamp equipment for the application of "black light" sources are available in designs adapted to ceiling and wall decoration and to fluorescent carpeting (see Carpeting).

SIXTY YEARS OF PROGRESS

1941 marks our sixtieth year of progress in the field of carbon arc lighting. Through constant research and development great strides have been made in the efficiency and usefulness of the carbon arc. Continued progress is assured by the most modern laboratory and manufacturing facilities.

It pays to Investigate

● Theatre patronage and resultant profits are affected to an important degree by quality of projection light. Patrons favor those theatres where the projection is clear and sharp, where color features are shown in natural colors and where there is sufficient screen illumination to permit adequate general lighting.

If you are still using low intensity projection it will pay you to investigate the numerous advantages, such as efficiency of light production, brilliancy of light source, color quality of light, volume of screen light and economy of operation, made available to the smallest theatre by the new "One Kilowatt" high intensity arcs.

CABINETS, FOR FILM AND CARBONS

REALLY FIREPROOF cabinets for film storage are essential accessories of the projection room if the protection required either by law or theatre operator's responsibility is to be provided both projectionists and patrons. With the 2,000-foot reel standard in the American film industry, film storage facilities should accommodate this size of reel in metal compartments that at least prevent the spread of fire from one compartment to another and reduce the effect of heat as a cause of combustion to a minimum.

The desired safety is provided by a sectional cabinet of relatively thick (approximately 1½ inches) steel walls insulated with fireproof material. Such cabinets are obtainable with or without vents (vents required by fire regulations in some communities) and with or without sprinkler heads inside.

A cabinet for carbons (wherever no suitable compartment is otherwise provided) is a convenient place to keep carbons. The carbons, while drying out, are out of the way so that breakage tends to be reduced. One cabinet will hold several hundred carbons (according to trim) and also provides a handy compartment for small tools.

CARBONS, PROJECTION

MOTION PICTURE projection carbons are required for projection in most motion picture theatres (all except those using incandescent projection lamps). The type and size of carbons required depends upon the type of arc, and in this connection the reader is referred to the several articles in The Buyers' Index on projection lamps.

CARBON SAVERS

THESE DEVICES, which permit use of carbons down to a very short stub, consist in a metal rod that is clamped into the carbon jaws of the lamp house, one end of the rod being provided with means for holding a stub of carbon that is too short for use in the normal way. There are several methods of attaching the stub to the carbon saver, some of them permitting use of the carbon down to one inch.

CARPETING

TYPES OF carpeting suited to the heavy-duty requirements of theatres are (to name them alphabetically) Axminster (only in the finest grades, except possibly when used in small lounges), Broadloom, Chenille (an expensive weave feasible only in rare instances in which a superior carpet of special shape is absolutely required), Patent-Back (a special type consisting in Broadloom sections cut into desired shapes and colors and cemented in a pattern to a backing), Velvet (pattern dyed) and Wilton (pattern woven). The last two are the weaves most widely used in theatres because of their beauty of pattern, durability and relatively moderate price.

Carpeting today provides more than "softness under foot." It is an integral part of the interior treatment of the theatre, a critical element of the entire decorative scheme and the stimulating environmental effect sought. Dominant colors of the carpet should have a direct relation to the influential tones of the general color scheme of each carpeted division of the theatre. Pattern has similar references to the general decorative scheme, harmonizing with it in style, strengthening it in configuration. Traditional patterns are frequently as well adapted to modern-style interiors as patterns specifically modern (or modernistic); many traditional decorative devices, in fact, have been used in modernized versions to effect carpet patterns adapted to both modern and traditional designs.

Theatres are frequently carpeted in a single pattern, but consideration should be given to the advisability of using another design, or a plain Broadloom, or the same design in a smaller scale, for areas like lounges, which differ greatly in size and function from foyers and standee areas.

Carpeting which goes considerably beyond the usual function of carpeting is that in which are used dyes having a high degree of luminescence under a near-ultra-violet light (see Black Light Materials and Lighting Equipment). All or part of the pattern may be so woven with luminescent yarns so as to glow, when properly lighted with invisible "black light." In aisles, fluorescent carpeting, as it is called, not only contributes to the visible decorative scheme during the performance, but provides an illuminated aisle without the use of aisle lights in chair standards. Additionally, fluorescent carpeting is well adapted to some standee areas, and here the pattern may be given a directional effect, guiding traffic to the aisle heads, and also to lounges if the latter are immediately off this area. In weave and in maintenance, fluorescent carpeting does not differ from non-fluorescent carpeting adapted to theatres (see Black Light Materials and Lighting equipment).

CARPET LINING

THEATRE CARPETING should always be laid over pads made for the purpose. Such lining does not merely add to the resilience, therefore the feeling of luxury, of the carpeting; it definitely reduces the wear of the carpet, thus representing a substantial saving in carpeting costs.

There are three general types of carpeting lining: (1) All-jute, or vegetable fibre; (2) hair and jute combined; and (3) All-hair. The latter is made of animal hair, which will not burn (it will singe only), is very durable (a well made all-hair lining will usually outwear the carpeting itself), and does not deteriorate from the effect of moisture. The hair-and-jute type is serviceable according to the amount of hair in it, while the all-jute type is the least desirable in the theatre.

CHAIR CUSHIONS OF FOAMED LATEX

CUSHIONS FOR auditorium chair seats and backs (or other chairs, settees, etc.) are obtainable in a pourous material made from the milk of the rubber tree and referred to as foamed latex. Such cushions take the place of padding and coil springs, the fabric being fitted directly over them.

This material may be moulded to fit any chair dimensions or design formation. Except for hollow cores, the cushion appears solid, but actually has access to air throughout its structure (there are over a quarter of a million interconnecting air pores to the cubic inch), thus the cushion is completely self-ventilating. Foamed latex cushions are vermin-repellent.

For foyer and lounge furniture, foamed latex cushions are available in standard sizes calculated to fit nearly all chairs, settees, etc. They may be obtained through upholsterers or from jobbers.

CHAIRS, AUDITORIUM

AUDITORIUM CHAIRS best suited to the motion picture theatre are those manufactured from designs developed specifically to meet the conditions encountered in film theatre operation. Prior types were modifications of the "opera chair" of the stage theatre. Today's motion picture theatre chair comprehensively represents new designing to provide luxurious comfort, protection of person, quiet hinge operation, durability under severe usage, and beauty of line, strengthening the whole seating assembly in its contribution to the decorative character of the semi-dark auditorium—achieving these qualities, furthermore, within a price range making all of them essentially accessible even to small, low-budget theatres.

Chairs may be obtained with seat cushions of box-spring or spring-edge type; or with no-sag springs, alone or in combination with coil springs (the no-sag springs absorbing the shock of initial tension imparted to the coils); and with combination coil and Marshall Springs construction. The backs may of course be either of spring or padded type, and here it should be noted that the choice affects the row spacing, spring back cushions being substantially thicker than padded backs. Also available is a type of chair having a retracting, or push-back, seat, designed to facilitate passage between rows. While end standards may be obtained in special designs, regular models offer a wide choice of patterns, which may be readily executed in colors suggested by the color scheme of the auditorium. Arm rests may be of wood or plastic, in "blonde" shades enhancing visibility.

Acoustic considerations (each chair should represent approximately the sound-absorption of a person, so that the capacity factor affecting volume is fairly constant) demand a fully upholstered chair.

Today there is extensive adoption of soft fabrics (mohair, velour, corduroy), which is often confined to the backs, simulated leather being employed for the seats (except possibly the sides of the seat cushions).

To meet the higher standards of comfort applied today, 20 inches may be generally regarded as minimum for chair width. While widths of 24 inches have been used on occasion, it is probably true that widths of 21 or 22 inches provide better support for the average person and therefore are actually more comfortable for most people. CHANGE MAKERS

OCCUPYING LITTLE space in the box office, modern change making machines prevent annoying errors in offering change to a patron and loss to the theatre through mistakes. The correct change is automatically determined upon manipulation of the proper keys, and is delivered into a metal cup, from which it is easily scooped. Not only greater accuracy, but greater speed in handling a line of patrons make change-makers a box office requisite.

CHANGEOVER AND CUEING DEVICES

SWITCHING out one picture projector while switching in the other may be accomplished in various ways according to the several types of devices available. The electrical type in general, performing its functions at the touch of a switch (either foot or hand), cuts off the light by a shutter arrangement while opening and closing the alternative circuits. There is also a mechanical device which merely cuts off the light at one projection port while opening the other port.

One mechanism that employs the port cutoff method of light interruption, is electrically operated and includes circuit switching means. One of the electrical changeovers cutting off the light at the aperture also provides for closing the speaker circuit, if this is desired. Yet another electrical device cuts off the light by a dissolving shutter mechanism in front of the projection lens.

Several types of changeover time indicators are available, including reel-end alarm bells actuated by the takeup. There is also an indicator not attached to the projection mechanism which operates an alarm bell actuated by a clock mechanism that is preset according to a running time dial.

Marking of cue signals on film is not approved of (Standard Release Prints have necessary cues when in proper condition) ; however, for those emergency occasions when cueing the print is deemed unavoidable, there is a simple marking device that presses small circles into the film with minimum damage.

CLEANING MATERIALS AND IMPLEMENTS

CLEANLINESS THROUGHout the public areas of the theatre, and at the front exterior as well, is of course imperative at all times, and to reduce the time and labor cost of maintenance are many cleaning and sanitation aids (see also Cleaning Mechanisms, and Deodorants and Perfumes).

The list of such products is a long one; to be regarded as more or less essential for the convenient and effective maintenance of the theatre are a variety of brushes, including those adopted to the cleaning of corners, behind projecting structural elements, etc.; corn brooms, mops and mop pails with dryers (a rubber mop is also available with a squeezing device incorporated in the design) ; soft dusting and polishing rags, deck brushes for washing rubber mats, terrazzo, etc.; neutral soap and detergents, sweeping compound for floors beneath seating, wood and metal polish, carbon tetrachloride, and gum remover. So that patrons themselves may help to keep the theatre clean, sand urns for cigarette butts, gum wrappers, etc., should be judiciously distributed throughout the lobby, foyer, lounges and standee area.

In connection with cleaning compounds, care should be used to assure use of a compound which requires the least amount of time and will not injure the surface.

For the partial or complete cleaning of carpeting and other fabrics from time to time (that is, dry shampooing, as distinguished from daily vacuum cleaning), a soapless lather is available, which may easily be applied with a rubber mop or similar implement; drying requires but an hour or two. A powder is also obtainable for carpet and fabric cleaning; this is sprinkled on small areas at a time and brushed in, then after a few hours, when the fabric is entirely dry, the residue can be removed with a brush-type vacuum attachment.

For keeping sidewalks free of snow without manual removal, calcium chloride may be sprinkled over the sidewalk when the snow begins to fall. This is available under various trade names.

Safety ladders are also to be considered among cleaning as well as equipment servicing accessories (see Ladders, Safety).

CLEANING MECHANISMS

ECONOMICAL AND safe cleaning of theatre carpeting, drapes, seating fabrics, etc., require regular and frequent application of vacuum cleaning equipment. Carpeting, for example, should be vacuum-cleaned daily. Vacuum cleaners may be used for other cleaning jobs around the theatre, such as blowing dust from out-of-the-way places, drying wet floors and carpeting, and so on.

Theatres really require heavy-duty vacuum cleaning equipment. Ordinary domestic type cleaners are useful as auxiliary equipment, particularly in theatres not having a central system piped to all areas, but they have neither the endurance nor the suction demanded by theatre cleaning.

Of the heavy-duty equipment, two types may be regarded as specifically adapted to theatre work. One is the central system, with pipes leading to outlets so placed as to provide access at least to all public areas of the theatre. The other is a portable type, with power plant, suction mechanism and dirt disposal equipment on rollers, to which equipment the hose is attached. Portable models are available with motor and suction devices detachable, to be used as a hand unit. Theatres require a hose length on portable models of not less than 20 feet, and this may be provided in two sections, if desired, 10-foot lengths being connected by a brass coupling. Nozzles and brush attachments are available with both central and portable types for every kind of dry pick-up, and also for wet pickup. In portable units, the mechanism, with attached dust bag, should not weigh over 50 pounds so as to be conveniently carried on stairs and in seating area.

CONDENSERS (LENSES)

THE PROJECTION condenser is located between the lamp house and the projector, and serves to focus the light on the aperture. It serves a similar purpose in spotlight projection. The condenser is a single glass lens, unmounted, made in various shapes—moon shape, plan-o-convex, bi-convex and meniscus. The diameters of projection condensers range from 2¼ to 7¼ inches; of spotlight condensers, from 5 to 8 inches. Focal lengths for theatre work runs from 6½ to 9½ inches.

CUPS, SANITARY FOR DRINKING

INDIVIDUAL PAPER cups should be provided for patrons even though a bubbler fountain is installed. Some patrons much prefer cups for hygienic reasons. Mothers particularly often instruct their children to avoid bubblers (few people are acquainted with the existence of bubbler guards). Cup dispensers therefore should be located within reach of young children, and the cups should be of a shape (flat-bottomed as opposed to cone shape) easily held in small hands.

In many locations, penny dispensers of drinking cups will not be resented by patrons, and in such cases paper cups are a source of some small additional revenue.

CURTAINS AND STAGE DRAPES

CURTAINS USUALLY required for motion picture theatres in which stage performances are not regularly presented, are of the traveller type made up in such fabrics as velour. Asbestos fireproof proscenium-opening curtains are required in some States and all the larger cities in theatres having full stage facilities.

Drapes are commonly indicated for the sides, and across the top of the proscenium opening; the extent to which they are needed is of course dependent upon the design of the proscenium area. Velours are indicated for such drapes also, but rayon-cotton mixtures and similar fabrics are also suitable.

Companies capable of supplying these materials are also excellent sources of drapes for other parts of the theatre.

metal-on-wood (kalamein). Extruded aluminum frames cost most (about 75% more than natural wood), but they require practically no maintenance, are not affected by normal settling of the building wall, and last indefinitely.

All-wood frames are obtainable in natural grains (such as walnut and bleached mahogany), with or without a protective coat of clear lacquer; and in common wood lacquered in desired color.

Kalamein frames may be had with finish in stainless steel, chromium, aluminum, bronze and other metals, also in a phenolic, such as Formica.

Recommended lamping is that which is concealed behind the frames, with distribution such as to prevent shadows on the poster. The most efficient type of lamp for the purpose is the lumiline (see Lamps, Incandescent for Theatre Lighting). It is preferable to place them entirely around the poster in cases 40x60 inches or larger; otherwise, the lamps should extend along the edges of greatest dimension.

Poster frames of all types are available complete with frames mounted on veneer case ready for installation in wall recess (the most desirable method) or on the surface of the wall.

EXPLOITATION MECHANISMS

VARIOUS DEVICES are available for the presentation of scenes from a current attraction or special advertising stills or motion pictures in the vestibule or lobby of the theatre, or in stores and other locations for which suitable arrangements can be made. The simplest type provides for the automatic display of a series of stills or advertising cards.

More impressive is the showing of motion pictures by means of an automatic projector mounted for the rear projection of advance trailers or other advertising films on a small screen. Such equipment may be obtained either with or without sound reproduction facilities.

Posters can be quickly and conveniently made, often by persons of little or no training in poster art, with the aid of a poster projetcor, which enlarges exploitation material, such as that in press books and other accessories, on the poster sheet, in the original colors, and the image may be readily sketched or painted in.

FIRE EXTINGUISHERS

THERE ARE several types of fire extinguishers suitable to theatres —the carbon tetrachloride extinguisher, the soda-and-acid mechanism, the foam type and the portable carbon dioxide hand type. They should be distributed throughout the theatre in accordance with the directions of fire department officials, care being taken that any extinguisher likely to be used in the presence of electrical apparatus is safe for that purpose, and not capable of electrocuting the man who uses it.

FIRE PREVENTION DEVICES, PROJECTOR

THESE ARE automatic dowsers and film-cutters that cut off projection light from the film and also sever the film when any of several controls installed on the projector sets the device into operation. The actuating element is usually a fusible link, which melts upon ignition of the film.

FIRE SHUTTERS, PROJECTION ROOM

FIREPROOF SHUTTERS for projection room ports isolate the projection room in an emergency (by melting of fusible links in case of fire), operating either automatically or manually. They minimize the chance of panic and lower insurance rates, and are practically always required in theatres by fire regulations.

A special switch is available for tripping the port shutters by electro-mechanical action, instead of by means of fusible links, and at the same time actuating an exhaust fan to draw the fumes into the projection room ventilation duct.

FLASHERS

THESE AUTOMATIC "switch" devices for interrupting intermittently the flow of current to light sources, supply attention-arresting animation to electrical displays that is commonly desirable for marquee decorative schemes and exterior signs, and especially so when the theatre front has to compete with electrical displays immediately surrounding it.

There are three principal types of flashers: drum type (which has been generally superseded by the following later types), mercury contact type (which is efficient for marquee and sign travelling borders), and the induction disc type, which is readily adaptable to any type of display.

FLOOR SURFACING MATERIALS, COMPOSITION

FLOOR SURFACING materials suited to lobbies, certain foyer areas (sometimes in conjunction with woven floor coverings), men's lounges (on occasion, also for borders in women's lounges, laid flush with a centrally placed rug) toilet rooms where terrazzo would be too expensive and similar parts of the theatre, are available in several composition substances and forms. The base of the composition may be cork (linoleum) or rubber or asphalt.

Such materials are obtainable in a variety of patterns or in solid-color tiles to be laid in patterns, unless it is preferred to have the flooring in one color.

Composition flooring, preferably in a battleship grey without design, is usually recommended for projection rooms, being less tiring to the projectionists than a painted concrete floor.

FOUNTAINS

MODERN PRACTICE with respect to both design and operating costs give no place in the theatre, ordinarily, to the purely decorative fountain (which once was a part of statuary displays, effecting "garden pools," etc.). Theatre fountains today are essentially drinking fountains, though they may be and commonly are decorative enough. The simplest types are white or tinted porcelain-finished pedestals or wall bowls. The wall types may of course be incorporated into a built-in decorative feature of tiles, or architectural glass, or a mirror; indeed, such ornamental fountain schemes are available in stock designs, complete with decorative lighting provisions, and they are procurable as well complete with bubbler or faucet, and even with so-called "magic-eye" mechanism (See Photoelectric Cell Mechanisms for Doors and Fountains).

It should be noted that old-style bubblers, without a guard preventing the lips from touching the bubbler itself, is not compatible with the sanitation expected in the theatre; in fact, it is good practice to have, perhaps in addition to a protected bubbler, a faucet or spout, with individual paper cups in an ornamental holder, since some patrons (particularly women with small children) fear contamination from any kind of bubbler.

● Moderate sized theatres have long realized the hopelessness of getting a good picture on the screen with prevailing dense black and white films when using the dim low intensity lamp. It remained for Strong to develop a lamp of intermediate capacity high intensity which would project twice as much light and at a cost within the means of these theatres.

● Satisfactory projection of colored pictures with the muddy yellow light of the low intensity has been just as impossible. The required brilliance and sparkling snow-white light of the high intensity arc had been denied these theatres by prohibitive operating costs. The Strong one kilowatt Utility made possible the correct reproduction of Technicolor.

● Although this new Strong Utility intermediate high intensity lamp projects twice as much light as is possible with any low intensity lamp, the increased combined current and carbon cost is less than 2¢ an hour. Your Independent Theatre Supply Dealer will gladly demonstrate this new marvel of efficiency in your theatre without obligation. Call him today.

FURNITURE FOR FOYERS AND LOUNGES

FURNITURE DURABLE enough to be practicable for theatre foyer and lounge areas is obtainable today in a variety of styles, in both metal and wood.

Metal furniture, which is markedly durable, is available in chromium, stainless steel and aluminum, with dull or glossy finish. Chairs and settees may be of very simple design, and accordingly very inexpensive; or they may be of the fully upholstered type, with coil-spring cushions (feather or down cushions are not indicated for theatres because they do not return to shape). Metal tables, having burn-resistant composition tops (or tops of glass or some phenolic like Formica) are particularly indicated for cosmetic rooms, along with small chairs to match. Neither these, nor metal occasional and end tables are necessarily out of place in a room otherwise having non-metallic furniture, especially when the wood furniture is of definitely modern design (like so-called "Swedish modern").

Wood furniture may of course be selected from the better-built pieces adapted to home living rooms, but to be really practicable these should be merely of wood construction, with the frame fully covered in durable fabric (eliminating armrests, feet, etc., in woods like walnut or mahogany). Moderately priced wood furniture of sturdy construction which is suited to theatres quite as well as to homes is that of birch and maple, which may be obtained in novel "modern" designs, and also in rustic or Early American styles, with "wheat" (pale yellow) or the darker maple finish.

HEARING AIDS

THESE RECEIVING instruments (phones) either of air conduction or bone conduction type, to assist patrons whose hearing is impaired, may be regarded as standard equipment for motion picture theatres today, with from five to ten outlets (two seats served by one outlet) usually considered sufficient. The receivers are plugged into suitable outlet boxes permanently mounted and wired in selected seating locations. Individual volume controls which the patrons can adjust at will, may be provided either on the outlet boxes or on the cord leading to the receiver.

Sound may be taken from the main theatre system, either directly or through an auxiliary amplifier, or may be picked up via microphone from the screen speakers and passed through a low-power amplifier that is part of the hearing aid system.

It is also possible to have hearing aids that do not require wiring of seats. A magnetic field is created by forming loops in the seating area of copper wire or foil connected to sound system (or microphones). The deafened patron holds a small amplifier connected to earphone and can hear from any seat.

Lenses for this model are available in focal lengths from 8 to 30 inches. Like the bigger projector, the one shown has independent reflector adjustment and cast aluminum slide carrier, and is finished in black baked enamel.

HEATING SYSTEMS AND ACCESSORIES

HEATING SYSTEMS used in the theatre present different requirements from those of other public buildings because of the concentration of occupants in the auditorium, and the wide variation in the number that may be present at any given time.

Heat distributing systems are of two general kinds, those using standard steam or hot water radiators or convection type units, and those circulating masses of warmed air through a ventilating system. The later may of course be part of a complete air conditioning system (see Air-Conditioning and Ventilating Equipment).

Oil and gas are preferable as the fuel where automatic control is provided in the system and when their cost is comparable to that of coal. With coal, automatic stokers reduce labor and insure efficient use of fuel.

It is a measure of economy in some theatres having air-conditioning for the auditorium, possibly also for the foyer, or a ventilation system for the auditorium, to use unit heaters for other divisions, such as lounges and toilet rooms, lobby, manager's office, etc.

Unit heaters are obtainable for connection to existing steam systems, or they may be individually heated by gas. Also, they are available for exposed installation as well as for concealed locations.

INTERCOMMUNICATING HOUSE PHONES

TO INSURE the manager's control over every department of theatre operation, and efficient co-ordination of the activities of different departments, suitable methods of signal or communication are indispensable. The simplest are mere buzzer systems, as sometimes used, for example, to advise the projection staff that a change in sound volume is necessary, but the limitations of the buzzer do not allow different departments to report to the management or permit communication of any but the simplest instructions.

House phones for more effective interdepartment contract are used by most theatres. They range in design from simple, two-station communicating lines to elaborate dial systems by which any station can make contact with any other.

Loud-talking systems, consisting essentially in distant-pickup with any other microphones and miniature speakers are also adopted to theatre intercommunication.

LAMPS, AC ARC

THE TYPE OF light source here referred to is a modern application of alternating current to motion picture projection employing a special means of modifying 60-cycle current for the purpose of eliminating current alternation as a cause of flicker. Screen illumination levels and operating costs are such that the equipment is marketed as a high-intensity light source adapted to the small and medium-sized theatre.

Current modification is provided by a rotary transformer that is excited by the line frequency but delivers 96-cycle alternating current, or at a frequency exactly twice that of the shutter. The trim is 7-mm. x 14 "Suprex" positive carbons, unrotated.

LAMPS, HIGH-INTENSITY

PROJECTION ARCS of high-intensity characteristics for operation on direct current are of two general classes—condenser and reflector types. The high-intensity reflector types in turn are divided into two classes—the type generally known as Hi-lo, and the so-called low-voltage high-intensity arc. The Hi-lo type may be regarded technologically as having been superseded (except for installations not yet replaced) by the low-voltage high-intensity arc, which employs a copper-coated carbon of small diameter with a core of rare-earth elements, and is further distinguished by the horizontal position of both carbons and non-rotation of the positive.

Condenser type high-intensity projection arc lamps specifically adapted to theatres are those operating at from 120 to 130 amperes and 65 to 70 volts; others of higher arc wattage are available however.

Low voltage high-intensity arcs adapted to medium-size houses are operated at currents ranging from 35 to 65 amperes, and 31 to 40 volts at the arc. Carbon combinations are 6 mm. positive, 5 mm. negative for from 35 to 40 amperes; 7 mm. positive, 6 mm. negative for from 42 to 50 amperes; and 8 mm. positive, 6.5 or 7 mm. negative for from 56 to 65 amperes.

Designed to replace the low-intensity arc formerly manufactured for the medium to small-size theatre are the new intermediate capacity high-intensity D.C. lamps, utilizing a cored negative carbon specifically made to give smooth operation at very low current densities, and operating at 40 amperes, 27-27½ volts, or about one kilowatt at the arc.

LAMPS, INCANDESCENT FOR PROJECTION

INCANDESCENT LAMPS for theatre motion picture projection are characterized by a high degree of source concentration and relatively high wattage. The most effective lamp for this purpose—namely, the 2,100-watt, 60-volt T-24 bulb lamp— is designed for lower voltage to secure additional source concentration. Hence a transformer with voltage-regulating characteristics is required. This lamp provides relatively acceptable illumination on screens up to 16 feet wide and throws not to exceed 100 feet.

There are also available, 1,000-watt prefocus base, and 1,500-watt bipost base, 100-120 volt, T-20 bulb lamps employing the biplane filament construction. This construction makes possible relatively high source concentration for lamps operating at ordinary circuit voltages and thus saves the cost of auxiliary apparatus.

The 1,000- and 1,500-watt lamps are frequently employed in projectors of the semi-portable type.

For portable 35-mm. motion picture projectors there are the 500-watt monoplane-filament, and the 750-watt and 1,000-watt biplane filament lamps in T-20 bulbs with medium-prefocus bases. The 750-watt and 1,000-watt require forced ventilation.

A newer type of 1,000-watt projection lamp is designed to burn base down and as a result of a new method of internal construction and of burning the filaments at higher temperature the lamp increases by 50% the light available from incandescent sources of this wattage. Because it maintains screen illumination at so high a percentage of the original intensity, this lamp does not require the inclusion of anti-blackening electric grids internally.

For stereopticon projectors there are the 500-watt short T-20, medium-prefocus base projection lamp, and the 1,000-watt long T-20 bulb, mogul-prefocus base lamp. Both are of the 100-120 volt type and employ monoplane filaments.

ANNOUNCING... the NEW FOREST ONE KILOWATT LAMPS

DESIGNED ESPECIALLY FOR 1 KILOWATT PROJECTION

With the development of this new lamp, FOREST now offers, to the industry, a complete line of 'arc-light' products.

Whether your house seats 300 or 3,000—your lamps, rectifiers, and screen can be FOREST MANUFACTURED.

This New Lamp, although, for 1 Kilowatt projection also burns Low Intensity and 30 to 40 amperes High Intensity—all possible with the one Forest Lamp.

THE BALANCE OF THE FOREST "BALANCED ARC-LIGHT COMBINATION"

FOREST Super MCS RECTIFIERS

using exclusively the P. R. Mallory Magnesium-Copper Sulphide rectifying units. The Super MCS has—reliable 3 phase fan—magnetic switches—visual 3 phase line indicator—automatic voltage regulator. An all-important feature is the newly developed Forest transformer which gives definite assurance of protection against line voltage fluctuations. Approved by Underwriters Laboratories.

FOREST LD-60 RECTIFIERS

LD-60 Bulb Type—is a reliable, efficient, and low-cost type of power conversion equipment. This rectifier conforms to the standards required for modern projection. Forest LD-60 rectifiers have an output from 30 to 60 amperes. This range of amperage makes Suprex-Simplified High Intensity, Intermediate High Intensity and Low Intensity operation possible with the one rectifier. Forest is the only manufacturer that makes the "Twin-Type" rectifier.

FOREST "Universal Trim" LAMPS

This improved projection lamp was designed to overcome technical imperfections in present projection lamps. This features: an entirely new carbon feed which maintains perfect focus. Does not require the operator's constant attention . . . takes any type of carbon trim—5 to 9mm. negative, 6 to 13mm. positive—thus accommodating trims for Suprex-Simplified High Intensity, Low Intensity and 1 Kilowatt or any new requirements.

The many other distinctive features incorporated in the Forest 'UT' Lamps are discussed in detail in a specially prepared brochure.

FOREST RECTIFYING TUBES

Forest Rectifying Tubes are manufactured for use in rectifiers, power supply units and battery chargers of all makes. When used in Forest Rectifiers they are your guarantee of maximum efficiency, reliability of operation and maximum economy. Specify Forest when purchasing Tubes.

FOREST SOUND SCREENS

Designed and manufactured to retain their original surface over a longer period of time. The special Forest Surface-Processing Method eliminates the necessity of increasing the amperage at the arc to obtain more light. There is a complete Forest Sound Screen line. All Forest Screens are flame-proofed.

See the authorized Forest Dealer or send for literature on any of the FOREST PRODUCTS.

LAMPS, INCANDESCENT FOR THEATRE LIGHTING

GENERAL SERVICE lamps —available in sizes from 15 to 1,500 watts —serve the majority of lighting applications in and around theatres. Except for the tubular bulb bipost lamps, all are designed for burning in any position; all are available with inside-frosted finish to diffuse the light, to eliminate filament striations, and to produce a smoother lighting effect. The frosting absorbs little light—in fact, inside-frosted and clear lamps (clear lamps are regularly available in sizes above 100 watts) have the same rating in light output.

Inside-colored lamps for sign and decorative service: The general service lamps mentioned above are suitable for enclosed lamp signs and luminous displays where protected from rain and snow. For outdoor exposed applications, a line of vacuum lamps from 6 to 50 watts is available in frosted and inside-colored types.

Outside-colored lamps: Several sizes of outside-colored lamps are also listed in round and flame-shaped bulbs.

Lumiline lamps: Available in colors and in 30 and 60 watts (length 17¾ inches) and 40 watts (length 11¾ inches), these tubular lamps have, by their physical shape, introduced new concepts of decorative lighting design. They may be used exposed or in narrow reflecting and shielding equipment. The standard colors are white, straw, orange, moonlight blue, emerald and surprise pink.

Also on the market is a filament tubular lamp which differs from the "lumiline" in that it plugs in along its length instead of at the ends, thus permitting an interrupted line of light. These lamps are also available in higher wattages—up to 200 watts. Lengths of units are 6, 12, 18 inches, etc., up to 36, and there are three diameters. They may be obtained in sprayed colors, sprayed white and opal glass. A feature of this filament lamp is that it may be bent to most any desired shape for architectural and exposed fixture effects.

Fluorescent lamps: These are much more efficient than the filament-type lumiline lamps, and are particularly recommended for color lighting, since the color is not created by the glass of the bulb, but in the light itself. The lamp is of the electric discharge type, using mercury vapor as the medium for sustaining the arc. Ultraviolet radiation is produced in the tube, which acts upon certain chemicals (the nature of which varies according to the color or tone of white light desired) with which the interior of the bulb has been treated. The reaction of the chemical to the electronic bombardment produces visible light.

These lamps differ from the usual type filament lamps in that they contain their own reflecting surface which is hermetically sealed within the lamp providing a high-intensity, accurately controlled beam for supplementary lighting purposes.

The Projector spot and flood lamps are provided with lens cover glasses which produce narrow and wide beams respectively. They are made of rugged, heat resisting glass and are suitable for service inside and outdoors. They are equipped with medium screw bases to fit regular sockets, PAR 38 bulbs and are available in the 150-watt size.

The Reflector spot and flood lamps also have built-in, mirror-like surfaces; however, they are made of ordinary glass and must be protected from the weather. Like the projector lamps, the spot type has a narrow light distribution of high intensity and the flood, a wide-beam distribution. They are equipped with medium screw bases to fit regular sockets, R-40 bulbs and are available in 150, 200, and 300-watt sizes.

LENSES, PROJECTION

THERE ARE two general classes—the condenser lens, which focuses the projection light on the aperture (See Condensers); and the objectives. The latter are commonly referred to as the projection lenses; they focus the light upon the screen. They are made in four standard diameters, with focal length as determined by the size of the screen image desired, and its distance from the projector.

Knowing these factors, the supply dealer or the lens manufacturer readily determines the focal length required. In ordering projection lenses, one should also name the type of light source, projection angle and the make and model of the projector.

Stock focal lengths are usually in quarter sizes from 3 to 7 inches, 7½ and 8 inches.

In addition to the regular optical glass projection lenses corrected for color and flatness of field, so called "coated" lenses are available. They differ in that the optical components have inner and outer surfaces chemically treated so as to effect a certain disintegration of surface and a resultant film or "coating" of pure silica. Focus is also sharpened by lenses of this type.

LETTERS, ATTRACTION BOARD

IN ITS application to the motion picture theatre, a marquee serves primarily the purpose of an advertising medium, the attraction display provisions being the dominant feature. The changeable letters for attraction advertising are largely of silhouette type, and the availability of these in interchangeable sizes for multiple-line lighted glass panels permits arrangement of the advertising copy in "typographical" (printed advertising) style so as to obtain maximum interest and variability.

Interchangeable letters in the sizes noted above may also be obtained in a type having the general features of a silhouette letter, but with a middle strip of transluscent material in color. If desired, the attention-arresting effect may be enhanced by lamping the panel box in several colors and fading one color into another on automatic dimmer control.

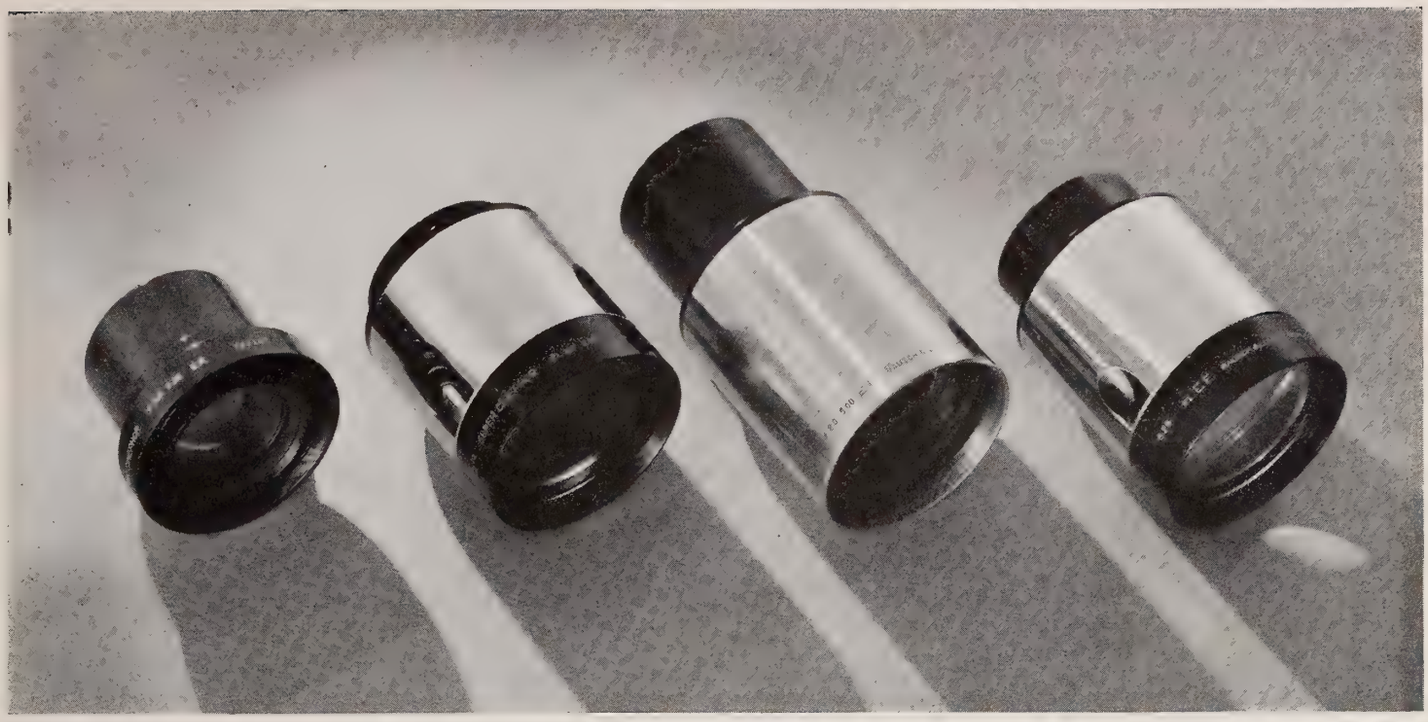
The only changeable attraction board letters adapted to front attraction advertising other than those of silhouette type are glass block letters wtih opaque grounds, emitting light through the letters themselves.

Silhouette letters are of cast aluminum, practically eliminating breakage. They are available in interchangeable sizes of 8, 10, 12, 16, 24 and 30 inches. Also obtainable are 4-inch letters, which are mounted in their own frame, which in turn is mounted on the panel where desired. Six-inch letters are obtainable but are not interchangeable with the others.

Panels of opal glass, with the necessary lamp box mounting, may be of any dimensions (see Marquees). For flexibility of copy arrangement and legibility, a panel height providing for at least three lines is necessary (this permits a vertical variation covering five lines). Panels may be had with rounded glass corners allowing a continuous attraction board around the marquee or elsewhere.

For "typographical" layout of the display at least three sizes of letters are recommended. These will be determined by the size of the panel and local needs, but fonts of 10-, 16- and 24-inch letters have been found to meet average conditions.

To augment the display copy with "illustrations" are silhouette transparencies of leading screen players (head-and-shoulders). These come ready for insertion in the frames.



The panels, set in metal frames with steel rods on which the letters are mounted, are installed in movable sections (entirely removable, sliding or hinged) to provide convenient access to the lamp box.

LIGHTING, ARCHITECTURAL AND FOR PUBLIC AREAS

IN ADDITION to the part that sign and marquee play on the architectural effect of the theatre facade, light may effectively contribute to the front design, maintaining its daytime values after dark, or even adding to them, by flooding the entire upper front, or parts of it, by means of reflector sources on the roof of the marquee; by outlining architectural features with neon or lumiline lamps; by creating panels or stripings of light by means of neon or lumiline or regular lamp sources concealed behind architectural struc-

FOR BETTER PROJECTION
BAUSCH & LOMB SUPER CINEPHOR LENSES

Today's audiences have become more and more critical of picture quality. Whether the film is black and white or color, they expect crisp definition and brilliance that rivals the actual scene. That is why leading theaters equip their projectors with Bausch & Lomb Super Cinephor Projection Lenses.

The most recent developments in Super Cinephor Lenses are:

The new Super Cinephor made on an entirely new formula, utilizes glasses of high transmission developed for it. Its aperture ratio is thereby increased from f:2.3 to f:2.0. This was the first step in putting more light on your screen.

The second and equally important advance is the employment of non-reflecting glass surfaces which cut to a minimum light losses due to reflection from air to glass surfaces. Thus a remarkable gain in light transmission and image brilliance is attained. By eliminating scattered internal reflections, greater detail and contrast result.

SUPER CINEPHOR f:2.0

Available in focal lengths of 2" to 5" in 1/4" steps. First four focal lengths are mounted in No. 1 barrel. Balance of series in No. 2 barrel.

CINEPHOR SERIES II

An improved Cinephor lens to meet the demand for longer focal lengths than those available in the f:2.0 series. Also sealed to eliminate dust.

CINEPHOR LENSES f:2.0

An entirely new series available in focal lengths from 3.5" to 5.0" inclusive. All focal lengths in No. 2 barrel.

CINEPHOR SERIES I

A quality lens at a medium price.

Bausch & Lomb Cinephor and Super Cinephor Lenses are sold by National Theater Supply Co. and also leading independent theater supply houses.

tures, and so on to the limit of the ingenuity of the designer.

For the public areas of the interior, lighting facilities are to be divided into two general classifications—(1) built-in sources, and (2) fixtures.

Built-in sources include coves and troughs, recessed light boxes (usually having a diffusing device, like concentric louver-rings, or covered with flush-set panels of translucent glass with or without diffusing ribs), and so-called down-lights, consisting in ceiling reflectors or projectors behind tiny apertures in the ceiling, with the light beam directed to cover precisely a prescribed area.

Both classes of light sources are suited to modern interior treatments; indeed, even though built-in sources be used in the auditorium, or perhaps the foyer as well, fixtures may serve the needs of the lobby, or the lounge more economically. Either method, of course, may well be used throughout the interior, for each embraces a vast array of practicable devices for efficient illumination and effective decoration.

Modern fixtures are available in stock designs of great variety—bracket or pylon luminaires, flush-type ceiling drums and boxes, suspended troughs, ceiling bowls, wall urns, etc., constructed of metal or glass or both, variously ornamented in the same materials, in direct, indirect and direct-indirect types, or with light emission through decorative louvers, in sizes to suit every location, and at prices to make modern luminaires accessible to theatres of the most modest budgets. Specially designed luminaires are obtainable at relatively moderate cost.

While incandescent lamps (as distinguished from the gas tube sources generally referred to as neon) are more flexibly adapted to theatre interior illumination, and also have maintenance advantages, neon has its interior applications, confined largely to cove and trough lighting.

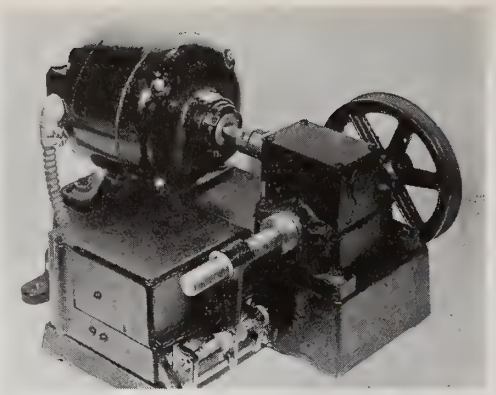
LIGHTING SYSTEMS, EMERGENCY



EMERGENCY LIGHTING plants to care for power line failure are of the storage battery, gasoline engine, diesel engine and water turbine types. Where more than one power line is available in the theatre, motor-generator emergency equipment may be used to supply lighting in event of failure in the normal lighting power.

LIGHTS, SPOT AND FLOOD

SPOTLIGHTS AND floodlights are available in many sizes and light capacities, and in both incandescent and arc types—incandescent for use on and near the stage, for display and architectural lighting;

Curtain control equipment of Gerhard O. Kahler Enterprises, Boston, designed to operate a traveller curtain for any stage opening up to 50 feet. It operates on any 110-125 volt, 60-cycle line, and can be connected to power lines either at stage or point of switching. Control is by a three-point toggle switch, with motor (General Electric) having a thermal relay built into switch box to cut out current should curtain become stalled. This equipment does not permit variable opening; curtain must travel entire span before reversing.

MARQUEES

A MARQUEE is to be regarded as essential to the motion picture theatre. There are exceptions, due to location and form of building, but not many. Its function as a means of protection for patrons from rain and snow has become of less importance than its function as an advertising medium. It advertisers the theatre and the program, by distinguishing the building from other commercial establishments on the street, by the theatricalism of its fighting, by advertising the program.

Marquees today have become more closely associated with the general architectural form of the theatre front than they originally were. They are frequently constructed according to specifications supplied by the architect, who has designed the marquee itself, along with other display and sign elements of the front, as a part of the facade.

Another later development is unit construction of marquees, providing prefabricated marquees to fit most any theatre entrance, complete with all attraction board equipment, and also with theatre name sign (vertical or otherwise), if desired.

Most marquees have been rectangular in shape, but because the greatest amount of announcement space on such marquees cannot be read up and down the street, particularly on the side on which the theatre is located, other shapes have come into vogue, notably one combining rectangular with triangular forms.

Marquees are generally of sheet metal construction, painted, or with porcelain enamel finish in desired colors, with soffits of metal or glass illuminated by incandescent lamps or lighting troughs. There are, of course, many variations in pattern and illumination; however, the design should provide for attraction advertising panels with changeable letters (see Letters, Attraction Board) as integral parts of the structure.

MATS AND MATTING FOR ENTRANCE AREAS

HEAVY-DUTY corrugated rubber mats for vestibules, or corrugated and perforated rubber mats for the entire entrance area, are to be regarded as standard equipment for the average theatre, if not all theatres, since they are the principal means of reducing to a minimum the amount of dirt carried into the theatre on the shoes of patrons and of preventing slipping which can result in costly damage suits.

Lobby mats, as they are generally called, should cover all of the floor of the immediate entrance area (as far as the point where carpeting begins, unless there is an especially long inner lobby) that constitutes traffic lanes. In entrance area of moderate width or less, the traffic lanes will extend within a foot or so of the side walls. The rubber mat may be laid on top of a floor of terrazzo or tile (if it has beveled approach edges), but preferably it should lay in recess, flush with a border of terrazzo or ceramic, stone or asphalt tile.

It is also desirable to place lighter rubber mats (corrugated, but not necessarily perforated) just inside the entrance to the carpeted area, laying them flush with the pile of the carpet.

Lobby mats are obtainable in a variety of standard colors, but special mats may be made up in colors as desired and also in interesting patterns, which may be given directional lines guiding traffic (of particular value when an inner lobby or foyer is at right angles to the sidewalk), and also be designed to incorporate an emblem symbolizing the name of the theatre.

Metal link mats, thicker and more rugged than regular lobby mats, are advisable for use in vestibules or outer lobbies during wet weather.

Available for temporary laying over carpeting, to protect the fabric in main traffic lanes during wet weather, are various types of matting, of cocoa fibre, of a canvas-like fabric, of flax fibres, etc. Some are available in designs; widths generally run to 12 feet.

MIRROR GUARDS, PROJECTION LAMP

GLASS SHIELDS, or guards, are obtainable for the protection of reflector arc mirrors against pitting (which is produced to a relatively pronounced degree by the low-voltage high-intensity arc). The shields themselves are pitted in the course of operation, but since they are much less expensive than reflectors, their use reduces maintenance costs.

MOTOR-GENERATOR SETS FOR D.C. ARC SUPPLY

CURRENT CONVERSION equipment to supply direct current to arc lamps from alternating current lines is available in types and capacities to meet specific projection arc demands, from small spotlights in combination with picture projection lamps, to condenser lamps of super-high-intensity arcs.

To meet general theatre needs, twin sets are available having two generators driven by one motor on a common shaft and providing a five-minute overload up to 80 amperes, thus eliminating dipping of voltage at warming up periods during changeover.

Constant potential type m. g. sets, for heavy-duty spotlight and effect projector supply, are available in capacities from 100-150 to 750-1125 amperes, 100 volts, with 30-minute overload.

The type and capacity of m. g. set indicated for a specific installation depends upon the type of arc and carbon trim of the picture projection lamps, and whether spotlights or effect projectors are also to be supplied. (See Lamps, High-Intensity.)

MECHANISMS FOR the automatic operation of drinking fountains and opening of doors, with the mechanism actuated by the interruption of a beam of light trained on a photoelectric cell, are obtainable alone or as part of such door or fountain equipment. (See Fountains.)

Doors that open automatically merely upon the approach of a person, increasingly being used in hotels, restaurants and bus and railroad stations, have similar application to the theatre for passage from vestibule to lobby, and from lobby to foyer.

PHOTOELECTRIC CELLS

ALTHOUGH IT has a number of applications in many fields, in the theatre the photoelectric cell functions principally as a vital "organ" of the sound reproduction system, transforming the light of the exciter lamp, after it has passed through the sound track of the film, into the electrical energy which, amplified, actuates the loudspeakers.

PROJECTORS, STANDARD THEATRE

A ROCK-STEADY image, freedom from faulty lubrication, unit removability of parts to permit easier maintenance, greater shutter efficiency, gear meshing safeguards, generally stronger construction than that of earlier models, and also greater convenience and accuracy in framing, are among the features characterizing standard theatre (non-portable, heavy-duty, 35-mm.) projectors of late design. Additionally, these mechanisms are available with housing styled attractively in the manner of modern industrial designing, either integrally or at least intimately in association with magazines and bases.

Also available are projectors of a simpler and more compact fabrication, intended for permanent installation in theatres not requiring as many hours of continual service.

Pedestals, sold separately from the projector mechanism, are adapted to any standard type of lamphouse designed for corresponding service, and the modern pedestal, of enclosed construction, provides easy and accurate means of tilting and freedom from effective vibration.

RECTIFIER TUBES

VACUUM AND gas-filled tubes used to convert alternating current to direct current are made in many ratings. The smaller sizes are commonly thought of as being in the category of radio or amplifier tubes. But while there is no distinction in principle of operation, the larger sizes, having current capacities of from 2½ to 30 amperes, are by custom classified separately.

These are often described by their best-known trade name as "Tungar" tubes. In the theatre such tubes are used to provide rectified direct current to arc lamps and to sound exciter lamps.

RECTIFIERS AND POWER UNITS

RECTIFIERS ARE devices that employ rectifying tubes or copper compound rectifying assemblies (dry type) for the purpose of converting alternating current to direct current. The larger sizes are fan-cooled, and supply direct current to the projection arc.

The smaller sizes are of somewhat different design electrically, incorporating electrical filters to insure smooth d.c. output, and to supply power to exciter lamps, speaker fields or other parts of the sound system.

REFLECTORS FOR INCANDESCENT LAMPS

METAL RECEPTACLES for incandescent lamps, having a reflecting inside finish and with a curvature calculated to make most efficient use of available light, are obtainable in several types adapted particularly to marquee trim and soffit lighting, to sign letter lamping, sign borders, display lighting (some types as "spots") and similar uses.

There is also a type of reflector designed for low-wattage lamps, equipped with a glass roundel, or cover, having inside ribs to create sparkle, which not only protects the lamp and reflector, but provides color if desired without use of colored lamps. These reflectors produce effective illumination equivalent to 25 watts with 7½-watt lamps, and to 40 watts with 10-watt lamps, and are adapted to cove and other interior lighting as well as marquee and sign lighting, reducing current costs substantially as well as providing sparkle and desired color effect.

Other types of reflectors have swivel mounting, readily permitting reflection of the light in any direction.

REWINDERS, FILM

FILM REWINDERS are available in two general types, open and fireproof enclosed. The open type is offered in a number of different models, either as a single unit or as two separate units that are clamped to the rewind table, or bolted in place. The enclosed type is a single unit.

Both open and enclosed types may be hand-driven or motor-driven, may have sleeve bearings or ball bearings, may accommodate either 1,000- or 2,000-foot reels, or both, and may have either one or several driving speeds.

Some of the motor-driven types incorporate accessories by means of which the same motor can be used for general machine work, such as grinding and polishing.

Rewind tables of metal provide a fireproof work bench especially adapted to projection room needs and are available with tool drawer, rack for film cabinet, and clamping blocks accommodating any type of rewinder.

SCREENS, PROJECTION

THE SCREEN, an integral and vital part of the projection-sound systems, is properly selected according to the dimensions of the auditorium, including the distance from last row to screen, and to its sound transmission characteristics (attenuation factor of the perforations). Although no standards have yet been fixed, it is authoritatively regarded that the width of the image should be not greater than the distance between the first row and the screen, nor less than about one-sixth the distance between the last row and the screen.

Technically, screens are of three general types: Diffusive, for auditoriums having a ratio between width and depth of approximately 3½ or more, to 5; Semi-Diffusive, for auditoriums tending toward the narrow; and Specular, for auditoriums definitely elongated. Another type of screen is Translucent, used with rear projection.

In surface treatment (which is more or less associated with the critical materials used in general fabrication) screens are "white," plastic, "silver" (metallic) or "beaded" (glass). Specular screens are either "silver" or "beaded."

Ignoring the solid screen (unperforated), screens may be further divided into those consistently perforated throughout the image area; and those variably perforated (perforated only at speaker area, with holes of receding diameters).

Plastic screens are the latest development in this field. They are fabricated of a special composition (differing according to manufacturer), which, forming the essential body of the fabric, supplies the reflective surface as well. The type was developed in large part for the purpose of reducing the rate of surface deterioration and of increasing reflection power.

SIGNS (ELECTRIC) FOR THEATRE NAME

ELECTRIC SIGNS (metal framework with illumination provisions) are available in a wide variety of designs more or less closely associated with the architecture of the theatre front. While they are commonly especially designed by the architect or sign construction company, there are also stock designs adaptable to the theatre front. Gas tube (neon) and incandescent lamp illumination have been found effective for these signs in combination as well as alone, and either type of lighting can be flashed.

Horizontal name signs have normally been more closely associated with the marquee than the vertical sign has, but often the vertical sign can be effectively related to the marquee and entrance by continuing the sign illumination scheme down to the marquee and even across its soffit. It is to be noted that a prefabricated type of marquee is available complete with theatre name signs either vertical or horizontal and all electrical facilities.

SIGNS, DIRECTIONAL

DIRECTIONAL SIGNS, including exit signs, those designating men's and women's rooms, lounges, balcony stairs, etc., are now available in a wide range of stock designs, while they may be made up in special designs at relatively low cost. Instead of being more or less confined to plain metal lamp boxes, such as were particularly employed at one time for exit signs, stock types now are obtainable with decorative shapes, fluted chromium finish, etched glass, etc., in colors and also with appropriate figures.

SLIDES, PROJECTION

SLIDES FOR the projection of song lyrics, advertising and effects are made either of glass or other material suitably transparent. The more elaborate slides, carrying pictorial matter or designs, are usually of glass, while a flexible transparent material permits the ready preparation of an announcement slide on a typewriter, the blank material being kept on hand and, when written upon, inserted into a frame.

SPEAKERS AND HORNS

TO CONVERT the electrical product of amplification into audible sound, speaker "units" are available in considerable variety. The practice now is to use two types of speakers to reproduce different bands of sound frequencies.

Speakers are available in a.c. types, in a great variety of d.c. types, and in permanent magnet types that need no field excitation.

Baffles are required with every speaker. The simplest is flat board, behind which the speaker is mounted, large enough to provide baffling for the lowest frequency to be reproduced. In many auditoriums, however, the "folded" baffle provides a longer sound path, and therefore better "loading," for the low-frequency speakers. Directional trumpets or baffles used for high-frequency speakers consist of clusters of small trumpets operated by one or more units. These arrangements secure better distribution of the high frequencies, which have a normal tendency to travel in straight lines, over-supplying some seats and missing many others entirely. Clusters of directional baffles applied to the h.f. speakers correct this tendency.

TEST REELS

FOR MEASURING and checking projection and sound reproduction various test reels have been developed. A set of test reels always available in the theatre permit convenient checking of conditions periodically, to detect defects before they have developed to a critical degree, as well as to ascertain causes and to make adjustments after faults have become apparent. Reels covering projection include material and calibrations for optical system alignment, definition, film weave, and many other factors. Sound test reels cover reproduction characteristics at various frequencies and volume levels, acoustic measurements, etc., etc. Prices vary according to purpose and calibration.

TICKET REGISTERS

AUTOMATICALLY registering ticket dispensers facilitate the handling of box office peaks, and impart the impression of efficiency, cleanliness and business-like methods; they eliminate all excuses for errors on the part of the cashier (some type of dispensers make the usual errors impossible); and they may be regarded as necessary to any real assurance that box office losses are not occurring through cashier-doorman collusion. They are obtainable in motor-driven and manually operated types.

The most elaborate system for keeping ticket sales under control of the management embraces both the ticket issuing mechanism and the ticket itself. The cashier, when going on duty, turns a knob to a specific number assigned to her, at a time clock, then releases a ticket from

TOILET ACCESSORIES

THE PROVISION of soap, paper towels, etc., for the use of the public, is not to be regarded as merely a service to patrons; such provision, maintained constantly, contributes to the cleanliness of the toilet rooms, thus reducing maintenance work of the theatre staff. These supplies do represent a service, of course, the absence of which can create considerable ill will toward the theatre.

The soap should be preferably of liquid-type, available from a handy dispenser. Built-in dispensers with only the spout visible above each lavatory, are preferable to the glass bowl type in that they are neater and are theft-proof. Paper towel dispensers should be as accessible, supplied with towels of at least 32-pound stock. (They may be obtained in control type issuing only one section at a time).

Toilet paper should be of at least 10-pound stock and dispensed by holders using either flat folded sheets, or issuing two sheets at a time. These may be obtained in chrome-plated metal or in synthetic materials to match compartment color.

For the patron to place over the seat, disposable tissue covers are available, and can be issued by a coin dispenser.

A special type of toilet set (lending itself to exploitation of a theatre's protection of its patrons) is one associated with an ultraviolet lamp arrangement for sterilization of the seat by u.v. radiation when not in use.

UPHOLSTERING MATERIALS

UPHOLSTERING materials are of importance in theatre operation, first in relation to auditorium seating, second as coverings for foyer and lounge furniture. They may be divided into two general kinds—(1) soft fabrics, and (2) simulated leather.

The soft fabrics regarded as suited to motion picture theatre auditorium chairs are mohair, velour and corduroy, and these are of course available in various grades. Because of the hard usage to which theatre auditorium seating is subjected, and the liability of the theatre management for discoloration of clothes due to unstable dye, the cheaper grades should never be used.

There are two general classes of simulated leather, that having a coating of rubber-base type, and that with paroxylin-base coating. Each is available in different grades.

The rubber-base type is the more expensive, but it is also regarded more durable under stress of flexing. Simulated leather is obtainable in a large variety of standard colors and off-shades, and also in "antique" finishes having a worked leather pattern effect.

One of the makes of simulated leather of auditorium seating quality is also available in a so-called "ventilated" type. It derives this classification from the presence of tiny apertures.

The purpose of the apertures is to provide outlet for air upon compression of the cushion. (See also Chairs, Auditorium.)

Simulated leather is suited to foyer and lounge furniture. Here, however, and particularly in women's lounges, soft fabrics are often preferred for their suggestion of luxurious comfort, and also for the colorful patterns available. Of the soft fabrics, those most often used for lounge and foyer furniture are the cottons and wools, or cotton-rayon mixtures, having a firm texture and minimum of nap. VENDING EQUIPMENT FOR CONFECTIONERY

THE SELLING of candy and popcorn, and also beverages, in the theatre provides both a service to patrons and a source of extra income, and while such sales may be handled on a percentage basis through a concessionaire, many theatre managements are in a good position to operate this end of the business themselves, taking the entire profit, which in the case of candy may run as high as 30-40 per cent, and of popcorn as much as 70 per cent.

Candy vending machines are available in designs especially developed for the theatre, with modern lines and decorative features which, while making the machine noticeable enough, allows it to blend more or less with the surroundings. Theatre candy machines should provide a substantial choice of popular bars, and be of a mechanical quality assuring ease and assurance of operation. The better machines are equipped with a slug-detecting device, and are lighted with fluorescent lamps, which do

VOLTAGE REGULATORS

WHILE ELECTRIC power companies are supposed to maintain their lines at approximately established voltage, they cannot be depended on to do so in some communities. This is true of some industrial areas, but the condition is most often found in small cities and villages, particularly those receiving their power from distant points by high-tension lines. Fluctuation of voltage, which may be pronounced at certain times of the day, has its most critical effect on the sound system. Only slight variation in voltage can produce noticeable fluctuation of volume, and greater variation, particularly when the period of aberration is prolonged, can injure components of the sound system.

Voltage regulators of inexpensive type, but fully automatic, are available for the control of such line fluctuations. For stabilizing current to all of the sound system except the motors (and the motors do not ordinarily need to be included), capacities of from 500 to 1,000 watts cover theatre requirements.

Thad Barrows of Boston expresses high approval of Simplex E7

INSTALLED IN THE METROPOLITAN, BOSTON

Where progressive management recognizes good projection as a basic essential of efficient showmanship

METROPOLITAN THEATRE

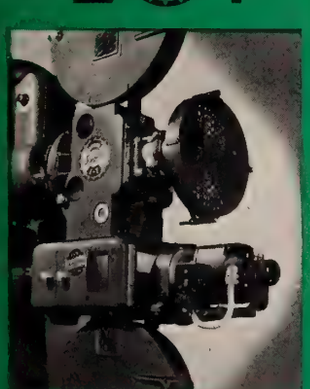
BOSTON, MASS.

International Projector Corp.
92 Gold Street
New York, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

Here in the Metropolitan Theatre, where progressive Management recognizes good projection as a basic essential of efficient showmanship, the performance of the Simplex E-7 has earned for it recognition as one of the finest projectors ever produced.

Outstanding among the many fine features of the E-7 are the removable film trap, improved framing device, one-shot oiling system which insures positive lubrication while keeping oil off the film, shockproof gearing, heavier construction throughout, and above all, a precision intermittent movement which attains the highest degree of accuracy within my experience.



As a practical projectionist for almost thirty five years, I have always been a firm believer in the many advantages of using the newest and best projection equipment, kept in good condition at all times and operated by competent projectionists.

The E-7 represents a contribution to the advancement of the art of projection which, I am sure, is recognized and appreciated generally by the projection craft, the continuing welfare of which is so dependent upon the maintenance of the highest possible standards

Very truly yours,
Thad. C. Barrows

RCA PHOTOPHONE MAGIC VOICE OF THE SCREEN

The modern ball player knows it pays to use modern equipment. It saves him from injury, helps him make what once would have been "impossible" plays. The modern exhibitor, too, knows it pays to use modern sound equipment in his theatre. For good sound means good box-office. And the modern RCA Photophone Magic Voice of the Screen means the finest sound.

And we mean finest! Remember—most Hollywood movie makers use RCA Photophone equipment for sound recording. So it is only natural that the RCA Photophone Magic Voice of the Screen for theatres is designed to best reproduce it. That's why over 6,000 theatres have chosen RCA Photophone Sound.

Designed and priced for large motion picture houses and small, the Magic Voice of the Screen is the profit potion you want for your box-office.

DOLLAR DIZZY

MONTH after month for a year now, new high prices for screen material, books and plays, have been recorded. This uptrend has come the while with the motion picture industry much concerned over the loss of the foreign market, much concerned about the British quota situation and the impounding of earnings on pictures in various regions, much concerned about the influences and effects of various aspects of changing trade practices under federal court decree, and in the face of possible new legislation.

A great deal has been said suggesting to the exhibitor that because standards had to be maintained, and by the home market, he must expect to pay higher rentals, charge higher admissions. That makes the the current bidding, if it is bidding, for material somewhat of the exhibitor's business.

The price curve would look less like a fever and more like the functioning of a business if there were available important evidences that earning power at the box office was intimately, or even approximately, related to such elements of cost.

A glance over the array of "Ten Best" of the Herald's annual poll of exhibitor opinion on the money making personalities reveals that those dominant star values were neither made nor generally supported by vehicles of extraordinary cost.

CURRENTLY it would seem from the purchase statistics that there has developed a special sort of madness which seeks to make the screen a device for dealing in second-hand fame, to make it a process of rectifying, cutting, blending and bottling and labelling, rather than creating. It would seem not too much to expect, in view of the salaries and perquisites scattered in that production community of Hollywood, that such costly and dynamic masters of production would be demonstrating their creative genius instead of parading their spending capacity.

Once upon a time one of America's great magazines evolved a policy which consisted principally of buying articles on assignment, and most expensively, from authors of best selling books. In a few years it was found by the publishers that their editor was not making a magazine but trying to buy ready-made success, and that the system while flashy was not indeed successful. That magazine has been reborn under an editorship which indulges in ideas of its own. It has made, for its audience, quite as many writers as it has bought. Operation under such a policy requires knowing the business.

It was ventured on this page a long time ago that the success of "Gone With the Wind", should it arrive, would infect production with a new madness. Something of the kind has happened.

Probably, too, there is an influence from the impending "blocks-of-five" selling regulation. Once it was the typical practice of each distributor to acquire a handful of titles and properties of special promise to "head the program" at the opening of the selling season. Now, maybe, there's demand for a production full of "selling points" to head each block.

Pictures are made, not bought.

Creative competition is not the competition of spectacular spenders.

The Academy has yet to award an oscar to the motion picture maker who does the best job—consisting in this: the most box-office value for the least cost.

PETTED CRITICS

THERE'S a dither in Hollywood over the complaint of the correspondent-critic clique that it is not getting access to the pictures as early as desired. National publications of the lay press, even the monthlies, are in bitter rivalry in pursuit of scoops on reviews.

This is both concurrent with and a consequence of the endeavour of picture promoters to sell the product direct to the customers over the heads of the retailers. The endeavour is to put the audience in the can along with the film.

Now the picture vendors, having let the mad quest of publicity get out of hand, would control advance attentions and seek to make reviews coincide with openings and all their attendant gala and high-pressure promotions. Objections to the process appear to fail to take cognizance that motion pictures are private property and that the producers and distributors can jolly well do what they please about them.

That would be simpler, to be sure, if the purveyors of the pictures knew from one picture to the next what their policy was going to be. In general, they merely seek "a good notice". The reviewer who likes a picture is a genius, and the one who does not is a bum.

Demonstration is to be had in the bickerings in New York over the star system of picture rating. It was agreed, for instance, that the picture advertisers would ignore the star ratings. That lasted until a picture under special selling pressure drew four stars in the Daily News. It broke into the lobby first and shortly into the display copy, and the star system was in again.

THERE should be no surprise in Hollywood or elsewhere that the industry might find the lay press represented by an expectant, or even demanding lot. After all, now for several years that press has been junketed, wined, dined, liquored, petted and patted, by land and sea and air, from the pine-clad hills of old New England to the palm-shaded and perfumed shores of Florida, to the snow-capped peaks of the Sierras and the sun-kissed shores of that dear California. All this, one must observe, to make date lines for stories calculated to reach the press wires, pictures for the rotogravure sections, chatter for the columnists. An unbiased observer from some far place would, on regarding the scene, decide that not only did the product require a lot of boosting, but also it had best be done under the anaesthesia of liquor and the distractions of jazz and swiftly changing environment. One of the consequences is that the picture editors of the American newspapers of the day know more about the land than the travel editors. Experience that used to be counted in years is now measured by mileage. A motion picture critic doing less than twenty

This Week in the News

America Advertises

ADVERTISERS in the U. S. in 1940 spent $1,660,000,000, an increase of 3.9 per cent over 1939, Printers Ink estimates this week in an annual survey of advertising expenditures conducted by Dr. L. D. H. Weld. The sum represents a per capita expense of $12.61 for 1940 advertisements, but the report concludes that advertising has not followed industrial recovery to the record level since 1926-29. In 1929 advertisers spent $2,340,000,000, or a per capita outlay of $19.26.

Newspapers are the top advertising media, with space sales of $545,000,000. Direct mail had $300,000,000; radio, $200,000,000.

thousand miles a year now is a stationary tramp of the art. Critic miles, laid end to end, would, and do, completely surround the industry.

If the critics are spoiled there is a reasonable amount of evidence about who did it, and how.

Meanwhile, nationalized selling has come in conflict with local selling.

It is still the exhibitor with his box office in Hometown—and When—who is supposed to bring in the gross. It is not always clear just how he may expect to make his playdate coincide with the special local ripple from the national splash. It is just possible that at times both he and his customers do not clearly remember all of the details from the three stick telegraph item in the local papers of the fortnight or month before when the scribes made rendezvous and whoopee at the grand national premiere at Piccolo Junction in the foothills where the plot and half the cast of the epic, "Across the Plains on a Bullet", were laid.

That brings one, by coincidence, of course, to the point that it is the special mission and function of Motion Picture Herald, with its Product Digest section, and several other service departments, to give that local and retail showman point of sale, and time of sale, information of the product that he is to sell.

The problem of the critics and the applications of national ballyhoo to local exhibition will never be solved.

The motion picture business is still conducted at the box office.

ShowmanshipThisWeek

DOUBLE-TRUCK promotional newspaper displays and full-page cooperative ads on behalf of the two-theatre premiere of "Meet John Doe" at Warners Hollywood and Downtown theatres, in Los Angeles, featured special showmanship efforts put on under the supervision of L. J. Halper, Warner Pacific division theatres head, to call citywide attention to a search for the most representative "John Doe" of Los Angeles.

Radio tie-ins to programs and announcements were employed to build further interest in addition to other twists for the key engagement, as described in this week's Managers' Round Table, starting on page 55.

Communist Party, USA

COMMUNIST activities in the United States are the theme of a March of Time magazine reel now in production by Louis de Rochemont. The "study of subversive activities by the 'red front' in America" is scheduled for release in June under the title "Communist Party, U. S. A." It is the first screen treatment of the subject from within the motion picture industry.

The organization of the U. S. Communist Party, its ties with the Soviet Third International, tenets of the party manifesto, and the "mission" of Communists in schools, labor, army and navy, and defense factories are to be covered.

A private survey of motion picture exhibitors and government officials prompted the film, Mr. de Rochemont said, adding they saw a public need of a report on the activities of the Communist Party, particularly in view of accusations of sabotage in the national defense effort.

Reports of the Dies' Committee, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and Army and Navy intelligence forces are said to have supplied case histories to document the film

Thursday Mr. de Rochemont was to receive the Patriotic Service Cross from the U. S. Flag Association after a screening of "Men of the F.B.I.—1941" and luncheon at the New York Advertising Club.

Films Streamlined Out

THE motion picture business appears to have been given a back seat in United States Department of Commerce foreign trade relation activities. A major reorganization of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce was ordered this week by Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones, in line with the orders to all Government agencies to effect a "war footing," whether or not they have any direct connection with national defense activities, and in the reorganization the motion picture section, for years an independent unit, was abolished. Its work in connection with foreign trade was transferred to a new general export-import section and its other activities to a merchandising section.

Nathan D. Golden, for many years head of the films section, has been assigned to a staff of "consultants" headed by Robert F. Martin, chief of a new division of industrial economy.

The Hollywood Press

MOTION pictures must be previewed in Hollywood before elsewhere;

They must be made available for previewing "within a reasonable time" before release;

There shall be no overlapping of previews as in cases of two major features being previewed on the same afternoon or evening:

There should be no previews held in neighboring towns, such as Glendale, or Inglewood.

These are the basic demands made upon Hollywood producers by an "informal organization" of 18 leading newspaper columnists and correspondents covering the Hollywood front. They were submitted on Monday by Douglas Churchill, as spokesman for the complaining news press, at a meeting with the Studio Publicity Directors Committee of the studios.

The publicity directors were to meet alone later in the week. Mr. Churchill said he had been "assured of results," in time to report back to his "committee of 18" by Tuesday.

Hollywood producers this week took steps to stamp out a practice, growing in many key centers, of commercializing sneak previews, or so-called "press previews," which are advertised to the public and an admission is charged. The Association of Motion Picture Producers—west coast branch of the Hays organization—has incorporated a ban against commercialized previews in its code governing previews. Immediate result was the elimination of the practice in Los Angeles.

Goldsmith De-flickers

DR. ALFRED N. GOLDSMITH, consulting engineer and former head of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, was awarded last week a patent on a television system designed to eliminate flicker by the use of a "low-frequency" picture and a "high-frequency" picture, each transmitted in one-sixteenth of a second. At the receiver the two pictures are superimposed and a complete "flickerless" image is said to result.

In the conventional television systems alternate lines are scanned to make up one half the picture with even-number lines transmitted in one-sixtieth of a second and odd-numbered lines in the next sixtieth of a second. A complete picture is received every thirtieth of a second, as in the method proposed by Dr. Goldsmith. In his patented system the coarser features and slower action are transmitted in the first fraction of a second and the fine detail and rapid action in the second period. This method is also said to be simpler than the interlacing methods used at present.

In another fashion of stating it, the two images recording each thirtieth of a second of action consist first in a transmission of what an artist would call a "wash" drawing and second of a sharp lined etching, thus transmitting broad over-all impression and superimposing on it detailed report, a process involving as much psychology as physiology.

Dr. Goldsmith does not now propose the immediate adoption of his system remarking, "Operative standards are necessary now and regardless of the intrinsic merit of the patented system the standards proposed by the National Television Systems Committee to the FCC should be adopted.

Public Moves In

HAVING already attacked the double, triple and quadruple movie bills, through a pending anti-multi-film proposal in the Missouri legislature, the St. Louis moviegoing public is now moving in on theatre giveaways.

The anti-triples measure, backed by St. Louis clubwomen, who have been conducting a vigorous campaign against long shows, will be amended to prohibit giveaways and related practices, the clubwomen asking legislators to limit film performances to two and a half hours each. This was disclosed on Wednesday by Harry Arthur, Jr., general manager of Fanchon and Marco Theatres in St. Louis, on his arrival in New York.

The anti-triples bill is reportedly backed by Mr. Arthur's opponents in the theatre operations of that city, the independent theatre interests, represented by the 25 neighborhood houses captained by Fred Wehrenberg, president of the St. Louis area MPTOA, who several weeks ago tried, and then abandoned, four-feature programs in some of his theatres to meet F. and M. triples competition.

Mr. Arthur predicted the amendment of the bill, on Wednesday, even as he lauded its purposes.

Big Game Shot

ONE of the biggest crackdowns on one of the biggest motion picture theatre cash games was administered Wednesday afternoon in Omaha by the Nebraska State Supreme Court which declared "Prosperity Club" to be a lottery and illegal, as operated by 23 Omaha theatres, and fined defendants $200 each.

The scheme was declared by the court to be in violation of Tribunals 1937 injunction against Bank Night. The Omaha Motion Picture Exhibitors Association, Tri-States Theatres, the R. D. Goldberg Circuit, Sam Epstein Circuit, the Mort H. Singer Circuit and William Miskell, president of the Omaha exhibitors association, were assessed.

Some $10,000 has been given away since the scheme was started in May, 1940. The game is conducted as a cooperative plan.

Kane Revealed

AT LONG LAST and officially "Citizen Kane," third production on the schedule of Orson Welles at the RKO studio, and the first to be produced, was Wednesday night of this week presented to a press audience for review—the preliminary to a yet not precisely defined plan of release, probably by roadshow. The eastern press showing was at the Broadway theatre in New York, at the dinner hour between performances of "Fantasia." This showing was attended by some 400 members of the press and their intimates. Simultaneously there was a showing at the Ambassador theatre in Los Angeles.

Previously at a series of allegedly private showings, taking place through the weeks of debate, on the policy and politics of the production the picture had been shown to more than a thousand persons, and various pseudo and official reviews of versions of the picture have been published.

There has yet been no official determination, so far as can be known, of what the status of the project may be with reference to the alleged, but not proved, objections by William Randolph Hearst.

It appeared as possible that the showings at the previews East and West might in fact be trial balloons. The roadshows are announced to open "within a month."

On the eve of the previews Mr. Welles caused to be issued a statement that he was leaving for a rest in a private sanitarium, accompanied by his special physician. A number of his contemporaries working on matters pertaining to the production and its projected release expressed a desire to accompany him.

("Citizen Kane" is reviewed on page 36.)

Can't Stop Competition

A CITY has no authority to prohibit the operation of two or more theatres owned by any one single firm or person, the Arkansas Supreme court has ruled at Little Rock. The opinion upheld a Conway (Ark.) chancery court decree enjoining the city of Morrilton from attempting to enforce an ordinance designed to prevent Malco Theatres, Inc., from operating more than one movie within the city limits.

The city passed an ordinance in 1939, levying an annual tax of $50 on motion picture houses operating three nights a week or less, and $100 on those operating more than three nights a week. An additional annual tax was assessed against larger theatres.

March 11, 1940, another ordinance was passed which re-enacted the licensing and taxing provisions and added a section prohibiting "any person, firm or corporation to operate more than one picture show within the city limits," or to be interested in the operation of more than one theatre anywhere.

BETTE DAVIS' birthday was an added feature of the mountain premiere of her newest Warner picture "The Great Lie" in Littleton, N. H., last weekend. Guests of the company from the newspapers and trade press of the eastern seaboard were taken by train to the White Mountain resort, treated to a skiing party, above left, and to a New England sugaring off party, lower left, at which some were reported to have protested they couldn't eat all that snow. FOX COAST CIRCUIT IN BUYING AND BUILDING 'SPREE' FOR 100 THEATRES

Plans For New Houses in California Indicate Major Expansion; Cities, Smaller Towns Included as Sites

BULLETIN

Complete control of 90 theatres in California and Nevada is about to pass to Fox West Coast Theatres, subsidiary of National Theatres, which is owned by the Chase bank and Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, in one of the biggest circuit buys since the depression of '29. The transaction will raise National Theatres' present holdings of some 460 theatres to 550.

At midweek, Spyros Skouras, head of National Theatres, was in San Francisco conferring, it was understood, with Mike Naify, Bob McNeil and Gene Emmick, pioneer coast circuit operators, for the purchase of stock control of their Golden Gate Theatre Corporation of 30 theatres and their T. & D. Junior Circuit of 60 houses. These two circuits have interlocking interests. Fox West Coast has for years held 26 per cent of the stock of both.

Inquiry Wednesday at National Theatres headquarters in Los Angeles disclosed that it was expected Spyros Skouras would announce the 90-theatre addition within a few days.

California is on the verge of the biggest U. S. theatre building booms in years, involving both circuits and independents in some 30 theatres. With Fox West Coast reportedly set for 10, it is the first large theatre expansion by a major-affiliated circuit since the "Big 5" circuit owners were committed by the U. S. Government to the consent decree trust suit settlement, last November 20th.

National Theatres Corporation, controlling Fox West Coast, is committed to certain consent decree restrictions on expansion as set down by the Department of Justice. Through Twentieth Century-Fox's 42 per cent interest in National-Fox West Coast, the circuit is required under the decree to notify the Government, for a period of three years, until November, 1943, "of any legally binding commitment for the acquisition by it of any additional theatre or theatres."

And, like the other four major-owned circuits—Warners, RKO, Paramount and Loew-Metro, National-Fox—is committed by the decree to report to the Department of Justice, on or before the 10th day of each month, any changes in its theatre position that have occurred during the preceding month, as follows, with a statement of the reasons for such changes—quoting from the decree itself:

"(a) Theatres contracted to be built, or under construction;

"(b) Theatres lost or disposed of;

"(c) Theatres acquired.

"(d) Interests in theatres acquired, with a statement of the nature and extent of such interests."

The foregoing stipulations, along with others in the decree, were made in temporary armistice settlement of the Government's original anti-trust suit demands for the divorcement by producer-distributors of their holdings in exhibition.

Section 5 of Clause XI of the decree states that, "For a period of three years following the entry of this decree, no consenting defendant shall enter upon a general program of expanding its holdings" . . . (but) . . . "Nothing herein shall prevent any such defendant from acquiring theatres or interests therein to protect its investment or its competitive position or for ordinary purposes of business. . . ." If theatres or interest therein are acquired in violation of this anti-overexpansion) clause of the decree, the Government can order the circuit to divest itself of such theatres acquired.

DECREE EXPERTS BECOME ARBITERS

Robert Sher and James Hayes, former assistants to the Attorney General of the United States who had much to do with the formulation of the motion picture consent decree and are now law partners in Washington, have been appointed members of the national panel of arbitrators by the American Arbitration Association.

The 7,000 members of the general AAA panel in some 1,600 cities throughout the country hear commercial and labor arbitration cases. The national panel is distinct from the special motion picture panel which now has over 800 members and will ultimately have about 1,000.

Members of the AAA national panel receive no compensation, while those serving on the special motion picture panels receive $10 for each hearing day or field investigation.

by NAT TANCHUK
in Los Angeles

Fox West Coast Theatres plans to build a new theatre in Glendale, California, and nine others in the state. This appears to be in line with a general theatre building boom in California in which independent operators and others are participating.

With more than a half dozen theatres now in varying stages of construction, plans and locations have been mapped for approximately two score more, plus a couple of drive-in theatres in the Los Angeles film exchange territory alone, which embraces southern California and Arizona.

Possibly not all of the proposed theatres will be built, because the rising costs of construction and equipment, brought about in part by increased war preparedness activities in local areas, might make it impractical for some theatre men to go through with projected plans.

Now under construction are Jack Berman's 900-seat Wyvern theatre on East Olympic Street in Los Angeles; Bourke & Baylis' new 800-seat Bundy in West Los Angeles; Harry Rackin's Laurel on the corner of Laurel and Beverly Boulevards in Hollywood; the New Rose theatre, 680-seats on Santa Barabara Boulevard, Los Angeles; an unnamed theatre at Sunset Boulevard and Golden Gate Avenue, Hollywood; a 1,000 seat house in San Luis Obispo for Rosenberg's Fox Principal Theatres, and a 450-seat theatre for 'Slim' Bevans at Greenfield, 10 miles south of Bakersfield.

William S. Hart, formerly silent western star, is associated with the building of a 450-seat theatre in Newhall in conjunction with the Newhall American Legion. At San Gabriel, O. W. Lewis has broken ground for a 650-seat house, and Ned Calvi of Hawthorne has drawn np plans for an 880-seat theatre in that town.

Ralph Gruenauer, of Southside Theatres, is planning a 1,000-seat house at 114th Street and South Vermont Avenue, Los Angeles, while Ray Robbins is projecting a 900-seater several blocks away on South Vermont.

Independent Plans

The operators of the Pan Pacific Auditorium, large sports center situated in an unincorporated area on Beverly Boulevard have been reported making plans for the construction of a large de luxe movie house just a three-minute walk from Fox West Coast's de luxe Fairfax Theatre.

Rodney Pantages, operator of Pantages Hollywood, and son of the man who established the Pantages Circuit, is discussing plans for a limit-height professional and theatre building on the corner of Wilshire and Fairfax Boulevards, Los Angeles.

Seth Perkins, manager of the Drive-In Theatre, at Burbank, declared he was planning a 1,000-seat house in San Fernando Valley. Meantime, the California Drive-In Corporation, of which he is one of the directors, is proceeding with the construction of a 500-car capacity drive-in theatre near Santa Ana.

Harry Goldfarb, operator of the National near National City, is ready to break ground for a second house in that town. M. King, father-in-law of David Cantor, operator of the San Clemente theatre, San Clemente, is now building a house at Vista, Calif.

Art Brick, of the Palace theatre, Las Vegas, Nev., has selected a site for a second theatre in that town and has already approved the plans. Still another house is being planned by Craigin and Pike of Las Vegas who operate the El Portal there.

Ivan Hansen, operator of the Cairo on South Main Street, Los Angeles, has been placing orders for equipment for a 900-seat house planned for North Long Beach, and Fox West coast has plans for a $150,000 house in the same district.

Midway between the 20th-Fox West Coast Studio and La Reina on Ventura Boulevard, North Hollywood, another independent house is to be built.

Circuit Plans Extended

An expansion program by two large chain firms of Texas in the Lower Rio Grande Valley has been announced simultaneously this week. Consolidated Theatres, Inc., which already operates a number of houses in the Valley, has purchased a site for $20,000 in Brownsville and plans construction of a 1,500-seat theatre, J. L. Mason, manager at McAllen, announced. At Harlingen, the Interstate Circuit, Inc., plans a $35,000 house which will specialize in Spanish language pictures. This chain already operates the Arcadia in Harlingen and under the program that house will be remodeled and enlarged.

PUBLIC IN ARMS OVER MINNESOTA'S ANTI-BLOCKS-OF-5 VOTE OF 104 TO 3

Parent-Teachers, Other Groups Protest Bill to Nullify Decree in Spite of Previous Stand on Block Booking

Minnesota this week was on the verge of becoming the first state to stand on the doctrine of states' rights against national trade legislation as represented by the blocks-of-five selling requirements prescribed by the United States Department of Justice for the "Big Five" distributors in the consent decree trust suit settlement.

The Minnesota House of Representatives, last Friday, passed a bill, almost unanimously, by a vote of 104 to 3, outlawing the decree's blocks-of-five clause and establishing, in its place, a 20 per cent cancellation on large-block purchases. A similar bill is pending in Michigan, another was recently voted down in Georgia.

The measure was to reach the floor of the Senate for a vote this week, with passage recommended to the Senate by that group's General Legislative Committee.

Passage by the House immediately brought into the battle large public groups, protesting against passage, on the grounds that the blocks-of-five provision of the decree should be given a trial.

Several of the groups, which, in attack, aimed at Northwest Allied, sponsor of the Minnesota message, had for years strongly backed national Allied in its efforts to have anti-block selling legislation enacted by Congress.

Three Groups Protest

Three organizations placed themselves on record, with the legislature, against the bill. They, further, circularized the Senators. The three are the Council of Parent-Teachers Associations of the Minneapolis Public Schools, the Fifth District of Minnesota Federation of Women's Clubs, and the Federal Motion Picture Council of America.

Principals in each of the three organizations, who signed the circular letters, were, for the first, C. B. Johnson; the second, Mrs. Frank Kurtz; third, Mrs. Robbins Gilman. The latter is also chairman of the motion picture committee of the National Council of Women, and a member of the executive committee of the national Motion Picture Research Council.

Mrs. Gilman cited the consent decree as "nation-wide in purposes, power, and operation," and asked a trial of it, adding that the state measure was "less adequate and wholly inefficient and expensive. In my judgment," she said, "the bill has no merit in itself for exhibitor or public, and will serve only to confuse the issues."

The Federation letter said: "We have taken the position that block booking was a bad practice. The bill not only expressly approves block booking but makes it compulsory."

The Council said: "We have for years opposed the principle of block booking and it comes as a great shock to us, to learn there is now a movement to reinstate block booking in Minnesota."

The Senate was expected to vote on the measure this week. Its general legislation committee, after hearings, recommended the bill. The majors in the consent decree, excluding Paramount, had opposed it at Senate and House hearings. United Artists also opposed it. Their objections had been they would be forced to withdraw from business or set up a different selling system in Minnesota.

Anent the latter type of selling, they said they were bound to observe the decree uniformly and that selling differently in Minnesota would be a decree violation. UA objected because the bill asked for block booking and UA always sold its pictures, made by partner-producers, individually.

Paramount did not oppose the bill presumably because under the decree it is not required to sell in blocks-of-five to its circuit affiliate in the state, the Minnesota Amusement Company.

The House vote on Friday, April 4th, was 104 to three.

The pressure groups now against the bill were not heard from previously at the hearings before both legislative bodies. At that time, only the distributors named fought and other pressure groups, including the local Legion of Decency unit, allied themselves with Northwest Allied in favor, presumably because of the 20 per cent cancellation privilge afforded by the bill along with its requirement that a distributor offer his entire season's product en masse.

The special subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee this week was expected to take action of a degree on the Neely divorcement bill. The subcommittee has been examining reports on the current film situation, these including Department of Justice actions.

U. S. Moves for Records of 'Little 3'; Action on River, Momand Cases

In mid-week the Department of Justice's attorneys were to apply in Buffalo Federal Court for permission to study the documents and records of United Artists, in pursuit of the Federal anti-trust action against the company, Universal, Columbia, and the Schine circuit, in that city.

The agreement was to follow permission granted last week to the Department, by the five majors, parties to the consent decree, for the examination of their records relating to business done in the approximately 80 cities and towns of the Schine circuit territory—a permission, observers thought, presaging a determined Government drive to see the Schine case through to the end. The records of the five companies, to be examined, also include those of business done with about 70 exhibitors of the territory, who have contended they were unable to obtain sufficient product for their houses.

The examination of the records of the five majors was to begin Wednesday at the Loew New York office, possibly to be followed by oral examination of the company's executives. Conducting the examinations are Herbert Borkland and Seymour Simon, assistant U. S. Attorney Generals. The oral examinations of company officers are scheduled for April 24th.

In the Federal District Court in New Haven, for the southern district of Connecticut, a suit has been filed for $5,452,575, triple damages, by the Perfect Theatres, Inc., against the eight major film companies and Monogram, Republic, Skouras Theatres and Fox Metropolitan Playhouses. The suit involves the 2,000-seat Pickwick theatre in Greenwich, Conn., operators of which claim they have been unable to get product until several months after first-run engagements in Stamford and Greenwich.

On Monday, in Buffalo, the Department filed an answer and objections to the interrogatories recently submitted by Columbia. These questions were called "improper and objectionable" and requesting "information which would of necessity be based on hearsay".

In all, there were eight objections; but the Government said it would answer the interrogatories "in order to avoid argument and delay".

The River Theatres Corporation anti-trust suit against the Skouras theatre circuit and the majors (except MGM and Universal) was discontinued in New York Federal Court last week, without costs to anyone. No reasons were given. An assignee of the Central theatre of Pearl River, the plaintiff had charged conspiracy to impose unreasonable clearance, had asked for no more than seven days' clearance.

Federal Judge A. P. Murrah handed down an opinion last week in Oklahoma City regarded as significant in forthcoming Federal Court trials. It was delivered in the suit in that city's Federal Court by A. B. Momand of Shawnee against the majors and the Griffith Amusement Company circuit. It came after the companies had moved for dismissal because allegedly the causes of action had been assigned to Mr. Momand by the group of theatres he represents, contrary to Oklahoma law which states a cause of action cannot be assigned unless it is based on a contract.

Judge Murrah ruled the state law applied to the suit but that action proceeds out of a contract, though that contract be not breached. He said the suit was a "right of action created by Federal statute".

U. S. ORDERS NEWSPAPERS TO HALT FREQUENCY-MODULATION INVASION

Construction Stopped until FCC Decides Policy; 27 Per Cent of All Licenses Now Held by Publishers; Film Effect Seen

Newspapers this week were ordered by the Government to halt their "invasion" of the field of Frequency-Modulation, and to suspend all work on FM radio stations already authorized by the U. S. for construction. No other applications for the new staticless type radio from newspaper or newspaper-controlled syndicates will be acted upon by the Federal Communications Commission until it decides whether such ownership is in the public "interest, convenience and necessity."

The ban on future FM activity on the part of newspapers, a prohibition which may become permanent, was of interest to many exhibitors who have been studying FM radio as a new medium, in competition with the newspapers, for reaching a large audience with advertising and other announcements about programs being shown at the theatre. FM radio is regarded as having advantages over the regular broadcasting stations in this respect in that it gives solely a local coverage. FM stations are authorized to cover only a particular trade area while regular broadcast stations are heard hundreds of miles.

About 27 percent of the FM applications filed with the FCC to date have been by newspapers. But about 32 percent of all regular broadcasting stations are owned by such groups. For this reason, it was reported, the Government may be proceeding against newspaper ownership of FM stations as only the beginning of a campaign to require organizations using radio to concentrate 100 percent on that medium. Such a policy would hit many groups, including Loew's, Inc., which owns WHN, a regular station, has an FM permit for New York and has applied for another for Hollywood. Also, it was said, Paramount's interest in television might be disapproved on the same grounds that newspaper FM control is attacked.

Extension of Policy Seen

There is no particular reason, unless political, it was said, why newspapers alone should be excluded from operating a side-line business of radio. If the FCC, after a hearing on the question, permanently bans newspaper ownership of FM facilities, it was reported that other groups such as insurance, companies and motion picture companies might likewise be barred from operating stations FM or perhaps even regular radio transmitters.

The only exception to the sweeping ban on newspaper operation of FM stations was Gordon Gray, Winston-Sales, N. C., publisher who received permission to go ahead with his super-FM station which will cover a large part of the Carolinas and neighboring states. The commission found that "public interest, convenience and necessity will be served by construction at this time" of that particular newspaper FM station. It was elsewhere reported that the reason why this publisher was told to go ahead and a dozen other newspapers had to stop work on FM stations was that the Carolina station would not be generally confined to the circulation area of the newspaper operated by the same firm.

Six newspaper FM construction permits were issued to newspaper groups on the condition that no construction would be begun or completed until the FCC acted on the general newspaper-ownership question. Others were told to stop work on construction and new applications received from newspapers and others not yet acted upon will be put in the "pending" file until the whole matter is explored.

The Milwaukee Journal, however, was given permission to operate for 60 days its experimental FM transmitters on a regular commercial basis.

Last week representative of various companies interested in FM met in New York City. The chief subject of conversation and discussion was the FCC order halting newspaper expansion in the field of FM broadcasting and the formation of plans for the first FM network in with the Loew's, Inc. radio interests are expected to play a part.

The FCC ban on newspaper FM stations has seriously handicapped development of the noiseless radio system perfected by Major Edwin H. Armstrong, delegates reported. It was pointed out that 11 newspapers had received construction permits for FM stations and must now stop work, an additional 16 newspaper FM applications were pending when the ban was issued.

John Shepard, 3rd, president of FM Broadcasters, Inc., and head of the Yankee Network, was authorized to represent the FM groups in Washington at the proposed hearing which may not be held for some months and explain that "any effort to discriminate against newspaper activity in FM at this time would be detrimental to the progress of frequency modulation as a new and promising industry." Newspaper publishers last week also appointed a special committee to consider the FM station in the light of the FCC order.

The first FM network, to be known as Associated Broadcasting Corporation was organized. Mr. Shepard heads a committee which includes Walter Damm, of the Milwaukee Journal and W55M, Milwaukee; Harry Stone, W47NV, Nashville; Herbert L. Pettey, WHN; Gordon Gray, WSJS, Winston-Salem, and John R. Latham, New York advertising executive and consultant to the FM Program Research Committee, predecessor of the new ABC.

WOR's FM station, W71NY, is the first FM station in New York and the second in the country to begin commercial operation. The FCC has given it a 60-day permit to operate at reduced power while its 10,000 watt transmitter is being installed. Defense work has delayed delivery of certain equipment, it was said.

The FCC reported last week that as a result of the Radio Moving Day March 29th reception has been improved in general. Mexican radio stations also reported considerable improved following the shift in frequencies according to the North American radio treaty.

Mutual gross billings for the month of March were $513,774, an increase of 31.5 per cent over $390,813 for March, 1940. Cumulatively for the first quarter Mutual has grossed $1,461,-162, an increase of 39.7 per cent over $1,046,191 for the same period last year.

"URGENT" CABLE RATES REDUCED

Charges for "urgent" telegraph messages (except urgent press messages) in the international telegraph service, used considerably by the motion picture industry along with others, were too high, the Federal Communications Commission found, and, accordingly, has ordered the Western Union Telegraph Co., RCA Communications, Inc., and the Commercial Cable Co., to reduce the cost of "urgent" messages in comparison with the cost for ordinary messages from the present ratio of two to one, to 1½ to one. The new rates went into effect April 1st.

Cincinnati Business Increase

Although business activity in Cincinnati is at the highest level since 1930, according to figures released by the industrial department of the Chamber of Commerce, theatre attendance is not reflecting the increase. Industrial employment as indicated by 17 selected industries showed an increase of 22.3 per cent in February over the same month last year, while the business level is now 74 per cent above the low of 1933, and only 11.5 per cent below the peak of 1929. Manufacturing employment is at the highest in the city's history.

Four Theatres Reopen

Four Warner theatres in the Philadelphia area returned to the circuit's operations this week, reopening after extensive alterations and improvements. A. J. Vanni, out-of-town district manager, will attend the opening ceremonies at each of the houses, starting with the Virginia theatre in Atlantic City; the New Warner theatre in Reading, Pa.; and the Strand and Capitol theatre in York, Pa. In addition, a program of improvements for the circuit's New Broadway theatre in Philadelphia was approved this week.

$6,000 for Grierson

The salary of John Grierson as Dominion Film Commissioner, has been revealed through information secured by George Tustin, member of the Canadian Parliament and a theatre operator. It was brought out that Mr. Grierson is being paid $6,000 a year and is the only salaried employe of the National Film Board, the members of which are reimbursed for expenses only.

Producing Company Formed

George Breakston and John Tansey have formed Avon Pictures to produce a series of two-reel subjects. The first subject, "Beyond the Track," is currently in production with Mr. Tansey directing.

New Short Subject

"For the People," produced for the Greater New York Fund, and being distributed by Metropolitan Film Distributors, New York City, had its first showing in New York last week.

EXHIBITOR vs. EXHIBITOR CASES TOP ARBITRATION DECREE COMPLAINTS

All Clearance Cases Based on Complaints Against Preceding Runs, Not Distributors; N. Y. Action Compromised

Arbitration proceedings under the consent decree thus far are running along the lines of an exhibitor vs. exhibitor battle rather than exhibitors attacking one or more of the five theatre-owning circuits, or the majors which signed the decree.

In the New York Case No. 1 the exhibitor complainant and the exhibitor named as an interested party reached a compromise settlement Monday in a clearance dispute while the arbitrator and spectators waited for the hearing to open. The five distributors named in the original demand for arbitration were not even parties to the settlement.

So far, whenever clearance has been the issue in an arbitration hearing, the exhibitor who brought the complaint has tried to prove that the clearance given another exhibitor was "unreasonable"; the other exhibitor tries to justify the clearance which he has brought and which is set forth in his contract. The distributors who, under the decree, as the actual defendants in all the arbitration cases, have, as it were, sat back and let the exhibitor interests battle.

Competitive Complaints Highest

Competitive theatres have been named in nearly 70 percent of the demands filed in the first 10 weeks of operation of the American Arbitration Association motion picture machinery. Most of the demands in which other exhibitors were not named involved "some run." Even on this subject, in some situations, competitive theatres, it has been charged, have tried to prevent the exhibitor complainaint from obtaining any run of product of one or more major distributors.

Clearance cannot be cut down for one theatre without taking away some protection from a competing house, it is said. A similar situation was said to exist in many places on "some run"; if product is given to another house in the area, other exhibitors protest, feeling that their business will be hurt. Some claim that many towns in the country are not large enough to support even a second run.

Arbitrators in several cases which have been heard recently have indicated that while the exhibitor filing the demand asserted clearance was the subject of the dispute, a specific run was actually what was requested. A specific run case can not be arbitrated under the decree until September. At the present time an arbitrator may cut the clearance, if the complainant satisfies him that the clearance is "unreasonable." But the award can not change the exhibitor's run. In other words, in clearance disputes an exhibitor can not win a better run in the sense of obtaining second run instead of third or first instead of second.

Two weeks ago the Chicago Case No. 2 brought by Ben Banovitz of the Ken theatre was dismissed on the ground that a certain run and not clearance was the subject of the dispute. That decision has been appealed. In the Cleveland Case No. 1, Louis Israel of the Ellet, Akron; the Detroit Case No. 2 (Julius L. and Milton London, Booth theatre) and the Boston Case No. 2 (Garbose Bros., York and Capitol, Athol, Mass.), it was reported that better runs and not clearances were in dispute. Decisions on those three cases have not been made yet.

Exhibitors Settle First New York Case

After a delay of over an hour beyond the scheduled time for the opening of New York's first arbitration hearing under the consent decree system on Monday at the headquarters of the American Arbitration Association in the U. S. Rubber Building in New York City, the exhibitors involved and their attorneys and lawyers for the five distributor defendants filed into the ninth floor hearing room and it was announced that the two exhibitors had reached an agreement among themselves and all parties would agree to the withdrawal of the complaint.

The demand was filed four weeks ago by Albert Margolies, president of the Hilary Theatre Corporation, operator of the Regent, Brooklyn and all the "Big 5" distributors were named defendants. Cited as an interested party was the Apollo theatre, operated by George Stamatic. The Regent complaint asserted that the seven-day clearance given the Apollo was "unreasonable" and requested day and date run. Terms of the settlement were not announced but the exhibitors, between themselves, agreed to a substantial cut in that clearance. Lawyers for the distributors pointed out that the companies they represented were not parties to the agreement and would "sell as they saw fit."

Julius Henry Cohen, the arbitrator, who is called "the father of arbitration" on account of his activities in connection with establishment by law of arbitration in New York state, admitted that he was puzzled by the announcement of the settlement of a clearance dispute to which the distributors had not agreed. Lawyers for both exhibitors said they were satisfied that the agreement would be respected.

Compromise agreements made by the parties should be encouraged, Mr. Cohen said, because "no arbitrator's award can be as fair as an agreement reached by the parties in a give-and-take discussion."

Denver Case Dismissed On Exhibitor's Request

Denver's first arbitration case resulted in a dismissal, at the exhibitor-complainant's request. Joseph J. Goodstein, operator of the Longmont, Longmont, Colo., had asked for product from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Paramount and Twentieth Century-Fox. The Fox, Longmont, was cited as an interested party. The hearing before George D. Begole, former Denver mayor and the arbitrator, lasted several days.

Defendants built their case around charges that Mr. Goodstein did not satisfy the minimum operating standards required in the consent decree before product must be leased. Albert J. Gould, Jr., was counsel for the distributors.

During the testimony Joe Ashby, RKO exchange manager in Denver, charged that "Kitty Foyle," a 40 percent film, was shown at the Longmont a day ahead of the booking on a bill with "Little Men," a 30 percent picture and only the latter was reported until the matter had been brought out at the arbitration hearing.

The action for dismissal which came after a day of testimony by defense witnesses was protested by Mr. Gould who admitted that he was powerless to prevent it. The distributors' lawyer said for the record that he would have shown that "some run" had not been refused by any of the companies named.

Mr. Gould also said concerning the dismissal: "It prevents Frank H. Ricketson, operating Fox Intermountain Theatres, from showing that it is the constant effort, and will be the constant effort, of Fox Theatres in this division to comply with the spirit of this decree, and I say to you that the decree is going to be complied with. Mr. Ricketson feels that it is the greatest thing that has ever happened in the industry. He feels that it is the greatest thing for the orderly conduct of the business.

"As a matter of public policy it is a bad thing for independent exhibitors to file an arbitration proceeding and then dismiss at this stage of the hearing when they have told their whole story, with the inferences and testimony that we are prepared to refute."

Mr. Gould also claimed that the defense testimony would have "shown conclusively that the consent decree was being used for the purpose of compelling the Fox Theatres to lease his theatre again." It was said that Mr. Goodstein could obtain "some run" from the distributors cited in the complaint. Costs of the case were assessed against Mr. Goodstein.

Clearance Case Heard In Philadelphia

The first film arbitration hearing in Philadelphia was held on Friday of last week before Robert J. Callaghan, local attorney and arbitrator. The complaint was filed by John Geyser, president of the High Bridge Corporation, operator of the Florence theatre, Florence, N. J., and named the five distributors and the Fox theatre in Burlington, N. J., operated by the Atlantic Theatres circuit. Elimination of clearance and day and date run was requested. Decision was reserved.

The day before the hearing the exhibitor who previously had decided to try his own case, engaged Joseph Kaplan as his attorney. Albert Cohen represented the Atlantic circuit and the distributors were represented by the following home office lawyers: C. Stanley Thompson, MGM; Stewart Aarons, Warners; Herb Lazarus, Paramount, and Felix Jenkins, 20th-Fox. James Murphy, AAA executive, came down from New York to supervise the proceedings.

The original complaint, asking that there be no clearance, was modified to provide for 12 hours clearance when Mr. Jenkins, for 20th Century-Fox, argued that since the idea of run implied clearance, there had to be some clearance. Mr. Jenkins further argued that under the consent decree, an arbitrator had no right to set specific clearance. The arbitrator may rule that the clearance is fair or unfair, said Mr. Jenkins, but it has no right to set a day or date run. The Burlington house has seven days clearance on RKO product, 14 days on the other consenting distributors' pictures.

Counsel for the Fox Theatre argued that since both houses were in competition, there should be no question of clearance, pointing out that the two towns are in the same zone, being only six miles distant, and that the house's advertisements and mailing lists cover Florence as comprehensively as Burlington. Moreover the Fox has been in existence since 1931, paying a yearly rental of $37,600 and representing an investment of $375,000. The Florence has been in existence only since last Fall, and represents an investment of only $50,000, being a reconditioned auditorium, it was said. The Florence seats 390 compared to 1,400 in the Burlington. While the admission scale at both houses are identical, the Florence is open evenings only during the week days, he added. Issue was also made of the fact that the Florence plays "Lucky," a movie game, although it was admitted that the Burlington did have giveaways until the first of the year, when it was discontinued. As a result, Mr. Cohen pleaded that the Fox theatre, "by reason of its historical development," deserves the advantage of clearance.

Testimony was taken from Philadelphia branch managers Robert Lynch, Metro; Samuel Gross, 20th Century-Fox; William G. Mansell, Warners; Charles Zagrans, R.K.O.; and from Herman Rubin, Paramount salesman covering the territory in which the theatres are located. Others interrogated included Morris Payenson, secretary-treasurer of the contesting High Bridge Corp.; Isadore Epstein, general manager of the Atlantic circuit; and Eugene Stutenroth, manager of the Fox theatre.

Briefs Ordered in No. 2 Boston Case

After the first day of the hearing on the Boston Case No. 2 brought by the Garbose Bros., operators of the York and Capitol in Athol, Mass., John Daly, arbitrator, ordered briefs and set April 14th for the next hearing. The complaint involves clearance and the "Big 5" were cited. Also named in the demand were all affiliated theatres in Boston and Fitchburg. It was asserted that the York and Capitol should have simultaneous run with the houses in Boston and Fitchburg. Counsel for the Garbose Bros. claimed that the theatres in Athol were outside the competitive area of Boston and Fitchburg and should not have to wait for product.

Counsel for the plaintiff must show in his brief that the complaint involves clearance and not a specific run or it will be dismissed because of lack of jurisdiction. Such cases can not be arbitrated until the whole decree becomes operative September 1st.

Hearing Held on New York Squire Case

George A. Spiegelberg, arbitrator, presided at the hearing of the arbitration case brought by Herbert Scheftel of the Esquire Corporation which operates the Squire, Great Neck, Long Island (New York Case No. 2) against the "Big 5" and naming the Great Neck Playhouse, a Skouras theatre, as an interested party. It was asserted that the present 30 day clearance period between the houses is "unreasonable."

The first hearing opened at 10 A.M. Wednesday. Proceedings were expected to take several days. On Wednesday lawyers for all interested parties made their opening statements and after an all-morning session the hearing was adjourned to April 15th.

The third complaint in the Philadelphia territory, and the first by a local exhibitor was filed last Thursday by Rose Hexter, operator of the Breeze theatre. Seeking an adjustment in clearance, and naming the Warner Brothers theatre circuit as an interested party, the action was taken against Warners, Paramount and Twentieth Century-Fox.

The Breeze theater asked that its clearance be revised so that it is seven days after the Savoia and Broadway theatres, Warner circuit houses in the same neighborhood, instead of the present 35 days. According to the complaint, it now plays seven days after the circuit's Earl theatre, also in the same neighborhood, although it has as many seats as the circuit house and its scale of admissions is the same. This is also the first arbitration complaint involving the Warner circuit here, heretofor named in a number of anti-trust suits.

Frank Weil has been selected as arbitrator for the New York Case No. 4 brought by Jack Fields, Cameo theatre, Jersey City against the "Big 5" and naming the Fulton, Apollo and Orient, Skouras theatres. The hearing has been scheduled for April 16th.

Second New Orleans Drive-In Action

The second complaint filed in New Orleans by Charles K. Woolner of Modern Theatre, Inc., operator of the Drive-In theatre, was withdrawn Tuesday just before the hearing was to open. MGM had been named in a "some run" dispute. A settlement was reported. A similar case against Paramount, also on a "some run" question opened April 5th and another hearing on it is to be held April 16th.

Agreement Reached In Buffalo Case

The Buffalo Case No. 2 brought by A. A. Carlson, operator of the Carlson in Mayville, N. Y., was settled this week. The demand had named the "Big 5" and the Jamestown theatre in a clearance dispute. A day and date run had been requested. Terms of the compromise agreement were not announced but it was reported that the clearance over the complainant's theatre was cut down.

At the hearing this week on the first Minneapolis complaint brought by David Ratner of the White Bear, White Bear Lake, Minn., against MGM, Warners, RKO and 20th-Fox it was made known that MGM had settled and Warners and RKO had offered compromise settlements. Only 20th-Fox was reported to be opposing the grant of "some run" which was asked in the arbitration demand. A. A. Karlins was arbitrator. Mr. Ratner expressed dissatisfaction with the terms offered by RKO and Warners.

Arbitration Hearing in New York

David E. Muss, above, attorney for Hilary Theatres, Brooklyn, is announcing a compromise agreement settling the argument. Along the table are Henry Randel, Paramount, Brooklyn; George Stamatis, Apollo, Brooklyn; Theodore Gutman, his attorney; Mr. Muss; Albert Margulies, Hilary; and the interested ear of Julius Henry Cohen, arbitrator. At right, Mr. Cohen, out of breath, checks with J. Noble Braden of the AAA.

Lee Sells Four British Films Here; UA Gets One

Arthur Lee, head of Artlee Pictures, and former head of the now defunct Gaumont British American company, last week announced he had obtained American distribution for four British films. United Artists will release "Sailors Three." Edward Small acquired the rights to that, and to "Come On, George," release of which is not set. Universal will distribute "A Girl Must Live." Supreme Pictures will state-right "Proud Valley."

"Red" Barber Joins Pathe

Red Barber, sports announcer for the Mutual network, has joined RKO Pathe and will serve as consultant in the field of sports as well as narrator. He will also initiate sports subjects, participate in their coverage when his schedule permits, and assist in the preparation of scripts and editing of material.

WPA'S BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE ART FILM FINISHED

Book Sponsored by Film Library First of Three, Annotating 8,600 Entries, 4,000 Films

The Film as Art, first of three projected bibliographical volumes of "The Film Index" which has been in preparation for several years by Writers' Project of the WPA in New York City under the sponsorship of the Musuem of Modern Art Film Library, has been completed and will be published April 20th by the Film Library and H. W. Wilson Company.

The 700-odd page book is divided into two parts: "History and Technique" which is essentially an annotated bibliography of some 8,600 entries of the works of over 2,000 authors, and "Types of Film" wherein references are given to reviews and discussions of over 4,000 motion pictures. Each section of the volume is subdivided into various classifications. This book will be a reference classic.

The bibliography project took its rise from the promotional endeavors of Harold Leonard who engaged the attention and ultimate approval of the Federal Writer's Project. A large staff was assigned and sent toiling through the archives and documents and relics of the screen.

In his foreword Mr. Leonard speaks of the screen as "this most vital and democratic of modern arts."

Democracy of Sources

The acknowledgements of the several prefaces indicate also a vast democracy of sources, contributors and researchers, with quite as diverse a staff as would be anticipated of the made-work project in the New York writing field. The coloration of personal and political viewpoints and pursuits of "the party line," however, appear to have been minimized in the editing. Such color is vastly less in evidence than in the mine run of guide books, and the like issuing under WPA auspices.

The bibliography is the first comprehensive and competent effort of the sort, and certainly no others have been so pretentious in scope or so analytical in treatment. It may be said that the bibliographers appear to have made a much larger effort to make the movies "an art" than the industry has.

In her foreword, Iris Barry, curator of the Film Library, samples and forecasts the adventures to be had in the volume's seven hundred-and-odd packed pages.

"The bibliography quite properly aims at being comprehensive rather than selective," observes Miss Barry, "but it reveals such interesting facts as that Charlie Chaplin has been written more about than any other film personage, with D. W. Griffith closely behind him, Mary Pickford and Sergei Eisenstein running third and fourth.

"Curiously enough," Miss Barry notes, "among the twenty-five films which most frequently have been discussed, no less than twelve are foreign, though these can have meant little to the general public even if they influenced, or imitated, Hollywood technique."

Part I of The Film as Art, "History and Technique" is arranged under the following headings: the world of the film, the screen and the stage, the art of film criticism, aesthetics of the film, pre-screen history, the American film, the foreign film, acting and actors, color, dance, directing and directors, editing, music, photography and writing.

Part II on "Types of Film" is divided into three general groups: the fictional film, the factual film and miscellaneous types. In each division there are a number of sub-headings to cover almost every type of motion picture.

The Film as Art in general covers the period from 1900 through 1935 with certain, selected additions of later works, as for example in the case of documentary films.

Moving Picture World, one of the predecessors of Motion Picture Herald, was used as the principal source of motion picture reviews in the period from 1907 to 1914. Several thousand references to those reviews are included. The title of the whole work, "The Film Index," also is identical with that of one of the early trade papers, another precursor of the Herald.

For the years 1915-20 Photoplay magazine is cited most frequently in review references. From 1920 on most review references are from magazine articles dealing with the "film as art."

The purpose of the WPA Writers' project which assembled the material used in the book was "an effort to organize for reference and study the highly miscellaneous written materials of the motion picture." The published results will be of great value to students and scholars exploring any aspect of the "Film as Art." The amount of work required to gather the material in relation to potential use is so great that such a project most probably could only be financed by a Government interested in making jobs.

"Material for selection was assembled from four principal sources: library card catalogs, standard cumulative indices, specialized film bibliographies, and the files of film journals and unindexed periodicals," it is explained in the preface.

The trade press is singled out for special attention in the introduction: "Among the film's unique resources of historical documentation, the motion picture trade press must be given first place. It can boast of continuous files from the year 1906 . . . such a record is extant in no other art." A footnote explains, "Students of the educational film, among others, will be interested to learn that the Moving Picture World published serially and reissued in book form, classified catalogs of pre-war educational films, with annotations, including large groupings of film adaptations from many literatures."

Keith Stockholders Reelect Directors

All directors of Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation were reelected Wednesday at the annual meeting of stockholders. The board was scheduled to meet Thursday to reelect all officers.

Directors are: George J. Schaefer, Malcolm Kingsberg, Monroe Goldwater, N. Peter Rathvon, L. P. Yandall, Donald K. David and John J. McCaffrey. Officers are: Mr. Schaefer, chairman of the board and president; Mr. Kingsberg, vice-chairman and executive vice-president; Leon Goldberg, treasurer; William F. Whitman, secretary; O. R. McMahon, W. J. Kernan, William Murray and H. E. Newcomb, assistant treasurers, and Louis Joffe and Harry Pimstein, assistant secretaries.

Stockholders also approved an amendment to the company's by-laws which provides for the indemnification of directors and officers for judgments which may be levied against them as a result of suits involving their official acts, when performed in good faith.

Defense Committee Has Second Subject

"Calling All Workers"—the second reel approved by the Motion Picture Committee Cooperating for National Defense, is now ready for distribution, according to an announcement by Joseph Bernhard, chairman of the committee. The first reel was "Power for Defense." These reels are in addition to the series of 12 one-minute recruiting trailers which are being shown on behalf of the War Department.

Mr. Bernhard also said that the number of exhibitors joining in this defense effort had now passed 9,000, which he believes to be the largest number of exhibitors ever before united for any purpose.

"Letters coming to the Committee," said Mr. Bernhard, "indicates that many of the exhibitors who have not yet pledged their cooperation, are not informed concerning the function or the purpose of this voluntary union of theatre men.

No Commercial Film

"I want to make it clear and emphatic that the committee does not handle commercial film. Its review section passes on films prepared by the government on various phases of the defense effort. This group recommends changes or revisions and only when finally acceptable to the committee, are these government films accepted for a showing in the theatres which have pledged cooperation and become members.

"These films are furnished free to the theatres.

"When exhibitors show these films they do so as a patriotic duty.

"While on the positive side, it is the aim of the committee to maintain national morale, to keep the public informed about the various phases of the defense effort, it also attempts to keep the film which it accepts on behalf of its 9,000 members, as attractive as possible, so that the public is entertained, as well as informed."

The Coordinating Committee, which decides whether a picture is to be approved for showing in the theatres, is composed of R. B. Wilby, chairman, A. H. Blank, Charles C. Moskowitz, Spyros Skouras and E. V. Richards.

The following exchanges are handling the distribution of these defense reels:

Cleveland, United Artists; Cincinnati, Universal; Buffalo, United Artists; Albany, Columbia; Pittsburgh, Vitagraph; New York, Loew's; Boston, Columbia; New Haven, Vitagraph; Philadelphia, Vitagraph; Washington, Universal; Atlanta, Paramount; Charlotte, United Artists; Memphis, Loew's; New Orleans, Paramount; Dallas, RKO; Oklahoma City, RKO; Chicago, Paramount; Detroit, Loew's; Indianapolis, Universal; Milwaukee, 20th Century-Fox; Minneapolis, Universal; Kansas City, 20th Century-Fox; St. Louis, Vitagraph; Des Moines, Columbia, Omaha, Columbia; Los Angeles, 20th Century-Fox; Denver, 20th Century-Fox; Portland, Paramount; Salt Lake City, Loew's; San Francisco, RKO; Seattle, RKO.

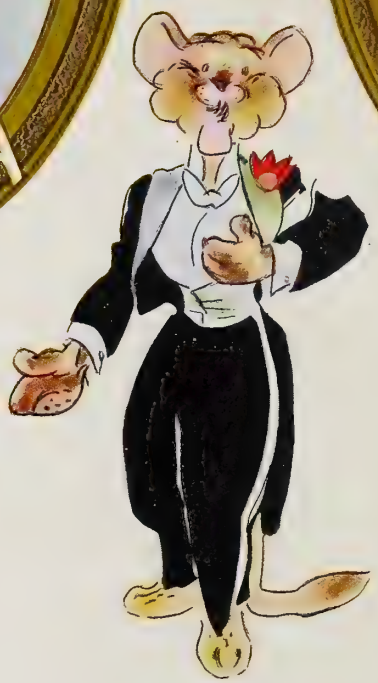
Pal Contract Extended

Paramount has extended the contract of George Pal, producing "Puppetoons" for the company, for the new season, when he will make another series of six. He has completed two of the present series.

Fleishman Celebrates Anniversary

Sam Fleishman, manager of the Rex theatre in Portland, Ore., since its opening, is celebrating his 25th anniversary.

Marcus Joins CBS



William Marcus has been added to the Columbia Broadcasting System staff to handle television publicity.

$10,000,000 MERCHANDISING PLAN FOR TELEVISION SETS LAUNCHED

Survey of Broadcast Facilities by Department Store Chain Is Preliminary to Order for 50,000 Home Receiving Sets

Television on the Pacific coast this week took a $10,000,000 step into the future, in the fields of manufacturing and merchandising receivers. Upon results of a survey of department store outlets currently being conducted in Los Angeles and in Chicago, New York, San Francisco, Philadelphia and Boston, will rest an initial order to be given one of the large manufacturers of receivers for a possible 50,000 sets. The survey, undertaken for the May Department Stores Company by Tom May, executive vice-president, and Gerald Fitzgerald, in charge of the company's television activities, will determine the reception possibilities in those key cities which already have television facilities.

The order, of course, and subsequent ones, will be subject to defense needs priorities, and is seen as an industrial "cushion" against the day when, with the cessation of hostilities, industry and manpower are being demobilized.

Visualizing tremendous merchandising possibilities in the field of home reception, the May Company is going to other outlets with its survey, since cities such as Akron, Baltimore, Cleveland, Denver and St. Louis, in which it also operates stores, are not equipped with transmitters.

To Sell for $285

Specifications for the set for which a $10,000,000 order will be given at the completion of the survey, if timing is felt to be right, call for a combination of television reception, Amplitude Modulation and Frequency Modulation radio reception, and provision for the reception of color television, already demonstrated by the Columbia Broadcasting System in New York. A 12 inch screen will be used, to receive all channels in the areas in which the set will be used, with factors of early obsolesence eliminated, since the screen will receive video signals of from 441 to 605 lines, unless the Federal Communications Commission standardizes the number of lines.

It is understood that a plan will be put in work to finance the manufacture of the sets, when the time to start production is seen as ripe both in terms of defense requirements and public consumption. The sets are to retail for approximately $285.00 apiece.

Meanwhile, with only 500 receivers in Southern California, transmission activity remains in the "make ready" stage, with the exception of the Don Lee station, W6XAO. That station is now completing work on its new $100,000 transmitter atop Mount Lee, and has a power range of 10,000 watts for its video signal and 150 watts for the aural signal. Off the air since last September the station resumed operations Easter morning.

Granted permission to operate an experimental station last November, the May Company has requested the FCC for permission to suspend operations. Given call letters W6XMC, the company had channel 12 assigned to it. The Don Lee station, W6XAO, has channel one; Howard Hughes' Productions division of the Hughes Tool Company has channel two, with call letters W6XHH. Mr. Hughes' concern has recently acquired a mountain site for transmission purposes, but has received permission from the FCC to delay the start of operations until January, 1942.

Channel four is held by Paramount Pictures' Television Productions, with experimental call letters W6XYZ. Activity is still confined to preparation, and remains under the direction of Paul Raibourn, of the Paramount home office. Mr. Raibourn is treasurer of Paramount Pictures and treasurer and director of the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories.

Earl C. Anthony, Inc., automobile distributors and operators of Los Angeles radio stations KEI and KECA, have been assigned channel six, with call letters W6XEA. They are still in the early stages of preparation for experimental telecasting.

The Columbia Broadcasting System on the Pacific Coast has channel eight, with call letters W6XCB, but its telecasting activities have been confined to the east with the exception of a demonstration installation for tourists.

Rounding out the coast's participation in the field is LeRoy's, a jewelry concern, which has channel 13 and call letters W6XIJ. The company is now determining a site for construction of transmission equipment.

RCA Invites Theatre Operators To Inspect Large Screen Television

RCA-NBC, No. 1 potentiality in telecasting, is about to bring its new wide-screen theatre television to the direct attention of motion picture exhibitors as future television equipment customers. The company is inviting circuit and independent theatre operators to the first regular theatre demonstration of television in the United States to hear and see the Joe Louis - Abe Simon prizefight telecast on May 9th.

According to present plans of Radio Corporation of America, the demonstrations for exhibitors will be held in the New Yorker theatre on Broadway, where the RCA large-screen television system has been installed and undergoing tests for months.

The first experimental showing of the RCA 15 by 20 foot theatre television was held in January for members of the Federal Communications Commission, the National Television Systems Committee and the press. (See Motion Picture Herald for February 1, 1941, pages 30 and 31.)

Television authorities generally consider that the future of the art lies in the theatre almost as much as in the home. Special programs, not available on home receivers, will be sent by wire or air to theatres equipped with television projectors, according to present opinion. It is expected that some of the larger motion picture theatres will install television projectors within the next few years for use on special occasions.

The RCA company and other groups interested in theatre television may be expected to be ready to discuss price, possible delivery date, operating expenses, types of programs and other details about theatre television shortly, if the FCC gives the "green light" to commercial television.

On Friday of last week a special private test of the RCA theatre projector was held. The Baer-Nova prizefight and other bouts were shown. Observers reported that the pictures were of satisfactory brilliance for theatres and appeared to be more real than newsreel shots of the same fight.

Allen B. DuMont, head of the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, Paramount television affiliate, last week said in commenting on the possibilities of early commercialization of television: "I think that the Government will allow full commercialization at some time in the future, perhaps three to six months ahead."

Balaban & Katz, which asked for immediate commercialization at the March 20-21-24 television hearing in Washington, has been authorized to construct another experimental television station in Chicago to operate on the 384-396 mc. band. The special relay transmitter will operate on 10 watts.

"Fantasia" in Minneapolis

Walt Disney's "Fantasia" will play in Minneapolis, at the Minnesota Theatre, beginning April 12. Sound equipment this week was being installed. The house has 4,000 seats.

WRITERS' CONGRESS PLEDGED TO RESIST 'DRIVE TO WAR, FASCISM'

Stewart Issues Call to Session in New York June 6th; Urges Use of Documentaries in Film Industry Pan-American Plans

To hear its "call" to the fourth annual Writers' Congress, the League of American Writers, variously characterized as "pink," and other colors, summoned press and writers to a cocktail party amid the Gay Nineties splendor of the Murray Hill Hotel in New York on April 4th. Donald Ogden Stewart, screenwriter, and the organization's national president and fourth-term leader of the Hollywood chapter, read the League's summons to "progessive" writers to attend the congress in New York on June 6th. The names of film, stage and radio writers were numerous among the 120 initial signatures to the call.

"In this hour of crisis," clarioned Mr. Stewart, "conscious of our responsibilities as writers and our pledge to help preserve the American heritage of freedom and democratic culture, we issue this call. . . ."

Declaring, "Today we must ask whether the present policy of the Administration and the program of big business are not leading us toward war and fascism in the name of resistance to war and fascism," the call listed a seven point program for the Congress.

The League calls on "fellow writers and our associates in the related cultural crafts" to consider methods of resisting "the drive toward war and reaction," how to aid persecuted writers in other lands, contribute to inter-American cultural exchange, enrich democratic literature, restore WPA cultural projects and combat restrictions on the writing craft.

Stewart Prime Mover

Mr. Stewart, who won the 1940 Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences award for the best screenplay for his work on "The Philadelphia Story," has been active in the League since its inception four years ago. He is largely responsible for recruiting a membership of several hundred in Los Angeles and founded a writers' school in Hollywood. He has defended the League from attacks branding it as left wing, asserting that its prime purpose is the defense of literary freedom of speech.

"Wherever the right to speak is lost we too are the losers," he declared, quoting the League's call. "Wherever civil liberties are abridged, our stories, poems, plays, essays, and books are abridged. The attacks on trade unions, political minorities, and education are attacks on our basic convictions as writers and as citizens."

The seven point peroration of the call asks the league members to attend the June Congress to consider:

"(1) How best as writers can we resist the drive toward war and reaction which threatens our democratic culture?

"(2) What can we do to extend further help to persecuted writers of other lands?

"(3) What can we do to restore the WPA cultural projects and to transform them into permanent Peoples Art Projects vital to the nation's strength?

"(4) What new technical developments in the various forms of writing need to be analyzed and evaluated?

"(5) What measures can we take to combat and surmount the growing restrictions on our work as honest craftsmen?

"(6) How can we contribute to a genuine cultural interchange between the peoples of the Americas?

"(7) How can we enrich America's imperishable democratic literature and extend its audience?

". . . The attacks on trade unions, political minorities and education are attacks on our basic convictions as writers and as citizens." . . .
DONALD OGDEN STEWART

Leading chapters of the League are in New York and Hollywood. Mr. Stewart, who has worked on screenplays for MGM, Paramount, RKO, United Artists and others, has been president of the coast branch of the league for four years. He founded and is active in the direction of the writers' school which the league maintains at its headquarters, 1717 Vine Street. Classes are conducted in the evening by members of Hollywood's writing colony for aspiring authors. Current classes include approximately 75 hopefuls from the studios, drug stores, and byways of Hollywood who are enlisted in short story, poetry, screenplay, drama, novel and other literary courses conducted by Mr. Stewart and others.

Faculty Members

The faculty includes Mr. Stewart; John Howard Lawson, author of "Four Sons," "Earthbound" and other Twentieth Century-Fox films; Viola Brothers Shore, RKO and 20th Century-Fox writer; Dalton Trumbo, Irwin Shaw, Michael Blankford, and visiting lecturers from the screenwriting fold who discuss their literary techniques and formulae.

In addition to operating the writers' school the Hollywood chapter has taken a leading part in raising almost $35,000 to aid exiled writers, and in collecting $25,000 for medical aid to Spain. It publishes the League's monthly magazine "The Clipper" and has printed a number of pamphlets written by members. Latest publication is a 100,000 copy edition of Dalton Trumbo's "Harry Bridges, a discussion of the latest effort to deport Civil Liberties and the rights of American Labor." Mr. Stewart describes the booklet, written by his collaborator on such screenplays as "Kitty Foyle," "Philadelphia Story," and author of originals and adaptations for RKO, MGM, and Fox, as an "American 'J'Accuse.'"

Among screenwriters who signed the 1941 call to the League congress and active in the League's Hollywood chapter are: Leopold Atlas, Marc Blitzstein, Millen Brand, Vera Caspary, Edward Chodorof, Jerome Chodorof, Lester Cole, Joy Davidman, Arnaud d'Usseau, Edward Eliscu, Joseph Fields, Morton Grant, Dashiell Hammett, Paul Jarrico, Gordon Kahn, Lester Koenig, John Howard Lawson, Albert Maltz, Robert Meltzer, Dudley Nichols, Maurice Rapf, Robert Rossen, Jerry Sackheim, Waldo Salt, John Sanford, Viola Brothers Shore, Donald Ogden Stewart, and Orson Welles.

Seeks Pan-American Goodwill

Declaring that a general cultural interchange between the peoples of the Americas is one of the chief items in the League's current program, Mr. Stewart discussed Hollywood efforts to woo Latin American goodwill via the motion picture division of the office of coordinator of commercial and cultural relations between the American Republics. In his opinion it is not enough to send stars on personal appearance tours, and to make pictures depicting only the music and gayety of South America.

"Let the people speak," Mr. Stewart said, advocating extensive use of the documentary film to show Latin America to Americans. "Let's tell what we're like, with documentary pictures, and go to South America to film not what they want us to have, but to really study what South America can contribute to the hemisphere from its resources and cultural background," he recommended.

He urged that the Nelson Rockefeller committee, through John Hay Whitney and the motion picture division, sponsor documentary film studies by Paul Strand, Joris Ivens, Robert Flaherty and other members of the Association of Documentary Producers.

Censorship Looms For Delaware

Senator Carl McGuigan's bill banning obscene films, photographs, writings, drawings, and other materials, has passed in the Delaware Senate, unanimously. Penalties provided are fines from $250 to $2,500, and/or imprisonment from 30 days to three years. For each subsequent conviction, guilty persons would be fined between $500 to $5,000, and/or imprisonment of from six months to five years.

The City Council of Bessemer, Alabama, last week resolved for a film censor board, to be appointed later by it. The ordinance was passed at the request of the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Publicists Art Show

The Screen Publicists Guild of New York will hold an art exhibition at the Barbizon-Plaza Gallery, in New York, beginning April 20th and continuing through April 30th. All publicity, advertising and exploitation men and women employed in the home offices of the major film companies, are eligible to exhibit work. Independent individual entries will be supplemented by art work associated with the publicizing of motion pictures.

U. S.-CANADA EXCHANGE PROPOSAL SEEN AID TO THEATRE GROSSES

Plan to Equalize Currency Would Remove Tourist Restrictions and Restore Free Travel Across U. S. Border

The passage of the Lend-Lease bill, last month, may have widespread Canadian border box office effect if a recent suggestion from Washington quarters is entertained in Congress.

Certain factors in the Capital have advanced the suggestion that, in order to facilitate trade matters consequent on the bill, the Canadian and American dollars be fixed at par, or further, that a mutual currency be adopted for the betterment of wartime trade relations. The Canadian dollar is posted at about 87-88 cents.

So far, in the Dominion, restrictions have aimed at the curtailment of Canadian non-war spending in Canada or the United States, except for business and health. Canadians are limited as to the amount of money they can spend on the U. S. side of the border, if they can get permission to spend at all. Extra taxes have been levied on American goods and consideration is known to have been given to a complete embargo on all but vital war imports from the United States.

If the Washington suggestion takes form, U. S. film industry will benefit from a Canadian return to free international travel and spending. Border theatres, hard-hit when regular Canadian patrons were no longer freely admitted to cross and recross the boundry line, will experience better grosses. New York City stage and screen houses, particularly, will benefit from the proposed new order.

As part of the present Ottawa policy, the ten per cent premium on American funds has proved a most effective barrier to "luxury" spending by Canadians. Ottawa may be loathe to see it go up in spite of the implied compliment of having the Canadian dollar placed on a level with American currency.

Canadians Aid Fund

During the period from March 21st to April 5th Canadian theatre exchanges, circuits and independent exhibitors assisted the joint War Services appeal for Funds. The YMCA, Canadian Legion, Salvation Army and the Knights of Columbus combined their campaigns for funds to carry on work among Canadian armed forces.

Theatres throughout the Dominion theatres donated screen time to special trailers produced by Associated Screen Studios, and a crew spent several days at Camp Borden in Ontario shooting sequences of life in the canteens maintained by the different War Services, illustrating the comforts and entertainment provided for the Canadian Army.

Wolfe Cohen, Canadian district manager for Warners, who recently returned to Toronto from a Canadian-wide tour, reported that theatre conditions throughout the Dominion were generally better than a year ago and in some situations a 5 per cent improvement could be noted. Although some of the smaller centers have been affected by men leaving for training, the cities have felt increased business owing to the influx of men in most centers, he said.

The Warner Canadian office has instituted a plan to distribute 16 mm. prints to Army camps on a non-profit basis.

According to the Canadian Film Board of Trade, Dominion film theatres as of March 1st, numbered 1,349 with an aggregate seating capacity of 702,977, a gain in theatres in the past year of 36. Canadian film theatres operating are 1,292, with 57 closed as compared to the 1,272 theatres operating at the same time the year previous. Dominion towns with theatres total 826. Of the operating houses 334 are open one and two days a week, 108, three and four days a week, and 907, six and seven days.

A breakdown of the figures follows:

Distribution Center	No. of Theaters	Total Seating Capacity	Closed	Open
VANCOUVER, B. C.....	111	67,195	2	109

The United Amusement Corp., Ltd., owner of a chain of Montreal and Province of Quebec film theatres, reports that the net profit for the 12 months ended December 31st, after payment of all operating expenses, board interest and discount, and other interest, and after providing for depreciation and Dominion and Provincial income taxes, amounted to $93,788, equivalent to $1.16 per share on 80,829 outstanding no-par-value shares of the corporation. This is a decrease of only $852 as compared with the net profit for 1939, which amounted to $94,640, or $1.17 per share.

Famous Players Canadian Corp. is arranging to hold its annual convention of all theatre managers at Toronto in May, before the expiration of the five-year contract of N. L. Nathanson, president. The convention was cancelled last year because of the war. In previous years the annual meeting was held at the end of July.

The Nova Scotia Board of Censors, in its annual report to the provincial assembly, revealed an all-time record for attendance volume and board fee collections for 1940. The total number of persons attending theatres during the year was 8,079,958, representing an increase of 1,517,713, over the total of 1939. Gross collections by the board were $234,247, an increase of $46,608 over the total of 1939. The 1939 figure involved new records for attendance and collections. During 1940, a total of 1,899 pictures were passed by the board, with a total film footage of 5,500,000. The increased attendances at the theatres were not localized but prevailed everywhere in the province, including the mainland and Cape Breton Island.

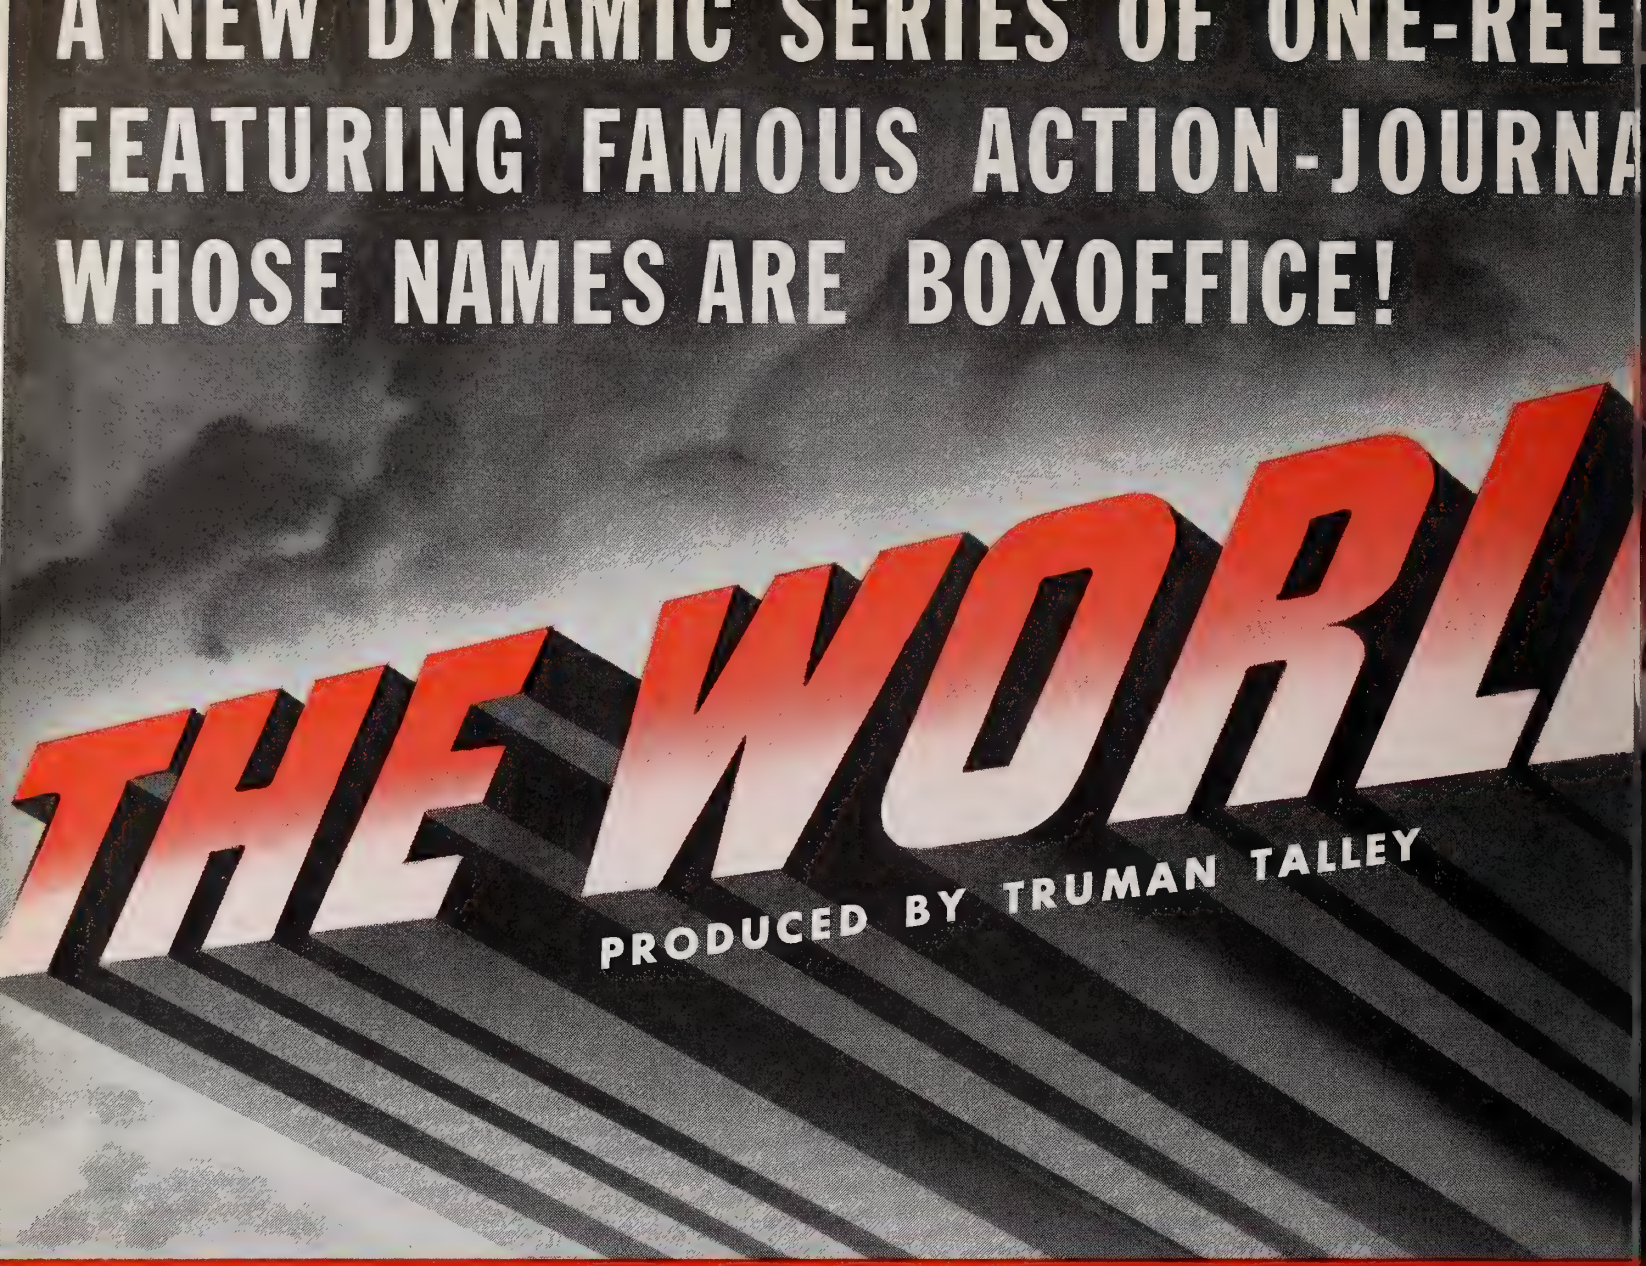
Many phases of the radio field remain at a standstill in Canada for the present time at least, although Dominion radio executives are keeping a watchful eye on developments in American television, commercial frequency modulation, commercial short wave broadcasting and facsimile broadcasting.

With the exception of commercial short wave broadcasting, these fields are closed to Canadian private enterprise. There are eight privately-owned and one Canadian Broadcasting Company short wave stations licensed. These are fed mainly by the programs carried by the broadcast channel stations with which they are affiliated. Special short wave commercial programs, as now carried by a number of United States short wave stations, are not yet carried on the Canadian stations, mainly because there is no commercial tie-up with markets in such countries where these Canadian short wave stations are heard. There is a good chance for Canadian travel advertising on such short wave stations which are heard in various parts of the United States.

The only FM licenses issued to date have been to three manufacturers of receivers, and one to the Canadian Marconi Company for a transmitter to build near Montreal for experimental transmissions in conjunction with the CBC.

Censorship Change Urged

A "comprehensive revision of censorship," was used in the Nova Scotia legislature by L. W. Fraser of Halifax, lead of the opposition. Consideration was promised by A. S. MacMillan of Halifax, provincial premier, who agreed "the trend in pictures is moving in the wrong direction." Fraser, in contending more effective consership is needed, said theatre patrons had little to say about the kind of entertainment presented. He said "Method and approach of censoring movies should be overhauled. While in recent years motion pictures have imposed their own censorship, they have now reached a phase in which they seek to avoid restrictions which they previously placed on themselves." It was charged that "improper pictures had been shown in this province, and parents are showing concern over the situation," by J. J. Cameron, of Liverpool, another legislator. It was claimed by Mr. Fraser that "present censorship methods are geared too much from the point of view of the movie producers and at the expense of the wishes of many moviegoers."



Altec, Butterfield Contract

W. S. Butterfield Theatres has renewed contracts with Altec Service Corp. for 96 houses in Detroit and other Michigan cities. F. C. Dickely negotiated the deal for Altec.

"MR. SMITH" CALLED BAD INFLUENCE

The showings below the Rio Grande of Columbia's "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," are bothering the United States State Department, a Congressman, Louis C. Rabaut, representative from Michigan, charged in a House debate last week on the Department's appropriation bill for next year. Mr. Rabaut demanded the film industry watch its product, to "preserve at least the good-will of the few remaining countries with whom we have cultural relations." The appropriations of the Department, reported to the House by the latter's appropriations committee, carried $545,000 for furthering of cultural relations. Of this, $6,750 is for the Department's film program, $20,000 for scoring in Spanish and Portugese films of the Interior Department.

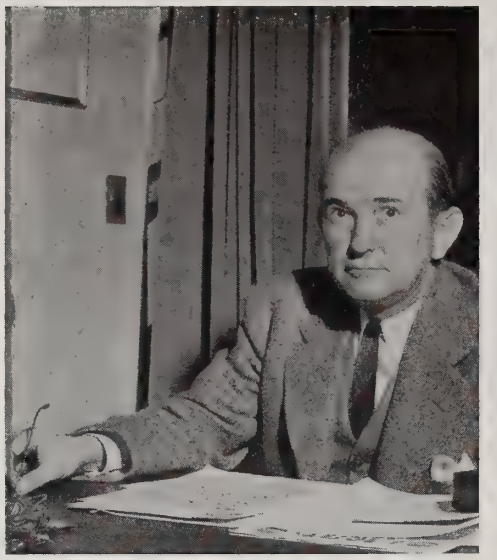
8 Films Planned By Pan-American Good Will Bureau

Kenneth McGowan, Twentieth Century Fox producer, who obtained a leave of absence for one year to serve the United States as executive in charge of documentary films under Nelson Rockefeller's division of Cultural and Commercial Relations between the Latin American Republics, established himself in new offices at New York's Museum of Modern Art last Wednesday, April 2nd, and on Monday announced production plans for two films on this country and six on Latin-America, and the appointment of a staff.

Scripts, production considerations, and other details were to be worked out this week and next, Mr. McGowan stated. The films will augment those his office is working on for distribution here and in Latin-America detailing to the inhabitants of the two continents the folkways of their neighbors. These latter films, he explained, are those extant, from the non-theatrical and from the organized industry fields. The department's first task is to collate these, and then to make them suitable for distribution through the use of special sound-tracks in Spanish, Portugese, and English, and perhaps through further cutting and rearranging of sequences.

16mm Production Only

The department will stick to 16mm, Mr. McGowan said; perhaps even reducing extant 35mm product suitable for intercontinental exchange. At first production will be by recognized documentary film producers. Later, he said, the department may organize a production staff.



Mr. McGowan said he would appreciate the assistance of amateur cameramen who have traveled in Latin-America with 16mm cameras. He needs their footage, he said, and every effort is being made to contact such persons.

Under appropriation from Congress, the films to be made here for distribution in Latin-America and those selected from existing stocks and re-edited, will be distributed through our embassies, the latter supplying projection units, and, in certain instances, distributing films through the recognized local booking agencies. Films from Latin-America will be distributed in this country through existing non-theatrical agencies.

Mr. McGowan's staff, appointed this week, includes: Luis Bunuel, Spanish author, director, and film producer, Gustavo Duran, Spanish composer; Walter Brooks, publicist in this country's film industry; and Norbert Lusk, film critic and former editor of Picture Play magazine. The first two named will edit and translate sound tracks of films for Latin-America. Additionally, Mr. Bunuel will assist Mr. McGowan in production, and Mr. Duran will compose and arrange music. Mr. Brooks and Mr. Lusk will review films available for use in North and South America.

Duffus Appointed

Carlton Duffus, MGM exploitation man, this week was appointed to the publicity department of the Defense Savings staff of the Treasury Department, in Washington, assisting Howard Dietz, the company's advertising and publicity chief, who has taken charge of the staff's motion picture activities in a forthcoming issue of defense bonds and stamps.

KENNETH McGOWAN, motion picture production coordinator in the Pan-American campaign.

Erpi and Western Electric Elect

At the annual meeting of the directors of Electrical Research Products, held in New York Tuesday, T. Brooke Price resigned, effective May 1st as General Counsel and Walter Brown was appointed to succeed him.

At the meeting of the stockholders of Western Electric Company, ERPI parent, also held in New York, Tuesday, Walter Brown of Huntington, W. Va., was elected a director. At the subsequent meeting of the directors on the same day he was elected a vice-president and appointed general counsel, effective May 1st.

The stockholders' meeting of Western Electric also elected as a director Charles J. Whipple, president of Hibbard, Spencer, Bartlett and Company, Chicago.

Hays to Coast On "The Outlaw"

Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, arrived on the Coast at midweek for business conferences, some of which were to be with Joseph I. Breen, head of the Production Code Administration, and Howard Hughes, producer of "The Outlaw" in connection with a PCA seal for the film.

Scheduled for March 21st release by Twentieth Century-Fox, the picture has been reported delayed because the Code Administration refused to issue a certificate. Mr. Hays' task is said to be the arranging of an agreement between the PCA and Mr. Hughes on changes which would make an appeal from the PCA to the MPPDA board unnecessary.

Altec, Interstate Sign Contract

Nat Williams has appointed Altec Service to provide repair-replacement service for projection equipment in his five Interstate Enterprises theatres in southern Georgia, L. W. McClung negotiated for Altec.

New Brandt House

The Brandt circuit, of New York, will erect a 600-seat theatre in Bayside, Queens, that city, they revealed this week. The structure will contain stores and a bowling alley. Work was to begin shortly.

Review Board Adds Members

Twelve new members have been named to the National Advisory Council of the National Board of Review by James Shelley Hamilton, executive director, to bring local motion picture guidance groups throughout the country into closer contact with the main office in New York. The new members are leaders in the field of motion picture study in the territories they represent.

Dr. William Lewin of Newark, N. J., has been active in the organization of photoplay appreciation in American schools and colleges since 1928, and is chairman of the motion picture committee of the department of secondary education of the National Education Association. Dr. Campton Bell, faculty member of the University of Denver, is president of the Denver Motion Picture Council, Mrs. Richard McClure, president of the Better Films Council of Chicago, and Mrs. Frank A. Linzel is head of the Motion Picture Council in Washington, D.C.

Other members named to the board are Mrs. Clarence Echols, director of the Motion Picture Council in Dallas, Texas; Mr. Harold M. Turney, chairman of the department of drama, Los Angeles Junior College; Mr. W. W. Whittinghill, director of the department of visual and radio education of the Detroit Board of Education, and former president of the Greater Detroit Motion Picture Council; Mrs. Lewis P. Addams, president of the Brooklyn Motion Picture Council; Mrs. Samuel B. Cuthbert, former motion picture chairman of the Allegheny County Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Arthur D. Kerwin, president of the Greater Detroit Motion Picture Council, and Mrs. Charles W. Swift, president of the Elmira Community Motion Picture Council.

24-Hour Policy Set

The News theatre, owned and operated by William Goldman in downtown Philadelphia devoted to newsreels and feature picture revivals, will be the second house in the city to go on a 24-hour continuous policy. Some six years ago, Warners instituted an all-night operating policy for the circuit's Family theatre, which was destroyed by fire Sunday. Special added attractions for the after midnight showings will be inaugurated at the News, with the policy expected to get under way by Easter.

RKO Circuit Staff Dances

Home office workers and theatre employes of the RKO circuit will hold their eighth annual ball Monday night, April 14th, at the Hotel Astor, New York. In charge of festivities are Isadore Berger, Lester Jacobi, William Abrams, Joseph Quinn, Jack Cahn, John Lyons, Bernard Drexler, John Harness, J. T. Dolan, Harry Mandel and W. B. England.

Leave for Durbin Wedding

Nate J. Blumberg, Universal president, and J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board, will leave for the Coast on Tuesday to attend the wedding of Deanna Durbin to Vaughan Paul on Friday, April 18th. They will remain at the studio for production conferences.

MAJORS UP INTO MOUNTAINS, DOWN UNDERGROUND TO SHOW NEW FILMS

Warners Show "Great Lie" to Press in Mountain Town; "Underground" Set for Carlsbad Caverns; "Hopkins" Opens

The selection of locales for building national press, wire, pictorial and radio attention for new product is fast become a bizarre business—now running all the way from mountain tops to underground tunnels, far up and down from the world premiere exhibitions put on in recent months in small towns to the accompaniment of contingents of press writers moved by train and plane into little Main Streets from Broadway and Hollywood and cities in between.

This week Warner Brothers sent an army of press folk far into the hills of New Hampshire, there to unveil, to the tunes of local brass bands, the latest Bette Davis picture, "The Great Lie" (showman's review on page 37, photos on page 11.)

At the same time the same management was laying plans to go deep into the world-famous Carlsbad Caverns in New Mexico, sometime late in May, for the world premiere of "Underground," now filming at Burbank. Warners say that many of the caves in this underground place are larger than any theatre in the world, and that goes, too, for the Rockefeller's big Music Hall in New York.

All-Out for Davis

The usually placid village of Littleton, N. H., with a population of 4,500, played host last weekend to some 10,500 guests from eastern cities in a two-day celebration of Bette Davis' birthday and the world premiere of Warner's "The Great Lie," in which she is starred.

Early Saturday morning a special trainload of writers, radio commentators, news-reel men and columnists from New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Providence, Washington, Pittsburgh, Baltimore and other cities, arrived to give the opening complete national radio, newsreel, magazine and newspaper coverage. The contingent of visitors was greeted at the station by the town's leading citizens accompanied by the Littleton Band, the Boy Scouts in marching regalia, the Sea Scouts in dress uniforms, the local police force and CCC boys from nearby camps. Large banners proclaiming the celebration were strung across the main street, with placards and streamers attached to every light and telephone pole to lend a Mardi Gras atmosphere to the town.

Following the official greeting the 75 visiting writers, reporters, commentators and camera men, visited Cannon Mountain where an old-fashioned New England sugaring off party was held. The group then rode the Cannon Mountain Aerial Tramway to the top of the mountain from where they viewed the neighboring "Old Man of the Mountain." A ski exhibition was held atop the the mountain before the party took off to Franconia where they were guests of Miss Davis and her husband, Arthur Farnsworth, at a cocktail party at Iron Mine Inn.

In the evening a torchlight motorcade wound through the roads of Franconia Notch to the Premier Theatre where the house's 786 reserved seats were booked far in advance. A special program and broadcast over the Colonial network and Mutual hookup was conducted at the theatre before the showing of the film.

Following the screening, a grand ball was held in the Littleton Town Hall with Governor Robert O. Blood of New Hampshire, and Miss Davis leading the grand march. The opening of the ball was broadcast over an NBC national hookup.

Set by S. Charles Einfeld, advertising and publicity director, and Mort Blumenstock, eastern advertising and publicity director, who were both on the coast, the promotion was the first big opening executed entirely by Warner's eastern publicity office. Mitchell Rawson, as head of the party, was assisted by William Blumberg, Bob Williams and Phil Engle as advance men; Lee Blumberg, working out of Boston in advance; Ralph Budd on transportation; Larry Golub, on fan magazines, and Sid Rechetnik on trade papers.

Newspaper, magazine and radio representatives invited from New York included:

Bosley Crowther, New York Times; Lee Mortimer, Mirror; Frank Farrell, World-Telegram; Archer Winston, New York Post; Lionel Moise, King Features; Leo Dolin, International News Service; L. L. Stevenson, Bell Syndicate; George Tucker, Associated Press; Joan Younger, United Press; Judy Chase, Life; Kenneth McCabe, Sunday Mirror; Wade Nichols, Guide Group; Lester Grady, Silver Screen; Mary Margaret McBride, Stella Karn and Jane Divine, Columbia Broadcasting System; Evelyn Van Horn, Dell Publication; Mary Mason, National Broadcasting Co.; May C. Kelley and Elizabeth Lockwood of Ideal Publications; Sarah Corpening, Fawcett Publications; Ann Marsters, Chicago Herald American; Dick Fortune, Pittsburgh Press; and Peter Kalischer, Glamour.

"Sis Hopkins" Premiered

With the customary Hollywood trappings and with a galaxy of Hollywood personalities headed by Judy Canova, nearly 6,000 persons crowded into the Fox Theatre in St. Louis to see the world premiere of Republic's "Sis Hopkins," Friday night, April 4th. (Review on page 36, pictures on page 11.)

It was the first world premiere in St. Louis but not the last, according to Herbert Yates, Republic's chairman of the board, who was in the city for the occasion. He said the company's "Down Mexico Way" would be premiered there some time in August.

Radio broadcasts, interviews and meetings with local dignitaries were held prior to the opening. Besides Miss Canova, the star of the film, the Hollywood delegation included Lois Ranson, Ona Munson, Jerry Colonna, John Wayne, James Ellison, Mary Beth Hughes, Don "Red Ryder" Barry. Dick Weber and James Riley of St. Louis University escorted Miss Canova and Miss Hughes to the opening and Mr. Wayne escorted Miss Geraldine Forrestal, co-ed of Washington University in St. Louis.

Proceeds from the premiere are to be turned over to the Greek War Relief Campaign.

William Saal, Republic's special representative, who handled the campaign, had 10,000 two-sheets and 500 24-sheets within a two-hundred mile range of St. Louis, and 10,000 display cards of various styles in shop windows, street cars, buses, railroad stations and bus depots.

The radio exploitation for the picture was said to have set a new high in spot announcements with more than 400 in all over six St. Louis stations, and one in East St. Louis. The campaign included star appearances and other special programs on all the stations.

The advertising campaign for the picture included all the St. Louis newspapers and 150 suburban and rural publications in the adjoining territory. The St. Louis teaser campaign had been in progress four weeks in advance of the opening and totaled ten full pages.

Mayor Dickmann of St. Louis proclaimed Friday, April 4th, "Sis Hopkins" day in that city and in more than 35 other cities within a radius of 125 miles.

To Mexico, Too

On April 12th to 14th Mexico will hold its Motion Picture Festival at which all major studios will participate and at the same time James Roosevelt will hold the premiere of "Pot o' Gold." Each major studio plans to hold the premiere of one big film in that country to further cement the Mexican-U. S. friendship.

Y. Frank Freeman, president of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, announced last week the industry has accepted the invitation of President Avila Camocho of Mexico to participate in the film festival.

John Hay Whitney, director of the Motion Picture Division of the office of the United States Coordinator of Commercial and Cultural Relations Between the American Republics, plans to accompany the Hollywood delegation, to be sponsored jointly by the major studios, and is cooperating on plans. Studio representatives, stars and players and newspaper men will attend.

The Hollywood preview became the latest American institution to assume a military atmosphere as Paramount announced plans recently for previewing the new Bob Hope-Dorothy Lamour conscription comedy, "Caught in the Draft," at Fort Ord, Cal., an Army camp about 350 miles from Hollywood.

The preview which will take place about May 1st at the home station of the Army's Seventh Division, will be the occasion for an all-day demonstration of Army life and training for a trainload of film stars, newspaper correspondents and Hollywood celebrities. Major General Joseph Stillwell, commanding officer at Fort Ord, will be in charge of the occasion.

According to the tentative plans, three military bands will greet the Hollywood delegation at the train, after which the visitors will witness artillery firing, infantry maneuvers and drilling of picked troops. The film will be previewed at the two post theatres simultaneously, to be followed by a reception at the officers' club at the Presidio in Monterey.

HERMAN LEVY DEFENDS EXHIBITOR PROBLEMS

Under the title, "More Sinned Against", in the current issue of the National Board of Review magazine, Herman M. Levy, executive secretary of the Connecticut MPTO, has written a defense of the exhibitor's problems. If the exhibitor is "a chronic complainer, who goes to California and Florida each year on his losses", Mr. Levy believes he has just cause. For the "better films" groups he points out that exhibitors have little opportunity to be experimentalists, competition being what it is, and that actual figures show the largest number of cancellations, as a result of popular reaction, for pictures considered as "class".

sentatives and five hundred exhibitors have so far attended the national sneak-previews of "The Devil and Miss Jones" held in the theatres in RKO exchange cities. The newspaper and theatre delegations have been guests of the local branch managers and field men and came from the key and nearby cities for the one-night theatre showings at regular admission prices.

Charles Coburn, featured in the cast, left for Atlanta by plane from Hollywood for a personal appearance there with the picture at the Fox theatre.

"The Devil and Miss Jones" is now having its world premiere run at the Paramount, Beach and Sheridan theatres in Miami, Fla., It will have approximately 150 Easter Week engagements.

"Serenade" Trade Showings

Columbia, in preparing to trade show "Penny Serenade," starring Cary Grant and Irene Dunn, is calling into New York its exploitation staff from the field and a large number of its branch managers.

The trade screening will be held for the press and exhibitors in New York next Tuesday at the Astor theatre at 11:00 A.M. Exhibitors in Greater New York, New Jersey and nearby cities have been invited, as well as newspaper, trade and fan publication representatives.

The screening will be followed by a series of meetings within a few days to formulate plans for an extensive advertising, publicity and exploitation campaign.

Arrangements for the meeting are being handled by David A. Lipton, Frank McGrann and Hortense Schorr.

More than 100 exhibitors, clergymen and reporters attended a private trade showing of "Men of Boys Town" on Sunday, April 6th, at the Rialto theatre, Lewistown, Pa. A radio transcription which included the voices of Father Flanagan, Spencer Tracy, and the Boys Town Choir was reproduced before the screening. John W. Wilson, baritone, sang an "Ave Maria" as a prologue to the feature itself.

A buffet luncheon was served after the showing. Arrangements were in charge of Charles Baron, Pittsburgh exploiteer, and Paul O. Klingler, manager of the Lewistown Rialto theatre.

Motion picture critics and reviewers from Bridgeport, New Haven, Waterbury, Meriden and Hartford, Conn., in addition to those from Springfield and Worcester, Mass., joined with theatre managers in a junket to New Haven for a special luncheon and screening of "Men of Boys Town." The junket was sponsored by Harry F. Shaw, Loew-Poli division manager, and Lou Brown, circuit advertising director.

On Monday, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer announced dates for 36 key city engagements of "Ziegfeld Girl," starting April 17th at the United Artists theatre in Detroit. On April 25th the picture, starring James Stewart, Judy Garland, Hedy Lamarr and Lana Turner, will open in the following spots:

Loew's, Akron; Midland, Kansas City; State, Memphis; State, Cleveland; Vendome, Nashville; Loew's, Rochester; Ritz, Tulsa.

On April 30th, the film starts at the State and Chinese, Los Angeles, day-and-date. Eight cities will open the film May 1st: Poli, Hartford; Poli, New Haven; Poli, Springfield; State, Providence; Colonial, Reading; Regent, Harrisburg; Loew's, Wilmington; Poli, Waterbury.

Opening May 2nd are: Grand, Atlanta; State, Houston; State, Louisville; State, New Orleans; Valentine, Toledo; Loew's, Indianapolis; Loew's, Dayton; Loew's, Richmond; State, Norfolk; Century, Baltimore; State, Syracuse; Albee, Cincinnati; May 3rd: Broadway, Portland, and Majestic, San Antonio; May 7th: Fifth Avenue, Seattle; May 8th: Poli, Worcester; Poli, Bridgeport; May 10th: Majestic, Dallas.

Fox West Coast Shifts Personnel

In a wholesale shift of employees at Fox West Coast, Charles P. Skouras, head of the circuit, announced in Los Angeles the resignation of Dick Dickson as district manager for area Number 4, Southern California, and the appointment of Stan Meyer, city manager for FWC in Glendale, in Dickson's place.

Mr. Dickson had earlier announced his intention of remaining with the circuit after he had first planned to resign and join Harry Sherman as an associate on the Hopalong Cassidy productions, but changed his mind and remained with FWC. He will now proceed with his intentions of joining Sherman. The resignation terminates a period of six years with Fox West Coast.

Other changes are as follows:

Earl Rice, assistant to Cullen Espy, district manager for area Number 1, Los Angeles, to the post of Glendale city manager; Spencer Leve, manager of the Westlake Theatre, Los Angeles, and Bill Thedford, manager of the Redondo in Redondo Beach, to assistants to Cullen Espy.

Ed Penn, manager of the Arlington Theatre, Santa Barbara, has been promoted to the city managership of San Bernardino and he will be replaced by Ernest Martin now in San Bernardino.

Sidney Pink of the California Theatre, Pomona and Roy Evans of the Highland, Los Angeles, have been promoted to the booking department. Other changes are expected within the next few days.

$35,000 for Planes From Film Rentals

"London Can Take It" and "Christmas Under Fire," two Warner-released British propaganda films, have garnered $35,000 for the British Spitfire Fund, the company announced this week, as Jack L. Warner, in charge of production at the studios, sent a $10,000 check to Lord Beaverbrook, head of the British Air Ministry.

Jerry Zigmund, chairman of the Kansas City Exhibitors Committee, said this week the city exceeded its Greek War Relief quota by $1,000. The city's one special midnight show, at the Midland, Friday, March 28th, gained $1,250.

The drive enlisted exhibitor aid and generous patron response in many Wisconsin towns during the week in which the drive was carried on in theatres. Among the towns of that state in which notable campaigns were scored were Milwaukee, Eau Claire, La Crosse, and Superior.

The Pittsburgh Variety Club raised approximately $8,500 for the Fund in three benefit shows. The tent's quota is $10,000. The stage-screen show at the Stanley netted $4,200, with $7,000 more collected in the lobby; the premiere of "Fantasia" gained $1,500; and a midnight show in McKeesport, $2,000.

Salt Lake City's midnight show at the Utah raised $1,850.

The Northio Paramount Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio, is to play a special midnight show of "Cavalcade" next Tuesday, for the "Bundles for Britain" committee.

Katzman Signs Lugosi

Bela Lugosi has been signed by Sam Katzman to star in three horror films for Monogram release. The first will be "The Phantom Monster."

ASCAP Drafts Licenses, BMI Ends First Year

A per program licensing arrangement drafted by the radio committee of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers was returned to the committee by the ASCAP board of directors last Friday with numerous suggestions for additions and amendment. The radio committee was expected to complete changes late this week. Following approval by the directors it will be sent to the National Association of Broadcasters. ASCAP spokesmen believed that negotiations on the formula might start next week. Mutual Brodacasting on Tuesday opened negotiation with ASCAP for a return of the Society's music to MBS stations.

Broadcast Music, Inc., music publishing firm owned by 680 broadcasting stations marked its first birthday last week with a report from Julius P. Witmark, general sales manager that the organization had sold 1,165,000 copies of sheet music. Three BMI tunes have sold over 100,000 copies. They are: "I Hear a Rhapsody," 190,000; "There I Go," 150,000 and "You Walk By," 110,000.

On April 2nd Carl Haverlin, BMI director of station relations announced that 97 per cent of the radio stations licensed by BMI had renewed their contracts. The remainder are expected to sign shortly.

BMI reports that in a year of operation it has acquired the rights to 250,000 musical compositions, and out of more than 100,000 new songs submitted in the year published a catalogue of 600 songs. Third quarter payments were mailed to the authors on April 1 on the basis of the number of performances which their compositions received over the air.

The Wisconsin bill empowering the secretry of state to levy a license fee of 25 per cent of gross ASCAP earnings was in the hands of Governor Julius Heil this week awaiting his signature following passage by the Asesmbly on April 2nd. It is estimated that the measure will raise $50,000 on music copyright organizations functioning within the state.

An anti-ASCAP bill introduced into the Ohio legislature was considered dead in committee at Columbus after the House Judiciary Committee passed it on to a sub-committee on Monday for further consideration.

N. V. A. Plans Set

The National Variety Artists will celebrate their silver jubilee on Sunday evening, April 20th, at the annual benefit to be held at the Manhattan Center theatre (formerly the Manhattan Opera House) in New York. George M. Cohan again is executive chairman, and will present his song-and-dance turn. Other stars who will appear are George Jessel, Molly Picon, Willie Howarad, Benny Fields and Bill Robinson.

McFarland Promoted

Dale McFarland, city manager at Davenport, Iowa, is the head of the Tri-States circuit's new advertising department, headquarters of which is Des Moines, same state. The department is to work on special exploitation, in certain locations. House managers will continue to handle routine promotion. Don Allen replaces Mr. McFarland at Davenport.

New Union Drive On Film Houses

Projectionists and theatre employes in California and Pennsylvania renewed pressure to organize film houses this week while the National Labor Relations Board in Washington weighed final pleas by the Screen Publicists Guild for designation as bargaining agent.

Local 150, IATSE, projectionists, in Alhambra, Calif., threatened picketing of 17 theatres operated by James Edwards in the Los Angeles suburb after it had obtained a court order setting aside an injunction restraining the union from picketing. A truce was reached when Mr. Edwards obtained the injunction several months ago. This week negotiations fell through and the union notified management of the Edwards theatres that it would picket unless a settlement was forthcoming.

Managers Picketing in Detroit

The managers union of Detroit is picketing the Palmer Park theatre operated by Raymond Schreiber pending settlement of demands for a contract covering its membership in all five of the Schreiber theatres in the Highland Park suburban area. The union claims 100 per cent membership in the circuit.

Members of operators' local 329, Scranton carried their two-year old dispute with T. P. Thomas, operator of the Thomas Theatre in Taylor, Pa. to the public this week with a one third page advertisement in the Scranton press. The notice charges that Mr. Thomas reneged on an agreement with the union and formed a rival C.I.O. unit in his theatre. The C.I.O. later revoked the charter allowing that it was a company unit. The house has been picketed since June, 1939.

Local 557, American Federation of Musicians at Freeland, Pa. at their April meeting elected Allan Feist as president. Other officers are Charles Lentz, vice president, James Maloney, secretary-treasurer and John Potzner, business agent.

A plea by the Screen Publicists' Guild that it be certified as collective bargaining agent for home office publicity and advertising writers, press book editors, feature writers, artists, contact and exploitation workers was taken under consideration by the National Labor Relations Board in Washington on April 3rd after hearing arguments of attorneys for eight majors and the SPG.

Chief dispute between the companies and union was the inclusion of free lance artists, foreign publicity men and minor executives in contracts. Paramount, RKO, Twentieth Century-Fox, Columbia, Universal, and United Artists agreed to inclusion of copywriters, press book, feature production and exploitation employes in the unit. Loews excepted exploitation men and Warners opposed all suggestions.

The NLRB took the case under advisement and will specify what employes may vote in elections to choose bargaining agents in the home office.

Directors Renew Salary Talk

Abandoning conciliation procedure on demands for minimum salary scales and other concessions the Screen Directors Guild this week opened direct negotiations with Y. Frank Freeman AMPP president and producer representatives. The guild named George Stevens, Frank Capra, Phil Rosen, George Marshall, Lesley Selabder and Felix Feist to represent it.

After halting production on a short featuring Jimmy Fiddler narrating a radio show the Screen Actors Guild announced that it had signed a contract with Sunshine Productions, Inc., of New York.

RCA PUBLISHES GOLDEN'S SURVEY

A survey of motion picture equipment in colleges and high schools in the United States, compiled by Nathan D. Golden, until recently chief of the motion picture division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce and now consultant for the amusement industry in the newly established Division of Industrial Economy, has been published by the educational department of the RCA Manufacturing Company, Inc., Camden, N. J.

The film equipment available for use in some 17,500 colleges and high schools is shown. The material is arranged in tabular form so that the motion picture machines owned by any school can be determined immediately. All the colleges and high schools in the country were asked to give the number of 35mm sound and silent and 16mm sound and silent as well as slide projectors which they owned or could rent.

Jersey Allied Sets June Meeting Date

Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey will meet for their 22nd annual convention at Atlantic City on June 11-13, Louis Gold of Newark, convention chairman, has announced. The Ritz-Carlton will be convention headquarters. Eastern regional conferences of Allied will be held in Atlantic City over the same dates.

"Goodwill in the motion picture industry," is to keynote the Jersey Allied gathering. Every sales manager will be invited to attend and outline his company sales policies for 1941-42. Assisting Mr. Gold with arrangements are Irving Dollinger, of Linden, Harry Lowenstein of Newark and E. Thornton Kelly.

Members of the Independent Theatre Owners of Washington met at the Davenport Hotel, Spokane, on Tuesday for a statewide discussion of operation problems. Sessions also included extensive consideration of new state and federal laws and increased taxes. Ben Fish, United Artists western manager, was in Spokane for the convention.

Al Francis, operator of the Commodore Theatre at Buffalo, N. Y., is organizing director for a new unit of Allied States exhibitors organization. The organization is still in the tentative stages, he reported this week, with initial membership drawn from the old Allied group plus a few new recruits.

Drops RKO Suit

The infringement suit against RKO brought by Olga Linek Scholl Russ was discontinued in the United States district court in New York last week. The suit had sought $250,000 damages, claiming that the film, "I Dream Too Much," infringed the plaintiff's scenario, "Long Live Love."

Ask Censorship in San Antonio

San Antonio, Texas, church and civic groups on April 3rd renewed petitions to city council asking the establishment of a municipal film consorship board. Led by Floyd D. James, local attorney, 30 residents demanded a strict ordinance setting up a local board of review and banning "immoral, irreligious and unpatriotic pictures." A previous petition to council of March 13th was referred to the city's legal department.

"If we don't have an ordinance to protect ourselves, we will continue to be subjected to unpatriotic immoral pictures and the flunks and duds of the industry" Mr. James told the council. With the Reverend Jesse Iwig, pastor of the First Evangelical Church he attacked smoking and drinking in films. Mayor Maury Maverick and council took the question under consideration.

Seek Lancaster Law

A six point program to regulate amusement enterprises in Lancaster, Pa., was suggested to the Lancaster Law and Order Society on Sunday by the Reverend Clifford G. Twombly, D.D. retired pastor of St. James Episcopal Church. He advocated local censorship of all motion pictures and regulation of motion picture advertising.

Ohio censors reviewed a total of 617 reels during March, ordering 53 eliminations. In February the board saw 438 reels and made 39 cuts, while in March, 1940 it viewed 497 reels and made 59 eliminations.

Legislative council of the Maryland legislature at Annapolis on Monday rejected a proposal for a drastic increase in the censorship fees levied by the state. The law was a revenue bill. At the same time the Senate rejected a bill authorizing censors to classify films as suitable or unsuitable for children under 16.

National Decency Legion Classifies Ten Pictures

Of the ten films classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week six were unobjectionable for general patronage and four were classified as unobjectionable for adults. The pictures and their classifications follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Ellery Queen's Penthouse Mystery," "Horror Island," "In Old Cheyenne," "Pot o' Gold," "Riders of Death Valley" and "A Very Young Lady." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "The Great Lie," "Lady from Cheyenne," "Man of the Forest" and "Model Wife."

Herbert Joins Goldwyn

Bill Herbert has been signed as publicity director for Samuel Goldwyn, replacing Myron Lustig, who will be associated in theatre operations with Gus and Lou Metzger and Harry Srere. Mr. Herbert, formerly with Cecil B. DeMille and David O. Selznick, is now completing some magazine assignments and will assume his new duties shortly.

Moss Hart Sued

Moss Hart, in a suit filed in the New York supreme court, was named defendant on Monday, by Frieda Fishbein, a play broker, who is seeking to recover 2½ per cent of all money received by Mr. Hart on his plays produced by Sam H. Harris, under a ten-year contract.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Back to Normal

After last week's spurt, production this week dropped back to the norm it has been maintaining for more than a month, with nine pictures finished, 13 started, and 49 shooting, this last being, however, more than the average number of films before cameras.

Being prepared were 31 pictures, and 64 were being edited.

Having 29 of its promised features for the 1940-41 season completed or in work, Columbia has embarked on its most intensive production boom, marked by the signing of more talent "names" than ever before in its history and by a large budget expansion.

Finished and being readied for release shortly are features with such names as Cary Grant, Irene Dunne, Franchot Tone, Joan Bennett, Jane Withers, Jackie Cooper, Herbert Marshall, Virginia Bruce, Rudy Vallee, Ann Miller, Rosemary Lane.

In work, or to be put in work in the next four weeks, are films starring Robert Montgomery, Ruby Keeler, Harriet Hilliard, Ozzie Nelson and his band, William Holden, Glenn Ford, Loretta Young, Rita Hayworth, Fred Astaire, Russell Hayden, while unassigned are Pat O'Brien, John Howard, Joe E. Brown, Patti McCarty, and Melvyn Douglas.

Cary Grant and Irene Dunne will be seen in "Penny Serenade," George Stevens production, now being edited.

Tone and Joan Bennett recently finished "She Knew All the Answers," directed by Richard Wallace for Charles R. Rogers. Borrowed from 20th Century-Fox and Paramount, respectively, Jane Withers and Jackie Cooper starred in "Her First Beau," which Ted Read directed. Marshall and Virginia Bruce are the top players in "Senate Page Boys," while Vallee, Ann Miller, Rosemary Lane and Glenn Gray and his Casa Loma band appear in the musical, "Time Out for Rhythm."

In work or to be put in work during the next four weeks are:

"Heaven Can Wait," to star Robert Montgomery, borrowed from M-G-M, and featuring Claude Rains and James Gleason, with Alexander Hall directing for producer Everett Riskin.

"Betty Co-Ed," musical with Ruby Keeler, Harriett Hilliard, Ozzie Nelson and his band.

"Tillie the Toiler," first of a new series based on the comic strip and which will have Kay Harris in the title role.

"Texas," to be directed by George Marshal with William Holden and Glenn Ford in the leads.

"Tonight Belongs to Us," starring Loretta Young, with Gregory Ratoff producing and directing.

"I Was a Prisoner on Devil's Island," featuring Sally Eilers and Donald Wood with Lew Landers directing.

"He's My Uncle," co-starring Rita Hayworth and Fred Astaire with Cole Porter tunes and Sidney Lanfield directing.

"One Way Street," featuring Russell Hayden and Anita Louise.

"Obituary," with Eileen O'Hearn, Frank Craven, Roger Pryor and Edgar Buchanan.

About to be signed is a deal which would bring Marlene Dietrich and director Mitchell Leisen to Columbia for "Miss Madden Is Willing." This picture, however, would be on the 1941-42 program.

"MARCHE POLONAISE" COMES TO FILMS

First feature in all-Polish dialogue to be made in the United States was completed last week in Hollywood. Shot in 16mm. with sound, the picture will be shown in theatres where the audiences are predominantly Polish. Producer is Tadeusza Wronskiego, who also enacts dual roles in the film.

It deals with the German seizure of Poland and the battle of Warsaw.

Made with an all-Polish cast, the film was directed by Corey G. Cook. Star is Stanley Milewicza, featured player on a Chicago radio "Polish hour". He also aided with the script.

The film will be distributed via the states rights market, William Przybylo having purchased rights to Michigan and Ohio.

Title of the picture is "With Fire and Flames" or, as the Polish would say, "Z Dymem Pozarow".

Star News

CLARK GABLE and LANA TURNER will appear together in "Honky Tonk" for MGM.

MARLENE DIETRICH, EDWARD G. ROBINSON and GEORGE RAFT are to star in Warners' "Manpower."

SHIRLEY TEMPLE and WALLACE BEERY will co-star in "Lazybones" for MGM.

RITA HAYWORTH and FRED ASTAIRE are to appear together in Columbia's musical, "He's My Uncle."

FREDERIC MARCH will play the starring role in "One Foot in Heaven," at Warners.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS, JR., is to have the dual role in EDWARD SMALL'S "The Corsican Brothers."

ROBERT MONTGOMERY has been cast in the starring role in "Heaven Can Wait" at Columbia.

RAY MILLAND has received one of the two male starring roles in C. B. DEMILLE'S "Reap the Wild Wind."

ELEANOR POWELL has been signed to a new MGM contract.

Mexican Unions Vote Changes in Officers, Policy

by LUIS BECERRA CELIS
in Mexico City

Better relations between labor and producers are expected by all employer branches of the picture industry in Mexico now that Vicente Lombardo Toledano has been ousted from the presidency of the Confederation of Mexican Workers by Fidel Velazquez, who for some time was the Confederation's publicity secretary. The voting showed that the Confederation had decided in favor of a sweeping change in its government, and not one of Toledano's henchmen is now in office. There was so much feeling during the voting that extra police, armed with rifles and tear gas guns, had to guard the election place here.

Voting for Dr. Velazquez's former position was close. Francisco J. Macin, high officer of the national cinematographic workers' union, was a contender but the winner was Matias Platas, a comparatively obscure member of the Confederation, though it is the second highest office in the organization. Defeat of the picture laborite indicates that the film workers are not as strong in the Confederation as they used to be.

Sr. Velazquez is the friend of Sr. Toledano, but it is generally believed that he he will adopt the procedure of most Mexican presidents—follow a different policy from his predecessor as a matter of principle.

Tello Continues Production

Alonso Sanchez Tello, an important producer here before he quit the producers association following a quarrel with Enrique Solis, secretary general of the films workers union, over the latter's demands to assign sound engineers for Mr. Tello's pictures, has apparently changed his mind about his announced determination to quit the picture business for good because of labor troubles. He has organized a company with Chano Urueta, an ace director, to produce in Monterrey, the northeastern industrial center. As Mr. Tello intends to employ only non-union workers he is considered sure to run afoul of the union which will probably ban his productions. But the producer hopes to circumvent that very likely contingency by depending mostly upon Mexican centers in the United States and Spanish speaking countries for his outlet. His company is expected to begin work in the late summer.

Production of artistic shorts of places in Mexico of tourist and historic interest has been started by Art Mex which has its headquarters here and is backed by Carlos Vejar, Daniel Manjarrez and Juan Roca. A short this company made of the Shrine of Our Lady of Guadalupe here, patron saint of Mexico, is meeting with good reception.

Great benefits from this country's acceptance of agreements made at Havana in December, 1937 for channel allocations, which became effective for Mexico on March 29, are reported by the 100 active radio stations. This new arrangement is giving clearer channels for the Mexican stations and is also preventing them from interfering with those of the United States and Canada.

Various interests in this country kept Mexico from adopting this arrangement for a long time because they thought it would prejudice Mexican radio but all opposition was swept aside at the recent talks in Washington, D. C. This country has six channels—three of them here, the others for the rest of the republic. One each of the local channels is for the biggest stations here—XEW, XEQ and XEB. One each of the provincial channels is for Monterrey, the northeastern industrial center, Merida, capital of the southeastern state of Yucatan, and the third for the stations in Sonora state, on the northwestern American border.

Radio is to be used extensively and intensively by the Mexican government and the Party of the Mexican Revolution, Mexico's leading political organization, to curb the activities of Axis governments' agents and Communists. Special speakers, professional and volunteers, are to give short and frequent talks from the government's stations here, XEXA of the official press bureau, and XECR of the ministry of foreign relations, and the Party's stations, XEOZ and XEFO. Many private stations have lined up for this campaign which is also expected to include the cooperation of cinemas and theatres by permitting official talkers during intermissions.

Gen. Abalardo L. Rodriguez, ex-President of Mexico, who made a fortune out of fishing and kindred industries in the northwest, has organized a company that will spend $1,500,000 in establishing one of the world's strongest radio stations at Nogales, Sonora state, on the northwestern American border, down from Arizona. The station, which will be commercial, is to cater to both Mexican and American audiences. It is to open in the late summer. The power of the station is to be determined soon.

A colony of model homes for the technical and artistic staff of the station, the first colony of the kind in Mexico, is to be established at the plant.

Application of Dr. Norman Baker to the Mexican government for a permit to establish a radio station in Monterrey, northeastern industrial center, is being opposed by the medical and kindred professions of that city which declare that if the American advertising physician opened this station it would be a big blow to Monterrey for his methods are disapproved by both the American and Mexican health laws.

Electricity Shortage

The shortage of electric power here which has prompted the federal and municipal governments to take drastic measures for conservation, has affected the theatres. Because of this situation, the Cine Estrella of Manuel Angel Fernandez' circuit, built for $130,000, cannot be opened as the light and power company is unable to give it service. The company is unable to make new contracts and is keeping to a minimum its supplies to its regular customers.

Operating theatres, however, have not as yet been affected by this power savings program, but there are fears that unless more current is provided to normalize service in this city and adjacent zones the company serves, they may be hit. The government's electric power conservation committee has hopes that there will be more current in June, when the rainy season starts, as there should be then more water for the power generating dams.

QUOTA REGISTRATIONS REFLECT DECLINE

Registration of features under the British Quota for the year ended March 31st totalled only 42 for the distributors' quota and only 23 for the exhibitors' quota. Of the group 19 were double quota value and three were for triple quota. Foreign films totalled 400.

The figures compare with 393 foreign features in the previous quota year ended March 31, 1940, and 108 British features in all classifications.

Theatre Aid Seen In Indies Bases

A theatre boom is expected in the British West Indies with the establishment of American defense bases there, and the establishment of garrisons of 20,000 to 30,000 men, according to Major Charles H. Tebay, United Artists manager for Trinidad, who returned last week to New York.

Major Tebay is making his first visit to the company's home office since assuming his post at Trinidad three and one-half years ago. He is expected to remain until the latter part of April.

Business in the territory, which includes all of the British West Indies and British and Dutch Guiana, has continued at excellent level since the outbreak of the war, he reported. No military regulations which affect theatre operations adversely have been invoked, although films now are subject to censorship and remittances of Trinidad dollars to New York are limited to 60 per cent of the distributor's revenue in the territory.

American pictures command the major share of playing time in the approximately 50 theatres in the territory, Major Tebay explained, and musical and action pictures are preferred. Admission scales range from 12 to 15 cents in the small towns to a top price of $1 in the cities.

Albany Exchange Men Honor Bernie Kranze

Fellow exchange operators and theatre men at Albany, N. Y., will honor Bernie Kranze, departing chief of the RKO exchange with a testimonial dinner on April 28th. Mr. Kranze has been appointed RKO exchange manager at Cleveland. Max Westebbe, former RKO manager in Holland, replaces him in Albany.

The committee in charge of the dinner includes Moe Grassgreen, 20th Century-Fox, chairman; M. A. Silver, Warners; Lou Golding, Fabian circuit; C. A. Smakwitz, Warners; Clayton Eastman, Paramount; Paul Krumenacker, Vitagraph; Nathan Sodikman, Monogram; Arthur Newman, Republic; Herman Ripps, MGM; Joe Miller, Columbia; Jerry Spandau, Universal; J. Myer and Lou Schine, Schine circuit; William Smalley, and Mike Kallet.

Pittsburgh Projectionists Meet

A lecture and supper at the Fort Pitt Hotel, Pittsburgh, last Saturday night, arranged by E. B. Morton of the Pittsburgh branch of National Theatre Supply Company through Lanrence Katz, I. A. Local 171 was attended by 300 projectionists from Pittsburgh and nearby locals.

The meeting was addressed by A. E. Meyer, general sales manager of International Projector and a lecture on Simplex E-7 projector was delivered by Henry Heidegger, also of the IPC. Among those present were E. B. Morton and A. Baldwin, of National Supply.

Berger's 30 Years

His fellows in the local film industry honored Rudy Berger's 30 years in the show business Monday night at the Willard Hotel, Washington. Mr. Berger is the MGM manager there.

BRITISH BLAME GOVERNMENT FOR 'MUDDLED INDUSTRY', DEMAND HELP

Exhibitors, Distributors Unite in Refusal to Accept Responsibility; Say More Production Is Only Solution to Problem

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

The British Government by now should have no illusion that the film industry here, conscious of the muddle which faces it, not only in regard to legislation but in regard to the manufacture and distribution of product itself, is not going to accept responsibility for the tangle. The industry has, in fact, demanded that the Government clear up a mess for which it is greatly responsible and protested against the buck being passed back to them.

Recent conversations between industry sections, notably the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association and the Kinemotograph Renters Society (distributors), have made it abundantly clear that there are no two views about the present situation. As reported recently in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, they have told the Board of Trade that would-be palliatives, such as increasing the screen time allotted to British pictures, setting up single picture programmes, and so forth, are no cure. They are agreed that the only solution for the present situation is more British pictures and that it is high time the Government set about making the production of those pictures possible.

Ultimatum Prepared

It will be recalled that exhibitors foreseeing the impracticability of fulfilling their Quota requirements in the immediate future, suggested to the Board of Trade that the percentages be reduced. The Government Department replied with a suggestion that trading practices in regard to British films be altered, the object being to increase the total screen time devoted to them. To this the industry sections have replied that they are agreed that the solution can only be solved by the provision of more product and have pointed out that unless man power and personnel are reserved for the making of films, unless studio space is released, and unless materials are made accessible, more films are not likely to be provided. In brief, they have told the Government that they must either make the Act practicable, or repeal it.

This state of mind and attitude is precisely in line with that taken recently by the Films Council, who, considering, on the recommendation of the Board of Trade, the exhibitors' request for a cut in the Quota percentage, decided, after exhaustive discussion, that this would not help the situation at all. The only thing to ease the situation would be the production of more films and this would only be possible if men were released, studios released and materials provided.

Both the Board of Trade and the CEA appeared to be in agreement that defaults are likely in the immediate future through the sheer inability of exhibitors to acquire product which is not available. To quote the Board of Trade, "A substantial reduction is inevitable". The Government Department, however, consider that a reduction in the percentages is undesirable for they are of the opinion that in the long run not a great number of cinemas will need to be exonerated for defaults. In any case, they point out, any reduction of the Quota cannot take effect until October, 1942.

Again, exhibitors and legislators are agreed in recognizing that the ideal way to meet the present difficulties would be to improve the supply of films. The Government Department takes the view that there are many problems at the present moment which stand in the way of this. They promise that exhibitors who are compelled, by powers beyond their control, to default, will be given sympathetic considerations.

It was following the suggestion of the Board of Trade that the solution would be eased if trading practices were altered, if single feature programmes were instituted, British films given a six day booking instead of a three day booking and bars raised, that both industry sections, exhibitors and distributors, got together. They have never been more united than they are in an emphatic repudiation of the Board of Trade effort to pass the buck back to the industry. It is a solid trade conviction that the Government is responsible for the present confusion with its catastrophic drop in production and that it is the Government's job to get itself out of its own mess. The weight of the Films Council added to this contention is neither inconsiderable nor invaluable.

Shortage Basic Problem

The practicabilities and the wisdom of the Board of Trade's "altered trading practices" plan have been considered carefully and dismissed. S. K. Lewis, CEA President, in an admirable handling of the joint meeting between the two sections, pointed out what is commonly agreed in industry circles here, that probably less than fifty per cent of the British films registered during the past three years could stand up to a single feature show. It is the contention of Arthur Jarratt, chief of the Gaumont-British Circuit, that if he showed all the British films for a week or more that he showed today on a three day basis it would still not alter the situation and defaults would still be registered.

The Government has recently asked exhibitors and renters to curtail the number of prints in use, as the amount of raw stock available is limited. The elimination of bars, it is contended in reply, would demand more copies, and cut right across the Government's own intentions.

Other exhibitors have suggested that playing British films on a six day basis would in the long run help only the renter: that they would be fobbed off with dud films taken off the shelf. It will take a great deal to convince either exhibitors or distributors that the Government cannot do anything to assist in providing the films which will be necessary in order to make the Quota Act a practicable proposition—let alone to save the production industry from being extinguished.

Little has been heard during the past few days regarding the Ministry of Labour's intentions on the reservation of production technicians. The Producer and Labour case has been presented and Bevin has it before him. Fears that the only sop likely to be thrown to the industry is that the existing Reservations Committee may be used to examine and legislate on all those technicians affected are gaining ground.

There is little doubt here that the American majors are extremely anxious to continue producing world market films in Britain—provided always, of course, that this process is practicable. In so doing they could readily convert a considerable amount of their frozen dollars into sterling and dollar exchange on both sides of the Atlantic, by making world market films of the calibre of, say, "Quiet Wedding" and "Kipps". The obvious difficulties which face them are those of casting, of obtaining technicians and studio personnel, getting the appropriate studio space and materials. If these things were attended to by the Government there is little doubt that considerable programmes of production would be launched by both American and British interests here, with a potential film supply solving the exhibitors' problem, infusing the production industry with life blood and pleading the British cause throughout the world, and it could be started overnight.

Government Aid Demanded

British executive C. M. Woolf, chief of General Film Distributors and a most active British producer, has himself emphasized the importance of the American market to British films and underlined the impossibility of making big enough films unless the Government does its bit in the appropriate direction.

"There is the Act on the Statute", says the British industry, "let the Government put back the men and release the studios and it will be possible for the trade to fulfill it".

Unfortunately the motion picture as a commodity is in a unique position in wartime Britain. As Commander Jarratt has pointed out, most other industries, some 150 of which are covered by the Board of Trade, are restricted at the moment through legislation and war conditions. The film as a commodity is, on paper, protected and stimulated by an Act and a special films department. Meanwhile, other Government departments, The Ministry of Labour, Ministry of Aircraft Production, etcetera, are making, by their departmental activities, the Act a potential dead letter.

Theatres closed in Great Britain because of damage from bombs or from fires following incendiary bomb raids now number 370 according to the latest figures released by the British Government. About two-thirds of the closed houses are in the Greater London area and the remainder are scattered through the industrial and seacoast cities which have borne the brunt of the air raids.

BRITISH INCOME TAX INCREASED TO 50%

A basic income tax rate of ten shillings in the pound, 50 per cent, is imposed in the new budget announced to the House of Commons Monday by Sir Kingsley Wood, Chancellor of the Exchequer. The budget also adopted a compulsory savings plan under which Postoffice certificates to a total of £65 will be issued for differences in taxes paid under the new schedules and the old. Exemptions were cut down to bring an additional 2,000,000 persons under the levy. The new tax reaches down to the man earning only £120 a year, who will pay £7 s10. An income of £150,000 a year would require a 97 per cent tax. (The pound was quoted in New York this week at $4.035.)

Citizen Kane

(RKO Radio)

Psychological Adventure

The screen's most curious adventure in narration is revealed in Orson Welles' "Citizen Kane", a picaresque tale of a mythical American beset by accidental wealth, overwhelming ego, selfish ambition and a hunger for power and display. It is a tale, not a drama, a collection of greater and lesser character studies, vastly gilded, super-splendid, amazingly devoid of glamour, embittered to poignancy with scepticism, empty of sympathy, sharp with sequences of interest—in total, a job of intensely graphic vivisection of a hypothesis.

The production for what audiences may discover in it will be found to have its greater challenge in the manner of the telling rather than in what is told.

The story is exceedingly simple. Once upon a time a willful little boy, born in the rude West became the heir to what was to be a vast fortune. He was snatched away from his play and his sled to be sent East, and, in a fashion, educated. Among his heritages was a moribund newspaper. He made the newspaper and the publishing business his toy and tool, became a magnate of far-flung enterprises, but mostly a publisher with a pose of great social consciousness, with his chief and perhaps sole interest in making himself famous, conspicuous, powerful. He was a collector of objets d'art of all sorts, built palaces for homes, had, but did not enjoy, some changes of wives, and in time died—and the last word from his lips was "Rosebud." That's all of it.

That word "Rosebud" supplies all the suspense in the tale.

Most extraordinary is the application by Mr. Welles to the screen of a technique which traces mainly to the complex style of Time magazine in its endeavours to be "curt, concise, complete," with sentences inverted, reversed, in an ornate pattern of verbal cross-stitch embroidery.

The camera action and scenes run backwards and forwards and sideways to pick up the story, to telescope events and forward the thought, rather than the action—since action does not matter in a story that is all a state of mind.

The photographic treatment is magnificently competent in the doing of what Mr. Welles was trying to do, with a manner of doing overwhelmingly clever, devastatingly ingenious, endowing with a tension value episode after episode which had been robbed of suspense by inverted prestatement.

The Time technique which was born of words and a magazine style on paper, and later evolved into a film technique by Louis de Rochemont's production of the "March of Time" is made additionally and most literally emphatic in this production by Mr. Welles' adoption of the device of opening his picture with the preparation of a fictional reel entitled "News on the March."

Since the fictional editor must know, for the purposes of the reel devoted to Citizen Kane's funeral what the great man meant by his deathbed whisper, "Rosebud," reporters are sent to find out what it meant. So starting forward from the funeral, the reportorial quest backs up on reminiscent revealments of the story of the life of Kane.

Some showmen will remember "The Power and the Glory," a Fox-Lasky production of 1933, in which Preston Sturges, dramatist, used a kindred method, then called "narratage." That production, excellent as it was, suffered from the confusions of its style—and the furore about it.

It has been said of "Citizen Kane" that it is the story of the life of a famous American publisher. It has also been denied that it is the story of the life of a certain great American publisher. In the opinion of a one-time reporter not entirely unfamiliar with the field, considerably more than traces of inspiration may have been derived from a number of American publishers, western, midwestern and eastern, who could be identified. Also there are more than chemical traces of material that might be reminiscent of at least two actresses and some alleged singers.

In view of the nature of some of the subplots involving feminine interest and what would to many have proved a production temptation, it must be observed that Mr. Welles handled his material with eyes straight ahead on the story and no slight hint of suggestive endeavour.

As we were saying, all the suspense is what did Kane mean by "Rosebud." The reporters for "News on the March" never found out, but when the administrators were cleaning things up a little boy's sled with the name "Rosebud" was tossed into a bonfire of junk. Mr. Welles took his picture, his hero, his plot, himself, and his audience for a magnificent sleigh-ride.

This picture was seen with a press preview audience at the Broadway theatre in New York Wednesday night. That audience in which there was a considerable sprinkling of publishers and newspaper executives, gave the picture sincere applause at the final curtain.—TERRY RAMSAYE.

Sis Hopkins

(Republic)

Comedy with Music

Republic's rapidly improving product and status in the industry takes a huge step forward with "Sis Hopkins," starring Judy Canova, and costing, according to the studio, $750,000. The 40-year-old play which brought Rose Melville to fame and which was made once before into a film starring Mabel Normand, forms an excellent vehicle for Miss Canova, whose odd style of comedy and singing which turned out to be so sensational in "Scatterbrain," completely captivated a press-trade showing audience and gave indications of similarly impressing any audience, anywhere.

The picture rates as one of the most comic productions of recent vintage and Miss Canova is ably assisted in the humor department by Charles Butterworth, as the retired plumber and uncle of "Sis Hopkins," Jerry Colonna and Elvira Allman (Cobina of the Bob Hope Pepsodent airshow). Others in the cast include Bob Crosby, the band leader, and his Bob Cats, Susan Hayward, Katharine Alexander, Carol Adams, Lynn Merrick and Mary Ainslee.

The story deals with the adventures of country cousin "Sis Hopkins," whose flat footed innocence gets her wealthy relatives into assorted dithers. Her uncle sends her to college, his daughter resents his attention to the girl, and the action centers about the competition of the college musical production for Broadway staging.

Drawing much laughter at the preview was the remark of Jerry Colonna, who, after stepping from a bubble bath in a knee length bathing suit, turns directly to the audience and says: "I didn't want to wear this thing. The Hays Office made me do it."

The Great Lie

(Warner Bros.)

Drama

Warners' "The Great Lie" is a picture made strictly for the distaff side of the house. It deals with the trials and tribulations of a wife who, unable to bear children, "buys" her husband's son from a former wife to whom he was illegally married and pretends the child is his and her own. The climax comes when the real mother forces the wife to tell the circumstances of the child's birth to the father. Definitely adult in audience classification, the picture treats quite humorously by word and gesture the pregnancy period of the mother, and presents quite thoroughly and in detail such things as the enforced health diet of the supposedly pregnant woman who heretofore had smoked and drunk as much as she pleased.

Bette Davis is the wife and Mary Astor the mother of the child. George Brent essays the role of the father. Supporting them are Lucile Watson, Hattie McDaniel, Grant Mitchell, Jerome Cowan, Charles Trowbridge, Thurston Hall, Russell Hicks, Virginia Brissac, Olin Howland, J. Farrell MacDonald, Addison Richards and Sam McDaniel.

Edmund Goulding directed from an adaptation of Polan Banks' novel. Henry Blanke was the associate producer.

The various story elements make the film a piece of merchandise likely to be of widespread interest to women. It has little appeal for masculine audiences.

Previewed at Warners' Beverly Theatre, Beverly Hills, to a press audience.—V. K.

Reaching for the Sun

(Paramount)

Drama

"Reaching for the Sun" is a dramatic story of a young man from the backwoods who becomes involved in the intricate mechanism of a large industrial city and manages to find final happiness through taking the best of his adventures in the city to the wilds whence he came. The contrasting locales are the Michigan woods and Detroit, the background is the automobile industry. One of the scenes which will draw most audience comment is a fight, with their machines, between the operators of a 40 ton crane and a 50 ton manipulator used in carrying hot metal about to be die stamped from the heating furnaces.

Joel McCrea, Ellen Drew and Eddie Bracken are given star billing in the picture, the first time for the latter two. Others in the cast are Albert Dekker, Billy Gilbert, Bodil Ann Rosing, James Burke, Charles D. Brown, Michael Duggan, Regis Toomey, Hobart Cavanaugh, Charles Williams, Nella Walker, Warren Hymer and Billy Fletcher.

Wessel Smitter's novel "F. O. B. Detroit" forms the basis for the story, but it has been radically changed from the connection of Social Significance which marked the book. Credits acknowledge the cooperation of Packard Motor Company and A. Finkl and Sons Co., Chicago Foundry, whose plants were used for locations.

William A. Wellman whose most recent pictures were "Men With Wings," "Beau Geste" and "The Light That Failed" produced and directed this.

Finding himself in love with a Polish girl in Detroit "Russ" marries her, becomes a father and is enmeshed in the struggle to survive in a large city, all the while holding his dream of returning to his clam digging in the Michigan backwoods. His longing to return is the cause of a quarrel with his wife, and a reconciliation is effected after he loses a leg in the battle of the behemoth-like machines.

Much comedy is attached to the consummation of the marriage and the pregnancy period of the wife, thus putting the film in the adult audience classification.

The Lone Wolf Takes a Chance

(Columbia)

"Lone Wolf" Melodrama

Michael Lanyard, alias "The Lone Wolf", continues his adventures in the field of crime detection, this time more to save himself from the police than to right wrongs against innocent victims. Based upon the characters created by Louis Joseph Vance and directed by Sidney Salkow this picture of the series is on a par with its predecessors.

"The Lone Wolf" is suspected when a bullet-ridden corpse is found outside his hotel window. Anxious to clear his name he learns that some valuable currency plates are being shipped in a burglar-proof baggage car and the inventor of the car, the only one who knows the combination, has been kidnapped by counterfeiters intent upon stealing the plates. Many adventures follow on the train carrying the plates and in an eerie, ghost-ridden house in an outlying district, before "Lanyard" is able to prove his innocence and rescue the victim of the plot.

June Storey, who for some time has been appearing opposite Gene Autry in his western productions, is seen in this picture as the movie actress who becomes involved in the case, while Eric Blore continues in the series as the faithful butler and, with Fred Kelsey as the dumb cop, lending the comedy to the picture.

Ralph Cohen produced the picture for Columbia release.

The Devil and Miss Jones

(RKO Radio)

Sociological Whimsey

This first picture made by the production team of Frank Ross and Norman Krasna is a fast-moving light comedy centering around department store activity.

As the "richest man in the world," Charles Coburn discovers to his horror that employees of a department store which he didn't even know he owned have hanged him in effigy. Determined to get to the root of the trouble himself, he poses as a shoe salesman, is befriended by the troublemakers he had come to throw out of the place.

Complications of both a humorous and a fantastic nature occur, ranging from the employees' belief that he is really a private detective to a strike called over the public address system of the store. Such sequences as those depicting a day at Coney Island, the "salesman's" attempt to sell shoes to the daughter of his housemaid, his discovery that his dyspepsia does not prevent eating improbable mixtures for lunch, kept a preview night audience in hilarious mood.

As the star of the picture, Jean Arthur has never been seen to better advantage. Her role is that of the "Miss Jones" of the title, a salesperson in the same department for which the owner elects to work, a salesperson much in love with the young labor organizer portrayed by Robert Cummings. While the picture evokes sympathy for the would-be strikers, paints management as both dull and detrimental to the common weal, it is done with a tongue-in-cheek attitude throughout, a note sounded at the very beginning of the film.

In the leader appears a title card reading: "Dear richest men in the world: We made up this character in the story out of our own heads. It's nobody really. The whole thing is make believe. We'd feel awful if anyone was offended. Thank you. The author, director and producer."

This is followed by another card which flashes: "P.S. Nobody sue," and in turn by a third with "P.P.S. Please."

In the other principal roles are Edmund Gwenn as the tyrannical section manager, Spring Byington as the warm-hearted saleslady with whom the richest man finds romance, S. Z. Sakall as the latter's butler. Direction by Sam Wood and production design by William Cameron Menzies are on a plane with their work in previous assignments.

Edwardian Character Romance

It is a long way from the 1941 air raid shelter to Folkestone Promenade in 1905—and from the viewpoint of escapist entertainment—the longer the better. That distance is immediately one of the boxoffice assets of this superbly made screen version of H. G. Wells' character study. Add to the theme the intensely human story, the brilliant performance by Redgrave, and the assurance of rare production excellence, and all seems set for a showman's dream. and graphic cameo of English life in the Edwardian era—should commend it no less to American audiences, this despite the fact that it is grand entertainment irrespective of its origin.

Reed, one of Britain's few directors, and his producers have done an excellent job. The cameo is correct in atmosphere and detail and the story is told with wit, imagination, and sympathy. The cast to a character make the picture live. Settings, costumes, camerawork and screenplay are of eminently polished standard. Appealing equally to the emotions and the intelligence the film will make a hit with lowbrow and highbrow alike.

Well's story is of "a simple soul" who after a life as a draper's shop assistant comes into a fortune and is cultivated by the society toadies who yesterday snubbed him. The gilded halls of the Upper Ten nearly claim him but he saves himself just in time and marries his servant girl sweetheart.

Michael Redgrave whose physique is far from that of Well's frail hero, puts up a delightful and moving performance as the boy, one of those loveable lads the women will warm to. From the imaginatively chosen cast it would be unfair to select especial credits, but Diana Wynyard is gracefully patrician as the girl he does not marry, Phyllis Calvert is natural as the plebeian he does, Max Adrian suavely registers as a psalm quoting uplifter, and Arthur Riscoe steals every scene in which he appears as the voluble, whisky-swilling Chitterlow.

The quiet streets of an English seaside town, the band playing in the breeze, the ill cut jackets, the clangorous slavery of the drapery stores have all been recaptured in the film, and have the invigorating effect of dramatic ozone.

A small trade audience packed 20th-Fox's preview theatre in London and came away paying tribute to the picture's jewel-like quality.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Manon Lescaut

(Esperia Film Distributing Co.)

Libretto of the Opera

Opera goers viewing this Italian importation will find the emphasis in the screen treatment is on the story basis for the musical work as it is to be found in the novel by the Abbe Prevost rather than in a rendition of the Puccini operatic masterpiece. The Puccini score is used as musical background for the narration and there is some offstage singing by Beniamino Gagli and Maria Caniglia, but the production treats more emotionally than lyrically with the ill fated love between "Manon" and "des Grieux," telling how they elope to live in sin, become separated for a time by an aristocratic and high bound father-in-law and finally, after "Manon" has been mistress to a rich, old, court libertine, how the couple is exiled from France to Louisiana where "Manon" dies.

The outstanding merit of the offering is the startling blonde beauty of Alida Valli who plays the title role. Another asset is the set mounting and the colorful costuming of the players. Despite its heavy and slow paced direction, the film may be reasonably counted upon to appeal to certain sectors acquainted with the operatic prestige of the Puccini work.

The King of the White Elephant

(Pridi - Allyn Butterfield)

Offering from Thailand

A prefatory apology for this oriental visitor from far off Thailand (Siam) asks that American audiences be indulgent in view of the primitive conditions under which it was produced. Working facilities were extremely limited in the distant Far East and a daily temperature of 120 degrees within the studio is reported an example of the difficulties under which the film was made. The native cast underwent six months of rehearsal in order to speak the story's lines in English dialogue.

In spite of allowing the film all possible leniency, it is to be feared that screenings of the picture in this country will be limited to houses exhibiting novelty fare. The delivery of the English dialogue is done so woodenly in a style reminiscent of a dated melodramatic piece and the acting is so amateurish that whatever charm and unusualness the work possesses is vitiated by aping of studio practices beyond the capacity and facility of the East Indian workers.

When the story steps out of the Hollywood channels and goes native with court dances, elephant safaris or tribal battles, it becomes passably interesting and entertaining. Although the time of the story is placed back in the sixteenth century, the dialogue depicting the struggle between a peace-loving ruler and a neighboring potentate with an itch for expansion, is undertoned with double-meaning diplomatic parlance of today in the mentioning of mutual assistance pacts and non-aggression alliances.

Billy the Kid's Fightlng Pals

(Producers)

Bob Steele Western

Although "Billy the Kid" (or Bob Steele) is still in tiptop fighting and shooting shape, the followers of this western series will agree with the picture's title in awarding the lad's mustang companions, Al St. John and Carleton Young, equal billing and honor in the fabrication of generally acceptable action opus. St. John in particular can be credited with much of the film's entertainment results for the script allows him ample opportunity to display his keystone Cop comic talents in an impersonation of a fake marshal of a godless cowtown where a representative of law and order is lucky to live beyond sundown.

"Billy" and his pals, while running out on a locale that has grown too hot for the welfare of the trio, come to a town which is being victimized by a local banker, a sagebrush dictator, as he pursues a career for power and runs on the side a private line of smuggling. "The Kid" and company see their collective duty and do it through the assistance of their active fists and ready firearms. The villains are corralled and peace comes to the district.

Pirates of the Seven Seas

(Film Alliance of the U.S.)

Sea Melodrama

Piracy and mutiny and other major crimes of the sea are the themes of this nautical melodrama starring John Lodge. With a locale of the Crina Seas and an abundance of action, the film, nevertheless, lacks the acting and directorial qualities to put it above out-of-the-ordinary melodramas.

Lodge is captain of a tramp steamer engaged in the precarious business of smuggling pearls across the China Seas. This state of affairs brings him into contact with a mutiny aboard. His crew mutinies to get the pearls and both crew and passengers are captured by a sea raider. Through subterfuge, and with the aid of a woman passenger with whom the captain is in love, he outwits the pirate and is successful in saving the pearls, his passengers and crew.

Supporting John Lodge are Judy Kelly, Kenneth Kent, Louis Borell and Bertha Belmore portraying the never disturbed English woman. Harold Schuster directed the picture.

Roy Rogers Romp

Roy Rogers and George "Gabby" Hayes team up again in another of their superior western offerings. In fact, this current vehicle can be counted among the partnership's most successful bronco collaborations. The plot is nothing too new for boots and saddle narration but the conventionalized story routine is rigged out with such an abundance of action ingredients that the spectator will be too busy watching the gun and fist contests to notice the stereotyped scenario.

Roy is cast as an eastern newspaper man who goes west to investigate dirty work in the wide open spaces, where he takes to the stirrup and the six shooters as if to the manner born. The story is not too hectic to prevent Roy from offering in his shy style a couple of prairie song pieces. In addition to Hayes, who continues to offer quaint and comic assistance to the lead, exceptional supporting assistance is rendered by J. Farrell MacDonald as the local paper editor, Joan Woodbury, who brings to her part a talent and a grade of looks not usually associated with the superfluous feminine angle in western films, and Sally Payne as a tomboyish cowgirl with an adolescent crush on Rogers.

Power Dive

(Paramount - Producers Corp.)

Aviation Action

"Power Dive," first picture to be produced by William Pine and William Thomas' Producers Corporation of America for Paramount release, is a fast moving aviation action picture which tells its story so well that no apologies are needed for its modest budget.

It is crammed full of exciting incidents which depict test piloting and airplane building, and stars Richard Arlen who is to appear in two more aviation pictures for the same company. Others in the cast are Jean Parker, Helen Mack, Roger Pryor, Don Castle, Cliff Edwards, Billy Lee, Thomas Ross and Louis Jean Heydt.

James Hogan directed under Thomas, as executive producer, and John Rogers, as his associate.

The hero, a test pilot, attempts to keep his younger brother from flying and taking the risks he does. A conflict arises over a girl and the brothers, in a misunderstanding, are at odds. The climax of the story occurs when "Brad," having forced his brother to take to his parachute, brings down a new plane by cutting the control wires and wrapping them around his hands.

It is the type of picture which will please any audience seeking action and thrills.

Scotland Yard

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Problem of Identity

Against a background of present-day London, "Scotland Yard" unreels the story of a gentleman bank robber who joins the colors, is injured at Dunkirk, and re-emerges with the face of a bank director as the result of plastic surgery.

Cause of the mistake is a stolen brooch found on the robber, bearing the images of the director and his wife. Returning to the wife of the other man, he finds they are in love, and goes out to help win the war as the best solution to the problem.

Henry Wilcoxon is the reformed robber, Nancy Kelly the wife, and John Loder the husband, whose treatment of his wife may best be described as unfriendly. Edmund Gwenn is a Scotland Yard inspector who helps solve the problem, and Melville Cooper is a psychiatrist.

Sol Wurtzel was executive producer and Norman Foster directed in a manner utilizing suspense and thrills derived from pursuit of the robber and scenes of London being bombed.

Previewed in studio projection room.—WALTER SELDEN.

Men of the F. B. I.—1941

(March of Time - RKO)

G-Men in Action

March of Time presents another in the series of subjects revealing how the American people and government are preparing to defend themselves against any internal or external situation that might arise. In "Men of the F.B.I.—1941" the new work of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in tracking down saboteurs and espionage agents and the training necessary for the 2,000 G-Men now in the field to find and capture the subversive groups is depicted. To show more clearly to the audience March of Time presents a dramatization of the "Stuart Case"—a typical recent instance of espionage involving murder and burglary in a factory working on defense orders. The sequence illustrates the painstaking methods used by the Bureau in assembling, analyzing and piecing together the bits of evidence necessary to find and convict the nation's internal army of foreign spies.—Running time, 19 minutes.

This Is England

(Columbia)

England Today

Following such subjects as "London Can Take It" and "Christmas Under Fire," Columbia presents "This Is London," produced in England by the Crown Film Unit and narrated by Ed Murrow, European director of the Columbia Broadcasting System. In "This Is England," the peoples of the various sections of the country are seen at work, preparing to further defend themselves from the totalitarian tentacles of the enemy, voluntary war duty, finding momentary recluse and freedom of war worries in churches and music halls, and enjoying the music of the Halle Orchestra playing Beethoven's Fifth and the Huddersfield Choir singing the Messiah. All in all, the film shows that England still has her "thumbs-up."—Running time, 10 minutes.

The Seeing Eye

(Vitaphone)

Broadway Brevity

The work of the Seeing Eye Institute of Morristown, N. J., in training shepherd dogs to be the "eyes" of the blind is depicted in this two-reel Broadway Brevity short subject produced by Jerome Hill for Warner Brothers. Herein is shown the painstaking care necessary for the complete training of the animals and the persons they are to lead. The animal, upon completion of the fundamental drills is assigned to a sightless individual. From there and under the guidance of an instructor both the dog and master learn to cooperate until both have acquired confidence in each other. Excellently produced and directed the Institute is cooperating with Warners in publicizing the film, while the motion picture company has assigned some of its feature film publicists to the subject.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Highways of New England

(Emerson Yorke)

Travel Tour

Another in the travel films produced and distributed by Emerson Yorke, this, through the medium of the camera takes the audience on a tour through northern New England. Opening with scenes of the more ancient methods of transportation the subject then visits the places of historical interest and emphasizes the importance of the bridges, roads and highways. Presented by the State Highway Departments of Vermont and New Hampshire and narrated by Alois Havrilla, the subject, produced in color, is an interesting and revealing subject.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Postpone Golf

The Philadelphia Variety Club has postponed the date of its annual golf tournament from June 18th to September 19th.

PRODUCERS BUY 110 STORIES IN TWO MONTHS FOR 1941-42 FILM SCHEDULES

Paramount Purchases "Lady in the Dark" for $285,000; 30-Word Idea Brings $10,000; Five Plays Acquired in March

Further continuing their survey for possible screen material to complete company programs for this year and building their story vaults for next season, Hollywood producers purchased during February 55 properties. Of these 36 were original stories, eight were stage productions of the past and current season, and 11 were books including three published magazine stories and one newspaper comic strip.

Highlight of the February acquisitions was the purchase by Paramount of the current Broadway stage production of a psychological drama starring Gertrude Lawrence, "Lady In the Dark." The company first announced they had paid substantially more than $275,000 for the play and the figure since the first announcement has been authoritatively set at $285,000. Paramount also paid somewhere in the neighborhood of $300,000 for "Abie's Irish Rose," in 1928, and Metro Goldwyn Mayer paid nearly a half-million dollars for "Ben Hur" in 1926. Paramount, nevertheless, holds the all-time high and undisputed record for a novel. The company paid $150,000 to Ernest Hemingway in October for his latest "For Whom the Bell Tolls."

Same Number in March

In March the same number, 55 stories, was acquired, including 31 original stories, five stage productions and 19 books which also includes two magazine stories, one film and one newspaper and radio serial.

During March, Bruce Manning, a producer, purchased from Jack Rubin, an exploitation agent, and Oscar Rodney, a radio idea man, an idea for a screen romance to star Charles Boyer. The two authors presented a 30-word verbal outline of a possible screen story. Producer Manning immediately paid a sum of $10,000 to produce a film incorporating their idea.

February's purchases with all available credits, follow:

AIR RAID, an original story concerning the current dangers that threaten the modern cities of today purchased by Clarence Brown.

ARIZONA CYCLONE, an original story acquired for production by Universal.

CIMARRON, the Edna Ferber novel which RKO produced as a motion picture some years ago with Richard Dix in the starring role. The screen rights have been purchased from that company by MGM.

HOW TO KEEP YOUR HUSBAND FROM GETTING AHEAD, a magazine story by Clara Belle Thompson and Margaret Lukes Wise published in Woman's Day and purchased by MGM.

HURRICANE SMITH, an original story concerning a metropolitan fugitive, acquired by Republic as a vehicle for John Wayne.

IF WINTER COMES, an original story purchased by MGM from David O. Selznick, who previously owned the screen rights. The picture was filmed in 1923 with Percy Marmont.

I GIVE MY LIFE, an original story acquired for production by E. B. Derr.

IS THIS OUR LIFE, a novel by Ellen Glasgow purchased by Warner Brothers as a possible vehicle for Errol Flynn and Olivia de Havilland. The story concerns several distinguished Virginia families.

JOAN OF PARIS, an original story concerning a modern "Joan of Arc," in modern Paris. The story will be used as a vehicle for Michele Morgan, French actress who recently came to this country, and was purchased for the star by RKO.

JOHNNY EAGER, an original story acquired by MGM concerning the Chicago underworld.

JOURNEY INTO FEAR, a novel by Eric Ambler acquired by RKO as a starring picture for Michele Morgan.

LADIES IN RETIREMENT, the Broadway stage play of last season by Edward Percy and Reginald Denham purchased by Columbia for production by Gilbert Miller and Lester Cowan.

LADY CAME TO STAY, THE, an original story purchased for production by Paramount.

LADY IN THE DARK, the current Broadway stage play starring Gertrude Lawrence purchased by Paramount at a reported price of $285,000.

LAW AND ORDER, an original story acquired by Fox.

LOUISIANA PURCHASE, the Broadway stage production of the past season produced by Buddy G. de Sylva and acquired by Paramount for $150,000.

MAN KILLER, a magazine story by Raoul Whitefield which appeared as "Hot Nocturne." Warners have purchased the story as a possible vehicle for James Cagney and Olivia de Havilland.

MEN FROM THE CITY, an original story concerning a wanted man hiding out in a small town. The property has been acquired by MGM and Robert Sinclair will direct.

MEN OF THE MOUNTED, an original story acquired for production by Universal.

MEN OF THE TIMBERLINE, also an original story, acquired by Universal.

MR. BUG GOES TO TOWN, an original story purchased by Max Fleischer and to be produced as a full-length feature cartoon.

MOB TOWN, an original story purchased for film production by Universal.

MURDER BY PROXY, an original story purchased by Sam Katzman for production at Monogram.

Stage Comedy Required

MY SISTER EILEEN, the Broadway comedy stage play produced by Max Gordon and based on the stories by Ruth McKenny. The property has been acquired by Columbia.

An Open Letter To EXHIBITORS

WE were glad to get Hugh Quigley's challenge asking "what you do for the exhibitors." In answering it, we are given a chance to use this ad space for something besides the usual congratulatory messages that no one, except the proof-reader, ever reads.

¶ Making pictures is just half our job. The other half is to help in the selling of them. The exhibitors have no easy job, in selling their merchandise, so we have always tried to do our best in aiding in their efforts. We know, and realize perhaps selfishly, that the longer the exhibitors sell our pictures successfully, the longer will we be asked to make the pictures. And we want to continue making pictures.

¶ First, we lend all our co-operative assistance to the studio boys in the matter of advertising, publicity and exploitation. One member of our staff had several years' newspaper reporter, editor and advertising agency experience. This aids and coordinates efforts of the picture and radio studio publicity departments. Definite publicity plans have been followed to capture solid support rather than problematical "gush" story notoriety.

¶ But our efforts to help the exhibitor don't end there. In fact, that's only a minor start in our plans.

¶ We maintain a large staff to supervise our other endeavors, all of which are done in a more intimate manner, a more personalized service that keeps us in constant and favorable touch with Mr. and Mrs. John Public. It is through this method of creating good-will and drawing attention to our pictures, that we do, we believe, accomplish our greatest help to the exhibitors.

¶ Our fan mail, for instance, is a great case in point. We handle that ourselves. Several secretaries and a mail bureau are required, for we feel every fan who is interested enough to write us is worthy of a courteous response. Any advertising expert will agree that direct contact is the best form of exploitation. We fill every request for an autographed picture gratis and we send 8 x 10 prints on good stock, not snapshots at two-bits a copy.

¶ Our correspondence with fans invites criticism and we've received no end of helpful suggestions. This keeps us posted on the public trends and desires and it keeps the public informed, in the exchange of letters, on our forthcoming releases.

¶ Nor is this correspondence restricted to picture fans. It also encompasses the radio and recording listeners and amounts to no small totals.

¶ Our charity efforts, although not designed by any means as a means of exploitation, have created endless good-will. We have always kept this subject and our efforts therein sub-rosa, but with this going to you boys in the trade, rather than to the public, it can be mentioned briefly in passing. Bing has been making a number of golf appearances through the country for war relief, as you doubtless know. Right now, for that matter, he is making such an appearance throughout northern California. Most of our charities are direct donations to organizations of all denominations. One item, for instance, is the donation of all royalties on the recording of "Silent Night" and "Adeste Fidelis". This year this item alone amounted to more than $4,700.00. This charity work has created endless good-will and thus promoted box-office even though it has never been intended for that purpose.

¶ Bing started in radio, and it was his popularity in that field that created the demand for him in pictures. Now, each enhances his value to the other and on every program we attempt to work in plugs, not only for our currently released pictures, but those of the guest stars as well. With more than 20,000,000 listeners being told of these facts, this has proven to be beneficial to exhibitors at the box-office.

¶ Decca sold 485,000 of Bing's records during January. Among these demonstrators going right into the homes of your clients, were the tunes from the pictures you are playing. Not just our pictures, but any pictures containing good tunes which Bing can handle.

¶ In our case, song effort dovetails with radio and recordings in the attempt to whet interest in the products you play. To insure that the effort whets and does not satiate we secured an interest in a music publishing firm and we battle the racket to get at least one number, especially if it's the picture title, in top popularity when the picture is released. Songs must be heard a few times to be appreciated. When we control publishing of the scores, we can guarantee the songs will be popular but not stale when you play the picture. But it takes "hit" songs, and to guarantee them we first secured our own song-writing teams. They haven't missed in a single picture to date.

¶ These are among the principal things we attempt to do for exhibitors. We are open to criticisms and suggestions. Let's hear from you.

MAJORS' REALIGNMENTS OF FIELD FORCES CONTINUE FOR DECREE SALES

RKO, U.A., Paramount Shift Districts and Personnel in Policy Moves; UA Regional Meetings To Start on April 28th

Realignment of distribution forces for selling under the consent decree continued this week with RKO creating a new sales district in the Rocky Mountain area and shifting personnel, United Artists naming a new district head and other companies announcing plans and policies for the 1941-42 season as well as activities of sales drives which must be completed on the current product before the various organizations are ready for blocks of five selling as required by the consent decree.

Paramount and MGM were among the first to realign field sales staffs in preparation for decree selling, as previously reported. Paramount completed western reorganization Wednesday.

United Artists this week announced that its 1941-42 sales convention would again be held regionally, but that instead of starting on April 14th, previous tentative date, they would commence on Monday, April 28th, in New York, spreading immediately thereafter to New Orleans, Cleveland, Chicago and San Francisco. The two-weeks' postponement was taken, the management said in New York, Tuesday night, "because of newly-formulated plans that will expand the releasing program for the coming season." Arthur Kelly, vice-president in charge of sales, will preside at the five meetings, assisted by Harry L. Gold and Haskell M. Masters, eastern and western sales managers, respectively.

United Artists has advanced the start of its 1941-42 selling season to May to begin immediately after the regional meetings.

RKO Sets New Sales District

Ned E. Depinet, vice-president of RKO Radio, has announced the establishment of a new sales district including the Denver and Salt Lake City branch offices a number of other personnel shifts in preparations for operations under the consent decree selling system.

Harold C. Fuller, former manager of the Salt Lake City exchange, has been named district manager for the Rocky Mountain district. He joined the company in 1931, starting as a salesman in the Salt Lake City office. Headquarters for the new district will be Denver.

B. G. Kranze, former Albany manager, has been promoted to the Cleveland branch succeeding George Lefko who resigned. He joined the company in 1931 as a salesman in New York.

Other changes announced by Mr. Deninet were as follows:

Max Westebbe, until the war, Holland manager for RKO, was appointed Albany manager, succeeding Mr. Kranze.

B. J. McCarthy, salesman in Buffalo, was named manager of the Denver branch, succeeding J. H. Ashby, resigned.

L. S. Gruenberg, St. Louis salesman, was promoted to the managership of the Salt Lake City Office, succeeding Mr. Fuller.

Clarence B. Wilson, booker at the Dallas office, was promoted to salesman in the same office, filling the vacancy caused by the recent death of J. E. Huey.

Ed. J. Smith, Sr., salesman in Des Moines, was transferred to Buffalo as a salesman to succeed B. J. McCarthy.

The billings in the Ned Depinet Drive for its first 10 weeks show a substantial increase over a similar period for the 1940 campaign, Leo Devaney, captain of the drive forces, said this week on his return from a tour of the company's exchanges in the United States and Canada, along with Harry Michalson, short subjects sales manager. The tour began on February 25th. Mr. Devaney said defense money was being spent generously around the country and that theatre grosses were definitely on the uptrend.

Andy Smith, sales manager of RKO, will be honored in the last two weeks of the Ned Depinet Drive, the dates being from April 26th to May 9th. Sales heads pledging a record in honor of Mr. Smith include Bob Mochrie, Eastern division sales manager; Cresson E. Smith, Western division sales manager; Gus Schaefer, Northeastern district manager; Nat Levy, Eastern district manager; C. Boasberg, Eastern central district manager; David Prince, Southeastern district manager; W. E. Branson, Midwestern district manager; L. E. Goldhammer, Prairie District manager; J. H. MacIntyre, Western district manager. Leo Devaney, the drive captain, is Canadian division sales manager.

New United Artists District Head Named

Harry L. Gold, vice-president and Eastern general sales manager of United Artists, announced this week that John J. Dervin had been named district manager of the Southern district which includes the Dallas, New Orleans, Atlanta and Charlotte exchange territories. Mr. Dervin was formerly manager of the United Artists branch in Boston.

A. I. Weiner, manager of the Pittsburgh branch, will succeed Mr. Dervin in Boston and Nat Beier, sales supervisor in New York, will head the Pittsburgh office.

Maurice Silverstone, chief of operations for United Artists, went to Hollywood this week for studio conferences. Arthur Kelly, vice-president in charge of sales, also has been on the West Coast.

David O. Selznick will produce two films for United Artists release during 1941-42. The titles have not been announced yet.

The complete United Artists schedule is expected to include from 20 to 22 pictures for the new season, with Alexander Korda producing four. James Roosevelt will not produce for the company on the 1941-42 schedule, it was reported.

Negotiations have continued on the purchase of the one-fifth ownership of the company held by the estate of Douglas Fairbanks, it was reported from Hollywood. Differences of opinion on the value of the stock were said to be the chief obstacle to the sale.

Paramount Completes Western Reorganization

Reorganization of Paramount's western sales staff was completed this week with the announcement by George A. Smith, western division sales manager, of several promotions and transfers.

C. L. Weaver, formerly sales manager at Dallas, has been appointed branch manager at Oklahoma City. Charles L. Dees, whom Mr. Weaver succeeded, has been transferred to Dallas as branch manager.

L. W. McClintock, present manager at Dallas, will become manager at the Memphis exchange on April 14th. Mr. McClintock will succeed W. F. Bugie at Memphis, who joins the sales staff at Dallas. Succeeding Mr. Weaver as Dallas is A. F. Larned, who returns to that office after seven months in Memphis.

Columbia has announced that for the first time in its history it will co-star outdoor players in two series of eight films each. Charles Starrett and Russell Hayden, "Lucky" in the "Hopalong Cassidy" films, will be teamed in one series and Bill Elliott, "Wild Bill Hickok," and Tex Ritter in another.

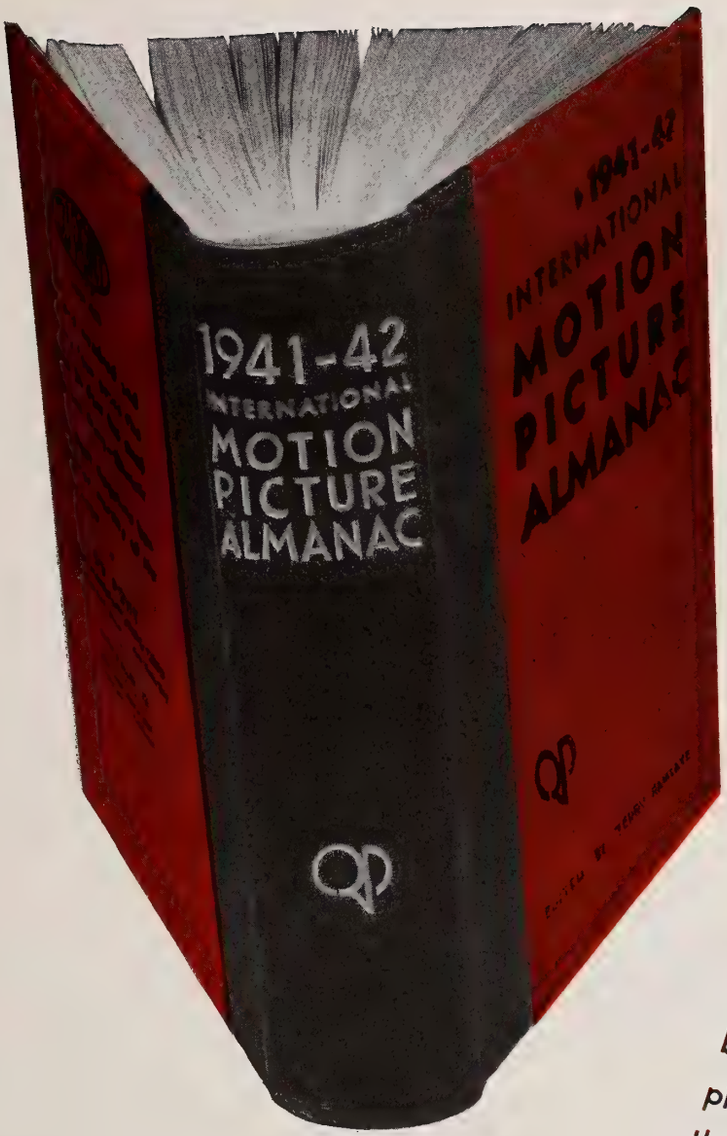
Columbia has set a record in new accounts with approximately 1,000 more contracts on its books for the 1940-41 season than was listed last year, it was announced this week, as the "Columbia Exhibitors Good Will Campaign" completed its fifth week in the drive that will end May 30th. It was further reported that Columbia also would establish a new all-time record in billings for the current fiscal year.

A special conference and press showing will be held in New York on "Penny Serenade," it was reported. Exploitation men will confer with David Lipton, advertising and publicity director.

The annual convention of Monogram franchise holders, which was held at the Hotel Roosevelt, Hollywood, ended last Sunday after W. Ray Johnston, president, and other Monogram officials announced that the company would deliver its entire schedule this year and was prepared for a boom year under the consent decree for the 1941-42 season.

Only seven Monogram productions remain to be delivered on the current schedule, it was announced by Trem Carr, director, at the convention. Two of the group will go into immediate production, "Black Beauty" by Anna Sewall, starting on April 15, to be followed by "Army Hostess," one of the company's specials on May 1st.

Steve Broidy, general sales manager, said that the record of accomplishment in delivering 100 per cent of its promised features for the current season will be maintained in 1941-42.



Mr. Johnston said that each Monogram branch head will be permitted to evolve selling

5,027 WORKING IN WARNER STUDIOS

With an "all-out" on production schedules Warner Brothers celebrated a red letter period last week. It was announced that the studio had 5,027 workers engaged in shooting eight films and preparing 11 more for the cameras, breaking the previous record of 4,874. The breakdown revealed 4,300 employes on general and mechanical staffs, 88 stars and feature players under contract at work, 24 outside players on one-picture deals, 465 extras, and 150 players and workers on location at the San Diego Naval Base for "Dive Bomber."

Operation for the next three months is scheduled to continue at the same pace, with a full program of short subject production planned. The studio commissary is operating on four luncheon shifts.

N. Y. Legislature Adjourns Ending Regulation Threat

Exhibition as well as distribution escaped the legislator's scythe in at least one legislature this year. The New York session ended Thursday, April 3rd, without enacting the many measures of regulation proposed.

Apart from this exhibitors this week watched passage of an anti-theatre proposal in the Iowa law chamber (allowing use of public school buildings for public purposes): a bill in the Wisconsin Senate taxing distributors 50 cents per 1,000 feet of film; a 10 per cent admissions tax in the South Carolina Senate; and an anti-ASCAP proposal in the Ohio House.

Bills passed by New York legislative session, which attracted exhibitor interest, were the following:

The Davidson measure, prohibiting theatre owners (excepting owners of film theatres) from excluding persons of more than 21 years who are not breaching the peace; the Ehrlich bill, giving local education boards the sole right to grant written permission to act, to juveniles; the Janes-Manning bill, permitting the head of a community to authorize child acting, if it is for a non-profit making unit; the Andrews andti-discrimination bill, penalizing discrimination by any firm or individual; the Coudert bill, giving ticket broker's the right to redeem or resell for more than 75 cents tickets not previously sold.

Other Bills Voted Down

Quashed by the same body were the following: the Burrows anti-discrimination bill; a tax on chain theatres; a bill providing that plans of buildings, including theatres, be first submitted to the state Industrial Commissioner; a three per cent sale tax; legalization of Bingo; and legalization of lotteries.

The state's legislature also defeated the Bewley bill, which was only introduced March 28th, and which would have taxed 16 mm films twice the amount 35 mm films are taxed, in order, its proponent claimed, to equalize the reviewing work of the state's film division. The tax would have been $6 per 1,000 feet on original film, $4 per same on copies.

The Iowa proposal to open public school buildings for public purposes was opposed by the Allied units of that state and Nebraska, who foresee competition when the buildings are used by community groups, for entertainment. When Representative C. F. Shimanek of Elkader attempted to amend the bill so that groups using school films would be prohibited from charging admission, the amendment was voted down.

The Governor's signature was awaited this week.

The same legislature last week rejected the Murray daylight saving bill, permitting local option. It was the fifth attempt to have the bill passed. Theatre operators, labor representatives, and farmers opposed it.

The new general appropriation bill, this week being given a second reading in the South Carolina Senate, would levy a flat ten per cent tax on admissions, and a surtax of from three to ten per cent on gross admission receipts, with population of cities in which theatres are located governing the rate.

The Ohio House bill, opposing monopoly in performance rights of instrumental and vocal music, and called an anti-ASCAP measure, is expected to die in subcommittee.

Illinois theatre sign men are opposing a House bill, taxing each advertising sign along a public highway, $1, and requiring them to be 35 feet from the road.

CINCINNATI OWNERS WANT TAX CUT

The substantial reduction in theatre license fees is asked by the Greater Cincinnati Independent Exhibitors Association in a resolution presented to J. C. Brennan, Clerk of the City Council, by Saul Greenberg, legal counsel for the exhibitors.

Mr. Greenberg pointed out that theatres in Columbus and Cleveland were not charged license fees, and that the fee in Youngstown ranged only between $40 and $100, according to the size of the house, whereas Cincinnati theatres were charged $100 annually for houses with less than 300 seating capacity, while houses seating more than 300 pay $100 for the first 100 seats, and $50 for each additional 100 seats or fraction thereof. He requested that Cincinnati exhibitors be given an opportunity to appear before City Council and discuss the issue in detail.

Schenck Tax Case Continues

Testimony and cross-examination of witnesses in behalf of Joseph H. Moskowitz and Joseph M. Schenck, Twentieth Century-Fox executives, on trial in New York on Federal income tax charges, neared its third week this weekend as chief defense counsel Harold H. Corbin called more accountants, character witnesses, film executives and the defendants themselves to the stand.

The trial is before Federal Judge Grover M. Moscowitz and a jury in U. S. District Court at Foley Square, New York. United States Attorney Mathias F. Correa is representing the Government.

Myron A. Finke, tax accountant, testified that his examination of the Schenck tax returns showed an overpayment of $55,442. Carol F. Hall, also an accountant, substantiated the claim, and said Mr. Schenck applied for a refund on his 1937 tax payment.

Character witnesses included James A. Farley, former Postmaster General; Dr. A. H. Giannini, retired head of the Bank of America, Robert F. Kane and Martin Quigley.

Mr. Moskowitz took the stand in his own behalf to recite the story of his rise from office boy to Eastern representative of Mr. Schenck. He explained his procedure in making out the Schenck tax returns, said Government tax agents had approved his methods of computation, and denied entering fraudulent or unverified business deductions. On Monday he told the court that Mr. Schenck merely signed the returns made out from his personal and business ledgers.

Mr. Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox film corporation was to be called to the stand by Harold H. Corbin, defense counsel, following Mr. Moskowitz.

Sales Personnel Shifted to Meet Selling Changes

policies best suited to the particular territory. He also remarked that the consent decree offers the greatest opportunities ever presented to Monogram and the company expects to take full advantage of the situation.

Pictures shown to delegates were "Roar of the Press," Scott R. Dunlap production, featuring Wallace Ford, Jean Parker and Jed Prouty; "The Invisible Ghost," Bela Lugosi, produced by Sam Katzman, and "Break the News," Rene Clair musical with words and music by Cole Porter, starring Maurice Chevalier, Jack Buchanan and June Knight. Filming of "Red Head," I. E. Chadwick production with June Lang, Johnny Downs and Eric Blore, and "King of the Zombies," Lindsley Parsons, was witnessed by those attending the meeting.

Sussman Honored in 20th Century-Fox Drive

William Sussman, eastern division manager for Twentieth Century-Fox, will be honored in a sales drive from May 4 to June 7 in observance of his fifth year in that position. Mr. Sussman joined 20th-Fox as assistant to the late William Clark, then general sales manager. In 1936 he succeeded E. C. Grainger, now head of the Shea circuit, as Eastern sales manager.

The drive will be backed by Edgar Moss, Atlantic district manager; Thomas H. Bailey, Northeast district manager; George A. Roberts, mid-eastern district manager, and Harry H. Buxbaum, New York district manager. Ten exchanges will participate in what is said to be the first drive of the company in honor of a division manager.

Universal has announced that L. J. McGinley, manager of the Seattle branch, has been transferred in the same capacity to Indianapolis, following the death of H. H. Hull.

Foster Blake, a salesman in the Los Angeles branch, has been promoted to manager of the Seattle exchange.

Nate J. Blumberg, president of Universal, and J. H. Seidelman, vice-president and foreign manager, were scheduled to return next Sunday from Panama where they attended the company's Latin American sales meeting. Mr. Blumberg plans to leave immediately for the Coast for an extended studio visit. J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board, flew to Panama to attend the Latin American sales meeting.

The last four weeks of the William Scully Drive will be known in Philadelphia as the George Schwartz Appreciation Month in honor of the local branch manager.

Warner home office executives, Gradwell Sears, Sam Schneider, Carl Leserman and Mort Blumenstock return to New York Tuesday from Burbank, where they conferred with Harry M. Warner, J. L. Warner, Hal Wallis and Charlie Einfeld on plans for forthcoming product. They were away two weeks.

Fifty executives, branch and district managers and supervisors of Ross Federal Service, Inc., met last week in Chicago to discuss plans for the Spring and Summer. Present were representatives from the South and Central sections of the country. The home office delegation was headed by Harry A. Ross, president; others were: Densmore A. Ross, general manager; Clifford B. Ross; Frank X. Miske; Fred Magee; B. E. Jolley; Ben Spurling; W. J. Shine.

Producers Releasing Corporation has finished and delivered 21 of the 38 pictures on the 1940-41 schedule and six go before the cameras this month and six more in May, it was announced this week.

Youngman RKO General Counsel, Others Changed

The resignation, last week, of William Mallard as general counsel and secretary of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, in New York, has resulted in a series of corporate personnel changes, topped by the appointment of Gordon E. Youngman as company counsel and J. Miller Walker as secretary.

Mr. Mallard left the corporation to enter private law practice, relinquishing, also, his posts of vice-president, secretary and general counsel and director of Radio-Keith-Orpheum's subsidiary, RKO Radio Pictures Corporation, and causing election or reelection of the following slate of RKO Radio officers:

Chairman of the board and president, George J. Schaefer; vice-president, Ned E. Depinet; vice-president, W. J. Merrill; vice-president, Phil Reisman; vice-president and general counsel, Gordon E. Youngman; vice-president, J. R. McDonough; treasurer, W. H. Clark; secretary, J. Miller Walker; assistant treasurer, George Muchnic; assistant treasurer, G. B. Howe; assistant secretary, J. J. Nolan; assistant secretary, George Muchnic.

Mr. Mallard's private law practice will be in New York, where he has served in various legal posts at RKO and its subsidiaries for 10 years. He was previously associated with the New York law firm of Cravath, de Gersdorff, Swaine and Wood. He was elevated to the post of general counsel from assistant secretary and member of the RKO legal staff. (Picture on page 10.)

Mr. Walker becomes company secretary from the position of assistant secretary. J. J. Nolan, vice-president in charge of production, becomes assistant secretary.

RKO Radio directors now include Ned E. Depinet, James G. Harbord, J. R. McDonough, John E. Parsons, Richard C. Patterson, Jr., N. Peter Rathvon, George J. Schaefer, Lunsford P. Yandell and Gordon Youngman.

The board of Radio-Keith-Orpheum on Friday, April 4th, declared a dividend of $2 per share on its cumulative six per cent preferred stock, payable on May 1, 1941, to stockholders of record on April 21, 1941. Payment of this dividend will leave accrued and unpaid preferred dividends as of May 2, 1941, of $5.50 per share.

It was announced that the payment authorized was not necessarily to be deemed the inauguration of regular dividends on the preferred stock. It was said to be the opinion of the directors that substantially improved results in the first quarter justified the payment now authorized, but that the board recognized that impaired foreign markets and other uncertainties which impelled the withholding of dividends during 1940 still continue and may affect dividend policy during the remaining year.

Frederick Ullman, Jr., RKO producer has been recalled to his former post of operating head of RKO Pathe News to succeed Frank R. Donovan who has submitted his resignation.

Before going to the Coast Studio Mr. Ullman was in charge of the RKO Pathe newsreel as well as the short subject production handled by the company. For some years he was in charge of the commercial department. Mr. Donovan, who has resigned, in addition to beng operating head of the newsreel, actively directed the Information Please series and other shorts.

General Theatres Income Is Up

Consolidated net profit of General Theatres Equipment Corporation for 1940, after all charges, including Federal income and excess profits taxes, amounted to $849,820, compared with $696,062 for 1939, according to the annual report released Tuesday. The 1940 earnings were equivalent to $1.45 per share on 586,087 shares of capital stock outstanding at the year-end compared with $1.17 per share earned on 592,887 shares in the preceding year.

Earle E. Hines, president of the corporation, said in his letter to the stockholders that "the outlook for 1941 is for capacity production by the manufacturing facilities of the subsidiaries and a somewhat better than normal business in the sale of motion picture theatre equipment and supplies."

Commenting on the company's part in the defense program, Mr. Hines said that International Projector Corporation, a subsidiary, was now manufacturing under license marine instruments known as depth finders. Contracts for these instruments have been received from the United States Government and deliveries were begun in the last half of 1940. International Projector has also acquired all the stock of Bludworth, Inc., manufacturers of radio direction finders also used on marine vessels. This corporation and another subsidiary, Cine-Simplex Corporation, have been increasingly engaged in the manufacture of parts and subassemblies of aviation instruments of importance in the defense efforts undertaken by the Government.

Provision for Federal income and excess profits taxes for 1940 amounted to $259,300 compared with $104,600 provided for Federal income tax in 1930.

POLICE RAID COOKING SCHOOLS AS LOTTERIES

Philadelphia Circuit Promotion Halted Because of Door Prize; Two Theatre Games Allowed

As the courts in Philadelphia ruled theatre chance games were games of skill, the city police were raiding a cooking show at a theatre on the charge that it was an illegal lottery because of a door prize feature.

"Quizzo" and "Lucky 13," successors to "Bingo" in the city's neighborhood movie houses, were officially pronounced games of skill by Quarter Sessions Court Judge Eugene V. Alessandroni, in a test suit. His ruling carried a "but" which is big enough to warrant police action if operators yield to temptation to turn the games into lotteries. Police, however, permitted the cooking schools conducted in Warner houses by the Philadelphia Record to continue on Wednesday after the paper agreed to award prizes for a quiz contest rather than for door-stub numbers.

"The conduct of this game was apparently legal," said the court. "We cannot help but feel that since control over not only the choice of the question but also over its composition and the answer thereto considered to be correct, is vested exclusively in the management, unscrupulous manipulation of these factors can readily change this from what appears to be a game of skill into one of chance." It was pointed out that this possibility left final supervision of the conduct of the game to police authorites.

Police Raid Theatre

Also last Thursday, police raided the Sedgewick Theatre, a Warner Brothers house, where more than 700 women were attending a kitchen and cooking show prior to the matinee. Entry was made after ten door prizes had been awarded with 20 additional lucky numbers to be selected for as many additional prizes.

The cooking sessions were sponsored by the Philadelphia Record in co-operation with the Electrical Association of Philadelphia and conducted on Tuesdays and Thursdays, rotating at 21 neighborhood Warner theatres in the city. Police action at this time came as a surprise since the cooking schools have been in session for two years, this being the third time around the circuit.

Police contended that the award of door prizes was akin to Bank Night, every admission ticket being numbered with the wininng numbers drawn as for a Bank Night. Value of the prizes for the entire series of 21 sessions was set at $25,000 with a grand prize of a 1941 Ford De Luxe Tudor Sedan. The sessions were an advertising promotion on part of the newspaper, merchants buying space to exploit the school and contributing the prizes as well.

No Legal Issue Expected

It is not expected that the newspaper will make a legal issue of the matter. Attorneys for the Record are meeting with city authorities on the matter and it is expected that a different system for the distribution of prizes will be devised.

In Massachusetts a petition was introduced in the legislature to permit Bingo and Beano games. Under its terms the theatres would be given a state license to operate the games and a certain percentage of the profits would be given to the state. The petition provides that no prizes in excess of $100 shall be given in any one game and a special license fee of $100 would be charged against exhibitors. The old age fund would benefit if the bill becomes a law.

In Chicago, Screeno, which a short time ago was reinstated in a number of independent theatres, ended abruptly when police officers visited the various theatres and told the exhibitors that the game was a violation of the law and would have to cease. The exhibitors immediately complied with the police order.

In an effort to end games run for commercial purposes under the guise of charity, Providence, R. I., police have put into effect a new set of rules governing the chance games. Hereafter, under the state law passed three years ago, games must be conducted in the quarters of the organization.

Theatre bills that would license distributors and regulate Bank Nights were virtually killed in the House of the Iowa legislature through recommendations that they be postponed. Both of the bills have been opposed by the Allied Theatre Owners of Iowa and Nebraska.

Cincinnati reports a total attendance of 279,358 at 259 city-licensed chance game parties in that city during February, at which the gross was $206,505.68, with prizes totaling $49,803.80, leaving a net of $156,701.88 to sponsoring organizations, it was disclosed in a report of Police Chief Eugene T. Weatherly to City Manager C. O. Sherrill, who issues the playing permits. The average net cost per player was 55.1 cents. The January figures were 249 parties with attendance of 301,942; gross, $216,161.80; prizes, $52,474.74, and net, $163,687.06. The net cost per player during the month of January was 54.2 cents.

Aside from churches and charitable institutions, which are tax exempt, all Ohio institutions where chance games are played are required to take out an amusement license, and, like theatres, must pay the state a three per cent tax based on the gross receipts, which is comparable to the three per cent retail sales tax which the public pays in other lines.

Suit Brought in Ohio

In Troy, Ohio, Andrew Attenweiler, who, as a taxpayer, brought suit nearly two years ago against the Troy Amusement Co., seeking $500 exemplary damages and $10 as refund of admissions to the Mayflower, at which house he also sought to stop games on the ground of violation of the Ohio lottery law, has filed suit in the common pleas court, against the same defendants for $1,410.72 as principal, surety on bonds and attorney fees in the original action. He claims to have suffered damages totaling $487.50 and incurred liability to his counsel, Michael F. Morris, for $923.22.

Judge Alfred P. Dobson of the circuit court of Portland, Ore., has sustained the demurrer of James R. Bain, district attorney, and Martin T. Pratt, sheriff, to the complaint of the Rainier Theatres Corp. in its suit to enjoin the public officials from interfering with Quiz contests conducted weekly at the Oriental and Hollywood theatres in that city. The theatres corporation some time ago obtained a temporary injunction.

Judge Dobson held that Quiz contests in which the participants through a drawing gain an opportunity to win an award by answering questions constituted a lottery even though some degree of skill, knowledge and ability was required to answer the questions.

The drive against chance games in theatres has been relaxed by the Better Business Bureau in Pittsburgh, pending developments, according to George Dennison, Bureau manager, although it will be followed through as soon as the board of directors frames a program of official action. An informal meeting of Mr. Dennison, Executive Vice-President James Green of the Chamber of Commerce, Chamber President Frank Duggan, and representatives of the Harris Amusement Co. failed to reach any conclusion with the bureau officials contending that the continuance of games in motion picture houses was encouraging gambling as well as being the wrong kind of merchandising for theatres, and the Harris spokesman pointing out that games are maintained partly because of competition from other organizations that sponsor games from radio programs and offer prize money.

Although two letters were sent by the Bureau to more than 100 exhibitors, no replies promising support of the ban were forthcoming. Mr. Dennison bases his campaign on the court decision outlawing theatre games as the result of a plea in the Aliquippa case.

The Kiwanis Club recently issued a statement against theatre games. Next day an exhibitor retorted with the information that "the Kiwanis Club uses a door prize raffle as bait to keep up attendance at meetings."

Bingo and games of chance have been banned from all Roman Catholic parishes in the Scranton, Pa., diocese during Lent and on all Sundays during the year, according to the Lenten regulations announced by Bishop William J. Hafey. The ban on Bingo applies to Catholics as individuals as well as to the affairs conducted under church sponsorship.

Hinting that some court action would be taken soon, Mayor Walter Scott of Jackson, Miss., has warned that he would never permit Bank Nights to be operated in that community irrespective of a ruling by the state supreme court which said recently that Bank Night was "not a public nuisance."

Bingo bills seeking to substitute cash for merchandise prizes for church and organization games, and a bill to legalize horse-racing and pari-mutuel betting in Connecticut were rejected by the Judiciary Committee. Exhibitors who already find organization large-scale Bingo keen competition, were pleased not to have further privileges granted to these privileged games players, although no organized stand was taken at Hartford.

Variety Clubs Advance Plans for May Meet

Arrangements for the seventh annual national convention of the Variety Clubs of America to be held at the Hotel Traymore, in Atlantic City on May 15, 16 and 17 approached a final stage this week as national and local committees speeded action on their part in plans for the gathering. John H. Harris, of Pittsburgh, national chief barker and convention chairman, predicted a minimum attendance of 1,500 showmen from all parts of the nation in an address before Tent 13 in Philadelphia last week.

The Hotel Committee headed by Henry Friedman of Philadelphia this week announced reservations would be handled through special committees in each tent and planes would be coordinated so that members from each section can be located together in the Atlantic City hotel. The transportation committee under the chairmanship of Bill Clark of Philadelphia reports that special train sections and cars bound to the convention will be assembled in the Philadelphia yards of the Pennsylvania Railroad to run to Atlantic City as one record size special.

Variety announced Tuesday that J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, would be an honor guest, along with the Rev. Edward J. Flanagan, of Boys Town, Neb., and Fulton Oursler, editor of Liberty Magazine, along with others.

Registration Plans Completed

An honored guest committee has been set up in two sections to invite dignitaries to the meeting. Ned Depinet and Gradwell Sears will handle eastern arrangements while Walter Wanger, Bob O'Donnell and Paul Short will invite western guests. The Registration committee announces that registry procedure will be simplified and members will receive all badges and admission tickets on arrival at Philadelphia.

The five newsreels will cover the event.

Atlanta, Ga., Tent 21, this week claimed honors as the first Variety group to raise funds for the attendance of its entire membership at the national convention. Members are now arranging for time off from work for the trip to Atlantic City. Other cities also indicate that they will send record delegations. Mr. Harris reports that a top number of industry executives will be on hand. First executive registrations came from Neil Agnew, Sam Dembow, Leonard Goldenson and Claude Lee of Paramount.

United Artists will be host at a convention cocktail party at the Traymore on Saturday afternoon, May 17th, following the boardwalk parade, Arthur W. Kelly announced this week. Working on plans for the United Artists reception are Murray Silverstone, Harry Gold, Haskell Masters and Monroe Greenthal.

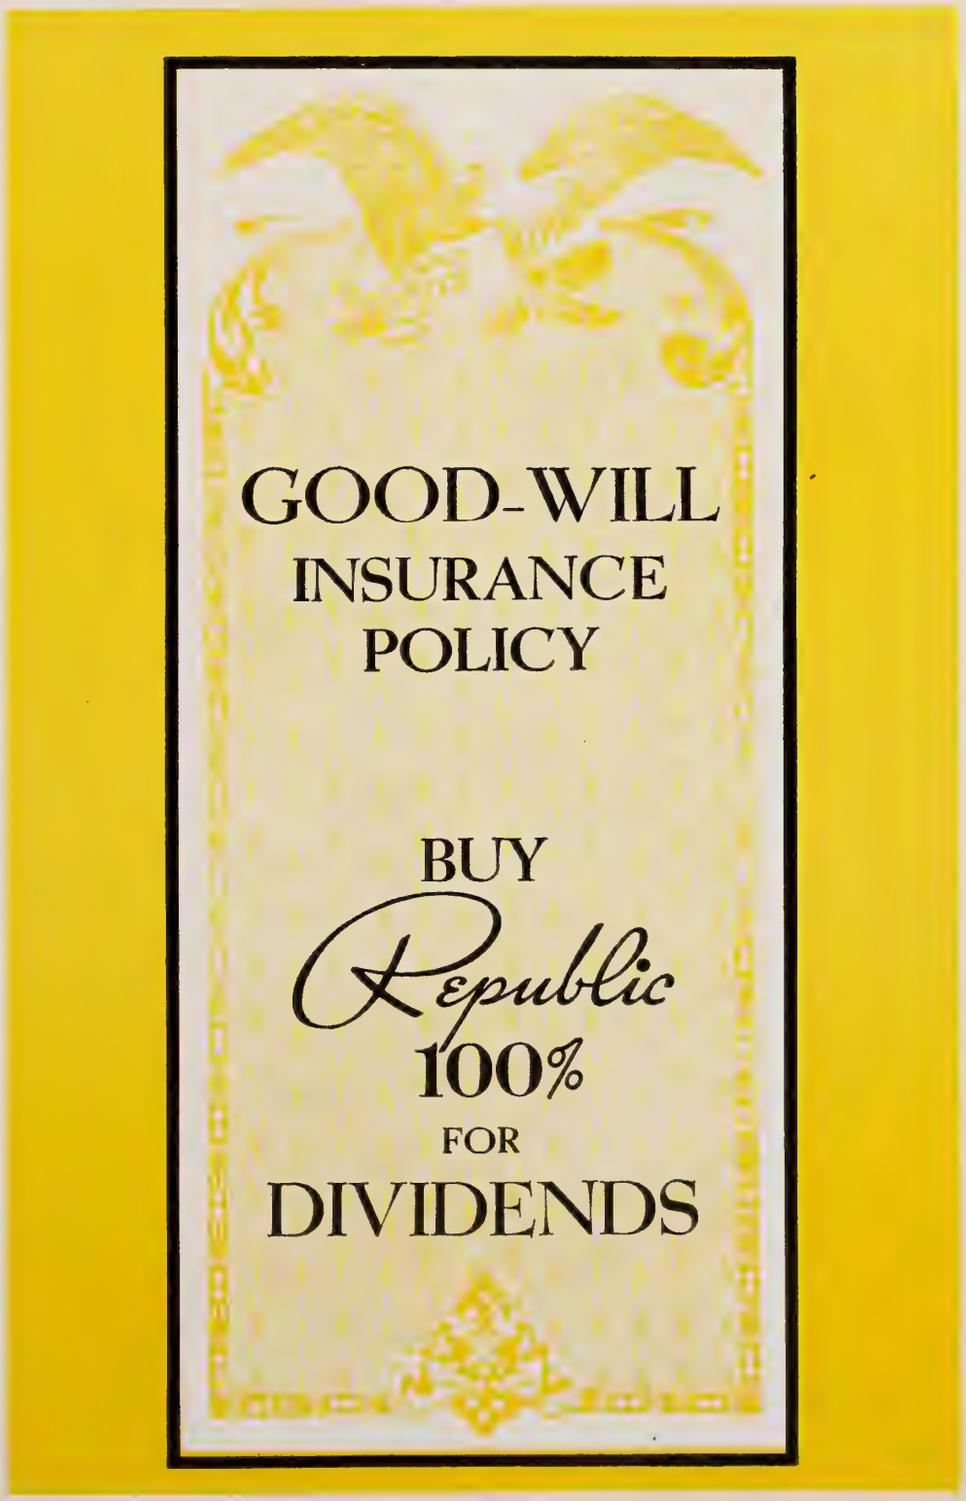
The annual Variety golf tournament will be played on the course of the Northfield Country Club at Atlantic City on Saturday morning, May 17th. Burt King of Dallas is chairman of the golf committee assisted by Sam Galanty of Washington and Johnny Howard, defending champion, from Detroit. Each tent is donating prizes valued at $25 each for individual and team winners in the golf tourney.

Presentation of the annual Variety Humanitarian Award and proceedings at the banquet on May 17th will be broadcast over nationwide radio hookups Dr. Leon Levy, chairman of the radio committee and chief barker of the Philadelphia tent reported this week.

The St. Louis Variety club this week reported that its first show for the benefit of infantile paralysis victims raised $3,000. Harry C. Arthur, Jr., is the local chief barker.

In Milwaukee the Variety Club has launched a drive to take over the city's free milk fund from the Junior Chamber of Commerce. The Variety men seek to raise $5,000 by September 1st. If they succeed the Junior Chamber of Commerce will surrender milk fund administration to the Variety club.

A Showmen's Club of Maryland has been organized at Baltimore with approximately 100 members enlisted in its charity and social program. Initial officers include: Robert Marhenke, president; Edward Silver, recording secretary; Michael Robert, financial secretary; and Jack Bock, sergeant-at-arms.



Darryl Zanuck Begins New Executive Term

Darryl Zanuck has begun his tenure of office under the contract given him last fall under the terms of which he will remain vice-president in charge of production for Twentieth Century-Fox until April, 1947.

Upon starting his new term of office he began production on "A Yank in the R.A.F." as the first picture scheduled for 1941-42 release.

Solomon in Chicago

Ed Solomon of the Twentieth Century-Fox publicity staff is on assignment in Chicago. George Frasor of the department is working in Kansas City.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

LADY IN QUESTION, THE: Rita Hayworth, Brian Aherne—Very good. Did a little above average business. Won't stand on your best date, although should be played by all means. Very pleasing. Played February 18.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

MEET BOSTON BLACKIE: Chester Morris, Rochelle Hudson—Very good picture from Columbia. It seems to have everything, action, comedy and suspense. Good business when doubled with "A Dangerous Game." Running time, 60 minutes. Played March 27-29.—R. F. Netzel, Palace Theatre, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

THIS THING CALLED LOVE: Melvyn Douglas, Rosalind Russell—Had a tie-up with an annual festival concerned with the college. Plenty of people came in their own right. In other words, it was a dandy show and they all seemed to like it a lot. No complaints at all! The extra advertising helped some here. It always does. Columbia knows how to turn out good comedies. Running time, 96 minutes. Played March 20.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

WILDCAT OF TUCSON: Bill Elliott, Evelyn Young, Stanley Brown—Here Bill Elliott is at his best. Crammed full of action, comedy and romance. Should see more of the fellow that co-starred. A promising new star. Did average Saturday business. Played February 15.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

First National

LETTER, THE: Bette Davis, Herbert Marshall—This is a very good story, but I was disappointed as this was too heavy for a small town audience. No doubt a wonderful performance by all the cast, but could not recommend this. Did not make expenses. In a situation like mine, don't play it. Running time, 123 minutes. Played March 29.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ANDY HARDY'S PRIVATE SECRETARY: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Fay Holden, Ann Rutherford, Kathryn Grayson—No wonder he's the tops; America's No. 1 entertainer at his funniest. "Andy" passed through many trying and at times embarrassing situations, but always found a way out of any and all difficulties that he encountered. And while some of 'em seemed to have an ignoble end, he triumphantly emerged a real hero. Kathryn Grayson as private secretary and Ann Rutherford, his fiancee, had many rounds in a prize fight for "Andy's" love, but Ann came out as victor in the end. Plenty of wholesome laughs and comic situations enlivened the picture and helped to make it the outstanding "Hardy" picture to date. The whole family, both old and young, married and single, will immensely enjoy seeing "Andy Hardy's Private Secretary," who is new to the screen but who has the making of both a great actress and also a great prima donna. She has rare singing qualifications, whose sweet notes will thrill you as seldom before. Running time, 100 minutes. Played March 26-April 1.—William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

COME LIVE WITH ME: James Stewart, Hedy Lamarr—Excellent picture in every respect. Stewart should win another award on this one. Everyone in cast excellent and the story seemed to please. Business extra good on this one. Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 15-17.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

COMRADE X: Clark Gable, Hedy Lamarr—Here is surely a problem picture. We liked it very well, but our patrons thought it bad. Business very poor. Our patrons didn't seem to get the sense of the story. In fact, they said there was no sense to it. It's rather a burlesque on communism, but the customers thought it stupid. Played March 16-17.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

COMRADE X: Clark Gable, Hedy Lamarr—This was well liked here, especially by the students. The tank chase at the end climaxed it in good style. The humor is subtle but not difficult to get. It drew well when combined with "Four Mothers." Running time, 89 minutes. Played March 21-22.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

FLIGHT COMMAND: Robert Taylor, Ruth Hussey, Walter Pidgeon—Any exhibitor should be proud to play such a picture. The air scenes are thrilling and it is a wonderful tribute to the air corps. Get this and it will really help you. Worthy anybody's money and time. Running time, 113 minutes. Played March 24-25.—B. V. Sheffield, Strand Theatre, Poplarville, Miss. Small town patronage.

GALLANT SONS: Jackie Cooper, Gene Reynolds—A very good picture for the family and if you sell the picture with this angle you can make it. Advertise and hope for the best. Played March 21-22.—B. V. Sheffield, Strand Theatre, Poplarville, Miss. Small town patronage.

KEEPING COMPANY: John Shelton, Ann Rutherford—The best little picture from this company in months. It pleased our Bank Night crowd and many asked about a coming picture with same stars. Running time, 87 minutes. Played March 18.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

MAISIE WAS A LADY: Ann Sothern, Lew Ayres, Maureen O'Sullivan—Just fair. A little more action helps this series. Pleases the adolescents. Less than average business. Played March 14-15.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

PHILADELPHIA STORY, THE: James Stewart, Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant, Roland Young, Ruth Hussey, John Howard, Virginia Weidler—A big picture that played to just average business. The entire cast could not be improved on, although we thought it was not quite as funny as it should have been. This is fault of story. Running time, 112 minutes. Played March 22.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

WYOMING: Wallace Beery, Leo Carrillo, Marjorie Main—Everything that will entertain a small town audience. Action, comedy and a very satisfied crowd. Can recommend this for any spot. Play it and help pay the taxes. Running time, 89 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

Miscellaneous

LET GEORGE DO IT!: George Formby, Phyllis Calvert—These Formby pictures are really cleaning up everywhere. Did real business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, and Alexander Theatre, Wallaceburg, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Monogram

PHANTOM OF CHINATOWN: Kaye Luke, Grant Withers—A fair program picture. I do not think much of this series if the balance are no better.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

RAINBOW OVER THE RANGE: Tex Ritter, Slim Andrews—Average western. Slim Andrews very good in this series. Why haven't we seen Lew Childre, "the boy from Alabama," or "the Delmore Bros." in the movies? Almost every other hill-billy band and popular entertainers have been seen and why not the above?—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

Paramount

CHEROKEE STRIP: Richard Dix, Florence Rice—Another Harry "Pop" Sherman production that should receive top honors. Well received here. Did average business. Should have been played on week-end date. Played February 25-26.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

DOOMED CARAVAN: William Boyd, Russell Hayden, Andy Clyde—Our patrons said they did not like this "Hopalong Cassidy" feature and neither did we. Thought it the poorest we had shown of this series. Seemed to go round and round and get no place. Double billed with "Ride, Kelly, Ride" and it made a rather poor program. Played March 21-22.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

I WANT A DIVORCE: Joan Blondell, Dick Powell—A dandy show, liked by all, but no business at all. I guess the title kept them away. Running time, 92 minutes. Played March 26-27.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Rural patronage.

LOVE THY NEIGHBOR: Fred Allen, Jack Benny, Mary Martin, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson—Personally I thought Benny was never meant for the screen, but I guess I'm wrong because we did best week-end business in some time both nights.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, and Alexander Theatre, Wallaceburg, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LOVE THY NEIGHBOR: Jack Benny, Fred Allen, Mary Martin, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson—This was good in spots, crazy in spots and in spots it was plain bad. At the box office it laid an egg. Everyone stayed home to hear Allen. Running time, 82 minutes. Played March 19-20.—B. V. Sheffield, Strand Theatre, Poplarville, Miss. Small town patronage.

NORTH WEST MOUNTED POLICE: Gary Cooper, Madeleine Carroll, Paulette Goddard, Preston Foster, Robert Preston—Nice business, nice picture, excellent color. You can always expect something outstanding from DeMille. Paulette Goddard almost steals the show away from the color scenes of the redcoats. This ought to do business anywhere (unless you don't run it). Running time, 126 minutes. Played March 26-27.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

SECOND CHORUS: Fred Astaire, Paulette Goddard, Burgess Meredith—Astaire can't act to our way of thinking, and on checking our box office the second night we had 25 adults, so what do you think?—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, and Alexander Theatre, Wallaceburg, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

UNTAMED: Ray Milland, Patricia Morison, Akim Tamiroff—This fine picture in the great Northwest, with its varied color scenes, was greatly appreciated by our audience. Ray Milland and Patricia Morison fitted their parts into their parts and right into the hearts of each and everyone. Played with Betty Boop cartoon, "Rhythm on the Reservation" and Pathe News. Running time, 83 minutes. Played March 29-30.—W. J. Overstreet, Prison Theatre, Florida State Prison, Raiford, Fla. Prison patronage.

Republic

BACK IN THE SADDLE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Good picture and good business. Autry and Burnette always please here. Running time, 73 minutes. Played March 28-29.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

CARSON CITY KID, THE: Roy Rogers, George "Gabby" Hayes, Bob Steele, Pauline Moore—Good action, historical, western, musical drama. Comedy end furnished by "Gabby" Hayes. Did about average Saturday biz. Played February 22.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

GIRL FROM GOD'S COUNTRY: Chester Morris,

Jane Wyatt, Charles Bickford—Very much enjoyed by my patrons. Would recommend this independent picture. Business above average. Running time, 75 minutes. Played March 21-22.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

LONE STAR RAIDERS: Three Mesquiteers (Robert Livingston, Bob Steele, Rufe Davis), June Johnson—Very good western. Wild horses sure fire treat for rural patronage. Doubled with "Dark Streets of Cairo." Good business. Running time, 58 minutes. Played March 20-22.—R. F. Netzel, Palace Theatre, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

MAN BETRAYED, A: John Wayne, Frances Dee, Edward Ellis—Fair picture and fair business. Some way this just missed being a big picture. Running time, 80 minutes. Played March 30-31.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

LADDIE: Tim Holt, Virginia Gilmore, Joan Carroll—Played this on the week-end to below average business. Feel I should have double billed it. Everyone liked it. Had no star power.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, and Alexander Theatre, Wallaceburg, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LITTLE MEN: Kay Francis, Jack Oakie, George Bancroft, Ann Gillis—A good enough picture, with good scene-stealing by Jack Oakie. However, we took in only four dollars at the door. College was closed and there was competition, but we have never hit a low like that before. I guess they just did not want to see it. Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 29.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

YOU'LL FIND OUT: Kay Kyser and His Orchestra, Peter Lorre, Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi—Full of mystery, necromancy, designs to commit murder frustrated, a scheme to steal the fortune also frustrated, an almost human dog, weird and fearsome but intensely interesting. Played March 23-25.—William Noble, Rialto Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

YOU'LL FIND OUT: Kay Kyser and Orchestra, Peter Lorre, Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi—Fairly good picture. Had our patrons rolling in the aisles. Fair business. Everyone well pleased. Running time, 97 minutes. Played March 23-25.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

GOLDEN HOOFS: Jane Withers, Charles Rogers—Another weak picture for Jane. She used to be one of our best attractions, but poor pictures have hurt her. This was very ordinary and not cared for by our patrons. Business poor. Played March 7-8.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho, Small town patronage.

HUDSON'S BAY: Paul Muni, Laird Cregar, Gene Tierney, John Sutton—Very good and we are sure our patrons enjoyed it. An outdoor picture with plenty of action and swell scenery. Would have been grand in color. Muni was good, but Laird Cregar certainly walked off with the honors. Hope we see more of him. Played March 23-24.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

NIGHT TRAIN: Margaret Lockwood, Rex Harrison—This English made picture is only fair entertainment. No kicks, no compliments and only fair business. Running time, 93 minutes. Played March 25.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RETURN OF FRANK JAMES: Henry Fonda, Jackie Cooper, Gene Tierney—An excellent portrayal of the life of a notorious man in the early days of this country. Mr. Fonda was superb and the entire picture in color was most entertaining. Played with March of Time "On Foreign News Fronts." Running time, 97 minutes. Played March 7-8.—W. J. Overstreet, Prison Theatre, Florida State Prison, Raiford, Fla. Prison patronage.

RIDE, KELLY, RIDE: Marvin Stephens, Eugene Pallette, Rita Quigley—Double billed this with "Doomed Caravan" and we thought they were both poor. Customers said they liked this better than the "Hopalong" and the youngsters indicated they enjoyed it. Pretty poor fare at the best. Played March 21-22.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

TIN PAN ALLEY: Alice Faye, Betty Grable, John Payne, Jack Oakie—Very good. Just the kind our folks like. Singing, dancing and comedy. Not a propaganda picture in any way, but it will make you want to stand up and cheer. More like this, please. Played March 9-11.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

TOBACCO ROAD: Charley Grapewin, Marjorie Rambeau, Gene Tierney—Those who saw the stage play and said it was too raw, now say the picture is too mild. Business fell off badly the second night. Running time, 84 minutes. Played March 26-27.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

TOBACCO ROAD: Charley Grapewin, Marjorie Rambeau, Gene Tierney—"Tobacco Road" was here on the stage; it was terrible. The picture is here on the screen and terrific. Excellent photography, all of the players were good, very good, and the picture is just splendid and will please all seeing it. Charley Grapewin couldn't be beat for excellent acting and Marjorie Rambeau was equally good. Nothing in the picture that anyone could object to and modesty was the prevailing theme. And the "Lesters" didn't have to go to the poor house, after all, but "Mrs. Jeeter Lester" did want a small can of snuff out of "Jeeter's" gift bill of $10 which was supposed to buy cotton seed for the coming crop. Running time, 84 minutes. Played March 27-April 2.—William Noble, Midwest Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

YOUTH WILL BE SERVED: Jane Withers—Not as good as her previous pictures. Business fair. Running time, 66 minutese. Played March 23-25.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

United Artists

FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT: Joel McCrea, Laraine Day, Herbert Marshall, George Sanders, Robert Benchley—A very good picture with plenty of action, but falls flat at the box office. If you can get them in you can keep them, but gettting them in is different. Played March 17-18.— B. V. Sheffield, Strand Theatre, Poplarville, Miss. Small town patronage.

REBECCA: Laurence Olivier, Joan Fontaine, George Sanders, Judith Anderson—Outstanding entertainment, but had worst storms of the year when showing this feature. My patrons, all who came, were 100 per cent satisfied. Running time, 126 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

TOPPER TAKES A TRIP: Roland Young, Constance Bennett, Billie Burke—Although this picture was rather old, it went over very well here. It was secured on request (popular demand, you might say). The art of trick photography was most profusely demonstrated and Roland and Constance fitted into the picture exceptionally well. Played with Pathe News. Running time, 80 minutes. Played March 15-16.—W. J. Overstreet, Prison Theatre, Florida State Prison, Raiford, Fla. Prison patronage.

Universal

BACK STREET: Charles Boyer, Margaret Sullavan, Richard Carlson—A great show for the women, but did the worst business of any picture in many months. Small towns should be careful where they play this. Running time, 89 minutes. Played March 23-25.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Rural patronage.

BUCK PRIVATES: Andrews Sisters, Abbott & Costello, Jane Frazee—A sleeper. Don't muff this one. It has what the small towns want and they will come to see it. Business near double Wednesday-Thursday. Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 19-20.—K. A. Spears, Roxy Theatre, Winlock, Wash. Rural patronage.

CHARLEY McCARTHY, DETECTIVE: Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy," Robert Cummings, Constance Moore—This picture aroused more laughs and evoked much more pleasure than we ever expected. This was the first of "Charlie's" pictures to be shown here and, if possible, we shall schedule more of them. Running time, 77 minutes. Played March 22-23.—W. J. Overstreet, Prison Theatre, Florida State Prison, Raiford, Fla. Prison patronage.

DANGEROUS GAME, A: Richard Arlen, Andy Devine—Rather weak as far as this series goes, but big crowds turned out and got a lot of healthy laughs, so we are satisfied. Doubled with "Meet Boston Blackie." Running time, 60 minutes. Played March 27-29.—R. F. Netzel, Palace Theatre, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

DARK STREETS OF CAIRO: Sigrid Gurie, Ralph Byrd—Nice little show with plenty of thrills plus comedy to put it over with week-end trade. Doubled with "Lone Star Raiders." Running time, 60 minutes. Played March 20-22.—R. F. Netzel, Palace Theatre, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

INVISIBLE WOMAN, THE: Virginia Bruce, John Barrymore, John Howard, Charles Ruggles—Boy, do they turn out in droves to see this. With proper handling this can be sure fire in any small town. Picture also very good and on the comedy side, which the public is looking for now. Many good compliments. Business very good. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 30-April 2.—R. F. Netzel, Palace Theatre, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

MA, HE'S MAKING EYES AT ME: Tom Brown, Constance Moore—Just fair. Ran on "Bargain Day." Did average business. Played February 24.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

MARGIE: Nan Grey, Tom Brown, Mischa Auer—Only fair. Could have been much better. Andy Devine's "role" was the most unusual I've ever seen in any picture.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

MEET THE WILDCAT: Margaret Lindsay, Ralph Bellamy—Ran this one on a late show. Was well received here. Many favorable comments. Did average business. A mystery comedy thriller. Will Hollywood ever learn that we can do without mystery dramas? Played February 8.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

ONE NIGHT IN THE TROPICS: Allan Jones, Nancy Kelly—Fairly good picture. Lots of comedy; well acted. Above average business. Running time, 83 minutes. Played March 26-27.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

SANDY IS A LADY: Baby Sandy, Nan Grey, Tom Brown, Eugene Pallette, Edgar Kennedy—Just fair. Very dull until last reel begins. Last reel is a riot. Should fill second part of a double bill. Business average. Played February 17.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

SEVEN SINNERS: Marlene Dietrich, John Wayne, Mischa Auer, Broderick Crawford, Albert Dekker, Oscar Homolka, Anna Lee—Good, but business only fair.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

TRAIL OF THE VIGILANTES: Franchot Tone, Broderick Crawford, Andy Devine—Very good western in special class. Comedy prevailing to the delight of exceptionally good business. Held up well third and fourth days. Broderick Crawford and Andy Devine take top honors. Running time, 75 minutes. Played March 23-26.—R. F. Netzel, Palace Theatre, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

Warner Brothers

CITY FOR CONQUEST: James Cagney, Ann Sheridan—An excellent production. Good acting by top stars. Plenty of action, daring love, comedy. Did top business. Should please in any situation. Played February 20-21.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

FLIGHT ANGELS: Wayne Morris, Virginia Bruce, Dennis Morgan, Ralph Bellamy, Jane Wyman—An exceedingly interesting story. Full of excitement and romance. A pilot's eyes leave him aground and then right into the United States Army and also into the arms of his recently acquired bride. Running time, 97 minutes. Played March 23-25.—William Noble, Rialto Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

FOUR MOTHERS: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, Claude Rains, Jeffrey Lynn—More adventures of the "Four Daughters." This should be of interest to those who enjoyed the first two of the series. It drew fairly well when combined with "Comrade X" against a lot of competition. Running time, 86 minutes. Played March 21-22.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

HONEYMOON FOR THREE: Ann Sheridan, George Brent, Jane Wyman—This one too silly to be good. Ann Sheridan certainly is not glamorous. Business very poor and those who came did not like it. Running time, 75 minutes. Played March 19-20.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

ALL AMERICAN BLONDES: Andy Clyde—Brought this back as second run. Very funny slapstick. Everyone pleased. Running time, 19 minutes.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

COOKOO CAVALIERS: Three Stooges—A tonic for Saturday business. Running time, 19 minutes.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

SO YOU WON'T SQUAWK: Buster Keaton—Very funny slapstick comedy with Buster Keaton—Ritz Amusements, Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ABDUL, THE BULBUL AMEER: Cartoons—"Abdul" was a poor fighter, not as good as his opponent. The scene must have been laid in Russia as the different characters appeared to be dressed in Russian costumes. Very funny and pleasing. Running time, eight minutes.—William Noble, Midwest Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

BABY BLUES: Our Gang Comedies—Average Our Gang Comedy. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburg, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

BABY BLUES: Our Gang Comedies—These have been poor lately and this is the worst one we have shown. In fact, we thought it not worth running.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

KIDDIE KURE: Our Gang Comedies—Fair comedy. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

MEMORY TRICKS: Pete Smith Specialties—Entertaining one-reeler. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

QUIZ BIZ: Pete Smith Specialties—Everyone enjoys these quiz shorts and Pete Smith injects some good humor. Running time, 10 minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

PENNY TO THE RESCUE: Pete Smith Specialties—Good one-reeler in color. Will please the ladies.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PENNY TO THE RESCUE: Pete Smith Specialties—Pete Smith color subject showing some novel cooking stunts by Prudence Penny. Very appetizing and pleased all. Running time, 10 minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

RODEO DOUGH: Miniatures—A combination of "Screen Snapshots," a comedy and a sport reel. It has some good scenes at moments. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

THIRD DIMENSIONAL MURDER: Third dimensional picture on which special glasses are required to get the desired effect. Very good. We wonder why more of these are not made. Running time, nine minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

WHISPERS: Passing Parade—An excellent Passing Parade short dealing with paid gossipers. This series is swell. Running time, 10 minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

Miscellaneous

GUARDS OF THE NORTH: Canada Carries On Series—We're proud to be in the theatres playing these information reels put out by the Canadian government, giving us information about Canada's war effort.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, and Alexander Theatre, Wallaceburg, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Paramount

BREEZY LITTLE BEARS: Paragraphics—This continuation of the adventures of the three live baby bears is excellent and certainly delighted the audience here. Cuteness and mischief predominate. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

DANGEROUS DOLLARS: Paragraphics—Very instructive, telling you how to detect bogus money. Our trouble is to get any.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, and Alexander Theatre, Wallaceburg, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PLAYMATES FROM THE WILD: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Excellent one-reeler. All Sportlights are good. Have never seen a bad Grantland Rice short.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

POPULAR SCIENCE: No. 2—Shows how a golden sound film is made. How improved cooking with electric gadgets improves the cooking and many electric inventions that helps mankind to do things better and better. Running time, 10 minutes.—William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

POPULAR SCIENCE: No. 6—Exceptionally interesting.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, and Alexander Theatre, Wallaceburg, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

RED, WHITE AND BLUE HAWAII: Paragraphics—Lovely Hawaii, the Islands, very beautiful as also is the scenery. Yet, one of Uncle Sam's bulwarks for defense and safety. The entire program is very thrilling and both a combination of beauty and war and preparation for war. Excellent. Running time, 11 minutes.—William Noble, Midwest Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

SNEAK, SNOOK AND SNITCH: Animated Antics—'Tis not funny. Just silly. Running time, eight minutes.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

TWINKLETOES GETS THE BIRD: Animated Antics—Average black and white cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WEDDING BELTS: Stone Age Cartoons—Very good. Running time, nine minutes.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

THREE CONTRIBUTORS JOIN DEPARTMENT

Three new contributors have sent reports to the What the Picture Did for Me department in recent weeks. They are:

MARIO BATTISTON, Ritz Theatre, Export, Pa.

H. D. FURNICE, Casey Theatre, Casey, Iowa.

B. V. SHEFFIELD, Strand Theatre, Poplarville, Miss.

Two prodigals have resumed sending reports after a lapse of some months. They are:

LEON C. BOLDUC, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H.

H. L. CAPERS, New Deal Theatre, Gorman, Texas.

Reports from these and other exhibitors appear in the adjoining columns.

Republic

MEET THE STARS: No. 1—Entertaining one-reeler showing the stars at work and play in Hollywood. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

BABY STARS: Meet the Stars, No. 2—Good one-reeler about the Hollywood Stars. Better than the first one. Running time, 10 minutese.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

DRAFTED IN THE DEPOT: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—This should go well in U. S. A. as Kennedy gets caught in the draft when wearing a disguise as a soldier to get away from the wife to go fishing. It's a scream.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, and Alexander Theatre, Wallaceburg, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

GOLDEN EGGS: Walt Disney Cartoons—First of Disney's new series, this gets them off to a good start. Donald Duck dresses up as a hen and tries to steal eggs from a rooster. Lots of hilarity and typical Disney touches. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

GOLDEN EGGS: Walt Disney Cartoons—Walt Disney-Donald Duck that's very funny. Running time, eight minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

GOOFY AND WILBUR: Walt Disney Cartoons—A grasshopper was an elusive bait and many fish wanted to make a meal out of him, even if only a nibble. And Wilbur still lives to venture into further adventures in the near future. Running time, seven minutes.—William Noble, Rialto Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 5: Labor and Defense—Very good. All issues of "March of Time" are timely and of great value now. Running time, two reels.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

ON FOREIGN NEWSFRONTS: March of Time—Best of the short subjects. Entertaining and educating. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

PICTURE PEOPLE, NO. 6: Confidentially, it does . . .! Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

QUAIL QUEST: Sportscope—Interesting for hunters, but I am on the side of the quail. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op. Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BOWLING FOR STRIKES: Sports Reviews—Another bowling reel that won't bowl you over. However, if your audience can spare the time, it may strike their fancy. Alley-oop! Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

HAIRLESS HECTOR: Terry-Toons—Not bad for a black and white cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

HOME GUARD, THE: Terry-Toons—Fairly good color cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

WHEN KNIGHTS WERE BOLD: Terry-Toons—Good black and white cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Universal

A-HAUNTING WE WILL GO: Lantz Cartunes—"Eightball" wasn't scared-much!—W. J. Overstreet, Prison Theatre, Florida State Prison, Raiford, Fla. Prison patronage.

BAGDAD DADDY: Gertrude Niesen, Fuzzy Knight—Fair musical from Universal. Patrons not so hot for Niesen's first song, but rest of numbers okay. Running time, 18 minutes.—R. F. Netzel, Palace Theatre, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

CRAZY HOUSE: Color Cartoons—Better than average cartoon. Running time, one reel.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

JOLLY LITTLE ELVES (reissue): Color Cartune Classics—Very amusing. Running time, nine minutes.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

KNOCK KNOCK: Lantz Colored Cartunes—The best best of the Lantz cartoons to date. Excellent. Running time, nine minutes.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

RECRUITING DAZE: Lantz Colored Cartunes—Funny. Don't miss this one. Running time, nine minutes.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

RECRUITING DAZE: Color Cartoons—Excellent. Running time, one reel.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

VARSITY VANITIES: Two-Reel Musicals—A very good musical short. Should please. Running time, 19 minutes.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

CRACKPOT QUAIL, THE: Merrie Melodies—Good cartoon in color. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

CRACKPOT QUAIL, THE: Merrie Melodies—The dumb dog of "Of Fox and Hounds" continually bumps into trees while trying to catch a crazy quail. It is good Schlesinger material. The humor in this series hits my college students right on the nose. This series has tremendous adult appeal. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

FLY FISHING: Sports Parade—Not good. Only for casters. Running time, nine minutes.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

GOOD NIGHT, ELMER: Merrie Melodies—A dandy. Running time, nine minutes.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

LOVE'S INTRIGUE: Mack Sennett Revival—A knockout for slapstick. Bringing back the Mack Sennett stars. Just what the doctor ordered for our Saturday patrons. Running time, 19 minutes.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

MARCH ON MARINES: Technicolor Specials—Another of Vitaphone's patriotic color featurettes. I never fail to marvel at how complete the story is for such a short time. The audience would swear they had seen another feature. Of course, it is good! How could it be otherwise with such a good cast, nice story and excellent color? Running time, 19 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

MEET THE FLEET: Technicolor Specials—Very good two-reeler in color. Running time, 20 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PORKY'S SNOOZE REEL: Looney Tunes—Porky's newsreel reeled off many subjects, all of 'em animated and very clever. And that's all. Running time, seven minutes.—William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

SKINNAY ENNIS AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Poor. Running time, nine minutes.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

TOM THUMB IN TROUBLE: Merrie Melodies—Very good colored reel. Running time, eight minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

CALLING WHOSE KETTLE BLACK?

The recent defense by Arthur Mayer of motion picture advertising is of a forcefulness to make industry apologists restore hats to heads. In tossing the "superlative" into the laps of those who use 'em, the erudite operator of the New York Rialto struck solidly at the advertising gentry prone to pinch nostrils delicately at the mention of movie adjectives.

Outside advertisers' long preoccupation with picture copy is rather a bore. It accomplishes nothing at all toward solving the theatreman's ever-pressing problem of presenting fresh, pulling copy for his frequent changes of program. That the showman does as well as he does is a compliment to his ingenuity, exercised for the most part without the support of box tops or labels upon which rest the reputations of more than a few top-line advertising men in other fields.

BOTH MUST BE SERVED

"Exhibition soon will be neck-high in service pictures, allowing for spectacular tieins with national defense. Judged by returns already reported, these tieins function most effectively when projected as regular theatre exploitation in line with boxoffice results. . . ."

The above, on this page some weeks back, had to do with advices on how the theatreman could best do his part in advancing the nation's military objectives in the normal progress of his operation. Instances of actual campaigns were given. Now come added reports from the field on service tieins that call for a slightly warning finger on fitting the exploitation mood to the picture.

Obviously, service pictures of dramatic intensity, such as "I Wanted Wings", are not to be exploited with the exact approach accompanying the promotions of comedy attractions such as "Buck Privates" or "A Girl, A Guy and A Gob". Yet, a tendency is noted to hook into whatever military tieup may be had regardless of whether or not the tiein sells the mood or tempo of the attraction in question. It is a thing to watch, and very carefully, too, else your campaign goes overboard on the service angle, to the detriment of the boxoffice.

The well-balanced promotion aimed to do a mutually satisfying job for both sides of the tieup must first provide what can be termed "entertainment interest"—but definitely—for both ends of the deal.

Letters

DEAR MR. QUIGLEY:

May I express my gratitude for the many courtesies extended when I was guest of the Quigley Publications in Hollywood.

A-Mike Vogel and every member of your organization made this trip a memorable one and the respect evinced by all the studio executives for the Quigley Awards winners was indeed impressive.

I trust your plan for these Awards to showmen will continue for many years to come, not only because of the encouragement they offer to the man in the field, but because, through these Awards, the men of Hollywood have been brought closer to the exhibitor.—E. C. CALLOW, Warner Theatres, Philadelphia, Pa.

DEAR MR. QUIGLEY:

Permit me to take this opportunity to thank you from the very bottom of my heart for the experience of a lifetime made possible by winning the 1940 Bronze Grand Award.

I cannot put into words my feeling of gratefulness to your organization, to Mr. Mike Vogel, to the boys in your Hollywood office, and to everyone else whose efforts made this visit to the coast an event I will never forget.—J. R. WHEELER, Granada Theatre, South Bend, Indiana.

WITH applications for membership received from 20 of the circuit's managers, contributions to these pages from the Cobian Theatres of Puerto Rico will be speeded up, according to Harold Winston, assistant general manager of the circuit. Long-time Round Tabler, Winston is seeing to it that the boys of his operations tell the brothers something of the "what's what" in that sector. It certainly should make interesting reading.

Round Table In Pictures

Against a black background and standing out in relief was the cutout 24-sheet used by Bill Burke at Schine's Rialto, Amsterdam, N. Y., ahead and during his run of "Tobacco Road".

(Left) Rubber legs, hose, shoes and chest card with tiein copy proved lobby attractor for Norm Duncan's "Invisible Woman" date at the Strand in Vancouver, B. C.

Young man, dressed in uniform with gag back and chest banners, distributed "laff draft" cards to pedestrians as part of Warren Butler's "Buck Privates" advance exploitation at the Princess in Sioux City, Iowa.

Replica of the Notre Dame Cathedral was constructed by Jorgen S. Jorgensen for "The Hunchback" date at the Metropol in Copenhagen. Further action was supplied by mounted 24-sheet.

(Right) For the opening of "Arizona" at the Wausau Theatre, in Wausau, Wis., Johnny Matis arranged for His Honor the Mayor to address and welcome four Indians from nearby reservation. Box-office was converted into covered wagon for the date and V. F. W. band played out front and gave concert on stage.

Paramount Contest Offers Free Plane

Through a tieup concluded between Paramount and the Piper Aircraft Corp., a Piper Cub plane, and $80,000 worth of flying lessons will be given away in a national contest based on two aviation pictures, the recently released "I Wanted Wings," and the forthcoming "Power Dive."

By the terms of the contest, aviation enthusiasts throughout the country will write fifty-word letters on the value of the private pilot in America's national defense effort. The best letter in the nation will net its writer a Piper Cub plane, while the local winner in each city where the contest is set up will receive free flying lessons.

Local prizes will be awarded by a jury chosen by the Piper dealer in each locality, and the grand prize will be decided by a nationally-known aviation figure to be chosen by the airplane manufacturer. Contest is set to get under way immediately, tying in with the local playdates of the pictures. The competition runs six months.

Paramount, through press book and circular letter, and Piper, by means of mail and personal contact, are priming theatre men and plane dealers on the contest. Special folder telling about the contest will be distributed to the public through the plane agencies and theatres. Two-color one-sheets announcing the competition will be posted by Paramount in localities where the tiein is effected.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Merchant Tieup Effected By Pappas for "Foyle"

Highlight of George Pappas' "Kitty Foyle" date at the Rialto, in Beaver Falls, Pa., was tieup with bakery whereby all stores handling their bread distributed heralds carrying cut of Rogers and her measurements. Tieup copy across top read: "For a much better figure tomorrow, eat" etc. etc. Through cooperation of five and dime chain, all employees wore red title discs during run and girl was planted in window tying picture messages.

For "No, No Nanette," Pappas arranged eye-arresting window display consisting of "Tea for Two" display with table, tea set, etc., at which wax models dressed as hostess, guests were seated. Appropriate tiein card was featured.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Star's Personal Aids Davis On "Ghost Valley Riders"

Cashing in on the personal appearance of Don "Red Barry" in conjunction with the showing of "Ghost Valley Riders" at the Strand, in Kingsport, Tenn., Sam Davis arranged for plug three weeks ahead over the regular Popeye Club broadcasts, winding up with an interview with the star opening day. Kingsport Times ran a 30 inch ad two days before opening calling attention to the "Red Ryder" comic strip in the paper, and ran a credit line above the strip for two weeks in advance. Circulars were distributed, jumbo cards planted and numerous windows promoted.

HOLDEN TRAILERS TIED TO DEFENSE

In sound, and with the Capitol in Washington as background, Earle Holden, at the L. & J. Capitol, Atlanta, Ga., is using a two-frame trailer, made up especially to tie the theatre in with the National Defense program. Trailer, run at every show, reads:

This Theatre
Is a Member of the Theatre Division
* * * *
Motion Picture
Committee
Cooperating for National Defense

This is tied in with the theatre's regular membership card from the Defense Committee placed on the doorman's ticket box and one of the first things patrons see on entering the theatre.

Holden goes further on the national program with added special trailers referring to showings of Army and Navy short subjects. The Round Tabler has contacted the various service branches, offering to run service shorts in publicizing defense. With showings of any of these, the following three-frame trailer is run ahead:

In cooperation with the U. S. Government and its National Defense Plans, your Capitol Theatre will from time to time
* * * *
Present official and authentic short subjects showing activities of the U. S. Army, the U. S. Navy, U. S. Marine Corps and other branches of Government service.
* * * *
We take pleasure at this time in presenting one of these subjects.

Aircraft Lobby Display Aids Kilgore on "Convoy"

Reproductions of the H. M. S. Battleship Hood and the German pocket battleship Deutschland were mounted in the lobby of Loew's Palace, Memphis, as a phase of the "convoy" campaign by Ed Kilgore. Full-size reproduction of an anti-aircraft battery gun built of beaver board was another unit in the attractive display.

Small silk Union Jack mounted in front of an electric fan on the boxoffice attracted much attention. A complete set of British flags was displayed in front of the theatre during the showing.

Ushers and doormen were dressed in British sailor uniforms a week in advance of the playdate and during the engagement. An excellent endorsement by Herbert Harper in his regular news broadcast highlighted the ether promotion.

Truck made to resemble a battleship and with 24's mounted thereon and manned by "British sailors" was the main ballyhoo, and an advance screening was arranged by Kilgore for the British War Relief Society and the faculty of all five high schools in the city.

Warnermen Join To Open Theatre

Activities spotlighting the complete remodelling of Warner's State, in Racine, Wis., which included renaming of the theatre to the "Badger," took in wide territory on the campaign put over by a committee of three local Warner managers and reported here by Stan Lambert of the circuit's Venetian. Working with Lambert were George Cross, at the Rialto and Andrew J. Kenney of the Badger, the boys putting over promotions that stressed a double truck carrying stories and photos of James E. Coston, Warner zone manager and Kenney, the new manager. Congratulatory copy from leading merchants made up the rest of the layout.

For radio purposes, the theatremen promoted man-on-the-street broadcast in front of house over WRJN, the program including interviews with various prominents on hand for the opening, including the Mayor and circuit executives from the Chicago office. Extra spot announcements were also had, including plugs on Lambert's radio program called "Through the Hollywood Lens," a weekly special.

Outside stuff was topped by official opening of the remodeled theatre by the Mayor who cut a ribbon stretched across the foyer. The Warnermen also promoted local drum and bugle corps to parade main streets on their way to the theatre, where a concert was given for waiting crowds. Permission was also received to decorate street poles with special shields calling attention to the date.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Strawberry Blonde Search Instituted by Huffman

Bill Huffman, manager of Warners' Astor, Reading, Pa., landed a radio contest a week in advance to find local "Strawberry Blonde." Girl was selected by judges and was employed for the opening night to serve as hostess in the theatre lobby. Girl distributed trick heralds and window cards were also tied in with the contest.

A trailer stunt consisted of getting patrons to sing words to the song in the trailer. Huffman further obtained a tandam-bike, and with two lads outfitted in gay '90 clothes and appropriate copy, paraded through the city streets. A special letter was mailed to all dentists throughout the vicinity and "Strawberry Sundae" sodas were worked out with any number of drugstores and ice-cream parlors around town.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Moore's Autry Contest

Carl Moore of the Ohio, in Van Wert, Ohio, got behind the Gene Autry musical, "Back in the Saddle" with a "mysterious cowboy" contest in local dailies. Moore arranged a large co-op ad captioned "Gene Autry Comes to Town in," etc.; copy announced award of gratis tickets to those approaching the "mysterious cowboy" who covered downtown streets and asking "Are you Gene Autry who appears in?"

Psychometer Used by Rosy Ahead of "Road Show" Date

Ahead of "Road Show" at the Loew Poli Majestic, in Bridgeport, Morris Rosenthal planted a psychometer in leading roadhouse ahead of opening. Machine was later moved into lobby of theatre with girl in cap and gown acting as hostess. Stunt was good for newspaper story and photo. Also in connection with the opening, Rosy landed a laugh writing contest in local daily, with guest tickets to those submitting best accounts of comedy experiences. Girl was also used for telephone stunt, calling telephone subscribers and giving spiel about the picture's opening.

Graver Issues Hard Ticket On "Night at Earl Carroll's"

"Pop" Graver, manager of Warners' Grove Theatre, Willow Grove, Pa., duplicated a $3.30 theatre ticket for "A Night At Earl Carroll's," using special copy on the picture to create an impression of the importance of the picture. Front cover of press books were used as window cards and tie-ups were arranged with local bands to plug the song hits from the film.

For "You'll Find Out," Graver had three young men outfitted in cap and gown bally-ing the picture around town with appropriate copy.

Portrait Unveiled On 'Hamilton' Date

Highlight of the campaign on "That Hamilton Woman" at the Radio City Music Hall was the unveiling in the lobby of the original Gainsborough painting of Lord Nelson, day before picture opened, by Gertrude Lawrence, famous stage star. Columnists and critics were on hand for the event, which netted art and feature stories.

Fashion windows tied to the Vivien Leigh costumes were obtained in leading Fifth Avenue women's stores and a special tiein with Postal Telegraph allowed posters in windows of the branch offices. At the Hearst art exhibit at Gimbel's department store, 40 by 60 lobby board was displayed in the Hamilton room containing antiques representative of the period.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Orchestra Leaders Tied To "Pot o' Gold" at Roxy

For the date on "Pot o' Gold" at the New York Roxy, ad head Homer Harman with the United Artists publicity department tied into the Tums "Treasure Chest" and "Pot o' Gold" coast-to-coast broadcast, premiere receiving prominent mention. Special radio transcription was also played on additional local stations.

Orchestra leaders at numerous hotels featured hit tunes from the picture, while music recordings with full picture credits were played on popular recording programs on local stations. Tiein with Western Union brought special imprinted jumbo wires in windows throughout the city and novelty match boxes with one side devoted to picture credit were distributed by Tums. Two large size co-op pages were landed in metropolitan dailies through Lester Pianos, these supplemented by special window display. In addition, numerous music stores were promoted for windows as were other organizations who have tied in with "Pot o' Gold."

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Mayor Proclaims Safety Week For Sklar's Kiddie Club

To further promote his kiddie club, which is sponsored by a local milk company, Wilford Sklar, at the Roxy, in Clearfield, Pa., secured cooperation of Mayor Rosenberry to proclaim a Safety Week, with the theatre, the terminal for the climax of the activities. Special show was held, which opened with the national anthem and followed with acts including magician, tap dancers, etc. Feature event was talk by State Policeman Schieb on the subject, "Safety on the Streets and Highways." Motor Club furnished safety film for the showing and program closed with "God Bless America."

For his third anniversary campaign, Sklar promoted baker and coffee company for distribution of doughnuts and beverage, merchants plugging the tieup in their ads. Full page of co-op ads was promoted by the theatreman with contest angle involved. Here ducats were offered to those submitting correct list of merchants' names in whose ads letters spelling out "Roxy Third Anniversary" were scattered.

NEWSPAPER PROMOTIONS SPOTLIGHT COAST "DOE" PREMIERE CAMPAIGN

L. J. Halper Warnermen Effect Smash Tieins with Dailies on Los Angeles-Hollywood Dates; Radio Coverage Emphatic

All-embracing, to point up the double-premiere of Frank Capra's "Meet John Doe" at Warners' Hollywood and Downtown, Los Angeles, the campaign waged under the supervision of L. J. Halper, Warner Pacific Coast theatres division head, called immediate and consistent attention over a wide area to the two openings.

The local papers were tied in spectacularly, the Herald-Express cooperating on a contest to find Los Angeles' John Doe, the promotion breaking a week ahead and given heavy advance publicity. Winner and wife were guests at the premiere, other entertainments preceding, including lunch and trip through the Warner studios, dinner at the Brown Derby and supper, after the premiere, at the famed Cocoanut Grove. An added ad break on the contest was secured with a full-page co-op spread taken by the prominent May Company department store, where under a banner head reading, "Mr. and Mrs. John Doe thrill to the May Co.'s Anniversary Sale," the couple and their two children were pictured touring the store's various departments and commenting on the merchandise.

Also outstanding, was the double-truck promotion planted in the News, headed "Meet John Doe and his newspaper," a circulation house ad in two colors, and spotlighted with a giant head cut of Gary Cooper, who endorsed the daily under his signature (see cut).

Radio Programs Comprehensive

The radio campaign covering all stations started three weeks ahead, some 300 spot announcements being made. KFWB, the Warner station, conducted a special campaign on station announcements for two weeks in advance, saying "This is KFWB in Hollywood, Mr. John Doe's station." The same station offered guest premiere tickets on a contest tied to popular racetrack broadcast, and on another program starring James Gleason, who appears in the picture, Gleason spoke of the picture and the premiere date. Also effective was an opening night program, which developed as a tribute to Frank Capra, featuring the transcribed voices of Gary Cooper, Walter Brennan, of the cast, and other prominent stars. The premiere was broadcast from the lobby by Knox Manning, outstanding CBS news commentator, who also put on a special radio campaign for three nights preceding the opening.

As to be expected, publicity was vast, especially among the columnists and in the society sections, before and after the premiere. Co-op ads were plentiful and for decorations, two blocks, each side of the theatre on Hollywood Boulevard were covered with lines of flags and title banners across the avenue. Featured bakery tieup called for insertion of throwaways in 100,000 loaves of bread.

LOS ANGELES "JOHN DOE" DOUBLE TRUCK NEWSPAPER PROMOTION

Smith Lands Announcements Over 30-Day Track Meet

Reported by city manager Clyde Smith, at the Paramount, in Hot Springs, Ark., is the tieup effected for the Malco Theatres there, whereby they sponsored a 15-minute Paddock Broadcast over KTHS, of the daily feature race at Oaklawn Park, during the recent 30-day race meet at Hot Springs. Radio movie commentator during feature announcements broke in with picture plugs on showings at all the Malco theatres, publicity divided into four commercials.

Another activity engaged in by Smith and emanating from the theatre stage is a "dollars-to-doughnuts" quiz contest, sponsored by local automobile agency. Cash awards are presented if questions are answered correctly, with doughnuts and theatre tickets if the question is muffed. Entire stunt is costless to Smith, who also promoted bakery tiein.

Exploitation on "Andy Hardy's Private Secretary" brought a newspaper contest, with guest tickets going to those submitting best set of rules for a good boss to follow. Tickets went here too, contest running for three days. Publicity opening day included eight-column head on front page with art and story in which all the Malco theatres were generously plugged.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Notaro's Quiz Contest

With the radio quiz gaining in popularity, Pat Notaro at the Columbia, in Sharon, Pa. promoted local jeweler to sponsor a 15-minute quiz contest on theatre stage every Thursday afternoon with merchandise and guest tickets awarded as prizes. Entire stunt is costless to Notaro, jeweler paying for two column ad which is run weekly. It is reported that numerous plugs have been given the program on the air and in the radio column of newspaper.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Rose's "Marvel" Campaign

For his "Adventures of Captain Marvel" at Loew's Globe, in Bridgeport, Manager Harry Rose through cooperation of publishers of "Whiz Comic," which features the strip, promoted distributions of imprinted cards to newsstands, heralds, bookmarks and bannering of fleet of trucks. In addition, Rose planted a coloring contest in local daily and landed a feature story. Trailer was used in advance with special standee in the lobby.

THEATRE STAFF AIDS WAR RELIEF

Learning that the local headquarters of the British War Relief unit in Ilion, N. Y., were without the benefit of a telephone, Ron Failes at the Schine Capitol manned the employees of his staff and all set about to secure sufficient funds for the installation.

Because of the small sum involved, no hardship was worked on any one person. Local newspaper thought sufficient of the goodwill gesture to give it a story.

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS FROM A-FIELD

On "Sky Raiders" at the Schine State, in Tupper Lake, N. Y., Clay Cornell promoted free column in paper plugging club activity, birthday guests, etc. In connection with this a model aeroplane building contest was held with promoted window in five and ten devoted to display of models. Magazine rack of chain drug store featured books on aviation and inexpensive door prizes were distributed to kids at matinee.

Ahead of "Rivers End" at the Royal, in Enid, Okla., Roy T. Shield constructed an entire log front for the date with giant title cutout letters directly under marquee. For "Virginia City," Shield planted a globe with "invisible goldfish" in lobby. A buzzer was rigged up to a small rotating wheel which rang every second to attract attention. Sign overall read: "Each time the fish passes the magic light beam the bell rings." Roy reports there were plenty of folk who were taken in by the stunt.

Ahead of "Tin Pan Alley" at the Orpheum, in Eldorado, Ill., Manager John Falk arranged with city authorities to change the name of the street on which theatre is located to "Tin Pan Alley" for the run. For his front, Falk created title sign from sheets of tin and displayed this two weeks ahead, in addition theatreman distributed tinted heralds carrying picture copy and cuts of the stars.

Tying up with local candy company, Wilford Sklar at the Roxy, in Clearfield, Pa. promoted them to sponsor an Elmer Layden Safety Club. Opening of club was advertised by merchant and on screen, week ahead. At no cost to the theatre, candy, buttons, membership cards and certificates and folders discussing safety rules were promoted for the confectioner.

In connection with the recent Boy Scout week, Sammy Roen, assistant at the Boulevard in Pittsburgh reports on the free show which he left for local troop of scouts and cubs, during which Scout Master awarded Eagle Badges to members on stage. Stunt was good for stories and art in paper.

Contacting local paper which ran the comic strip, Stan Andrews at the Capitol, in Guelph, Ont., for his date on "Blondie Plays Cupid" promoted paper to run line reading "See Blondie at the Capitol" above the comic strip for three consecutive days.

For run on "The Letter" at the Strand, in Trail, B. C., Round Tabler Leslie Campbell distributed specially printed cards in theatre check room instead of ordinary metal coat checks. Copy on each read: "You have just checked your belongings, now check 'The Letter' on your must see list."

As a teaser ahead of "Mark of Zorro" at the Lafayette, in Lafayette, Ala., Manager Mack Jennings distributed paper plates imprinted with copy to the effect that folks should not wait to wash dishes, but to use the paper plates so that they could rush down to see the picture.

Reproduced above is herald originated by Don Meyers, assistant to Julius Lamm for date on "Kitty Foyle" at the Warner Uptown in Cleveland. Dignified and with a minimum of copy, Myers got across the "white collar girl" message.

Ahead of "Kitty Foyle" at the Embassy, in Lewistown, Pa., Harold Cohen promoted a window display in one of the exclusive shops, which featured model seated at typewriter desk with appropriate tiein copy alongside. In addition, a "Kitty Foyle" luncheon was sponsored by restaurant, and druggists featured a title named sundae.

Discovering that an old circus hand was living in his town, George Pappas at the Rialto, in Beaver Falls, Pa., persuaded the man to don his clown outfit and help exploit "Chad Hanna." Promoting stills of Henry Fonda, Pappas had the clown distribute them to outgoing patrons. Giant book was used for walking bally and imitation newspapers with "extra" headlines called attention to the picture's opening, and were distributed by newsies.

Ahead of "Lucky Partners" at the Queen Theatre, in Abilene, Tex., Ted Waggoner distributed lucky number cards bearing picture copy, etc. To those who held numbers corresponding with those listed on lobby easel, guest tickets were awarded.

Tying in with local business university, Dave Dallas at the Kansan, Parsons, Kan. for "Kitty Foyle" arranged for a typing contest among all their stenographers. Winner was awarded a pennant and employed by Dallas to type messages in lobby pertaining to the picture, which were distributed to patrons.

Contests proved the highlight of Bert Ruder's newspaper campaign on "This Thing Called Love" at Schine's State, in Fostoria, Ohio, with guest tickets offered in connection with a wisecrack contest, various scene stills were run and entrants were required to fill in parts of dialogue. Planted on classified ad page, names of localities were scattered throughout ads and those properly identifying themselves received guest tickets.

Tying in with local dress shop, Ed Kidwell at Schine's Kent, in Kent, Ohio, promoted a "Kitty Foyle" popularity contest whereby store presented winner with gown. Cooperating merchant and theatre distributed voting coupons week ahead, which could be secured with each dollar purchase at the shop or ticket purchase. Merchant paid for cost of newspaper ads and coupons.

Three-day contest on "Back Street" was planted in local daily by George Fraser for that date at the Warner Columbia, in Portsmouth, Ohio. Each day a scene still was run together with a list of four questions pertaining to the picture. Guest tickets went to winners. Cooperating merchant paid cost of ads.

Two men dressed as Arabs covered the streets of Binghamton, N. Y., as Tom Hanifin's advance on "Thief of Bagdad" at the Strand, wearing chest banners, men distributed heralds. Giant flag was used over the marquee with spot lights flashing on both sides. Bus cards were used within a 35-mile radius and full page of co-op ads was promoted.

School officials cooperated with W. J. Bryan, Bandbox, Vandergrift, Pa., by permitting students time off from classes to attend showings of "Gone With the Wind" as part of his campaign for the film.

Bumper strips distributed by the local automobile club was one of the features of the "Gone With the Wind" campaign executed by T. Vincent, New Carnegie, Carnegie, Pa.

"Why I Want to See 'Gone With the Wind' was the title of a school contest set by H. Kock, South Hills, Dormont, Pa., as part of his campaign for the film."

A novel bit of newspaper publicity in advance of the "Gone With the Wind" engagement at the Penn, Ambridge, Pa., was a drawing by the local newspaper artist showing John Notopoulous, manager, welcoming "Rhett Butler" back to town. Notopoulous also arranged a newspaper contest asking readers to write about their favorite scenes from the film.

Contacting Val Arms, local artist, known for his caricatures, Lou Cohen at Loew's Poli, Hartford, prevailed upon him to do a sketch of Mickey Rooney, which was used as the base of a window display in advance of "Andy Hardy's Private Secretary." Photo of the caricature was also run in newspaper together with story.

(Right) War questions-and-answers teaser copy, topped by the question asked by the title, was selected by Mel Koff, owner-manager of the Darby, Darby, Pa., to sell Republic's "Who Killed Aunt Maggie?"—the ad framed by question marks to increase interest.

(Below) In the belief that more news about the picture should be sold in advertising to create wider reader interest, Fanchon & Marco, in St. Louis, has launched a new type of advertising, as illustrated by this 145 lines on 2 col. by Les Kaufman, ad head, for "Nice Girl?" at the Ambassador. The new plan streesses intensive selling copy and little art.

IN COURTS

Court Actions by Pizor and Segall

Breach in the theatre operation partnership of Lewen Pizor and Charles Segall, both prominent Philadelphia exhibitors, which had been brewing for several months, reached the breaking point last week with both men resorting to court actions. State Senator Harry Shapiro, on Monday, March 31st, filed a bill in equity in the Philadelphia common pleas court alleging that Mr. Segall had defrauded the theatre partnership and corporations. At the same time Mr. Segall obtained a judgment of $55,124 against Mr. Pizor.

Mr. Segall in a statement issued through his counsel charged that all allegations contained in the bill in equity filed by Mr. Pizor were "false, malicious, libelous and incapable of proof." He said further that an answer would be filed denying all the charges and demanding proof of any of them by Mr. Pizor.

Mr. Pizor's complaint joins as defendants, in addition to Mr. Segall, Louis Segall, his son; Katherine Segall Sablosky, his daughter, and the Eastern Theatres, Inc., and the Boro Theatres, Inc., involving the Chelten, Appollo, Ace and Tioga theatres in Philadelphia. The hearing was set for Monday, April 7th, before Judge Lewis E. Levinthal on the bill's motion for the appointment of a receiver to handle the affairs of the theatres. On Monday the hearing was postponed to Friday.

Philadelphia City Commissioner Morton Wilkin, attorney for Mr. Segall, entered the judgment against Mr. Pizor in the same common pleas court, on the grounds that rental had not been paid for the Apollo theatre for the past four months and the money represented the rentals for the remainder of the life of the lease.

The Apollo theatre is owned by Messrs. Charles and Louis Segall, and they entered judgment as lessors against Messrs. Charles Segall and Lewen Pizor as lessees. Mr. Witkin said that the attachment had been made on Mr. Pizor's real estate holdings, which includes a theatre chain in upstate Pennsylvania, and his bank accounts. Mr. Pizor is also president of the West Philadelphia Savings Bank.

The court actions came as a surprise to the local industry in Philadelphia since it was understood that when both men entered in partnership, it was agreed that neither would resort to the courts in the event that any differences arose.

Trustee Asks $500,000 For Films Lost in Fire

Harry G. Fromberg, bankuptcy trustee of Grand National Pictures, Inc., has brought suit against Twentieth Century-Fox and the De Luxe Laboratories, Inc., for $500,000 damages charging negligence in a fire in a De Luxe warehouse at Little Ferry, N. J., in 1937. It is claimed that negatives and prints of Educational Film Corp., for whom he is assignee, were destroyed.

Defendants have served an answer counterclaiming for work done and claiming the loss had been settled with the plaintiff.

Theatre Appeal Allowed

An appeal to the district court in Lincoln, Neb., was made by Frank R. and Jennie Kimball, landlords of the Variety theatre, which was allowed $88,000 in condemnation proceedings. The house is in the path of a proposed street widening project, and was appraised at $88,000 by an appointed board whose findings were approved in county court.

Broadcaster Wins Plagiarism Suit

Justice Bernard Shientag of the New York Supreme Court on April 2nd directed a verdict for the defendant National Broadcasting Company in a plagiarism trial which court observers declared bore reference to the whole amusement field. Suit was brought by Lodewick Vroom and George W. Butler for $176,000 charging that NBC had used a radio drama idea involving understudies which was first submitted by the plaintiffs in 1937.

Judge Shientag held that as a matter of law Vroom and Butler had not submitted a new, novel or concrete idea to NBC and that although NBC had agreed to pay them $1,000 a broadcast for 26 performances if the idea was used, there had been no contract between the parties. He held that four sustaining shows, "Rising Stars," using actors from the Understudy Club, did not plagiarize the plaintiff's idea.

Casanave Motion Denied

In the Westchester County supreme court on Monday, Justice Mortimer B. Patterson denied the motion of Charles Casanave to consolidate his suit against Herman Robbins, president of National Screen Service, with the pending suit of Mr. Robbins and the National Screen Service against Mr. Casanave in the New York supreme court.

Guild Asks Suit Dismissal

In the New York supreme court on Monday, the Dramatist Guild asked Justice Isidor Wasservogel to dismiss the complaint of the League of New York Theatres for insufficiency in law. The court reserved decision after the Guild argued that individual members of the League alone could claim damages for alleged violations of the anti-trust laws by the Guild.

Roach Denies Charges

Hal Roach in a response filed in Federal Court on Monday denied all allegations in a $500,000 counter suit by Loew's, Inc. and MGM Distributing Corporation that Hal Roach Studios had charged excessive production costs on pictures distributed by MGM. Mr. Roach seeks $1,263,993 damages in a suit charging Loew's and MGM violated distributing contracts.

Lawyer Drops Fee Suit

David Stoneman, attorney, notified the New York Supreme Court last week of a discontinuance of his $250,000 suit to recover fees allegedly due him from Stephen A. Lynch, former director of Paramount Pictures, Inc. The lawyer represented Mr. Lynch during the Paramount reorganization.

Cohan Action Settled

George M. Cohan compromised his suit for $5,000 against Maurice A. Richmond and Max Mayer, trading as the Paull-Pioneer Music Co., during trial before Judge Henry W. Goddard on Monday. The plaintiff had brought suit for an unspecified sum allegedly due for royalties on 49 songs which he had composed.

Dietrich Suit Shifted

The suit of Forrester Parant Productions Against Marlene Dietrich has been transferred for the New York supreme court to the United States district court because of diversity of citizenship. The suit seeks $98,450 damage claiming that the defendant breached a contract to appear in a film in France for the producer.

Agfa Sues Victory

August Sennhouser, an assignee of Agfa Raw Film Corp., has filed suit for $5,538 against Victory Pictures Corp., in the New York supreme court, on a bill for negatives and sound tracks bought in 1938 and 1939 and allegedly unpaid for in part.

OBITUARIES

Hadley H. Hall, "U" Manager

Hadley H. Hull, 49, Universal Branch manager in Indianapolis, died April 2nd from a heart attack, while he was at the Indiana theatre in Bloomington, Ind. Funeral services were held April 5th with burial at Martinsville, Ind., where he resided. He is survived by his wife.

Acting manager for some time, Mr. Hull was appointed branch manager for the company in February. He joined Universal about a year ago, but had worked for the company before. He was also with RKO and Grand National. During the World War he served overseas as a captain in the infantry.

John F. A. Landers, MPPDA Employee

Funeral services for John F. A. Landers, 35, who was killed in an automobile accident on Saturday, April 5th, were held Tuesday morning at St. Monica's Roman Catholic Church in New York. Internment took place in Calvary Cemetery.

For nearly 15 years Mr. Landers had been cashier and assistant auditor of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. He is survived by his wife and one son.

Henry Burr

Henry Burr, 59, who aided Thomas A. Edison in early recordings and who made many recordings in the early days of the phonograph, died in Chicago, Sunday, April 6th. For the past five years he was on the "National Barn Dance" program on the NBC network.

John Sun

Gus Sun, head of the theatre booking agency at Springfield, Ohio, which bears his name received word of the death of his brother, John, 64, one of the former owners of the Sun Brothers Circus, April 3rd, at Tampa, Fla. Burial was held in Toledo, Ohio. Another brother and two sisters survive.

Clinton J. Seldomridge

Funeral services were held Thursday, April 3rd, in Philadelphia for Clinton J. Seldomridge, 69, for 30 years a theatre owner and manager in that city who died on March 31st in the Philadelphia General Hospital. He operated various theatres in the city and was last associated with the Gem. Three sons and a daughter survive.

Edo Boffino

Edo Boffino, associated with Ned Calvi in the operation of the York, Eagle Rock and Yosemite theatres in Los Angeles, died on March 14th while in selective service training at Camp Ord, Cal. He was 31 years old.

Dr. Jack Holland Young

Dr. Jack Holland Young, 66, owner and operator and four motion picture theatres in Clinton, S. C., and a former mayor of that city, died on April 1st, after a prolonged illness. He is survived by one daughter.

Asks Stock Dissolution

The placing of the Lennox theatre in Los Angeles in the hands of a custodian has come about as the result of a suit in superior court brought by N. E. Rabinoff and I. Malamud, stockholders of the R & R Theatres, Inc., operators of the theatre, asking for dissolution of the corporation. Stock is held jointly by the plaintiffs and David Rector, operating head of the theatre.

SEX WHIMPER

ONCE again from out in Hollywood rises the plaintive, injured cry that "Mr. Hays and Mr. Joe Breen are stepping a bit too far. . . . Is it their intention to take all sex out of pictures? . . . "

The backroom grumbles, as well as the page one snorts of the complaining local press, are all based on a letter that it is reported Mr. Breen, as head of the Production Code Administration, wrote to producers about the blatantly obvious accent of attention that has been given in some recent and current productions to the female bosom.

The complainants know better. They can discover no point in the Production Code which requires that the screen shall indicate that women have no breasts. Persons competent to gather information from the printed word can, however, discover that a policy of making breasts into selling points is not encouraged. The Code and the processes of self-regulation to which Hollywood has subscribed do not contemplate that sex on display for sale shall be a dominant ingredient of the art. Decent people do not approve, and Production has set up a bureau to remind it of the mores of America, to keep it out of trouble with American decency.

So, once again, we observe that the Code neither disapproves nor tends to inhibit those manifestations of sex which pertain to dramatic narration in terms of common propriety. It is not contemplated that the screen shall be either a barroom mural or a smoking-room saga.

Sensitive, proud proclaimers of the art and its vast educational influences, its endless contributions to the American standard of living, its patriotism and its glories in the service of the commonweal, all so manifest in annual messages, speeches on the floor of Congress, and the like, might perhaps be at times a little ashamed of every so often being caught drawing pictures on the alley fence. It is rather too bad if the little boy who sings in the choir insists on being told to wash back of the ears.

"LABOUR" AND LABOR

EVER since the red dawn in Russia the American newsreel has been under fire from the Left. The real objection has been that the newsreels have pictured a better life, in better circumstances, in a better land.

Some years ago the leftist cry was that American newsreels preached "war and fascism" because they recorded such picturable events as battleship target practice, Marines on parade, launchings, graduation at West Point—subjects in the newsreel routine from the days of long, long ago before Red Communists, Black Shirts, Brown Shirts, and Bunds were born. The name of Mr. William Randolph Hearst was picketed off the newsreel screen, first because it was Hearst and second because it pictured marching men.

Now, in these preparedness days that play is not discreet, so the attack is in the sacred cause of "Labour". The word is quoted because "Labour" is not Labor. The specimen manifestation is from the Thursday, April 10th, issue of "PM", a curious journalistic manifestation in Manhattan, filled with "social consciousness" of a sort, and underwritten now by Marshall Field money. The attack is headed "Paramount Newsreel Does a Job on Labor". The complaint is that Paramount News has covered the physical and verbal manifestations of a number of the strike situations which are facing the national preparedness effort with acute problems.

"PM" does not approve the coverage. That is supposed to be terrific. It is just possible that The Daily Worker will not approve, either.

It is also just possible that when the causes, purposes, personnel and motivation of some of the strikes is revealed they may lack in broad public appeal. "Labour" is one thing and Labor is another.

MEANWHILE, one is reminded, perhaps whimsically, that the Field dollars back of "PM" come from a Chicago fortune, and that Paramount News is responsible to Mr. Barney Balaban, who also has built a fortune in Chicago. Mr. Balaban worked for his. His only important heritage was a capacity for doing. He knows "the common people" of this democracy rather first hand. Reporting to Mr. Balaban is the head of the Paramount News organization, Mr. Al Richard, who came to these shores from France to work in a Pathe laboratory juggling film racks. He knows about labor, too. Assisting is Mr. William P. Montague, Jr., who has been at work these many years. There has been no evidence, for all the years that there have been newsreels that these persons were engaged in anything but an endeavour to issue a reel presenting what the box office customers might be expected to want to see.

"PM" is edited by Mr. Ralph Ingersoll, publisher, too. If he is around when a certain picture called "Citizen Kane" opens, he ought to see it.

LET'S HEAR–CROSBY

A-THUMBING over last week's issue of Motion Picture Herald, your editor was brought to pause by an astonishing advertisement, entitled "An Open Letter to Exhibitors", signed by Mr. Larry Crosby, brother and public relations advisor to Mr. Bing Crosby.

The advertisement details the many activities of the Crosby organization calculated to keep the player before his public, to keep his song and radio publicity in step with picture releases and picture selling, and the devices that avoid satiating audience interest.

But most interesting of all is the Crosby invitation to exhibitors to write in and say what they think, tell what they observe, ask for what they want. They will be hearing from that.

This marks a move a long way from that old Hollywood position of "we make 'em and you sell 'em".

This Week in the News

First Block-of-5

RKO RADIO is the first to announce the first advance trade showing of the first block-of-five, as required under the United States Government's consent decree settlement of its anti-trust suit against the majors. The RKO first block will be shown at the company's sales convention in New York June 16th to 19th, and will be available for licensing soon after that, it was announced Thursday by Ned E. Depinet, vice-president in charge of distribution. The announcement was made at a luncheon of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers in New York at which Mr. Depinet was guest of honor.

"While the method of selling is a drastic change," Mr. Depinet said, "we do not anticipate any great difficulty nor do we believe we will need a much larger sales staff." He added that the greatest disadvantage would be the enforced trade showings in 32 exchange centers. Under the English sales system, to which he compared the decree provisions, only 10 showings are required. Also, Mr. Depinet pointed out, there is no limit on the number of pictures a British distributor may trade-show and sell.

"It is as logical that exhibitors will build up larger patronage if they screen all pictures before licensing and playing them and really set out to cash in on all the value of each picture and try to milk it dry. The old habit of pulling a picture and grabbing another whenever one doesn't stand on its own feet, without much exhibitor help, will not be so easy. We will have to do business with what we have and add to the efforts of selling them instead of pulling them," Mr. Depinet said.

"There will always be pictures of varying qualities, but the deliberate classification of 'A' and 'B' pictures has been a very bad thing. Their measure is their entertainment value and box office value and more so in the future than in the past, every picture must stand on its own feet and we must combine all forces to get from every picture its utmost in revenue.

"The responsibility of the exhibitor grows greater along with that of the distributor. Intensive showmanship will be the order of the day, and the theatre press agent and the advertising man will be even more vital than in the past."

Mr. Depinet opined on the merits of straightforward versus exaggerated type film advertising, a controversy argued before the AMPA several times. Although commending the "quiet, modest" appeal, he pleaded the "time has not arrived for us to curtly dismiss the old reliable adjectives like 'spectacular', 'stupendous' and 'colossal'. It has always been found advantageous to have some of the big words handy," he added.

The Press Threatens

"MEASURES," unspecified but hinted as effective if not also forceful, were threatened by the Hollywood film critics and columnists on Tuesday, as they continued demands on studio publicity directors for earlier previews of films. The critics are represented by the recently organized Motion Picture Correspondents' Committee and the Tuesday warning was uttered by Douglas Churchill, Hollywood correspondent of the New York Times and chairman of the committee in a meeting at the Brown Derby restaurant, and told to John Joseph, Universal, chairman of the studio publicity directors' committee.

Present were the other correspondents, to whom the publicity directors' committee reply had been submitted and by whom it was considered unsatisfactory.

The Coast film viewers have been asking for previews "within a reasonable time" before release; prevention of overlapping previews; and a ban on them in towns other than Hollywood. The writers cited recent instances in which they were not able to perform work properly for their magazines and newspapers. MGM's "The Ziegfeld Girl," opening in Chicago Saturday, was only shown to the press in Hollywood Tuesday. Columbia's "Penny Serenade," trade shown in New York Tuesday morning, was not shown in Hollywood until Wednesday.

Sharing Troubles

WITH the consent and cooperation of the "Big Five" distributors, the American Arbitration Association has placed at the disposal of the National Defense Mediation Board the use of its 31 motion picture arbitration tribunals to aid the government agency in settling labor controversies, to provide the Defense Board with established facilities in key cities where it can conduct hearings and investigations in strikes assigned to it by the U. S. Secretary of Labor.

The AAA pointed out that the offer of the tribunals and their staffs would in no way interfere with film arbitration hearings.

The offer of cooperation with the Defense Board is part of the Association's national campaign to mobilize all the private, voluntary, impartial agencies for the elimination of commercial and industrial strife.

Wall Street Notion

EXECUTIVE sectors of movieland, from Broadway to Wall Street, at mid-week began to hear vibrations of a proposal that James W. Gerard be entered as a nominee for the presidency of the New York Stock Exchange.

Wednesday young William McChesney Martin, Jr., president of the Exchange swept in with the administrative reform wave of 1938, in sequel to the melodramatics of the Richard Whitney debacle, went off to the army. It was expected that Howland S. Davis, executive vice-president of the Exchange, would become the temporary executive head, pending a choice for which there were currently not less than twenty nominations.

Mr. Gerard, of experience in finance and with bench and bar in New York, was Woodrow Wilson's ambassador to Germany, and in sequel wrote the famed "My Four Years in Germany," which came to be a classic of both the screen and motion picture history because of its contribution in film form to the rise of Warner Brothers.

It has been observable that Judge Gerard is on White House invitation lists and bears the aura of acceptability to the Administration. This appears to appeal, with special cogency, to factors of influence which would seek rehabilitation of the status of the Exchange with an atmosphere of some of that conservatism in which buyers of securities and investment in industry would prefer to believe. The former ambassador is, it seems, about to be suggested as a figure of maturity — a showmanship contrast with the "young blood" exploitation of the more recent period.

The dynamic Joseph P. Kennedy, late of the Court of St. James's and one-time motion picture executive, has been discussed for the Exchange post and is reported to have said he would have none of it.

The recommendation of a committee appointed by the Exchange governors will be delivered to a new board of governors of the Exchange on May 12.

1000 "Yes Girls"

THE best way to keep an artist's mind on his work is to give him a pretty girl assignment. MGM gave demonstration this week through the "Ziegfeld Girl" contest sponsored by the Art Students League of New York, drawing hundreds of competitive paintings, all "inspired," they say, by the production of that title—also possibly by a lot of cash prizes. The blue ribbon and $500 goes to Mr. Victor Kalin of Lawrence out in the Kaw valley of Kansas where the big potatoes grow.

This all pertains to what MGM seems to be selling in this "Ziegfeld Girl," described this time as "glamour." It's apparently that same not so elusive something which Mrs. Eleanor Glyn called "It," and what Miss Ann Sheridan radiated for Warner Brothers under the label of "Oomph." Miss Neysa McMein, famed for her magazine covers is quoted as observing that "the outstanding American girl is tall, slender, healthy, preferably dark, good humored and wears clothes well." Miss McMein, however, garbed her entry principally in six feathers and a pair of black gloves—and the girl had her hands up.

All of the thousand entries say "Yes"—and there's not a sweater in the lot of them. But they could use them.

Conflagration

PETE CELLA's barn and carriage house on Whitman Street, Fort Lee, N. J., have burned down. On the night of April 9th, flames razed the old structures which had been one of the moving picture's earliest studios. They were really the outhouses of Pete Cella's hotel. By day the players and directors and cameramen made film plays in the barn. At night they stayed at the Hotel Cella. Among the players were Mary Pickford, William and Dustin Farnum; also Montagu Love, Broncho Billy Anderson and many others who came to film fame. The property is under a tax lien which has been foreclosed. The hotel has not been operated for years. But with the barn, the flames consumed numerous lithographs on lurid one-reelers, and a store of players' photographs authographed to Pete Cella.

'Stop Axis Films'

FOLLOWING threats made several weeks ago, the members of New York's Independent Theatre Owners Association next Wednesday, will adopt a resolution asking the United States Government, by Congressional or executive order, to ban all Italian and German films from this country.

The resolution will remark the continued importation of such films; their propaganda content; their continued influence upon persons who should become "thoroughly American"; their contributions to the Axis cause; their competition with exhibitors who are helping the current arms effort; their privileged position in comparison with the hard time American films have in German-dominated Europe; and their wide distribution here.

The resolution will assert that 45 German and 54 Italian films were shown here in 1940.

Allied of New York, MPTOAa-ffiliated Wednesday "implored" the U. S. to ban pictures from totalitarian countries. Max A. Cohen, president, plans to lead a fight against their exhibition here at the MPTOA national convention June 9th to 12th in Los Angeles.

Showmanship This Week

TYING in with the Southwest's bowling tournament, at Fort Worth, Texas, Lowell T. Bodiford, at the Parkway theatre there, put on his own bowling show, and with it featured several shorts on that sport. Sports pages as well as motion picture columns were utilized ahead to promote the event.

In Cleveland, Dave Bachner at Warner's Hipp, in connection with "Lady from Cheyenne," stressed a contest for a Loretta Young trophy, which was awarded to the city's leading woman bowler.

That Fox Theatre Deal

FOX West Coast Circuit, in Los Angeles, and R. A. McNail, of Golden State and T. and D., Jr. Circuit, in San Francisco, both denied this week the contemplation of any arrangement whereby control of the Golden State and T. and D. theatres would pass to the Fox West Coast-National Theatres interests, controlled by Fox Film and Chase Bank. Fox-National Theatres already has a substantial minority interest in the Golden State-T. and D. properties.

Relief in Hollywood

THE MOTION Picture Relief Fund in Hollywood has benefited by $800,000 from the contributions of guest film stars on the Screen Guild Theatre radio program, broadcast Sunday evenings over the Columbia Broadcasting System, and now rounding out its third season. This was disclosed Tuesday as preparations were made for the final broadcast of this season, Sunday evening, on which Melvyn Douglas and Joan Blondell are to co-star in an adaptation of "Hired Wife."

Guilty on Two

JOSEPH M. SCHENCK, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox, was convicted early Thursday morning of income tax evasion in 1935 and 1936 and acquitted of similar charges for 1937 and of a charge of conspiracy to defraud the Government. Joseph H. Moskowitz, indicted with Mr. Schenck, was convicted of tax evasion in 1936 and acquitted of charges of evasion in 1935 and '37 and of a conspiracy count. The jury returned the verdicts at 2:31 A. M. Thursday morning in the U. S. district court, New York City, after deliberating for ten hours.

Both men were continued in bail and presiding Judge Grover M. Moscowitz set April 24th for sentencing. Hearing will be held on that date on motions filed by attorneys for the defendants to set aside the verdict.

"I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now . . . . . "

"THE SILVER SCREEN", reminiscent even as to title, rehearsing the early days of motion pictures with the characters played by the actors who participated, is currently inducing the customers at Billy Rose's Diamond Horseshoe in New York to cry into their beer. The players include Gilda Gray, devotee of the hula, who popularized that gyration in "Aloma of the South Seas"; Lila Lee, whose first film was "Broken Hearts" in 1926; Charles King, matinee idol, who appeared in MGM's first sound picture, "Broadway Melody"; Mae Murray who, as an advertising model for the D., L. & W., was chosen for a part in "The Great Train Robbery", and Carlyle Blackwell, first of the "Bulldog Drummonds".

JAIL SEEN FOR SALESMEN VIOLATING PROPOSED BAN ON BLOCKS-OF-FIVE

Cooperative of Michigan Supports State Bill to Nullify Decree; Minn. State Senate Gets Measure Backed by Allied

Ninety-nine independent theatres in Michigan, on Monday, threw their combined support behind a State bill to nullify the consent decree's provisions for block-of-five selling, to compel the majors to continue the present system of large-block sales and allow exhibitors the right to 20 per cent cancellation.

Representative Raymond Snow's anti-decree selling bill thus got its first open support from a large group. It came from Cooperative Theatres of Michigan, Inc., the largest independent interests in that state and probably the largest single independent booking combination in the country. Its members, with 99 theatres, operate in 15 towns: Buchanan, Detroit, Dearborn, Farmington, Fenton, Flint, Grand Rapids, Jackson, Lapper, Lincoln Park, Muskegon, Oxford, Petoskey, St. Claire, Trenton and Wyandotte. The largest concentration of attack against the blocks-of-five clause came from the 80 member theatres in Detroit.

In serving notice of their support of Representative Snow's bill, the independents warned that even the distributors' branch managers and salesmen are responsible for strict adherence thereto, pointing out that a violation leaves managers and salesmen subject to a jail term of a year in county prison or a fine of $1,000, for each violation.

Meanwhile, in midweek, a showdown neared on Minnesota's anti-blocks-of-five bill, which last week had received the almost unanimous favorable vote of 103 to 4 of that state's House of Representatives and was ready to go to the floor of the Senate for a vote, following favorable recommendation by a Senate sub-committee. The Senate vote was expected Thursday.

Climaxing its campaign in support of the Minnesota measure and against the blocks-of-five decree provision, Allied States Association of the Northwest sent to Minnesota's Senators, on Monday, a blast against the decree sales stipulation and urging their passage of the small-block repealer.

Michigan Owners Want Product Flow Assurance

Authorization to back the Michigan anti-blocks-of-five measure came from Cooperative's board of directors, meeting at the booking circuit's headquarters in the Fox Building in Detroit. Fred DeLodder is president of Cooperative, B. J. Cohn is vice-president; B. L. Kilbride, treasurer; J. C. Ritter, secretary; Carl Buermele, general manager, and S. H. Barrett, assistant manager. Tom McGuire spoke for the group, as public relations director.

Their statement says that Cooperative's members "feel that the provisions of the Snow bill which would demand that a distributor offer his entire output for the year, together with the 20 per cent cancellation clause the bill provides, gives Michigan exhibitors more assurance of a steady flow of product than the decree permits.

"Further, they feel that if this bill is passed it would grant exhibitors an opportunity they sought in amendments to the Neely Bill in Congress last year for relief from some of these industry ills and later which they hoped the decree would contain before reading the discouraging provisions of the final draft of the decree which 'Froze' for the benefit of the distributors, evils that the independent exhibitors had complained against for years. In addition to the assurance of sufficient product and a cancellation privilege to escape some of the objectionable pictures, this act also would grant relief from 'forcing' of shorts, news-reels, trailers, serials, re-issues, foreigns and westerns.

"While Representative Snow's Bill does not eliminate all the hardships of the Michigan exhibitor," the exhibitors added, "they feel it is much preferable to the 'blocks-of-five' with no cancellation permitted under the decree except for the 'poor excuse' granted in Section VII. That section provides that if the exhibitor complains within 10 days of approval of his contract he can, (if successful in an arbitration case), cancel pictures that are proven generally offensive in the locality served by such theatre on moral, religious or racial grounds.' This relief is negligible and almost unworkable.

"The Michigan bill also contains provisions in its penalty section that bind the local branch manager and his sales staff if they violate the bill's precepts, by any pretense, in the following language, '* * * In the case of a corporation, the violation of this act shall be deemed to be also that of the individual directors, officers or agents of such corporation, who have assisted in such violation, or who have authorized, ordered or done acts or omissions constituting, in whole or in part, such violation. * * *' This provision hits the local Branch Manager and salesman as it leaves them subject to a fine of $1,000 per violation or a year in the County Jail if they violate this law."

P.-T. A. DISCLAIMS ATTACK ON BILL

The attack on the Minnesota anti-consent decree bill by a parent-teachers' group last week was disclaimed by Sidney King on behalf of the Minneapolis central council, Parent-Teacher Associations, in a letter to state senators, sent this week.

Mr. King claimed that last week's letter from Charles B. Johnson protesting against the bill did not speak for the council.

He pointed out that the letter was written on stationery of the "Council of Parent-Teacher Associations of Minneapolis Public Schools", which, King said, was not the name of the "bona-fide" council. The letter, he said, purports to speak for the council and legislative committee in condemning the bill.

"However, such is not the truth," King wrote. "Mr. Johnson is not speaking for the Central Council or its legislative committee because Dean M. Schweickhard, president of the Central Council and member of the legislative committee, said the matter had been before neither organization, and Charles B. Howard, another committee member, said he had never been called to attend a meeting to discuss the legislation."

"I very much resent," King wrote, "Johnson using the authority of his official position to express his personal views."

Northwest Allied Cites Its Position on Blocks

Minnesota's anti-block-of-five bill will not nullify the consent decree but merely supplement it in the provisions where it is weakest, Fred Strom, secretary of Allied Theatre Owners of the Northwest, said in a statement sent Monday to Minnesota Senators.

Mr. Strom timed his blast to coincide with the date the bill is expected to come before the Senate, Thursday.

He cited a MOTION PICTURE HERALD story of November 23rd, quoting Barney Balaban, president of Paramount, as saying that blocks of five would be made available in each state only after preceding blocks had been bought and booked. Since then two other producers have announced the same plan, he said. "This is block booking and block booking with a vengeance," he said.

He also pointed out he had accused Mr. Balaban of violating the spirit and letter of the consent decree, and received a reply in which Mr. Balaban said he could not see how the policy would violate the decree. "On the contrary," Mr. Balaban is quoted, "it would seem to be the one sure, safe course to follow to avoid a violation of the decree."

Mr. Strom also asked: "What would you do with the other five producers who do not come under the decree? They still are perfectly free to shove down the exhibitor's throat their entire output for a season with no elimination privileges—except and unless we get our bill."

He pointed out that under the terms of the block-of-five section of the decree it will, by its own terms become absolutely null and void and the distributors will be at liberty to do just exactly what they have done in the past. He pointed out that Section 12 of the decree reads: "If, prior to June 1, 1942, a decree shall not have been entered against the defendants, United Artists, Universal and Columbia, Section 4 of this decree (relating to the block of five) after said date shall be inoperative and of no binding force." That would become effective, he pointed out, only 10 months after the decree goes into effect (September 1, 1941.)

ARMY CALLS FOR $1,500,000 WORTH OF THEATRES WITH 37,000 SEATS

Orders Issued for Erection of 36 Theatres in 29 Camps Now Without Facilities for Motion Picture Shows

Speeding Governmental facilities in order to make motion picture entertainment available to all of the 1,400,000 regular and drafted army men who will be in service by midsummer, the United States War Department in Washington, this week ordered the immediate erection of an additional 36 movie houses at the 29 remaining posts and camps scattered over the country now without such facilities.

These will be added to the 198 post and camp theatres already operating, furthering the position of the motion picture as the main source of entertainment for Uncle Sam's emergency army as it is building under the shadows of growing international seriousness. The 216 theatres, all showing regular programs of features, shorts and newsreels, will constitute a circuit among the first half-dozen largest in the country.

Some exhibitors consider neighboring army camp theatres to be competition. Words have already been exchanged between the Army and theatre owners on the subject, especially in its relation to solicitations by some Army officers for special clearance privileges over nearby regular theatres. However, distributors have maintained the position that the regular clearance will prevail for their regular customers.

Competition Denied

Clearance for the Army theatres varies, but in most instances runs 30 days behind the local exhibitor. In a few cases clearances up to 90 days have been reported. The Army Service has denied, however, that post theatres compete with the local exhibitor.

In a number of instances, because of the large number of soldiers, it is planned to have two theatres in a single camp. The structures will be of a temporary type, because of the fact that the present five-year army training program is, so far, only temporary. The work nevertheless will cost more than $1,500,000, the War Department disclosed. Another $2,500,000 has been earmarked by the emergency housing program for similar use.

The new theatres will include three distinct types of wooden structure with seating capacities, respectively, of 364, 602 and 1,038 men, and a fourth type, a tent similar to a circus tent, with a capacity of 2,075 men. The tent theatres of which there will be eight, will be located only in the far south where weather conditions will permit the use of canvas throughout the year.

All of the theatres are to be completed in 90 to 100 days and will immediately begin regular showings of films supplied by the Army Motion Picture Service, which now is headed by Colonel Frederick L. Herron, former treasurer of the Hays organization.

The camps at which movie theatres will be constructed include the following:

Fort Devens, Mass., one of 1,038 capacity; Camp Edwards, Mass., two, each of 1,038 capacity; Fort Dix, N. J., one of 1,038 and one of 602 seats; Fort Eustis, Va., one of 364 seats; Indian Gap Military Reservation, Pa., one of 1,038 seats and one of 364 seats; Fort George G. Meade, Md., one of 602 seats and one of 1,038 seats; Camp Blanding, Fla., tent of 2,075 capacity; Fort Jackson, S. C., one of 1,038 seats and tent of 2,075 seats; Camp Forrest, Tenn., one with 1,038 seats; Fort McClellan, Ala., tent of 2,075 capacity, with another tent to be moved from a temporary to a permanent site.

Camp Shelby, Miss., tent of 2,075 capacity; Fort Bragg, N. C., one for 1,038 men; Camp Claiborne, La., tent for 2075 men; Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., one of 364 seats; Fort Knox, Ky., one of 1,038 seats; Camp Grant, Ill., one of 364 seats; Camp Robinson, Ark., tent with 2,075 seats; Fort Sam Houston, Tex., one with 1,038 seats; Camp Barkeley, Tex., tent with 2,075 seats; Fort Sill, Okla., one with 1,038 seats; Camp Wallace, Tex., one with 364 seats; Fort Bliss, Tex., two with 1,038 seats each; Fort Lewis, Wash., two with 1,038 seats each; Camp San Luis Obispo, Cal., tent with 2,075 seats; Camp Callan, Cal., one with 364 seats; Fort Rosecrans, Cal., one with 364 seats; Fort MacArthur, Cal., one with 364 seats; Fort Cronkhite, Cal., one with 364 seats; El Campo, Cal., one with 364 seats.

Thomas Martell, civilian chief of the Army Motion Picture Service office in New York arranges with home offices for the booking of films for Army and post theatres. The Service is self-supporting and books films on a flat rental basis. Admissions are sold to soldiers by coupon books, at an average cost of 14c each. Deficits from the smaller posts are made up by the large centers. At present 5,625 films are handled each month by the service. Prints are distributed through regular exchange centers and the Motion Picture Service maintains operations offices in six cities throughout the country. Rental costs run from $10 to $25 a print. Enlisted men operate the post theatres. They receive extra pay from the service.

A 356-seat picture theatre was opened last week at Fort Hayes, suburban to Columbus, Ohio, to play three shows nightly, with matinees on Saturdays and Sundays. Programs will be changed four times weekly. A small admission will be charged, with admittance limited to military personnel.

Equity Demands War Department Showdown on Stage Shows

Actors Equity this week charges the War Department refuses to do business with the organized theatre in placing stage shows on army entertainment programs and demands a showdown on policy for a long range program of "live" entertainment in the draft camps. A lead editorial in the April issue of Equity magazine, headed "Why Won't the Army Talk to Equity?", says that for six months the War Department has not seen fit to acknowledge the need for such a program or admit that Equity, as the professional actors' representative, should have a part in it.

Army morale plans so far appear to concentrate on motion pictures as the chief source of entertainment for the million and a half men stationed in its training camps. Approximately $1,500,000 of War Department funds has been earmarked for new theatres, chiefly cinema, and other recreation facilities at training centers.

Equity quotes Robert E. Sherwood, sole theatre representative on the Joint Army and Navy Committee on Welfare and Recreation, as expressing concern at the lack of long range planning to bring professional shows to the Army stages. Many ranking officers and post commanders have admitted the need for a far-reaching amusement program, Equity says, but the War Department at Washington continues to take no action. Bert Lytell, president, expressed his intention of continuing a vociferous demand for Army recognition of Equity's offer of assistance.

Meanwhile, a number of independent producers have gone directly to post commanders and booked bands, vaudeville and girl shows for the camps. H. E. Booker the other night opened the first touring unit with a performance at Camp Upton, L. I., and announced that he had bookings at camps through June. Admissions vary with the contract negotiated between the producer and each commander, but are reported to average 25 cents per soldier. The unit presents two shows nightly and a percentage of the receipts goes to post recreation funds.

Short-Waves Mobilized For National Defense

Mobilization of America's most powerful short-wave broadcasting stations for national defense and the promotion of international goodwill was announced today through the appointment of Stanley P. Richardson, foreign correspondent, as International Broadcasting Coordinator for six leading companies in the field. Mr. Richardson has resigned his post as executive assistant to Chairman Joseph E. Davies, of the President's Committee on War Relief Agencies, to accept the appointment.

The announcement was made by a committee representing the National Broadcasting Company, the Columbia Broadcasting System, the General Electric Company, the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, the World Wide Broadcasting Foundation and the Crosley Corporation.

Mr. Richardson will assist the broadcasters in the development of a more effective and comprehensive world coverage by radio. This will be done through coordination of transmission and programs in order that they may be timed to achieve the maximum results.

ARBITRATION SETS THE PRINCIPLE OF REASONABLE CLEARANCE FOR ALL

Written Opinion in Baltimore Case Emphasizes Adjustment for All Parties; Each To Be Considered Separate Topic

From the city of Washington, from the very birthplace of the United States Government's demands for a "new order" in motion picture business conduct, as effected through the consent decree, comes the first written opinion under the decree's arbitration system on the rights of all parties in a clearance dispute. It came, too, in determining the No. 1 arbitration case, filed by the Walbrook Theatre, Baltimore.

The American Arbitration Association's Washington tribunal had made a split award two weeks ago, as reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on April 5th, page 16; but the actual, written "findings of fact"—as the AAA calls its documents of opinion; was not written until later.

E. Barret Prettyman, as reported, ordered the elimination of a seven-day clearance in two of the requests made by the Walbrook theatre's Thomas Goldberg; in a third, the Walbrook competitive Durkee theatre was upheld on the clearance prevailing.

The case had been hotly contested, but all sides apparently were satisfied with the outcome.

The "findings of fact" establish the principle that clearance must be reasonable for every theatre covered in the case and not merely for the best.

The findings laid down the tenet that the arbitration provisions of the consent decree require that the clearance position of each theatre be considered separately.

Five Days of Testimony

The arbitrator's 2,000-word decision summarized the developments of five days devoted to a hearing of the complaint of the Walbrook theatre, against the clearance of seven days granted by Twentieth Century-Fox and Vitagraph (Warners) to the Ambassador, Forest and Gwynn theatres, operated by Frank H. Durkee Enterprises, which appeared as intervenor.

In his decision, the arbitrator held that he had authority to make an award, as to the distributors, which would be effective with respect to any contracts made with the interested theatres in the future, but that such an award could not apply to existing contracts.

He held also that the case before him involved only clearance and did not affect "run," and that, in dealing with the questions of area and competition, consideration had to be given the fact that area and competition of a theatre depend upon its run, size and attractiveness of appointments and entertainment.

Mr. Prettyman's summation of the points of law involved and the testimony of the hearing, which led to his award that the Ambassador is entitled to clearance over the Walbrook but that the Forest and Gwynn are not and may only play immediately ahead of that theatre, appears in adjoining columns.

First "Findings of Fact" in Decree's First Arbitration Case

E. B. Prettyman, special film arbitrator in Washington for the American Arbitration Association, last week handed down the first "findings of fact" in the first arbitration case to be filed in the motion picture business under the arbitration system set up in connection with the consent decree settlement. His written findings, clarifying the position of competing theatres in a clearance dispute, were made public a full week following his decision in the case, which was a split decision, as reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on April 5th, in determining the petition for arbitration filed by the Walbrook Theatre, Baltimore.

Because of the principles established, because of its general guidance value to all exhibitors who now are or will later become arbitration petitioners, and because of its status as the No. 1 written opinion under the "new order" of arbitration in this industry, the "findings of fact" are published in full, as follows, as written by E. Barrett Prettyman, at Washington:

Findings of Fact

The findings preliminary to an award in this case necessarily include not only findings of fact but also some conclusions of law.

First. Counsel for the Intervenor has contended that since the contract between the intervenor and the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation was signed prior to June 6, 1940, the arbitrator has no power to make any award involving that contract, but must, under Section XV of the Consent Decree, dismiss the complaint. After argument it is agreed by all counsel, and the arbitrator concludes, that Section XV must be read in conjunction with that paragraph of Section VIII which provides that no award can affect existing contracts. Any award made by the arbitrator becomes effective only as to contracts made by the distributor after the expiration of existing contracts. Thus the arbitrator has power to make an award both as to Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation and as to Vitagraph, Inc., which awards will be effective as to any contract made after the date of the award respecting the Ambassador, Forest, Gwynn and Walbrook Theatres.

Second. No questions of "run" is presented in this proceeding. The complaint is brought under Section VIII of the Decree, which deals exclusively with "clearance," and the allegations in the complaint concern only "clearance." There is an important difference. Run relates to the order in which a distributor may, by contract, arrange for the playing of a given picture in various theaters. There are never enough prints of a picture to supply all theaters simultaneously. One print must serve a number of theatres, and so it is necessary that theatres play a picture first, second, third, etc., in order, which order is called "first run," "second run," etc. Clearance relates to the time which, under a contract, must elapse between the end of a run and the beginning of another theatre's right to play the picture. Thus a contract may provide that Theatre "B" cannot play a picture until seven days after Theatre "A" has completed playing it. In the present proceeding, the arbitrator is not concerned with the rights of the respondents to contract any of the theatres for whatever run may be agreed upon in the contract. The arbitrator is concerned only with the clearance of three theatres over the complainant.

Third. The complaint is that the clearance of seven days granted by the respondents to the Ambassador, Forest or Gwynn Theatres over the Walbroow Theatre is unreasonable. Counsel for the intervenor, which is the owner of the Ambassador, Forest and Gwynn Theatres, has contended that since these three theatres are owned by one concern, the owner may properly contract in respect to his theatres on an "or basis," and that this gives him the right to fix a single clearance applicable to all three theatres in his ownership. An "or basis" means that the owner contracts that the Ambassador, Forest or Gwynn shall have first run in the zone and shall have seven days clearance over the Walbrook. The arbitrator concludes that this position is untenable, and that the three theatres must be treated separately, as theatres. In the first place, the language of Section VIII of the Decree refers to theatres, and contains nothing which would indicate that theatres can be grouped for consideration. In the second place, sub-paragraph (7) of Section VIII specifically directs that the arbitrator "shall disregard the fact that a theatre is affiliated  with a circuit of theatres." In the third place, it seems to the arbitrator that under the basic concept of the Decree and the situation in the motion picture industry at which the Decree is directed, the owner of a number of theatres of various kinds and degrees of attractiveness and value, should not have the right to lift all of these theatres to the plane of the top theatre of his group, as against an independent exhibitor who might own a theatre rating higher than the lower theatres in the group but not so high as the highest. Nor does it seem to the arbitrator that it should be possible under the Decree for the owner of a number of theatres less desirable than the theatre of an independent exhibitor to erect a new theatre which by itself might be entitled to clearance over the independent theatre, and by that act lift to the plane of the new theatre all of the less desirable and less profitable theatres which he might own. The arbitrator therefore concludes that the proceeding presents three questions, that is, the clearance of the Ambassador over the Walbrook, of the Forest over the Walbrook and of the Gwynn over the Walbrook.

Fourth. Some meaning must be given the word "area" in subparagraph (1) of Section VIII and to the meaning of "competes" in subparagraph (6) of Section VIII. Competition between motion picture theatres must necessarily be a relative term. Thus a first run theatre down town in a large city clearly competes, or would compete, with every other theatre in the city. Likewise, a large, attractive, modern theatre in any section of the city competes with theatres over a wide area. The less attractive the theatre, both as to appointments and as to entertainment, the less extensive the area in which it competes. These considerations must be kept in mind in any consideration of area or of competition.

We come now to the findings which are necessary in order to reach an award in accordance with the provisions of the Decree. The question is whether the clearance of seven days granted the Ambassador, the Forest and the Gwynn Theatres over the Walbrook Theatre is reasonable. We must consider the factors specified in the Decree. The first factor is "the historical development of the clearance in the particular area". The evidence on this point is rather clear. Prior to 1933 the Forest and the Walbrook Theatres were the only two in the area, and neither had clearance over the other. The Gwynn Theatre was built in 1933 and was acquired by the Forest Park Theatre Company in 1935. In the same year the Ambassador Theatre was built. For the 1935-1936 season, the Twentieth Century Fox Film Corporation granted the Ambassador clearance over the Walbrook, but did not grant the Forest and Gwynn clearance over the Walbrook. Vitagraph, Inc., in that season granted no clearance of any of these theatres over the others. Beginning in 1936-37, the Ambassador, Forest and Gwynn were given clearance over the Walbrook. Thus, historically the situation is that neither the Forest nor the Gwynn had clearance over the Walbrook until the Ambassador was built and they came into the same ownership as the Ambassador. The Ambassador has had clearance over the Walbrook practically since being built. The second factor in the Decree is the admission prices of the theatres involved, and the evidence on this point is also clear. The admission prices of the Ambassador are higher than those of the other three theatres.

The third factor is "the clearance and location of the theatres involved, including size, type of entertainment, appointments, transit facilities." It is not denied by anybody in the proceeding that the Ambassador is by all odds the best of the theatres, a modern, up-to-date, attractive, spacious theatre, with well-arranged seats, built for sound and with good acoustical qualities. It is also the more valuable property and has the best service. As to the other three theatres, it is difficult to judge one superior to the other. They are about the same over-all size; the ground floor of the Walbrook is about the size of the Gwynn and the Forest is a little smaller. The Walbrook, however, has a balcony with some 200 seats in it. In assessed values the Forest has the highest figure, the Walbrook next and then the Gwynn. On a valuation based on reproduction cost new, less depreciation, the Gwynn is ranked highest, the Forest next and the Walbrook third. As to transit facilities, there appears to be little difference. As to type of entertainment, the Forest and the Walbrook play the same pictures, whereas the Gwynn plays a different type of picture, specializing in westerns.

The fourth factor mentioned in the Decree does not enter into this picture.

The fifth item is the rental terms and license and fees apparently varied from time to time. fees paid and the revenues derived. These terms and among the theatres. Of course the Ambassador was on a higher level than the other theatres in this respect. The respondent companies make the point that the revenues derived by them from the four theatres under the clearance arrangement now in effect are much higher than they would have been if there had been no clearance. They argue that since the gross revenue derived from the theatres in 1935-1936 and since then is greater than the gross revenue from the area in 1934-1935 and prior thereto, therefore the clearance arrangement resulted in an increased revenue. The conclusion does not follow from the premise, however, because in 1935-1936 a large, new, modern theatre was added in the area, and the Gwynn Theatre was first counted in the computations. Thus, of course, the gross revenue was greatly increased by the addition of these two theatres, particularly the large and commodious one, and an argument based solely upon an increase in total gross does not lead to the conclusion suggested by the respondents. There is, in evidence in respondents' Exhibits LXXII to however, evidence which contradicts the contention made by the distributor respondents. There is in evidence in respondents' Exhibits LXXII to LXXVII, the revenues of Vitagraph, Inc., over the period. The figures show the revenues from all four theatres for the year 1935-1936, at which time no clearance was granted any theatres over the others. The clearance arrangement went into effect, as to Vitagraph, Inc., the next season, 1936-1937. These exhibits show that the gross revenue for the season 1935-1936, when there was no clearance arrangement, was less than the gross revenue for two years of the next succeeding four years, but was greater than the revenue for the other two of these four years. Thus it does not appear to the arbitrator that the respondent exhibitors have shown as a matter of fact that their revenues increased over what they would have been if the clearance over the Walbrook had not been in existence.

The sixth factor which we must consider is the extent to which the theatres involved compete with one another for patronage. The Walbrook is located on North Avenue in the western part of Baltimore City. The Forest Theatre is approximately a mile and a quarter northwest of the Walbrook, and is located at the corner of Garrison Boulevard and Liberty Heights Avenue, both boulevard thoroughfares.

The Ambassador and the Gwynn are located across the street from one another, about three-fourths of a mile northwest of the Forest, on Liberty Heights Avenue, and thus about two miles northwest of the Walbrook. The area for some distance south of the Walbrook, and thence north between the Walbrook and the Forest and thence northwest for a considerable distance beyond the Ambassador and the Gwynn, is thickly settled. There are no large undeveloped tracts in this area. In the southern and eastern portion, around the Walbrook, are row brick houses, thickly populated. In the middle and northwest portions there is a detached house development. The area has natural boundaries. On the west is an extended parkway; on the northwest is the open country, and on the east is the Western Maryland Railroad and Druid Hill Park. To the south the area connects directly into the center of the city. In view of the transit facilities, boulevards and the solid development of houses over the area, it seems apparent that the Ambassador Theatre competes with every other theatre throughout the entire area, and perhaps beyond. In other words, the Ambassador would draw patrons from around the Walbrook, while the Walbrook would be attempting to persuade such persons to either see the picture at the Walbrook or wait until the Walbrook should play whatever picture the patron has in mind. As between the Forest and the Walbrook, it seems apparent that these two theatres would compete for the patronage of the persons living in the area between the theatres. Part of this area would be within walking distance of the two theatres. The entire area has easy transit facilities, both street car and bus, to both theatres, and are clearly within easy driving distance by automobile. The competition between the Gwynn and the Walbrook is not so obvious, and it is unnecessary to decide the point, in the view which the arbitrator takes of the entire situation.

The seventh factor which the Decree specifies includes all other business considerations. Although there are numerous such considerations suggested by counsel for the parties, none of them appeal to the arbitrator as of sufficient importance to outweigh the major factors which we have discussed, or to in any way indicate a conclusion different from the one clearly indicated by the other factors.

The arbitrator finds, as a matter of fact, that the clearance of seven days of the Ambassador over the Walbrook is reasonable; that the clearance of seven days of the Forest over the Walbrook is unreasonable, and that the clearance of seven days of the Gwynn over the Walbrook is unreasonable.

1. The clearance granted the Ambassador Theatre by the respondent distributors, of seven days over the Walbrook Theatre is reasonable.

2. The clearance now granted the Forest Theatre by the respondent distributors, of seven days over the Walbrook Theatre is unreasonable.

3. The clearance granted the Gwynn Theatre by the respondent distributors, of seven days over the Walbrook Theatre is unreasonable.

4. The maximum clearance of the Forest and Gwynn Theatres over the Walbrook shall be ahead of the Walbrook; which award means that the Walbrook may play a picture immediately after the conclusion of the run of the picture at the Forest or the Gwynn, at whichever theatre the picture may run.

5. The costs of the proceedings are divided into four parts, and one part will be assessed to the complainant, the intervenor and each of the two respondents, respectively.

A.A.A. TO STUDY DECREE CHANGES

A detailed study of the operation of arbitration machinery set up under the motion picture consent decree, to form the basis for recommendations for changes, got under way this week, as the law committee of the American Arbitration Association began a survey of reports submitted to New York headquarters by the 31 local tribunals. The committee, headed by Professor Wesley Sturges, Yale law professor and member of the film arbitration administrative committee, will examine the motion picture cases with particular attention to arbitrators' decisions and an appraisal of the relief afforded to complainants.

Reports from the continuing study will form the basis of any recommendations which the legal committee may make for changes in the arbitration provisions of the decree at the end of its first year of operation on September 1, 1942. The law committee of the AAA, which operates apart from the Department of Justice, will report whether it finds the arbitration machinery of the decree capable of meeting industry requirements.

SETTLEMENT REMAINS MOST POPULAR SOLUTION OF ARBITRATION CASES

Direct Conferences Between Parties Involved Bring Agreements in Clearance and "Some Run" Cases; 3 Actions Start

The tendency to settle arbitration complaints under the consent decree before they reach hearings in the 31 local motion picture tribunals of the American Arbitration Association appeared still on the ascendant as both distributors and exhibitors reported settlements on some run and clearance disputes by means of direct conference between the involved parties. No decisions were forthcoming up to Wednesday from the arbitrators who have been conducting hearings in Washington, Minneapolis, New Orleans, St. Louis, New York and Cleveland.

Three new cases were started during the week with complaints entered at New York, Buffalo and Cincinnati. Each involved disputes between exhibitors rather than between exhibitor and distributor. Clearance was at issue in all of the cases, and in one, at Cincinnati both clearance and some run are requested.

The AAA offices at New York on Wednesday announced the appointment of arbitrators to hear cases at New Orleans, Minneapolis, and St. Louis. Hearings were continued in New York, New Orleans, Washington, and St. Louis.

Settle with Fox

At Minneapolis case number two filed by David Gillman, operator of the subsequent run Gaiety theatre requesting some run from Twentieth Century-Fox was withdrawn on Monday. Mr. Gillman in withdrawing the complaint reported that he had been offered a "satisfactory deal" by Fox to provide pictures for his double bills. A second complaint filed by Mr. Gillman against Paramount charging the company asks an unfair rental and unreasonable booking stipulations remains on the Minneapolis docket. Phillip Mackay is arbitrator of the Paramount case.

The Chicago arbitration office on Wednesday issued an amended decision in case number one in which E. F. Vanderveer, operator of the State theatre, Morris, Ill. asked some run from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Arbitrator Charles Z. Henkle in a decision on March 28th granted some run to the State. The corrected award states that MGM will supply product but removes stipulations for a definite season's output.

Clear Washington Docket

The Washington office of the AAA cleared it calendar of pending hearings on Tuesday when Sefton Darr, arbitrator for case three, in which the Westway theatre, Baltimore, operated by Lee H. Homand seeks relief from a 14-day clearance granted the Durkee circuit and Edgewood, Alpha and Irving theatres by Loew's, Vitagraph and Twentieth Century-Fox. The case parallels the complaint of the Walbrook theatre, Baltimore, first case in the country to go to arbitration, which was filed on February 7th. In the earlier case Durkee was also named.

Mr. Homand, explained that his Westway was larger and newer than the Alpha and Irving which play immediately after the Edgewood and that present clearance was unreasonable. He testified that refusal of the three distributors to spot book him after 1939 forced him to accept unfair clearance, and caused the house to lose money.

Counsel for the distributors argued that they had the right to select houses they sold to and designate the theatre which should have early run. In this case, they argued, the Edgewood was preferable to the Westway. Mr. Homand said that RKO booked him without enforcing clearance and that he made more money on their pictures.

Hear Minnesota Case

Arnold A. Karlins, Minneapolis attorney was named arbitrator to hear the some run complaint of the White Bear theatre operated at White Bear Lake, Minn., by David Ratner. Warner Brothers, RKO, Twentieth Century-Fox and the State theatre, White Bear Lake, continued as defendants after MGM settled before the hearing, on Monday. In the course of the hearing Mr. Karlin issued a ruling to L. B. Schwartz, counsel for Mr. Ratner that arguments could not concern what price or specific booking the distributors must give to the complainant. Counsel for the distributors argued that White Bear Lake's 3,500 population made it unprofitable for them to give first-run to the Ratner theatre.

At New Orleans Dr. Paul Brosman, dean of the Tulane University law school was selected as arbitrator in case number three in which Charles K. Woolner, operator of Modern Theatres requests some run from Warner Brothers for his drive-in. Hearings were set for April 22nd. The case is one of three filed by Modern against distributors and is the only unheard New Orleans action.

Loew's Settles 7 Cases

Loew's continued to lead the Big Five in settling arbitration complaints before they came before the tribunal, reaching agreements with exhibitors in seven of the 23 complaints in which it has been named, Tyree Dillard, Jr. home office attorney reported this week.

Mr. Dillard stated that it was the company's policy to correct grievances in any case in which they merited relief and indicated that all seven of the settled complaints would have been settled privately had they been referred to the company before filing arbitration complaints. He urged that more exhibitors seek direct relief through conciliation before starting arbitration proceedings.

The cases settled by Loews-MGM prior to arbitration hearings, and the complaints involved were: Boston, case number one, Paulston, Inc., some run; New York, Number one, Hilary, Corp., clearance; number two, Forum theatre, Plainfield, clearance; New Orleans, Modern Theatres, Inc., clearance; Minneapolis, White Bear Theatres, Inc., number one, clearance; New Orleans, Woolner Drive-In, some run.

Dallas Action Dropped

Dallas case number one was dropped on Monday before it reached a hearing when the complainant, Joseph's Drive-In theatre at Austin, Tex., seeking some run reached an agreement with Loew's, 20th Century-Fox, and the Interstate, Underwood and Ezell theatres in Dallas. It was reported that the distributors had made available all the product the complainant could use, ending grounds for arbitration.

Eighth case in the New York area was filed on April 11th when Louis Martin, operator of the Majestic theatre at Paterson, N. J., entered a clearance action against Loew's, Paramount, RKO, Warner Brothers, Twentieth Century-Fox and the State theatre operated by the Brandt circuit. Mr. Martin charges that State has an unfair seven-day clearance over the Majestic and requests day and date booking for his house from the big five.

At Buffalo the third arbitration case, filed on Monday by N. M. Konczakowski, operator of the Marlowe theatre, Buffalo, naming all five of the decree signatories and seeking clearance over the Niagara theatre operated by the Shea circuit. No clearance period is specified but Mr. Konczakowski states in his complaint that the Marlowe is an older and better established house and should have clearance ahead of the Niagara rather than behind it as at present.

First in Cincinnati

First case to be listed with the Cincinnati arbitration tribunal was filed on Tuesday by Willis H. Vance, operator of the State theatre, Newport, Ky., against Paramount, 20th Century-Fox, Vitagraph, Loews and the Hippodrome and Strand theatres at Newport. The complainant seeks "some run" from the distributors and clearance adjustment with the Strand and Hippodrome.

Defer St. Louis Case

The second case filed with the St. Louis arbitration board by the Shirley Theatre Corporation of Cape Girardeau, Mo. against the RKO-Rialto and Fox-Midwest circuit seeking clearance adjustment has been postponed to May 1 at the request of all parties involved. Ethan A. H. Shepley, St. Louis attorney was chosen as arbitrator, Fox Cape Theatres Corp. of Cape Girardeau claiming an operating interest in the Fox-Midwest Broadway and Orpheum theatres has petitioned to intervene.

St. Louis Case number one, filed by Louis M. Sosna of Mexico, Mo., naming all five distributors, has been dropped. The complainant requested that the big five be required to fulfill alleged promises of 208 first run pictures a year. He also named the Liberty and Rex theatres of the Frisina circuit. It was withdrawn when the local tribunal held that the case was not subject to arbitration before September 1st, 1941.

INDUSTRY WARNS SENATE AGAINST ANY NEW 'FOREIGN ENTANGLEMENTS'

Witnesses at Copyright, Patent Hearings Oppose Changes in Law or International Status Under the Present Conditions

Legislation to freeze royalties due in foreign countries which do not permit the export of royalties owed to American copyright (including films) and patent owners, and adherence of the United States to the Berne copyright convention came in for sharp opposition this week at hearings before House and Senate committees at Washington.

The hearing on the freezing of royalties, before the House Patents Committee, was considered a "flop," with the motion picture industry refusing to send any representatives to testify and the witnesses who did appear condemning the proposed legislation.

Before a second group, the Thomas subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, however, film and radio interests were quite vocal, charging that not only is the present time not appropriate to involve the country in new international entanglements, but that amendment of the domestic copyright laws should precede and not follow adherence to the Berne convention—if, indeed, such adherence was desirable at any time. The hearing adjourned early Wednesday.

The copyright hearing was unexpectedly called to a temporary halt Wednesday morning when the Senate Foreign Relations Committee was rushed into special session to consider the question of convoying American cargo vessels to the Allies in Europe.

Witnesses Scarce

Only a few persons appeared before the House Patent Committee. Of these, Francis M. Shea, assistant attorney general, refused to testify in open session, saying that questions were involved which touched upon national defense, and the committee took under consideration the suggestion for an executive meeting at which to receive the views of the Department of Justice.

Dr. Amos Taylor, chief of the international economic unit of the Department of Commerce, told the committee that in 1937 payments abroad of royalties on patents and copyrights amounted to only $3,000,000, a fraction of our total payments internationally and probably far short of the amount due American patent and copyright owners from foreign users.

Francis Deak, assistant professor of law at Columbia University, attacked the legislation as loosely drawn and ineffective, as did representatives of several interested industries who, with one exception, opposed the bills.

The legislation would require that American users of foreign patents and copyrights owned in countries which refuse foreign exchange for royalties due in the United States, should pay their royalties to the Treasury Department, to be used in satisfying the claims of Americans unable to get money due them from abroad.

The Senate subcommittee had before it the recommendation made by President Roosevelt in Februtary, 1934, for adherence of the United States to the Berne convention.

Significant of the change in thought which has occurred in the past seven years was the stress placed upon the Administration's cultural relations program by State Department and other Government witnesses who at previous hearings had emphasized the desirability of adherence for the protection of authors.

The new thought was expressed both by Wallace McClure, assistant chief of the treaty division of the State Department, and John E. Lockwood, general counsel for the Coordinator of Commercial and Cultural Relations Between the American Republics.

Mr. Lockwood, testifying briefly, said adherence would level one of the barriers to a better understanding with Latin America, where the copyright situation is "very unsatisfactory."

Mr. McClure, testifying at length, declared it was in consonance with Secretary Hull's program for the improvement of cultural relations following the war.

That not all members of the committee were in sympathy with Mr. Hull's program was indicated by Senator Hiram W. Johnson (Rep.) Cal., who told the State Department official that he thought the present "the worst possible time" in which to become involved in new international relations.

"Rather the reverse," Mr. McClure replied. "We are desirous at this time of doing anything that will emphasize law."

Representative Sol Bloom of New York, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, who was an official delegate to the Rome convention in 1928, agreed with Senator Johnson, and warned the subcommittee that adherence now would be unwise, although he said he was in favor of the convention.

He pointed out that if we entered the convention under a treaty and failed to amend our copyright laws, American authors would be at a great disadvantage.

Senator Elbert D. Thomas of Utah, chairman of the subcommittee, suggested that instead of the year's leeway originally proposed for the amendment of the copyright laws, two or three years might be provided, and authors and publishers present expressed confidence that such legislation could be enacted without difficulty, declaring that the differences in position which had defeated such legislation in the past have practically all been ironed out.

Questioning witnesses on behalf of the film industry, Edwin P. Kilroe, general counsel for Twentieth Century-Fox and chairman of the copyright committee of the MPPDA, brought out that reservations made by several foreign adherents would work to the detriment of the United States.

Mr. Kilroe contended that the Buenos Aires Agreement has been far more effective in Latin America than the Berne convention would be and gave United States interests at least as much protection as would be secured under the latter.

Unless domestic copyright laws are changed before adherence to the Berne convention, "the utmost confusion and chaos will result in the field of copyright," Mr. Kilgore warned. He stressed also the need for changes in provisions of the Berne pact and cited the futility of trying to arrange an international conference on patents or copyright at the present time.

Berne Changes Needed

It will be necessary to change the present Berne regulations to permit changes in an author's work. "The limitation on the right to change the plot, theme, sequence, and description of characters in literary works would bring havoc to the film industry," he said.

The proposals for domestic revision were "startling" so far as the motion picture industry is concerned Mr. Kilroe added. Among the recommendations so characterized are oral copyright; authorship of a film; copyright of the rendition and interpretation of performing artists; right to privacy of voice for mechanical reproduction; right of privacy of voice and likeness in television; right to regulate prices for use of music; right of pursuit by authors and copyright of title.

Views of the film industry were presented by A. J. Brylawski, vice-president of the MPTOA, and the stand of the broadcasters was voiced by Russell P. Place, counsel, and Sydney M. Kaye of the NAB.

Jennings Bailey, Jr., testifying before the House group, also opposed the resolutions, contending that if such a method were used to liquidate foreign debts to Americans it should not be restricted to patents and copyrights.

MOVE WOULD NOT RELEASE ASSETS

Proposed federal legislation to pool patent and copyright payments owed to countries with frozen currencies, in order to reimburse American holders of patents and copyrights used abroad, will do little to relieve the film industry's burden of upwards of $25,000,000 in blocked foreign revenue, witnesses indicated Tuesday before a Congressional patents committee hearing in Washington. The payment of royalties on copyrights was not involved in the House hearing Tuesday.

The legislation provides that when foreign countries block monetary exchange for payment for the use of patents or copyrights any funds owed by Americans to their nationals for similar use of patents and copyrights shall be paid to special accounts in the U. S. Treasury. Americans holding claims against patent users abroad, accrued since January 1, 1934, could file claims on the treasury for payment, to the extent of the special fund credited to the particular country.

ASC Elects Jackman

The American Society of Cinematographers elected Fred Jackman, head of the Jackman Color and Process Co., to its presidency at the annual meeting in Hollywood on Monday. New members and a new board of governors were installed. Mr. Jackman succeeds John Arnold, chief of the MGM camera department.

Balaban and Katz Report '40 Income

Walter Immerman, vice-president of the Balaban and Katz corporation in Chicago, on Tuesday reported net earnings of $1,526,911 for the fiscal year of 1940, after deduction of taxes and all charges. The figure includes income from the Chicago B. and K. circuit and affiliated Publix Great States theatres in Ohio and Indiana.

F-M STATION APPLICATIONS REACH 100, AMONG THEM HOWARD HUGHES

Financier - Producer Plans Two Stations on Coast; FCC Gets Six Applications in Week; 4th Commercial License Is Issued

Frequency-modulation took another spurt this week with the filing of six more applications with the Federal Communications Commission for permission to proceed with F-M transmission, sending the application-pending mark over 100, as the FCC issued the fourth license for commercial F-M practice.

Two of this week's station applications were filed by Howard Hughes, multi-millionaire owner of the Hughes Tool Company in Texas, a globe-girdler, airplane builder and speed record holder, one of the biggest owners of airplane transportation lines and, occasionally a motion picture producer. He first looked in on Hollywood in 1927, starting with "Two Arabian Knights" (United Artists), and reached a near-high in film spending with the $4,000,000 he put into "Hell's Angels," in 1930. His agents in New York say he got his money back, plus.

Meanwhile, the Federal Communications Commission continues its curb on newspapers in Frequency-Modulation, pending a hearing, which the publishers, this week, were beginning to anticipate (see box in adjoining columns).

Six Applications in Week

Within seven days six applications for commercial F-M stations have been filed, as well as a single request for an educational, non-commercial transmitter.

This brings to a total of 102 the number of groups that have sought permission to build F-M transmitters for the comparatively new noise-free type of broadcasting. First commercial applications were made last fall, and since November some 44 construction permits have been approved by the FCC.

Three of the new requests came from the far West, where Hughes Productions seeks authorization for F-M stations in both Los Angeles and San Mateo County, California.

The third, proposing an educational transmitter, came from the San Diego (Calif.) Unified School District. San Francisco's Unified School District, incidentally, operates a similar class of non-commercial F-M station.

Other applications requested F-M installations for Boston, St. Louis, Washington, Indianapolis.

Details of the six latest stations sought include:

Boston Edison Company, Boston. Station to cover 6,930 square miles (population, 3,075,927).

Hughes Productions, San Mateo County, Cal. Station to cover 10,790 square miles (population, 1,893,802).

Hughes Productions, Los Angeles. Station to cover 7,315 square miles (population, 2,575,558).

Indianapolis Broadcasting, Inc., Indianapolis. Station to cover 13,640 square miles (population, 1,017,471).

Columbia Broadcasting System, St. Louis. Station to cover 10,950 square miles (population, 1,708,332).

McNary and Chambers, Washington, D. C. Station to cover 2,160 square miles (population, 762,485).

The CBS application is the fifth filed by that network, with two (in New York and Chicago) already granted. Although two experimental transmitters have already been on the air in Washington, the McNary and Chambers request marks the first commercial station sought for the Capitol.

The San Diego application asks a 1,000-watt F-M station on 42.3 megacycles, one of the five channels set aside for educational use, which may be utilized in connection with work of the San Diego schools. Another non-commercial station, co-ordinated with school work, is in regular F-M operation at Cleveland, operated by that city's Board of Education. A number of others are planned.

The total of F-M stations now on a regular commercial footing, employing commercial call letters and channel assignments, increased to four last Sunday when The Yankee Network's sky-high FM transmitter on the summit of Mount Washington, New Hampshire, began operation as W39B.

A 1,000-watt installation is currently being employed, although the power will be increased to 5,000 watts when weather conditions permit higher-power equipment to be brought up the mountainside. W39B is heard throughout New Hampshire, half of Vermont, and southern Maine.

Other commercial F-M stations now on regular schedules are W47NV, Nashville; W71NY, New York; W51C, Chicago. The Milwaukee Journal's experimental transmitter (W9XAO) has also been authorized to begin temporary commercial operation, on a 60-day basis, as W55M.

The progress of nearly a dozen other F-M stations that might shortly have started their commercial careers has been indefinitely retarded by a recent action of the Federal Communications Commission which proposes to hold a hearing on the large proportion of newspaper interests among F-M applicants. All construction permits thus far issued to such newspaper-F-M groups have carried the proviso that no construction work may be undertaken until after the hearing.

No date has yet been assigned for the proposed hearing, but it is not expected to take place for at least a month.

Newspaper Publishers to Challenge U. S. Curb on Their F-M Activities

Concerned over the threat of "discrimination" in the recent Federal Communications Commission order curbing newspaper ownership of Frequency Modulation radio stations (Motion Picture Herald, April 12, page 15), a committee of publishers with radio interests will meet in New York Tuesday, on the eve of the American Newspaper Publishers' annual convention, to chart an organized challenge against Government "interference" with their plans for radio operations.

Mark Ethridge, vice-president and general manager of the Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal and Times which operates station WHAS, is chairman of the committee which includes 43 publishers owning and operating amplitude modulation stations or with applications for frequency modulation permits. The group will hold a preliminary meeting at the Waldorf Astoria on Sunday to form a steering committee and plan an agenda for their discussion of what appears to be a Government ban on newspaper ownership of FM stations.

The committee is not directly connected with the ANPA, but the Publishers' Association is reported to be watching their action with great interest. Approximately 200 newspapers of the 600 comprising the ANPA membership have radio interests. The FCC recently reported that 27 per cent of the applications filed for FM outlets came from newspaper interests. Approximately 32 per cent of the regular broadcasting stations are owned in whole or part by publishing firms.

Tri-States Circuit Switches Personnel

The Tri-States Theatre Corporation, operating theatres in Iowa, Nebraska and Illinois, has announced changes in managers. W. R. McCulloch, Jr., has been transferred from manager of the Granada theatre to assistant manager at the Paramount in Waterloo, Iowa; Bernard Pollock, treasurer of the Orpheum in Omaha has been transferred to the Granada in Sioux City as manager; Jack Knaggs has been appointed as assistant manager of the Garden theatre, Sioux City, Vergil Considine, has been appointed assistant manager of the Loop theatre in Sioux City with Earle Engstrom who is manager of the Hipp theatre.

Other changes are: Mal Murray named manager of the Rialto; James Morgan, manager at the Iowa theatre; Warren Butler, manages the Princess; Don Shane, manages the Capitol. All theatres are under the supervision of L. E. Davidson, city manager.

Universal Cameraman Wins Two Exhibits

In an exhibition sponsored by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in Hollywood, Ray Jones of Universal won two gold medals for first places. Fifty-nine studio still cameramen had 636 entries entered in the competition. The exhibit will be sent on tour of principal cities throughout the country.

Elmer Fryer of Warners received two certificates of merit for second place. Other first place winners were Emmett Schoenbaum and Jack Woods, both of Twentieth Century-Fox; William Walling, Universal, Errit Sibbald and Ed Cronenweth, both of MGM, and Charles Welbourne, Warners.

Orson Welles as Citizen Kane, publisher, and candidate for the governorship of New York on the campaign platform proclaiming promises to save the common people from grafting bosses, etc.

Dorothy Comingore as Susan Alexander in the panoply of the operatic star that Kane tried to make of her, and did not.

That high point, or low, where Boss Gettys, having trapped Kane at Susan's apartment, on the eve of election, leaves to give the competing papers "caught in love nest" sensation.

'Kane' Dated for N. Y., Chicago and Los Angeles

Hot or cold, "Citizen Kane," the Orson Welles-RKO-and-who-is-it? production is now set down for display, if not release, with a series of premieres, openings and such, thus:

NEW YORK

Palace Theatre, May 1, two-a-day with reserved seats. This is the "gala Broadway world premiere" of what RKO called the "most anticipated picture of years."

CHICAGO

A dual run policy is scheduled to start May 6th at the Woods and Palace Theatres, on a reserved seat policy.

HOLLYWOOD

A promised "elaborate premiere" takes place on the evening of May 8 at the El Capitan Theatre. The following day, barring earthquakes, it will start playing concurrently at the Hillstreet Theatre, also with a reserved seat policy. (No reports were available as to reservations for line parties from San Simeon, Santa Monica and way stations.)

Mr. Welles who left New York the night of the press preview at the Broadway theatre last week, having it officially given out that he was going to a "private sanitarium" for a rest, turned up at Palm Springs on the desert two days later. Palm Springs may be a sanitarium, but it will not be private until some one puts a bull-strong fence around it.

While all the release and premiere arrangements were being made, there was an out-of-the-corner-of-the-eye look in the direction of San Simeon, to which William Randolph Hearst had returned after a slight sojourn in Mexico, accompanied by his entire, entire, baronial entourage.

There were no indications that anything very direct was going to be heard from Mr. Hearst, who if you have not heard, has been told that there were aspects of the tale of "Citizen Kane" the publisher extraordinary, which might be of particular interest to him. A lot of Mr. Hearst's hired hands, including several lawyers, looked the picture over. They seem not to have discovered a cause of action at law.

Indirectly something was heard from Mr. Hearst, or his papers, which are not held to be entirely unconsicious of their editor-in-chief. All of a sudden this week, in both Los Angeles and New York, it was revealed by the Hearst papers that the American Legion did not approve, emphatically, of certain broadcasts of of "radio plays by Orson Welles and his Free Company . . . by the Columbia Broadcasting system." Various Legion Posts and officials, east and west were quoted in demands for inquiry about "un-American programs," etc.

This it was to be observed was marginal attention to participants in the "Citizen Kane" matter. It belonged in the same category with some recent Hearst paper attention in major headlines to a minor lawsuit pertaining to RKO. The Welles-Hearst war appeared destined for a fade-out not unlike the trouble he introduced from Mars, on the radio.

Film for Mayer-Burstyn

A deal for the world distribution rights of "The Forgotten Village," has been concluded by Arthur Mayer and Joseph Burstyn. The picture is based on the forthcoming novel by John Steinbeck which Herbert Klein directed and Burgess Meredith narrated. Negotiations are under way for an opening at a Broadway theatre to coincide with the publication of the book early in May.

Lord Beaverbrook Thanks Warners

Lord Beaverbrook, Minister for Aircraft Production in Britain, has cabled thanks to the Warner Brothers, Harry and Jack L., for the funds derived from showings by Warners in the U. S., of the two British propaganda short subjects, "London Can Take It" and "Christmas Under Fire," and for their cooperation.

"The cooperation," his Lordship said, "renews the gratitude we feel for a demonstration of faith and friendship from which we have already benefited.

"In the desperate war we wage in freedom's name, we are sustained by the resources of the republic, and now our people are deeply touched by the personal sympathy of which your contribution is an expression."

20th-Fox Expands Story Department

Following the acquisition of 11 novels, four stage plays and six short stories since the beginning of the year, Twentieth Century-Fox has expanded its story department, it has been announced by Julian Johnson, story editor for the company.

Additions to the department's staff include David Matthews, who has been signed as associate story editor with Mr. Johnson's assistant, Robert Bassler. James Fisher, formerly story editor for B. P. Schulberg, has been assigned as editorial assistant to producer-director Ernst Lubitsch. Louis Moore and William Tunberg, both in the department, have been promoted to posts as special editorial assistants.

Leonard Gets Contract

Robert Z. Leonard has been signed by MGM to a new long-term contract as a producer and director.

UA SETS SALES POLICY; RKO RENEWS WITH DISNEY; BRISKIN IN NEW POST

Kent Plans Fox Meet for Chicago; Greenblatt is Sales Head for P.R.C.; Monogram Starts '41-'42 Regional Series

United Artists vice-president in charge of sales, Arthur Kelly, returned to New York City this week, from Hollywood, with new sales formulae based upon conferences with the company's producer-partners and producers, but reiterating at the same time's UA's determination to continue to sell each of its films on its own merits.

Twentieth Century-Fox will hold its annual sales convention in Chicago, probably in early Summer, Sidney R. Kent, company president, said in New York Tuesday, after his return from Florida, and during the annual stockholders' meeting, which was adjourned until May 15th. The sales force will be told at the convention, the number of pictures to be on the 1941-42 program, and details about them. Before then, Mr. Kent expects to confer in California with Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president in charge of production, and other studio officials.

Meanwhile, RKO announced it had signed new long term contracts with the Disney studios, for release of at least four Disney feature cartoons, and the release of numerous short subjects—even as reports spread RKO would also handle general release of Disney's "Fantasia," now on road shows; Samuel Briskin, Columbia's studio chief, was also named Columbia production head; Arthur Greenblatt became sales manager of Producers Releasing Corporation; Monogram was to begin on Saturday the first of its four regional sales meetings; and, from Warner studios, it was reported the company would have all of its 48 scheduled pictures on the 1940-41 program, ready for release by September 1st.

U.A.'s New Formulae for Selling Are Approved

Arthur W. Kelly, United Artists' vice-president in charge of sales, returned to the New York home offices last week, after conferences with the company's chief executive, Maurice Silverstone, and with the producer-partners, on the Coast. He carried with him an agreement of a new sales policy formula to provide each producer with maximum profits, based on box-office returns.

The new policy was unanimously supported, Mr. Kelly said. He remarked that for certain situations, "there will be a sliding scale percentage going up to 50 per cent of the gross, for important pictures."

Plans for the company's five regional sales meetings are completed, Mr. Kelly said. The first begin April 28th, in New York. Details of the 20 pictures on the new season program will be then revealed, he said. The established policy of selling each UA picture on its own merits will be continued, Mr. Kelly assured reporters.

Mr. Kelly, in an interview before leaving Hollywood, did not mention a reported blanket contract plan, based on the schedule of 20 pictures with a schedule of one picture at 40 per cent; seven at 35; six at 30; and six at 25. Reports were that, although cancellation was not mentioned in this plan, several producers, at the Coast conferences, questioned the plan on that score.

Included in the reported plan was arbitration for differences of producers, with a committee as follows: Mary Pickford, Walter Wanger, Mr. Silverstone, Alexander Korda, Edward Small and Mr. Kelly, the latter three being alternates.

In the 20 picture program, there are said to be four from Mr. Korda, three from Mr. Wanger, six from Mr. Small, and one each from David Loew-Albert Lewin, Richard Rowland, Arnold Pressburger, Gabriel Pascal, Gloria Productions, and Sol Lesser.

From Hollywood on Tuesday came a report that the UA program might not total the 20 films originally indicated. It was said Mr. Korda was balking at the blanket contract idea.

The UA product outlook is the best in its history. Mr. Kelly said. The company has advanced its selling season from July to May.

Mr. Silverstone was understood negotiating with John M. Stahl last week, for his production under UA release. He is currently producing for Columbia.

David Selznick was reported having a commitment for two to three films.

Hal Roach is reported ready to make about five comedy featurettes, approximately 50 minutes long, for UA release.

Mr. Roach's plans include "Niagara Falls" and "Tanks a Million" as his first two featurettes. Paul Gerard Smith joined the Roach staff this week as story head. Other additions are Jess Moffat, comedy writer; and Eugene Conrad, radio comedy writer.

The UA sales drive honoring Mr. Kelly is in its final week. Prizes total $20,000. District managers are led in order, by Jack Goldhar, Arthur Silverstone, and Charles Stern. Leaders in A, B, and C groups, respectively, are Detroit, St. Louis, and Salt Lake City.

Disney Releasing Is Extended by RKO Radio

George Schaefer, president of RKO, announced Friday, April 11th, the extension of the RKO-Disney releasing contract to cover four new Disney features, including a Mickey Mouse, and for a long term. The one not a Mickey Mouse will be "Dumbo," an original animated story, with characters announced as new.

The company may also release, generally, "Fantasia," now being roadshown.

The Atlanta exchange this week was still leading the Ned Depinet sales drive. H. M. Lyons is the branch manager there.

Samuel Briskin, general manager of the Columbia studio, has been named production chief there also, by Harry Cohn, Columbia president.

Mr. Briskin has been with the studio since 1938 and previously had been with the company for another period of eight years.

In 1936, he was vice-president of RKO, in charge of production. He resigned in 1937, and then rejoined Columbia.

His earliest associations in the industry were with the Cohn brothers, and with Joe Brandt, in the old C. B. C. Sales Corporation.

He is a native of Russia, was educated in New York City schools.

Appoint Greenblatt P. R. C. Sales Chief

Arthur Greenblatt, former Monogram executive, joined Producers Releasing Corporation, in New York, on Monday, as general sales manager.

Mr. Greenblatt was formerly sales manager for the Gaumont British company, and, after that, for the Alliance Film Corporation.

He said he would leave the New York office next week for a tour of the PRC exchanges, and for a visit to the Coast studios, for conferences with production chief George Batcheller, and Sigmund Neufeld, in charge of production of westerns.

Monogram's Regionals Begin on Saturday

Monogram's four regional sales meetings were to begin Saturday, the first to be in San Francisco, the second to be in Chicago on Sunday. April 27th is the date for the New York, Eastern, meeting. The date for the Southern meeting will be set later.

W. Ray Johnston, president, is to outline product plans at each meeting.

The company closed a five year contract for the distribution of its product in Great Britain by Pathe Pictures, Ltd., with William Gell, Pathe's managing director. The deal provides for distribution of 24 films annually.

All of the 48 pictures on the 1940-41 schedule of Warner Brothers will be delivered by September 1st, reports say. About 20 will be released by then. The studio plans to have five or six films ready for release each month.

Nate J. Blumberg, president of Universal, left New York Monday night for a long stay at the company's studio. On Wednesday, J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board, was also to leave the city for the studio.

Mr. Blumberg and Joseph Seidelman, the company's foreign chief, arrived Sunday afternoon in New York after attendance at the company's Latin-American sales convention, in Panama, April 2nd to 8th.

Oscar A. Morgan, Paramount's general short subjects sales manager, left New York Tuesday for a three week tour of the company's exchanges, and talks with its short subjects sales representatives. He will also visit the studio and confer there with short subjects producers.

Leonard Goldenson, Paramount's newly appointed theatre circuit chieftain, left New York City late Monday night for an extended tour during which he is to visit the company's theatre partners and associates in the Mid and Far West.

New MGM Exchange Opens

The new $50,000 film exchange in Charlotte, N. C., has been opened by Resident Manager Ben H. Rosenwald for Loew's, Inc., distributors of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures. More than 150 exhibitors from North and South Carolina attended a Dutch buffet luncheon, and Mr. Rosenwald was presented with a lion's head similar to the MGM "Leo" symbol.

RKO HAWAIIAN CIRCUIT DEAL

RKO this week closed a deal with the Consolidated Amusement Company, Ltd., of Hawaii, involving playing time in more than 100 theatres for the next four years. The circuit operates 26 theatres and books for 87 additional houses. Esmond Parker and Fred Williams, New York visitors, represented the circuit in the deal, Andy Smith and Harry Michaelson, sales and short subjects sales managers, respectively, for RKO, the distributor.

NEW TRUST SUIT ASKS 5½ MILLIONS; U. S. REJECTS SCHINE DECREE BID

Peskay Asks Triple Damages for Greenwich, Conn., House; Circuit Proposal for Decree Settlement of Suit Dropped

Consent decree, arbitration, legislation, and the Government's field anti-trust suits in Oklahoma, Buffalo and Nashville notwithstanding—independent exhibitors apparently are keeping up a running fire of anti-trust actions against the majors and circuits. The latest, this week, and one of the largest claims for damages is that filed Saturday, April 12th, by Ed Peskay's Pickwick Theatre, Connecticut, against the majors, asking triple damages of $5,452,575. The action was filed in New Haven Federal Court.

The complaint alleges conspiracy to ruin the business of the theatre, monopoly of product, and restraint of interstate commerce.

Eight Companies Named

Plaintiffs are the Fairfield Holding Corporation, and Grenfield, Inc., owners of the theatre, and Perfect Features, Inc., its 21-year lessee. Defendants are the eight majors and it was said others might be added.

It is alleged by the complaint that the majors had refused to allow pictures into the Pickwick until seven days after Port Chester, in nearby New York State, and until 40 to 120 days after appearance in Stamford, a nearby Connecticut city. The plaintiff further charged that clearance allowed early showings of films every theatre within 50 miles of the Pickwick, except the Pickwick. They asserted in the complaint they had lost in the past eight years, through action of the defendants, $1,817,525, in patronage, rentals, and property value.

The plaintiffs also asserted that from 1930 to 1932 the theatre had no difficulty obtaining film first run. Those years it was operated by RKO. Further, the plaintiffs said the majors had forced the two large independent producers, Monogram and Republic, to withhold films also.

The suit was filed in New Haven Federal Court.

Reject Schine's Bid

A reported bid by the Schine circuit of New York to enter with the Government into a consent decree similar to that obtained by the majors in the Government's New York anti-trust suit, and which would mean a settlement of the Federal action against the Schine's and the three "little" majors in Buffalo, was rejected over the weekend.

The action is said by observers to mean determination by the Department of Justice to "see through" its three field anti-trust cases, of which the Buffalo is one and those against the Crescent Amusement Company in Nashville and the Griffith circuit in Oklahoma City, the others.

It also, in their opinion, ends therefore, all chances of settlement. Rumors of settlement had floated through industry legal air ever since the consent decree in the New York case against the majors last summer.

The Schine offer reportedly was predicated upon the provisions of the decree anent circuit expansion. These provisions in effect restrict parties to the decree from expanding theatre acquisitions generally, for three years; but it does allow them to acquire threatres during that period when necessary to protect investments, meet competition, or carry on normal business. The Department must be informed of all purchases, under the provisions.

It was said that the Government, rejecting the Schine offer, remarked the decree provisions mentioned do not meet the main objectives of the regional suits. The Department is said to feel that restrictions should be imposed without such qualifications; that actual decentralization of circuit operations may be necessary; and that operating methods not mentioned by the decree, must be overhauled.

Though New York observers regarded the Schine bid and rejection, as facts, the Department's officials in Washington this week denied knowledge of such. They added negotiations which might have ended in a settlement by decree, ended some time ago.

Filing of additional papers in federal court Wednesday, by Willard S. McKay, attorney for the Schine interests in the anti-trust action, has been accepted as a forecast of still further delay, perhaps for months, in trial of the suit.

Mr. McKay has signified his intention of requesting the court next Monday morning for an order requiring the United States to file an amended complaint so that pleadings in the case will conform to and be consistent with dismissal of the action as against the "Big Five" on March 17th, and so the remaining defendants will be informed as to the present nature and extent of the various charges against them.

Remaining defendants are the Schine chain, its several affiliates, and the "Little Three," Columbia, United Artists and Universal.

In New York City, Federal Judge John C. Knox on Friday, April 11th, granted to the Hillside Amusement Company, operators of the Mayfair, Hillside, Newark, the right to examine officers of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, for alleged lobbying.

The testimony sought is in connection with the $900,000 triple damages suit by the company against the majors and the MPPDA. The suit charges a conspiracy by those named, to dominate the film industry.

Norman H. Samuelson, attorney for Hillside, said, in affidavit requesting the examination:

"The particular defendant sought to be examined is directly and specifically accused of lobbying against legislation which would remove the restrictions on industry and would promote normal, fair, and untrammeled competition in the motion picture industry."

Mr. Samuelson noted the alleged appearance of MPPDA officers in Congressional hearings on regulatory measures for the film industry; and also noted the recent report of the Temporary National Economic Committee, in which the film industry is held up as an example of a monopoly.

Though no date has been set for the examinations of the Hays office officials, it was said by Hillside representatives they would probably be held before summer.

The Hillside suit was filed shortly after the consent decree was obtained, and repeats to a great extent the charges of the Government's suit against the majors in New York, which was ended, against five of them, by the decree. It is said by observers to imply that the decree has not ended the evils which the Government suit sought to end.

Pre-trial testimony was taken last week, of William F. Rodgers, MGM general sales manager, and Thomas J. Connors, its Eastern sales manager. That of Abe Montague, Columbia's general sales manager, was expected this week. Counsel for the Lansdowne are attempting to interrogate Neil Agnew and Barney Balaban, sales manager and president of Paramount, respectively. Branch heads of the major companies in Philadelphia are being questioned.

The Towers Theatre, Camden, New Jersey, suit against Twentieth-Century Fox has been settled, at terms unspecified. The suit, alleging inability to obtain product, charged breach of contract, and asked $107,500 in damages. A. Ellis is operator of the theatre.

A Boston arbitration hearing may develop into an anti-trust case, the Garbose brothers, instigators of the hearing and operators in Athol, hinted this week, after defendant distributors had told John Daly, arbitrator, that the case was one of run rather than clearance. George S. Ryan, attorney for the exhibitors, has already subpoenaed contracts and such from the five majors in the decree.

Pennsylvania Independents Charge Four Majors Are Violating Decree

First open accusation that any of the "Big Five" consent decree signatories—Paramount, Loew's, RKO, Warner Brothers and Twentieth Century-Fox—were violating any of the decree's provisions was hurled in Philadelphia this week by Allied Independent Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania. Charges that four of the five majors were forcing the sales of short subjects and newsreels contrary to the decree and its "unconditioned blocks of five" provision were voiced by the organization. Sidney E. Samuelson, business manager, declined to name the four companies accused of forcing 1940-41 shorts with hints that if they were purchased now the exhibitor would receive preferential treatment when "blocks of five" selling starts this summer. He said letters had been sent to the exchanges involved specifying the forcing charges.

Allied will protect its members, Mr. Samuelson said, announcing a survey of short subjects commitments for the 1940-41 season and a study of offers of shorts for the coming year. It will seek to determine whether "more are being delivered than sold" and whether "any credits are due exhibitors". The meeting also attacked weekly payment plans, contending it was unnecessary under the decree setup and in violation of its spirit.

CANADA USING COMEDIAN SPARKS ON RADIO TO ATTRACT U.S. DOLLARS

Hollywood Comic Goes Home to Produce, Star in Tourist Attraction Show; Canadian Radio Shows Its First Profit

To get more U. S. dollars into Canada, the Dominion Government there will use the radio as a means of enticing more visitors from across the border, for film, entertainment and other spending. Ontario is the first of the provinces to launch the promotion. Beginning April 20th, a series of programs will be broadcast over a chain of more than 50 stations in a half-hour music-and-laugh program over Columbia Broadcasting System.

Ned Sparks, dour-faced comedian of stage, screen and radio, now in his Canadian homeland, will star in the series to be called "The Ned Sparks Show," sponsored by the Travel and Publicity Bureau of the Ontario Government as a means of inviting American holiday makers to travel and enjoy vacations in Ontario. Coincident with the radio series, the Provincial bureau is conducting an extensive newspaper and magazine campaign emphasizing handsome premiums on U. S. funds and vacation features within Ontario.

Appearing with Mr. Sparks, who is producer of the show as well as its star, will be Sair Lee, featured singer, and Luigi Romanelli, Canadian bandleader who will conduct the program's orchestral score. The broadcasts will originate in the Hart House theatre in Queens Park, Toronto.

Radio Business Better

That Canadian Radio Broadcasting has within the past few years, come out of the red, is shown in a survey of Canadian radio activity recently published in Canadian Business, an organ issued by the Chamber of Commerce in Montreal.

For the first time since the pioneer Canadian station went on the air in Montreal in 1919 (nearly a year before the United States), Canadian broadcasters have been able to make a profit. The change in fortune is attributed to a variety of reasons. For many, the commercial network instituted by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation was the turning point. Others went to the right side of the ledger in the wake of an ever increasing interest by national advertisers in the potential values of broadcasting.

Because the industry is still in a state of flux, just emerging from its adolescence, accurate figures on the entire industry are unavailable from any official source. Canadian Business estimates that whereas in 1938 total revenue of broadcasting stations from both national and local business amounted to close to $2,500,000; in 1940 the total revenue from commercial programs was in the neighborhood of $4,500,000.

New plants have gone up in the past few years at many points across Canada, from the CBC's four recent 50 kilowatt transmitters in ultra-modern housings, to new 1 kilowatt transmitters in urban areas. No estimate of the value of plant and equipment is available for the entire industry, although for the CBC alone, the latest annual statement shows an investment of $2,066,000 in plant and equipment. But the CBC has only 10 of the 85 stations; 2 are owned by the Manitoba provincial government, and the remaining 73 are privately owned.

Improved financial status of the stations is evidenced too by the increasingly finer quality of programs. The CBC in particular has been at pains to develop adequate sustaining programs to please every section of the population. It spent $1,570,658 on programs in the last fiscal year and drew on all the talent available throughout the Dominion. These sustaining shows originate from coast to coast. It is of interest to note that a number of CBC sustaining programs are broadcast weekly over United States networks as international exchange features.

The immediate future, to most Canadian broadcasters looks good. Business is growing and saleable time is scarce, from the national network to the live announcement on the smaller stations. They will find it more and more difficult to procure new equipment because of war needs, while replacements or new plants are a growing necessity in many cases.

Broadcasting in Canada has come out of the doldrums, and although not yet at the peak of its prosperity, will soon settle down, it is thought, to less rapid growth and keener competition.

F. P. C.'s Profit $1,012,270

The net profits in 1940 of Famous Players Canadian Corp., Ltd., totaled $1,012,270 after all deductions equal to $2.35 a share on common stock. This compared with $889,723 or $2.09 a share outstanding in 1939. The shares totaled 430,524 in 1940 and 425,524 in 1939. The net profit reflecting wartime gains in theatre attendance, was the highest for any year since 1930, despite marked increase in taxes.

Revenue from operations increased to $2,624,246 during the year from $2,145,258. Other profits were added bringing the gross revenue to $2,834,040 compared with $2,208,369. Total charges amounted to $1,784,148 compared with $1,427,148. Taxes were $592,500 compared with $237,647.

Consolidated balance sheet shows current assets of $2,805,368 and current liabilities of $857,389, leaving the net working capital of $1,947,797 compared with $1,753,976 the previous year-end.

Potent aids to increasing sales of War Savings Stamps and Certificates are the special newsreel stories included in Canadian releases from time to time, showing where Canada's war savings are being used. Latest in the series produced by Associated Screen News is a story on the manufacture of parachutes in Canada, stressing the tremendous value of these aero life preservers in saving the lives of many Canadian air crews.

Another special release in support of the current War Savings campaign is being carried on by the Canadian newsreels, and shows scenes in the manufacture of anti-aircraft shells in Canadian munitions plants, as an example of one of the many uses for war savings in the fight for freedom.

Meanwhile, it has been announced that Basil Rathbone, film actor and World War veteran, will journey from Hollywood to Vancouver to be the featured speaker at the annual banquet of the Royal Sons of St. George, to be held there, April 23rd.

Mr. Rathbone, born in South Africa under a British flag, served with the British forces in France during the first World War. He has lived in the United States for many years. The actor's son, Rodion, is now with the Royal Canadian Air Force in Canada, training for service.

Sunday Night Shows

The Strand theatre in Sussex, N. B., has inaugurated a new policy of offering Sunday night shows. So as not to interfere with local church services, the Sunday programs do not get under way until 8:45 P.M. A silver collection is taken up and all the receipts donated to soldier welfare organizations. There is no charge for the theatre by Danson & March, owners, or for the pictures supplied by the St. John, N. B., distribution agencies. Each program comprises one feature and two or three reels of educational and comedy shorts. In the eastern provinces, Sunday night shows are now available, all on the silver collection plan.

Esquire Films, Ltd., Canadian distributors of British films, has appointed special representatives for three territories. Stanley Carscallen has been named sales representative for Ontario; E. A. Whelpley has been placed in charge of Quebec and the Maritime Provinces, and L. Druxerman of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Arthur A. Lee, American representative for British producers, has closed a deal with Esquire Films, Toronto, for the latter to handle Canadian distribution of the George Formby picture "I See Ice."

The three vacancies on the Film Board of Canada in Montreal were filled recently. Donald Cameron of the University of Alberta replaces Dr. Walker Murray, formerly of Saskatchewan University, and Dr. George Bouchard, Assistant Deputy Minister of Agriculture succeeds R. S. Hamer, whose term had expired. Commander Edwards, Deputy Minister of Transport, succeeds the late Col. V. I. Smart.

AUSTRALIA CUTTING MORE FILMS, REPORT

More objectionable films came to Australia in 1940 than in 1939, and this represents a reversal of a trend, according to the annual report of that Commonwealth's film censor, Cresswell O'Reilly, submitted last week. It notes the percentage of eliminations in 1940 was 15.8; in 1939, 11.5. It also notes eliminations in British films were twice as many as those in American. Four and five tenths per cent of the British films were totally rejected; two and five tenths per cent of the American.

Fifth Columns

Anthony Asquith took Gaumont-British-Gainsborough "Cottage To Let" into its fifth week at Shepherd's Bush, shrewdly depicting the stealth with which a Fifth Column ring can close 'round its victim even in a quiet Scottish village. Nazi agents this week have pounced on bomb-sight inventor Leslie Banks and hustled him off to a disused mill where, in company of Wally Patch, Banks has spent an uncomfortable time lately, gagged and handcuffed and lying on old flour sacks.

Asquith plans a large Scottish garden fete for future shooting and will switch the action from drama in the mill to gaiety in the garden on a vast Scottish country mansion garden lay-out, in construction over the whole of Shepherd's Bush studios' biggest stage.

In Scotland, cameraman Jack Parry is making a preliminary location survey at Aberfoyle for mountain and loch panoramas; a unit will shortly join him to film exteriors of Home Guards and fishermen in action on the banks of Loch Lomond.

"Will Shakespeare", one of the most distinguished of contemporary plays written around the poet, author of which is Clemence Dane, is to be filmed at last. Responsible for the plan to translate this celebrated play into a film are Michael Powell and Emeric Pressburger, who have been teamed together for the last two years as director and writer, and who have already given the British screen "Spy in Black" and "Contraband", and are currently working at Denham on "49th Parallel". Miss Dane will collaborate in the production of the film.

Powell and Pressburger also intend in the near future to make a film around a newspaper phrase familiar to Britain's wartime public, "One Of Our Aircraft Failed To Return". Collaboration not only of the Air Ministry, but likewise of the Netherlands Government in Britain, has been assured for the film.

It is the intention of the Powell-Pressburger team to make these films not merely for Britain, but with both eyes on the world market.

Meanwhile, Sydney Box, director of Verity Films, a company for the most part centering upon publicity and documentary pictures, says he will make another Shakespeare subject, "Love and William Shakespeare", in color.

Greatest catch phrase probably of the last ten years in Britain is "I thank you", or, as pronounced by radio's public comedian No. 1, "Ay Thang Yow". Arthur Askey has, in the last two years, put the phrase on the lips of old and young, rich and poor, throughout radio-listening Britain.

"Ay Thang Yow" is the title of a new comedy in which Askey is to star and which is to be produced at Shepherd's Bush Studios. Shooting is due to commence March 24.

It will be a Gaumont-British-Gainsborough production for General Film Distributors' release. Marcel Varnel will direct.

With Askey in the film will appear his fellow partner Richard ("Stinker") Murdoch, who has been granted leave from the R.A.F. to play in the picture. Story has been written by the Marriott Edgar-Val Guest comedy team.

Playing opposite Askey and Murdoch are Moore Marriott and Graham Moffat who are said to make the fun double-barrelled.

Askey and Murdoch will have the roles of out of work actors who take on the jobs of butler and "wife", in order to persuade a woman backer to put money into their shows.

Work on "Atlantic Ferry", which is being made at Teddington by Warner Bros., has now gone on to the Atlantic Ferry itself and scenes are being shot aboard the steamship "Britannia". One of the more dramatic passages filmed recently was a mid-Atlantic storm, in the course of which one of the paddles of the ferry breaks loose. The situation is saved by Michael Redgrave, who, as Charles MacIver, goes down to the wheel box and releases the loosed paddle. Wind machines and water chutes work overtime during this sequence.

FILM LABOR GETS TEMPORARY STAY

The Ministry of Labor has advised the film industry in effect that only technicians under 25 will be called for military service pending the decision of a special committee on the industry's request that industry manpower be exempted to prevent a shortage of film labor. Following its initial meeting the joint industry-Government committee is launching an investigation in the extent of the Government's need for manpower, the film needs of the armed forces, the extent to which feature film production is still possible, the labor resources of the industry and its minimum needs.

The companies will compile a complete list of technicians employed and the union a list of the unemployed, while the military services are expected to list film technicians in uniform. The companies also will outline the films they plan and the studio capacity available.

Hillcrest, Ltd.

Hillcrest Productions Limited is the formal title of the new production company, foundation of which by George Formby has already been reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD. Formby is chairman of the company, distribution of whose product on the world market is to be handled by Columbia Pictures.

"Hillcrest" was the name of the house in which resided Formby's father, George Formby No. 1, distinguished member of the British vaudeville stage of the day before yesterday.

The Columbia deal was inspired by the conviction of Harry Cohn that Formby has all that is necessary for world stardom.

Formby's new pictures will be made on an even more lavish scale than heretofore and it is hoped they will measure up to the highest Hollywood standard.

It is likely that Marcel Varnel will direct the Formby pictures. Half a million pounds is said to be involved.

When a studio-built ship was set alight at the Welwyn Studios this week, for the Argyle thriller "This Man Is Dangerous," members of the local Auxiliary Fire Service used the blaze as a practice ground for their unit. The set was a big one, and over a ninety feet span represented a single funnelled two decked vessel. Set alight for a sequence in the film the blaze got out of control and the A.F.S. unit set to work on it, putting out the fire in a few hours.

Toys and clothing given by American children were handed out on the stage of the Regal, Streatham, recently by Mary Clare, who has been playing the lead in the Argylle production, "This Man Is Dangerous". They went as gifts to London children who have been bombed out of their homes. Miss Clare herself has been bombed out of her Bloomsbury home.

Vic Oliver, one of the most popular of Britain's war time comedians, and his wife, Sarah Churchill, daughter of Prime Minister Winston Churchill, are to appear in a John Corfield production, "Ring of Roses", screen version of a novel by newspaperwoman Monica Ewer. John Paddy Carstairs, director of the last Formby film, will be in charge and it is planned to put the picture on the floor about April 28.

Shooting has been concluded on the Anthony Asquith picture, "Cottage To Let", which has been on the floor for the last few weeks at the Gaumont-British-Gainsborough Studios at Shepherd's Bush. At the moment of writing the unit is in Aberfoyle and Loch Lomond shooting exteriors. Other exteriors will be taken near London. General Film Distributors will handle it in Britain.

FILM LABOR IN BRITAIN DEMANDS FULL INDUSTRY NATIONALISATION

Cine Technicians' Report Urges Progressive Intervention by State; Fight to Eliminate U.S. Film Influence Is Foreseen

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Impelled by the urgent situation to uncompromising thought and the consideration of drastic remedies for present ills, labor within the British motion picture industry, as represented by the Association of Cine Technicians, has come out, in the midst of the present war, with a demand for nationalization.

At its Annual Conference this year, exhaustive and intensive consideration was given to a report, drawn up by a special committee, agitating for State incursion into production, studios, distribution—and, later, exhibition. Realizing that "strategy demands progressive intervention by the State rather than immediate nationalization," studio technicians have not put all their eggs in one basket, selected only the choicest ones for immediate show, reserved others in the hope that the situation will develop appropriately in the future.

The Conference voted in favor of a State production enterprise, with a moderate but increasing output;

A State distribution organization to be developed in the event of opposition by the industry, as at present constituted;

State studios and laboratories, with capacity more than that needed by State production;

A Film Credit Corporation, and democratic representation and standard working conditions.

Full Control Envisioned

To quote the Report: "The rate of development or success of these measures will determine the rate at which the scope of national enterprise can be extended to embrace the bulk of home output and the date on which the advance to full adequate protection can be made."

The Report, drawn up by a Select Committee of the Association, is a remarkable document, one which, however controversial or discursive its views may be, is brilliant in the exposition of its theme, clearly laid out and excellently written. Notable within its scope is its examination of the relations of the American film industry with Great Britain, its economic and political hold there, and the pro-American policy with which, it is suggested, the Government regulates its British film industy legislation.

The Report attacks the Quota: "Quota legislation may be compared to a drug administered by a doctor, not to cure but to stimulate, each successive dose leaving the patient, after a deceptive submission of activity, eventually weaker than before."

Inevitably accepting the U. S. industry as the economic basis of British distribution and exhibition, the memo posits the competition of the U. S. as one of the reasons for past failures to organize successful and continuous British production.

The smaller size of the Home market is seen as inevitably placing British production at a disadvantage compared with U. S. product. It is contended that for U. S. product the possibility of competition does not restrict itself to price under-cutting. There is also price undercutting of the accompanying shorts, advertising campaigns, and the seduction of stars and technicians to the U. S.

U. S. Product Seen Essential

Considerable attention is devoted to the industrial and political considerations affecting the American industry here. No illusions would seem to exist regarding the essential nature of the U. S. film to the British market. The motion picture industry is seen as but part of the industrial structure of Britain, as related to the whole question of world trade, particularly in regard to the U. S. Overriding considerations, such as military crises, have encouraged the two nations to reject political conflict and to prefer temporary compromises enabling political co-operation. It is inevitable, suggests the Report, that the British State can take no measures adequately to protect its Home film production, with America and American industry so vital to British existence. Any agreements are bound to be a compromise. Concessions would have to be made by Britain rather than the U. S.

Here is an interpretation of Government policy, as achieved by the A. C. T.: "The course adopted by the Government, therefore, was to devise legislation that should:

"(1) Not give adequate protection, for that would be rejected by U. S. interests.

"(2) Yet give some measure of protection, in order to silence and weaken the interests demanding it.

"(3) Wrap up the protection granted in a form of the utmost complexity, making it impossible to prove its inadequacy to the lay man."

With strong views of the motives and purposes of its own Government, the A. C. T. have their own views about the motives and purposes of the U. S., its Government and its industry.

David Lawrence, in the U. S. News, December 27, 1940, is quoted: "The U. S. will be in a position to inherit much of the British power; will then become senior partner in Empire, with Britain the junior partner."

Dr. Virgil Jordan is quoted, too, from the Annual Convention of the Investing Bankers Association in Hollywood, Florida, December 10, 1940, "Even though by our aid England should emerge from the struggle without a defeat she will be so impoverished economically and in prestige that she will not be able to assume or maintain the dominant position in world affairs which she has occupied so long. . . ."

MORE PICTURES ONLY SOLUTION, SAYS C.E.A.

The Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, replying to the British Government proposal for a revision of trade methods, this week expressed the belief that the only solution for the ills of the trade, for most of which, incidently, it blamed the Government, was more pictures. This solution, it was said, can come only if the Government releases the manpower and materials with which to produce them.

Examining various methods of protection, dismissing monopoly of foreign trade as practicable until the State controls the amount of foreign produce imported, submitting for imports an ad valorem duty on films at a progressively rising rate, the Association's political economists survey Quota as a principle, analyze it and dismiss it out of hand.

"The Quota scheme is designed, while leaving the current advantage of imported over home-produced films untouched, to oblige those who profit from the import to share a part of the loss of the home product . . . therefore Quota cannot promote an independent national industry. The films produced are not, any more than before, able to compete with U. S. imports on equal terms. Quota . . . is simply the legal enforcement of the production, within national borders, of a number of films promoted by, or relying for distribution upon, either the U. S. importers or those native film operators whose business is dependent on U. S. films."

Distribution, which to the A. C. T. pamphleteers is not really a separate interest, but really another field in which already defined conflicting interests meet and find a battleground, is divided by them into three sections:

(1) The U. S. importers, linked with U. S. production interests.

(2) The British firms, linked with the Circuits and depending on U. S. films for their programs.

(3) So-called independents, who have to take what is left "so long as the distribution which dominates production remains in hands linked directly or indirectly to U. S. interests will never develop towards national independence."

Thus dissecting though, of course, at greater length, the motion picture industry with its interlinked U. S.-Anglo network, the case is presented for State incursion into the realms of the business. Danger is seen in complete nationalization at the outset, and it is considered preferable to find a method of using private initiative as well. So it is that they decide that adequate protection can be effected only by either a monopoly of imports, or, as preferred, an ad valorem duty, "but only at the cost of a conflict with U. S. interests."

Duty Would Bring Conflict

It is expected that if an ad valorem duty were imposed there would be conflict and the potential State industry is warned not to precipitate this conflict until national film production is prolific enough to be able to compete with any U. S. boycott.

Recent events, however, would not seem to have increased the confidence of the supporters of this State film industry theme, that any such plans are near fruition. Though the Films Commission is still withheld from materialization it has by no means been put back on the Board of Trade shelf. It is, so to speak, on the President's desk, ready for presentation in appropriate form at the appropriate moment.

The abrupt manner in which the parliamentary suggestion that a Ministry of Films be proposed was rejected by the Lord Privy Seal in the Commons this week, indicates that the Government has something more pressing upon its mind and is likely to have for the duration of the war.

Nevertheless an increasing intervention in the affairs of the industry by such departments as the Ministry of Information is giving cause for concern. The Ministry's treatment of the news reels has provoked them to vigorous and emphatic protest to demand assurances and safeguards. The suggestion that they are about to launch into the feature production field has no less concerned the business, and the exhibitor section in particular.

Stars, Speakers Lining up for Variety Meet

"The greatest array of showmen and national celebrities in the history of the Atlantic City boardwalk" is promised for the National Variety Clubs convention at the New Jersey resort on May 15 to 17th, by local and national committees in charge of plans for the event. The Atlantic City committee, headed by Frank P. Gravatt, operator of the Steel Pier, this week reported to the national Variety board that preparations were being made for an expected attendance of 1,500 persons.

The national committee headed by John H. Harris announces that business sessions will open at 10 A. M. on May 15th at the Hotel Traymore with the annual gathering of national canvasmen and officers. Official delegates will meet on May 16th, with two voting members from each Tent on hand.

Civic Heads, Stars Invited

Among the national figures who have accepted invitations to the meeting are John N. Garner, former Vice President, Postmaster General Frank Walker, J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Jack Dempsey, Bobby Jones and a long roster of film and theatre notables, according to Carter Barron, chairman of the dignitaries committee. Each of the motion picture companies has promised to send at least one producer and director and an assortment of its star players he said.

Walter Wanger, national Variety committee member and president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences will lead the Hollywood delegation to Atlantic City. Among those who will accompany are Frank Capra, Joan Bennett, Lana Turner, Clark Gable, Heddy Lamarr, Carole Landis and Carole Lombard.

The Atlantic City Variety committee in addition to Mr. Gravatt includes George F. Willand, P. Mortimer Lewis, Harry Waxman, A. J. Vanni, Mayor Thomas D. Taggart, Jr., and City Commissioners Joseph Altman, William F. Casey, William S. Cuthbert and Daniel S. Bader; Richard Endicott, Lou Cunningham, Harvey Anderson, Mort Levine, Myer Adelman, Nathan Cohen, Frank Elliott, Cy Waxman, Harry Volk, Wallace Andrews, Jack Waxman, Al Fischer, Al Smith, Thomas Husselton, Phillip E. M. Thompson, A. H. Skean, Vincent Manno, Alvin Hunsicker and Miss Lenore Slaughter.

Film companies who have made reservations for their executives include Paramount, National Screen Service, Warner Brothers, Twentieth Century-Fox, Fox-Intermountain, Radio City Music Hall, RKO, United Artists, Universal, Republic, Prudential Circuit, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Skouras Theatre Corporation, Monogram, and others.

Others Will Attend

Fulton Oursler, editor of Liberty magazine and a judge for the Humanitarian Award will attend, as will the Reverend Edward J. Flanagan, founder of Boys Town and Senator James J. Davis of Pennsylvania.

Additional members of convention committees include Harry Browning, Boston, publicity and pictures; A. E. Lichtman and Edward J. Melniker, humanitarian escort committee; and Oscar Neufeld, Horlacher Delivery Service; Alfred J. Davis 20th Century-Fox; George Schwartz, Universal; Milton Rogasner, Iris Theatre; Sam Gross, 20th Century-Fox; Harry Weiner, Columbia; George F. Wielland, Apollo Theatre, Atlantic City to assist Henry Friedman on the hotel and reservations committee.

William A. McAvoy, Jr. of Philadelphia, chairman of the decorations committee has appointed the following assistants: Harry Blumberg, National Theatre Supply Co., projection; Elmer Wilske, Altec Service Corp., sound equipment and operation; Al Blofson, National Penn Printing Co., scrip money; Charles Goldfine, Aldan Theatre, Philadelphia, games and equipment; and John Hockenberry, Warner Bros. Theatre, electrical department.

James P. Clark, William J. Clark, Oscar Neufeld, and Clint K. Weyer are in charge of transportation arrangements.

Five Newsreel companies will cover the Variety convention activities the publicity committee reported. News of the Day, Movietone, Paramount, Pathe, and Universal will assign special units to the boardwalk parade and circus on Saturday, May 17th.

Bids for the 1942 national convention have already been received from three cities the national Variety committee announced this week. Miami, Washington, and Los Angeles will seek the '42 gathering at the delegates meeting in Atlantic City on May 15th.

Other Variety Activities

On April 8th the Atlanta Variety Club paid in full the charity pledge made at the national convention in Dallas last year when Harry Ballance, chairman of the Georgia charity committee delivered $6,500 to Chief Barker William K. Jenkins. Mr. Ballance also reported the club had raised sufficient funds to take all members to the Atlantic City Convention in chartered railroad cars.

TEAR GAS, TIME BOMBS AND SNAKES

Lloyd Royal, owner of the Royal theatre, tear-gas-bombed twice, then blast-bombed, causing injury to five persons, is busy this week tracking down another outrage against his business at Meridian, Miss., after rumors spread throughout that city that someone had released a box of poisonous snakes in the movie house.

Leo Schwartz and D. K. Black are free on $2,500 bond each awaiting the August grand jury on charges of a conspiracy "to commit assault and battery with intent to murder" in connection with the time bomb blast on March 27th. The former is a projectionist and the latter a cab driver, but a former operator of projection equipment. Schwartz, following his arrest on the charges, tried to commit suicide in his cell by slashing his wrists.

The projectionists local at a labor mass meeting this week sponsored by the Central Labor Union of Meridian, offered police and Mr. Royal all possible assistance in apprehending the guilty persons.

Cronin Is Walker Aide

According to an announcement from Washington, William F. Cronin of New York has been appointed executive assistant to Frank C. Walker, Postmaster General. Mr. Cronin has long been associated with Mr. Walker. He has been serving as a senior administrative officer in the office of the Postmaster General, and prior to that was associated with Mr. Walker in the New York offices of the Comerford Circuit.

Bankers Move Further Into Film Stocks

Strengthening their interests in Paramount Pictures and Radio Keith Orpheum, the Manufacturers Trust Company, New York, and the Atlas Corporation, Jersey City, respectively, bought heavily into the stocks of those companies in February, it is disclosed by the Security and Exchange Commission's first summary for that month.

In Paramount, the Manufacturers Trust Company acquired 392,800 3¼ per cent converticle debentures, giving it a total at the close of the month of 3,392,800 debentures. The company also held 5,710 shares of Paramount first preferred stock.

In Radio Keith Orpheum, Atlas bought 17,631 shares of common and 2,300 shares of preferred stock, and at the end of the month held 762,127 shares of common direct and 268,230 shares through the American Company, together with 327,812 warrants for common and 38,981 shares of preferred stock.

Other Transactions

In another sector of Paramount securities, the commission reported that Austin C. Keough, New York, officer, acquired 1,000 shares of common stock and held 1,559 shares of that class and 423 shares of second preferred at the end of the month.

The third largest transaction shown in the report was the purchase of 600 shares of Consolidated Film Industries part preferred stock by Walter P. Stevens, Scranton, Pa., director, making his interest 1,400 shares, and the fourth largest was the acquisition of 200 Universal common voting trust certificates by Preston Davie, New York, director, giving him a total of 3,700 held direct and 26,500 held through the Standard Capital Company.

The only other film transaction reported for the month was the acquisition of 73 more shares of Loew's Boston Theatres common stock by Loew's, Inc., making its total holdings 117,920 shares.

In Columbia Broadcasting System, Dorsey Richardson, New York, director, was shown to have become a stockholder through the purchase of 10 shares of Class A common stock.

Fires Destroy Four Theatres

Four theatres in recent weeks were partially or completely destroyed by fire. In Enumclaw, Wash., on April 4th, fire which destroyed the two-story Hotel Enumclaw, set fire to the adjoining Avalon theatre which was damaged by smoke and water to the extent of $5,000. The theatre was insured. On April 8th, a fire in the backstage section of the Mayfair theatre in Asbury Park, N. J., caused an estimated $40,000 worth of damage. The House is operated by the Riverside Operating Co., Inc.

In suburban Buffalo, N. Y., the Olympic theatre was destroyed by fire last week. Damage was estimated at $12,000 to $15,000. The theatre seats 400 and is managed by Harry Knops. On March 29th, the Attica theatre in Attica, Kansas, was destroyed by fire. The origin fire was unknown. As the second show was over about 11 P. M. and everyone had left the theatre the fire was discovered.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Nebraska, in the past, has outwardly made much of its native sons, especially those who reached Hollywood.

Once, the Saturday Evening Post carried a big article about Harold Lloyd, who first saw light in Burchard, Neb., and it showed a photo of the town's grain elevator which carried a big sign saying, "Birthplace of Harold Lloyd." That sign is so lacking in paint now, it's almost impossible to read it.

Early this year, another such incident occurred. Wahoo, Neb., a town of 2,000 people, posted signs at all highway entrances to the town, years ago, heralding it as "The Home Town of Darryl Zanuck (pictures), Howard Hanson (symphony), and Sam Crawford (baseball)." The paint-brushes have gone over the places where these names formerly stood out, and Wahoo's billboards now flaunt the town as "Center of Saunders County" and "Home of Luther College."

There is no reason given for either incident, beecause the hometown-ers make no bones about claiming the distinction due them even now. It's all a matter of a paint brush.

Motion picture stars who attended the opening of CBS's new "Hollywood Premiere" series, in Hollywood, recently entered the radio studios over an historic carpet. It was the original "Hollywood red carpet"—the one used at world premieres of such famous pictures as "The Birth of a Nation," "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," and "Hearts of the World," among others. The carpet was found in a Hollywood warehouse and was taken out and dusted for the air show opening.

HIGH FINANCING, BY PARAMOUNT

MOTION PICTURE HERALD,
Managers Round Table,
Rockefeller Center,
New York City.

Attention Miss Merriam:

This is to advise you that I am now a proud Poppa of a little girl. She was christened Caroline Lee, after Paramount's Caroline Lee, who was discovered by Tracy Barham, our Paramount district manager.

The hospital bill for this new arrival was paid for by the prize money I won in the Paramount Barney Balaban Drive, and the doctor's bill was paid by winning the first prize in the Paramount Production Idea contest.

Very truly yours,

RICHARD PEFFLEY, Manager,
Paramount Strand and Gordon Theatres, Middletown, Ohio.

P.S.: I am hoping Paramount has another contest pretty soon.

The following letter from an Ohio exhibitor was received by Pete Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, in Columbus:

"My dear Pete:

"I am enclosing a check for $16.30 to pay my organization dues. You will notice that I now only have 163 seats instead of 205, because I cut some of them out. Where I had them is now a room where I have six pinball machines, and this is the reason why I am able to pay you my dues.

"Business has been very lousy and the only reason I keep running the show is because my wife, Martha, and the grandchildren like the movies, and I figure, if I can break even, I am saving money, because otherwise the family would have to spend money for gasoline and admissions to see the shows in Gatesburg.

"I have recently started to run double bills, because the film salesmen told me all of the first-class houses were doing it and that it was the thing to do, but Martha is complaining because it has put her behind in her knitting.

"The other day I read of a new organization in New York that is to coordinate the [film] business with the Government. I don't know just what this means but it must be important because the fellow at the head of it is to get twenty-five thousand smackers a year. If this is anything to do with the Consent Decree I'm against it and I hope the organization also is.

"Where can I get one of the certificates from the coordinating committee which will prove that I'm a patriot? None of the film salesmen know anything about this because they're too worried about the new selling plan of blocks-of-five.

"I like to receive your organizational bulletins because they tell me everything except how to make money out of running my theatre. Can't you do this some time, although I don't care so much now since putting in the pinball machines.

"I wish you would also find out who the $25,000 coordinator and his $7,800 Secretary are going to coordinate."

John Chapman, the New York Daily News columnist, likes to kid Hollywood movie chatter columnists. He thinks a typical Hollywood chatter column reads something like this:

"Who's the Woman in Black who spends an hour every day jumping on John Barrymore's profile? The one in the sidewalk at Grauman's Chinese. . . . J. Allan Snitch and Ysydor Borrow, screen-writing team, wrote a screen play standing on their heads and with one hand tied behind them, to settle a bet and for a layout in a picture magazine. The screen play is no good, which is the way they write right side up. On the strength of the publicity, the boys got a $1,000-a-week salary hike. . . . What male movie star, drunk as a skunk and mad as a hatter, and sore as a boil, cut which female star's pretty throat with a table knife at what classy rendezvous? I don't know. I'm just asking. . . . But it would be fun if it could be arranged. . . .

"Make a bet right now that next year's Academy Award will go to handsome Amadeus Applegate, who in a recent drawing-room comedy had to make three tries at a cigarette lighter before it would work. Most human touch since Cuddles Laughton burped in 'Henry the Eighth.' . . .

"Found a man yesterday who hadn't seen 'Citizen Kane' at a secret showing. . . . Where would Hollywood be if it weren't for tooth caps and toupees? . . . Barrymore says the Woman in Black might be one of his mothers-in-law. . . . Jimmy Stewart is losing his slouch in the Army, and M-G-M may have to sue. . . .

"You can make a bet that the Academy Award will go to Laszlo Z. Szlapsy, refugee character actor, who played the doctor in 'Where Did You Come From?' He crashed into a confinement case without commanding 'Water—heat, lots of hot water!'" . . .

Taking a page from the bulging amusement-participation books of Uncle Sam, whose WPA, Administration, Army and Navy and various other agencies have been putting on everything in the show line from three-ring circuses to vaudeville and movies, the State of New York has gone out and gotten itself a full-fledged night club, the Whirling Top, at East 52nd Street, near Fifth Avenue, New York. The Whirling Top has all the trimmings, a floor show with crooners and cornetists, cigarette girls and champagne. The State took over to recover back taxes from the owners. It also took over their headaches.

Ziegfeld Girl

(MGM)

Showgirls and Troupers

Screen entertainment of a lavish and fulsome nature is here unwound against a background of the Ziegfeld "Glorified Girl" era of a decade and a half ago.

Starting with the premise that to be a Ziegfeld showgirl was simply to see more of life in a shorter time than in other occupations, the picture shows the results of this compression on three such girls, depicted by Judy Garland, Hedy Lamarr and Lana Turner, who, together with James Stewart, constitute the film's starring quarter.

The first, characterized as the daughter of Edward Gallagher of Gallagher and Shean, wins stardom, eventually creates an opportunity for the success of her father and his vaudeville partner. The second, wife of an impoverished violinist, finds that she still loves him and wins him back, although he had left her in protest against her acceptance of the job. The third, department store elevator operator and policeman's daughter, takes the easy way of admiration and gifts, ends in misery and dies on the opening night of a new edition of the "Ziegfeld Follies."

The three stories, and something of the show itself, are enacted by a cast which, in addition to the four stars, has in principal support Tony Martin, Jackie Cooper, Ian Hunter, Charles Winninger, Edward Everett Horton, Philip Dorn, Paul Kelly.

Producer Pandro Berman, on behalf of his first vehicle since leaving RKO as executive in charge of production, and director Robert Z. Leonard have spared nothing to impart the feel of the spectacular which was a Ziegfeld trademark. The picture was filmed in Sepia and includes both dancing and singing sequences which evoked applause at the press preview. Busby Berkeley directed the musical numbers, written by Nacio Herb Brown and Gus Kahn. Harry Carroll and Joseph McCarthy, and Gallagher and Shean.

Previewed at the Four Star Theatre, Los Angeles, to a press and professional audience. While individual numbers and portrayals received applause, restlessness was evident at the length of the picture. Billy Burke (Mrs. Florenz Ziegfeld) and her daughter seemed satisfied that justice had been done the subject, judging by their post-preview smiles.—WALTER SELDEN.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Director, Robert Z. Leonard. Producer, Pandro S. Berman. Musical numbers directed by Busby Berkeley. Musical score, Herbert Stothart. Musical director, Georgie Stoll. Words and lyrics by Nacio Herb Brown and Gus Kahn, Roger Edens, Antonio and Rosario, Harry Carroll and Joseph McCarthy, Edward Gallagher and Al Shean. Mr. and Mrs. and Family

After being subjected to a series of sophisticated screen studies on marital problems and mixups, with emphasis on the boudoir and bed, this is a welcome and wholesome change. Belatedly, perhaps, this production advances a man, his wife and their joint joys and sorrows in raising a family with entertaining and engaging, if somewhat sentimental results. It is warm with human interest and appeal, filled as it is with the everyday material of everyday life, the laughs and tears that color normal existence.

Besides the glad tidings of screen material that will cause neither showman nor spectator embarrassment, there is the fact that the roles of wife and husband, are beautifully handled by Irene Dunne and Cary Grant, personalities who need no further sales elaboration to discerning picture patrons. Miss Dunne plays with touching tenderness and Mr. Grant gives the husband assignment a manly and natural treatment. Edgar Buchanan affords a homey and comical characterization as a friend of the family, equally adept at handling a linotype machine or a baby's tub. Beulah Bondi is properly sympathetic and soft spoken as the head of an adoption agency. The children, from an unidentified six weeks' old infant to a six-year-old youngster with a wide and winning grin, perform naturally and spontaneously.

The picture derives its title from a record recital played by "Julie" as she prepares to leave her husband, "Roger." Through a flashback of revolving disks and background theme music dated to the times, the songs cue a portrayal of the courtship of the pair, he a newspaper man and she a salesgirl in a music store. After marriage, "Julie" follows "Roger" to Japan where an earthquake ruins their honeymoon cottage and causes the death of "Julie's" unborn child. Back in America, "Roger" buys a country paper and to satisfy the maternal longings of "Julie," who is unable to bear her own children, a baby is adopted. For a while it looks as if the family's precarious financial condition will prevent final adoption but the child is at last adopted and raised to the age of six when death suddenly deprives the parents of their daughter. Grief almost separates "Julie" and "Roger" but the offer of another adoption brings the pair together again, as they plan to open up the nursery once more.

Previewed at the Astor Theatre in New York where the house's large capacity was crowded with an audience mostly of film buyers and their female acquaintances. The feminine contingency was most vocal in delighted, audible demonstrations during the baby sequences and the house as a whole reacted most positively to the comic scenes of the infant ablution session. The finale of the film was greeted with a chorus of applause, and the sound of throats and noses being cleared.—JOSEPH F. COUGHLIN.

Love on the Dole

(Anglo-American)

Sociological Drama

Students of the box office who contend that the sombre and the serious have no place in the world of entertainment must admit that the Ronald Gow-Walter Greenwood play whence was adapted this moving and candid story in the relation of economic conditions to working class behavior, was one of the major successes of recent years. It is still making money, even in these preoccupied days, wherever it is staged. Whether the screen version will do likewise is another matter, for the screen audience is another matter from its theatre counterpart. That the title already has a box office pull is undoubted; that the treatment both by director and artists will attract all to whom serious ideas and profoundly serious film making mean anything is no less obvious.

The film is a photographic, human, but gloomy glimpse of life in an industrial town during the bad, unemployed days of a few years back. The pawnbroker's queues, the threepenny nips of "red biddy," the squalid homes, the unemployment exchange, the ceaseless, futile search for the job that means life, as against mere existence—or death—are all here. Here, too, is a gloomy but all too truthful story of people who can love and live only if they have work, of a girl who wants to exist decently, whose Socialist lover dies, and who becomes a bookmaker's mistress so that she can get jobs for her menfolk.

Into the limelight comes a fair-haired North Country girl Deborah Kerr, whose characterization of the mill girl puts on to the screen, so aptly as to be imperceptible, just one of those hardworking North Country lasses who are the sunlight of every Lancashire town. Miss Kerr is an artist, but better still she is unconscious of it. Clifford Evans as the thoughtful, philosophising propagandist brings a new style to screen acting. There are plebeian women, Maire O'Neill, Mary Merrall, Marie Ault, who add impeccable strokes of realism.

Shot in an atmospheric shadow in tune with the mood, but a little trying on the eyes, very well recorded and decorated, the picture passes the test of production quality. Its dialect and native idiom are likely to restrict its market abroad but that many American audiences will find it both absorbing and deeply moving would seem emphatically certain.

A normally representative London audience attended the trade show and the screening was notable for its hushes, its stifled sobs and its escapist laughter, and for the burst of applause accorded at the close.—AUBREY FLANAGAN

Model Wife

(Universal)

Economics of Marriage

Joan Blondell and Dick Powell here appear as husband and wife, working together in a dress shop. The shop's owner, portrayed by Lucile Watson, has, among numerous other house rules, one forbidding any of her feminine employees to wed, so the marital existence of the two young employees is kept a dark secret.

Sharing the secret, however, is the shop's manager, enacted by Charlie Ruggles, and his wife, Ruth Donnelly. The youthful couple are shown leading a normal wedded existence, saving and planning for a baby and happy save for such friction as is engendered by the belief held by the head of the house that his wife should not work.

As the owner's son, a charming ne'er-do-well, Lee Bowman complicates the scene, by falling in love with the girl, whose secret finally comes out after her husband has been fired. Eventually the crusty owner realizes her own lack of humanity and brings the two together after a threatened divorce.

Played wholly for the comic ingredients of the story, the picture is sophisticated in dialogue and situation; has several familiar comedy sequences, as when the playboy, in the girl's apartment, thinks he sees himself in a mirror when really looking out a window at the husband, crouched on a ledge to avoid detection. Other sequences, with emphasis on the baby to come, are directed at an adult sense of humor.

Produced and directed by Leigh Jason. The film's supporting roles are filled by Billy Gilbert, John Qualen, Lorraine Krueger and Glen Turnbull in addition to those already named.

Previewed at Alexander Theatre, Glendale, to an audience which laughed heartily at individual sequences, but grew restive at the length of the picture.—WALTER SELDEN.

The Invisible Ghost

(Monogram-Banner)

Horror Story

"The Invisible Ghost" is a horror story in which the audience is allowed to know who the murderer is but the characters are kept in the dark until the climax. Without pseudo-science to back the implausibilities of the story, the picture deals with a wealthy man turned murderer in an insane rage over the departure of his wife with another man several years before. The wife's lover has been killed in an auto crash, and the wife, a victim of amnesia, has been secreted on the estate by a faithful servant who harbors the idea of nursing her back to health. Her nocturnal appearances on the grounds, when witnessed by her husband who believes they are hallucinations, drive him to murder guests and servants. In addition to the murders, an innocent man is sent to the gallows, having been convicted of one of the crimes.

Bela Lugosi, whose name has been synonymous with the horror cycle, is starred in this as the insane killer. Supporting him are Polly Ann Young, John McGuire, Clarence Muse, Terry Walker, Betty Compson, Ernie Adams, George Pembroke, Ottola Nesmith, Fred Kelsey and Jack Mulhall.

The Devil Bat

(Producers Releasing Corp.)

Pseudo-Scientific Melodrama

Again amid a maze of intricate mechanisms Bela Lugosi, portraying a mad doctor, creates a pseudo-scientific monster, this time to destroy his employers, who, he believes, have swindled him of a fortune. Herein is again presented for the thrills and chills of audiences in search of horror fantasy another in the familiar cycle of pictures. But unlike many of its predecessors, the picture contains all the suspense, action and romance to make it lively horror entertainment.

Lugosi portrays "Dr. Carruthers," a scientist whose mind is poisoned by his wealthy employer's action. To get revenge he creates a monster-bat who attacks and kills victims with a shaving lotion, also prepared by the doctor. After the first murder "Reporter Johnny Layton" is sent by his city editor to get the story. He remains through four additional murders before he solves the mystery with the aid of his photographer.

Supporting Bela Lugosi are Suzanne Kaaren as the girl whose life is constantly at stake and who, with Dave O'Brien as the reporter, lends the romantic element to the picture, Guy Usher as the company executive, and Donald Kerr the photographer "One-Shot Maguire." The picture was produced by Jack Gallagher and directed by Jean Yarborough.

The Kid's Last Ride

(Monogram)

Western Melodrama

The fifth of "The Rangebusters" series, with Ray "Crash" Corrigan, John "Dusty" King and Max "Alibi" Terhune, has the trio furthering their search of adventure and justice. They accomplish both but not until the three cowboys and the audience have experienced all the elements of action, excitement, comedy and romance interspersed with a number of musical renditions.

"The Kids Last Ride," produced by George W. Weeks for Monogram, is a tale of the hard riding buckeroos who accept a thankless job of cleaning up a western prairie town only to discover they have been framed. Throughout the production they ride into trouble and danger at every turn in an effort to rid the town of the local politicians who have a dictatorial hold on the local citizenry, and to free a young lad, whose gambling debts have put him under the control of the gang, from the criminal influence. The boy at the end saves "Crash's" life at the cost of his own, and "The Rangebusters" successfully complete their mission.

Anna Bell Ward was associate producer.

Battle of the Atlantic

(20th Century-Fox)

Convoys at Sea

The difficult and dangerous task of delivering war supplies to Great Britain across the North Atlantic is dramatically pictured in this first of a new series known as "The World of Today," commentaries for which are furnished by Quentin Reynolds, Collier's war correspondent.

Impressive shots of air raid destruction in England convey the urgency and importance of deliveries of essential supplies from this side of the Atlantic. The camera then follows the loading of merchant vessels in a Canadian port, the formation of convoys and their protection, first, by Canadian air craft, then Canadian war vessels; next, at about mid-Atlantic, by British naval units, and, finally by British air craft.

Action at sea, with attacks by both submarine and enemy air craft, are pictured. Reynolds' commentary is in key with the subject. Running time, 9 minutes.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Still Strong

Hollywood's production continued at close to peak activity this week, with 47 pictures before the cameras, two less than the week before; 13 completed, four more than last week, and 11 started, two less than the previous stanza.

Paramount had the greatest number of films shooting, with seven in work, and RKO and Warners each had six, followed closely by MGM and Columbia, with five apiece.

A committee to investigate the erection of a new Academy building was appointed by president Walter Wanger at the first quarterly meeting, this week, of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

Authorized by the Board of Governors, Mr. Wanger appointed William Pereira, consulting architect, and director Sam Wood to the committee. They have been instructed to report back to the Board at its next meeting with data regarding locations available, type of building suggested, and similar information. While the idea of an Academy Building has been under discussion for some time, this is the first concrete step taken by the Board.

As chairman of the membership committee, Mervyn Le Roy reported that 47 new members had been added to the rolls in the past month, coming from acting, writing, directing and technical branches of the industry.

Star News

GLORIA SWANSON, after a seven year absence from the screen, is to appear in "Father Takes a Wife" at RKO.

CARY GRANT will next appear in "Bedtime Story" at Columbia.

EDWARD G. ROBINSON, ANN SHERIDAN and JOHN GARFIELD will have top roles in Warners' "Klondike."

MADELEINE CARROLL and STIRLING HAYDEN are to appear together in "Dildo Cay" at Paramount.

THOMAS MITCHELL has been assigned the leading role in RKO's "Unexpected Uncle."

GENE TIERNEY is to star in "Belle Starr" at Twentieth Century-Fox.

WRESTLERS DEFEND HONOR OF ART

Five "grunt and groan" specialists (wrestlers to ordinary people) last week in Hollywood passed a resolution condemning Paramount and asking studios to refrain from "belittling the wrestling profession and otherwise casting aspersions upon its dignity".

Cause for their action was Bob Hope's wrestling scene with a gorilla in "The Road to Zanzibar". The petitioners were George Zaharias, wrestler now turned wrestling promoter; Hardboiled Haggerty, The Golden Terror, Chief Little Wolf, and Jim Londos, all gentlemen of the mat.

The resolution set forth that the business of wrestling was a "profession of dignity" and imbues its members with a feeling of pride, "its roster being composed of the Flower of American Manhood".

Incidentally, always but incidentally, the picture will open here shortly.

More Stories

Adding to the record number of purchases already made since the first of the year, Hollywood this week acquired 10 more story properties to add to the reservoir it is building up against the day when the Consent Decree becomes operative.

A novel which is not yet written, and two originals were bought by RKO Radio; a current Broadway stage play and a novel by Warners; a Broadway play and an original by Paramount; a novel now being written was purchased by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; a magazine story by David Selznick, and a novel by Twentieth-Century-Fox.

I.A.R. Wylie, after verbally presenting her idea for a novel, sold the screen rights to the still unwritten book to RKO. The deal calls for Miss Wylie to write the novel, for it to be published, and for the authoress to adapt it to the screen. RKO also bought "Lady Scarface," a gangster comedy by Arnaud d'Usseau and Richard Collins. The original will be used as a vehicle for Dennis O'Keefe and Frances Neal. Third of the studio's purchases was "Powder Town," a Vicki Baum original. An American munitions plant forms the story background.

Screen rights to Emelyn Williams' "The Corn Is Green," which stars Ethel Barrymore in its New York stage version, were bought by Warners. The picture will probably serve as a vehicle for Bette Davis. "Mississippi Belle," a Southern story dealing with the double life of an orphan-heiress, was also purchased by the studio. Written by Clements Ripley, the story is to appear as a Liberty Magazine serial and then be published as a book.

Paramount added to its large purchases since the first of the year with "Take a Letter, Darling," an original by George Beck, and "Out of the Frying Pan," a Broadway play written by Francis Swann. The former is a comedy about a modern business woman who has a male secretary, the latter concerns the adventures of a trio of young actors and three young actresses looking for success.

"Drivin' Woman," a novel now being written by Elizabeth Pickett Chevalier, was acquired by MGM. Submitted to a firm of book publishers in outline form, the novel will not be published until 1942. The story is woven around a girl who inherits a Southern tobacco plantation, following the Civil War, and is already being compared by MGM to "GWTW."

David O. Selznick has bought "Drake's Drum," an original written at the studio by staff writer Peter Viertel. The story has also been sold to Liberty Magazine, and centers around a cross section of life in England today.

A novel by Stephen Ransome, "Hearses Don't Hurry," was acquired by Twentieth-Fox.

MAJORS INTERNATIONALIZE PRODUCT PROMOTIONS AT MEXICAN FESTIVAL

"Pot o' Gold" Premiere Held at "Festival" in Mexico City on Pan-American Day; Columbia Tradeshows "Penny Serenade"

Showmanship promotions introducing new product are now taking on an international color and savor and favor political opportunism as a means of cementing Anglo-Saxon and Latin-American cultural relations.

What originally was intended as a private press junket to Mexico City, from Broadway, Hollywood, and in-between, in behalf of James Roosevelt's "Pot o' Gold," was turned into an all-out turnout by Hollywood for a big "Motion Picture Festival" in the Mexican Capital, at the invitation of Mexican President Avila Camacho, last Saturday, through Tuesday.

With the invitation from President Camacho, young Mr. Roosevelt, eldest son of the President, Hollywood motion picture producer and active United States Marine Captain, withdrew his own plans in favor of "an industrywide event," which found nearly every major studio participating.

Even the United States Government participated. John Hay (Jock) Whitney, director of the Motion Picture Division of the U. S. Office of Coordination of Commercial Cultural Relations between the American Republics, accompanied Hollywood to Mexico in the interests of cultural relations between the American Republics. He also worked with the majors on arrangements for the festival.

Arrival by Air

The movie stars and executives arrived in Mexico City Saturday morning on three chartered airplanes. A crowd of 5,000 greeted them at the airport.

Among the visitors were Mr. Whitney, Wallace Beery, Brenda Marshall, Kay Francis, Norma Shearer, Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., Susan Hayward, Veronica Lake, Frank Capra, Mr. and Mrs. David O. Selznick, Francis L. Alstock, Desi Arnaz, Lucille Ball, Sabu, Kenneth Thomson, Esther Fernandez, Patricia Morrison, Mischa Auer, Frank Morgan, William Holden, Mickey Rooney, Brenda Joyce, Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy.

Also the following persons representing press syndicates and newspapers and magazines: Louella O. Parsons, Edwin Schallert, Raymond Clapper, Drew Pearson, Walter Clausen, William R. Wilkerson, Ralph Jordan, Harrison Carroll, Richard Pollard, Peter Stackpole, Charles Daggett, Herbert Klein, Kay Proctor, John S. Truesdell, Ivan Spear, Luigi Luraschi, Frank Seltzer, William Wallace, and Whitney Bolton.

The Hollywood personalities were given a reception at the Mexico City city hall Saturday, after arrival. That even, they attended a banquet. On Sunday, they were at a special Easter mass in the Shrine of Guadalupe, and at a lunch and fiesta, and a barbecue. On Monday, they went sight-seeing and visited President Comacho.

Many of the stars in the group made personal appearances at four of the city's theatres, in which were shown, in addition to Mr. Roosevelt's product, "The Letter," Warners; "Chad Hanna," Fox; "The Invisible Woman," Universal; "This Thing Called Love," Columbia; "Mr. and Mrs. Smith," RKO; "Victory," Paramount, and "Pot o' Gold" were premiered.

Monday being Pan-American Day, it was observed via radio, by a special program over stations WMCA, New York, and WRUL, Boston, the latter short-wave. The Pan-American Press Club sponsored the idea. Francisco Castillo Najero, Mexican Ambassador, delivered the feature address. Speakers were Leon DeBayle, Nicaraguan minister; T. Hartmann, consul general of Bolivia; and others.

On Tuesday, as the Hollywood personalities left Mexico, the city was shaken by an earth tremor which set fires and damaged structures to an estimated $1,000,000; and news arrived of a catastrophic earthquake in the city of Colima, 300 miles west, and of the eruption of Colima volcano.

New York area exhibitors and Columbia field executives and salesmen attended the trade showing Tuesday morning, at the Astor Theatre, New York City, of the company's latest "big" feature, "Penny Serenade."

Among the exhibitors who accepted invitations were: Harry Arthur, Herman Becker, John Benas, Gus Eysell, Sam Dembow, S. H. Fabian, Max Fellerman, Louis Frisch, Jack Hattem, Al Hovell, Leo Justin, Harry Katz, Ike Libson, Charles Moses, Fred Meyers, Leon Netter, John Nolan, J. J. O'Connor, Eugene Picker, Walter Reade, Jr., Sam Rosen, Sam Rinzler, Edward Rugoff, Fred Schwartz George Skouras, William White and Morrie White.

Division managers who attended were Sam Galanty, Washington; Phil Dunas, Chicago, and Carl Shalit, Detroit. Branch managers included Joe Miller, Albany; I. H. Rogovin, Boston; Phil Fox, Buffalo; Tim O'Toole, New Haven, and H. E. Weiner, Philadelphia.

Hollywood, and newspaper, luminaries, will be present at the world premiere of Universal's "The Flame of New Orleans," next Thursday at the Orpheum Theatre, in that city. Among the Hollywood people scheduled are Bruce Cabot, Joseph Pasternak, Rene Clair, Andy Devine, Mischa Auer, Hugh Herbert, Peggy Moran, Anne Gwynne, and Helen Parrish. Mr. Pasternak is the producer; Mr. Cabot, the co-star; Mr. Clair, the director.

"Ziegfeld" Tour

A party of girls chosen by MGM, and a group of oil paintings featuring 1941 show girls, began touring the country Saturday as exploitation for the company's "The Ziegfeld Girl." The tour started in Chicago, will visit 75 cities, is under supervision of William R. Ferguson, the company's exploitation chief. In each city, a contest will be staged to find the girl whose measurements most closely approximate those of the gowns from the picture, in which the girls in the party are clothed.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS "CULTURAL ENVOY"

Motion picture actor, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., will tour Latin-American countries to foster that "better understanding" between the western hemisphere republics sought by the Administration. Mr. Fairbanks received his mission from President Roosevelt last week and announced he would begin touring by air later this month. He added his Spanish was improving and that his French was good. He has a leave of absence from his studio until July 1st. A White House statement said the actor would endeavor to ascertain how the Government and the film industry can make the motion picture "a more effective instrument for conveying comprehensive views of life" not only in the United States but in the Latin-American republics. Mr. Fairbanks, in a New York interview on Friday, April 11th, said, "I'd even have gone if I had to pay my own expenses." In July Mr. Fairbanks will begin work in "The Corsican Brothers" for Edward Small.

Pizor-Segall Fight Continues

A counter-suit was filed Tuesday in Philadelphia in the litigation of Lewen Pizor and Charles Segall, involving their partnership in the operation of four houses—the Ace, Apollo, Chelten and Tioga theatres. A bill in equity, filed by City Commissioner Morton Witkin, counsel for Mr. Segall, alleged that Mr. Pizor fraudulently obtained for himself, at the expense of their partnership and their joint theatre corporations, "outright money payments or credits" from Quality Premium Distributors upon sales of merchandise by the premium company, and from Paramount Pictures, Inc.

From Paramount, it is alleged, Mr. Pizor obtained financial benefits in the form of pictures, charged against the partnership, but used by the defendant personally in the theatres which he operated separately from the partnership.

In addition, Mr. Pizor is charged with removing from the premises of the theatres jointly operated, certain partnership property to the then value of at least $1,500.

Other Defendants Named

The Eastern Theatres, Inc., and Boro Theatre Corporation are joined as defendants. The court is asked to appoint a receiver and finally liquidate the assets of the partnership and theatre corporations, and issue an injunction to restrain Mr. Pizor from dealing in any way with the assets of either the partnership or the corporations. Further, the bill asks for an accounting of "any unjust enrichment enjoyed by the defendant" as described in the foregoing and the court is asked to award damages.

On April 1, Mr. Pizor filed a similar suit in Common Pleas Court against Mr. Segall, charging him with defrauding the partnership and their joint theatre corporations, action taken after Mr. Segall entered a judgment in the same court against Mr. Pizor for $55,124 on alleged default of a lease on the Apollo for four months' rent. The Apollo is personally owned by Mr. Segall. The counter-suit is said to be the result of failure to settle differences out of court. Mr. Pizor's case was listed for hearing last Friday, but the case was continued. State Senator Harry Shapiro represents Mr. Pizor.

CASEY SEES DANGER IN 30 HOUR WEEK HINT

Labor Negotiator To Discuss New Demands with Home Office Heads in New York

Pat Casey, labor representative for the major companies, this week took the demands of studio unions from the conference table in Hollywood to the company managements in New York, for decision in connection with demands to be met in a new five-year contract, with expiration of the old one, last month.

That coast studio workers may demand a 30-hour work week, instead of the present 36, was indicated Monday. Leaders of the international unions in the basic labor agreement hinted they might ask for such an arrangement in the negotiations about to be conducted on renewal of the five-year agreement.

Those negotiations are being delayed, meanwhile, until the Wages and Hours Administration announces, late this week or next, its decisions on disputed classifications of studio workers, Pat Casey, producers' labor contact, announced in New York, also on Monday.

Mr. Casey added, in duscussing the labor scene of Hollywood, that demands of armament and associated factories were draining Hollywood's labor supply; and that this might soon become a serious problem.

The adoption of a work week of less than 36 hours would be handicapped by the threatened shortage of workers, he remarked, noting that shorter work weeks were always adopted to provide employment for a surplus of workers. He hinted producers might counter the anticipated union demands, with a demand for a 40-hour week.

Whether wage increases will be asked by the international unions was not known this week.

IATSE May Sign Pact

It was regarded possible the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees might again become a basic agreement signatory. This international withdrew in 1939, after granting autonomy to its coast locals.

Mr. Casey's purpose in coming to New York was, in part, to arrange for the negotiations on the basic agreement. The various company presidents are to be present at such negotiations. They are normally based in New York. Though the pact expired last month, its provisions, by mutual agreement, are being continued. It is not known whether the new agreement will be for five, or ten, years.

The present pact provides for annual re-examination of wage and hour conditions. The internationals in the agreement are: American Federation of Musicians; the International Brotherhood of Teamsters and Chauffers; the International Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners; and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Conferences continued this week in Hollywood between Walt Disney studio officials and those of the Screen Cartoonists Guild and the American Federation of Labor, on recognition of the guild as collective bargaining agency for its categories of workers in that studio. Present at the conferences, which began Friday, April 11, have been Aubrey Blair, AFL organizer; Herbert Sorrell, business agent of the Motion Picture Painters local; George Bodle, guild attorney; Gunther Lessing, Disney studio attorney; and Herbert Lamb, comptroller for the latter concern.

In Kansas City, the Film Exchange Employees Union, Local B23, has elected 1941 officers, as follows: C. C. Kinpe, president; Brettice Mueller, vice-president; Mary Heuisen, secretary; Webster Knight, financial secretary; Irene Sharp, business agent; Clyde Cox, sergeant-at-arms; Charles L. Lewis, treasurer; and George Regan, reading clerk.

The Powhatan Theatre, St. Louis, has reopened. It had been closed for seven months by a dispute between the management and the stagehands' union. Mrs. Bess Schulter, owner, said last week she had given in to the union; she will hire a stagehand at $78 per week. The stagehands' quarrel with her affected the theatre's operation because projectionists refused to work in it.

The Philadelphia Exchange Employees Union, Local B7, will have its annual dinner dance May 22nd at the Stephen Girard Hotel, that city.

Named delegates from the Pittsburgh projectionists' union to the forthcoming convention of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor are Louis Indo, William Thompson, and George Engslter.

New officers of the San Antonio projectionists' local are: Charles Bruening, president; Genero Gracia, vice-president; John Dennis, business agent; and Eugene Muller, treasurer.

Reelected president of the American Federation of Musicians Local 557, Freeland, Pennsylvania, is Allen Feist. Other new officers are Charles Lentz, vice-president; James Maloney, secretary-treasurer; John Potzner, business agent.

Ballots are to be mailed to members of the American Guild of Variety Artists, vaudeville performers union, late this week or next, containing nominations for national officers.

UA Welcomes Pressburger

Arnold Pressburger, who will produce "The Shanghai Gesture" for United Artists was welcomed to the UA fold in New York on Wednesday with a luncheon at the Waldorf-Astoria. Guests with the European producer were Geza Herzig, author of the screen play, Albert de Courville and Theodore Baumfeld, production associates, and George Burroughs, Guaranty Trust Co. executive who participated in financing the Pressburger unit. United Artists officials at the luncheon included Arthur W. Kelly, Haskell Masters, Harry Gold, Monroe Greenthal, James Mulvey and others.

Curb Portland Vaudeville

Entire vaudeville skits have disappeared from the stages of Portland theatres and extensive "correction" has been ordered in the costumes of dancers as a result of a municipal drive against suggestive entertainment, Miss Josephine Fordney, executive viewer, advised in her March report. She reported general cooperation by theatre managers since the city's censor powers were broadened.

Elliott Nugent with Paramount

Paramount has signed Elliot Nugent to direct three pictures in the next two years for the company.

Virginia District Judge Gets Davis Plea in Fox Case

Before Judge Robert Nelson Pollard, of the eastern district of Virginia, assigned to the case after 10 federal judges in the Philadelphia district petitioned Supreme Court Justice Charles Evans Hughes to assign an outside jurist, retired United States Circuit Court Judge J. Warren Davis pleaded not guilty to a charge of "conspiracy to obstruct justice and defraud the United States." Appearing with him and entering a similar plea was Morgan S. Kaufman, of Towanda, Pa., former United States referee in bankruptcy, and former counsel for William Fox. Judge Pollard set May 19 as the date for trial after defense counsel objected that an earlier date, May 12, would inconvenience their preparation of a defense.

William Fox, 62-year-old bankrupt movie producer, who pleaded guilty March 28 to the same charges, was to have been sentenced on Monday, but this was deferred. It was explained that the Fox matter was to be disposed of at the same time as the others, with sentence imposed probably at the end of their trials. The charges carry a maximum penalty of two years' imprisonment and $10,000 fine. Fox did not appear in court, nor was he represented by an attorney.

Time for Preparation Asked

Former Judge Davis was represented by William A. Gray, who asked a postponement from the original May 12 date because he has an important jury trial listed that day. Kaufman's attorney, Earl Jay Gratz, Jr., asked that the trial be listed for June 10. He pointed out that the Government had taken more than a year to gather its evidence and that there would not be enough time for the defense to get ready if the date were May 10. Representing the Government is Walter H. Gahahan, Jr., special assistant to the U. S. Attorney General, who has been directing the Government's investigation, and U. S. District Attorney Gerald Gleeson.

Judge Davis' plea was not unexpected. Five minutes before court opened, he appeared with his attorney, who declared to reporters that his client would plead not guilty. "I could see no reason to plead any other way," Mr. Gray said. He said also that he could not understand "why they brought a judge all the way from Virginia just to take a plea when it could be done at the trial."

Indictments against Judge Davis, Kaufman and Fox were returned by a Federal Grand Jury in Philadelphia on March 28. Fox entered his guilty plea immediately, being the only one of the three accused men in court at the time. The case grew out of the Fox bankruptcy proceedings, which were before the Federal courts for several years. Mr. Davis sat as judge in several phases of the case. The indictments mentioned four money transactions, involving a total of $37,500. The alleged conspiracy is said to have been undertaken to aid Fox in hiding assets from creditors and stockholders following collapse of the Fox financial empire.

ADJOURNMENTS EASING INDUSTRY THROUGH LEGISLATIVE ATTACKS

Missouri Session Expected to End Without Acting on Bill Banning Triples; Sales Tax Measure Dropped in Iowa

The Missouri legislature is expected to end without enacting measures affecting the film industry in large degree, capitol observers said on Monday. If it does, it disposes therefore of the proposed bill to end double and triple features—a bill for the Senate, backed by the St. Louis Better Films Council, and, less openly, by the independent theatre operators of that city.

Meanwhile, the Iowa lawmakers packed up last week, having defeated a special amusements and a sales tax; the South Carolina Senate continued to debate a proposed increase in the taxes on admissions; and Wisconsin exhibitors and other of the film industry, who appeared before a state Senate committee, hope their objections to a proposal to tax film 50 cents for each 1,000 feet, will be heeded.

The St. Louis Better Films Council bill to prohibit shows of more than two and one-half hours' length represented a phase of the competition between the Wehrenberg group of neighborhood theatres and the Fanchon and Marco chain. The latter, with triple features in some of its neighborhood theatres and doubles in others, is being fought by the former with triples and giveaways. The Wehrenberg theatres tried four feature programs several weeks ago, but abandoned them after patron protest. Harry C. Arthur, general manager of F. and M., has given his blessing to the anti-triples measure, adding he favored also the elimination of giveaways, by state ban. The Better Films Council has claimed backing for its bill from the women's clubs of the state.

Other Measures Die

There was also a bill in the Missouri legislature, to prohibit a theatre from selling tickets without having available seats for the purchaser as well as anti-ASCAP measures, and a bill to legalize pari-mutuel horse-race betting.

One bill observers say may pass this legislature is that permitting small cities to tax film theatres. The bill is an attempt to overcome a recent state Supreme Court ruling that the old statute exempting municipal operahouses from municipal taxes applies to theatres.

In Wisconsin this week, the state's theatremen are hoping film industry representatives duly impressed the state Senate committee on corporations and taxation, last week. These representatives had protested the Brown bill to tax film distributors 50 cents per 1,000 feet of film distributed in the state.

Appearing before the committee were F. J. McWilliams, exhibitor, of Portage; Paul Langhenrich, exhibitor, of Milwaukee; Harry Perlewitz, business manager of the Independent Theatres Protective Association of the state; A. D. Kvool, of the Warner-Saxe circuit; L. S. Clemons, of Fox-Wisconsument Amusement Corporation; Steven Thomas, of the Wisconsin Association of Stage Employees and Projectionists; Herman Seide, of the state Federation of labor; and Marshall Friedrich, of the Milwaukee Federated Trades Council.

There is also before the legislature the McParland bill, to tax all film rentals over $500, 10 per cent, to license film distributors at $10 per annum, and to require exhibitors to file an annual report showing film rentals and purchases, and dates played.

Before the same lawmaking group this week, are three wages and hours measures. One would extend the state's minimum wage law to include males and to establish a 40 cents per hour minimum wage; another would provide an eight hour per day maximum of work; still another would reduce the maximum hour provision in the state law for women, from nine to eight hours per day, and from 50 to 44 hours in any one week.

Increased Taxes Discussed

The South Carolina Senate last week discussed increasing the admissions tax. The increase at the time called for payment by theatre operators in towns of up to 5,000 persons, of three per cent on gross admission receipts; from 5,000 to 12,000, five per cent; from 12,000 to 20,000, seven per cent; from 20,000 upwards, 10 per cent.

Senator Britt, of York, declared the amendment would "tax theatres out of business." Senator McEachin, of Florence, asserted the increased Federal admissions taxes had caused theatre attendance to decline. He added the proposed state taxes would be on theatre patrons, not the theatres.

Iowa lawmakers ended sessions last week, without passing the special amusements tax or the sales tax. They also rejected Housebill 375, which would have established fire regulations for theatres.

Leo Wolcott, president of the Allied Theatre Owners of Iowa and Nebraska, this week asked Iowa's independent exhibitors to protest the bill for national daylight saving time, introduced into the House, at Washington, by Representative McLean, of New Jersey. Mr. Wolcott, in a bulletin to organization members, said such a bill would be "ruinous to theatres" and pointed to the experience of exhibitors in areas which have daylight saving time.

The Kansas legislature has passed Senator Dale's bill permitting owners of small theatres to have a single middle aisle, provided it is at least 44 inches wide, and that there are no more than six seats intervening between any seat and the aisle.

The Louisiana Supreme Court has upheld the constitutionality of the New Orleans two per cent sales tax. This reverses the ruling by Civil Judge Paul E. Chasez. The tax had applied to film accessories rentals. It began January 1st.

It appears this week there will be no action on the bill in the Massachusetts General Court, to tax and regulate 16 mm films. The bill was referred to the House military affairs committee.

Governor Keen Johnson, of Kentucky, is expected to give his approval, soon, to the daylight saving measure for Louisville, effective April 27th, and continuing to September 28th. The city's board of aldermen this week voted, 10 to 2, to petition the Governor for the change in time.

State law prevents first-class cities from adopting daylight saving unless permitted to do so by the governor.

The move had been opposed by theatres, the MPTO of the state, and by labor.

However, a poll conducted by the city's Junior Chamber of Commerce showed the population overwhelmingly preferred the change.

HOUSEWIVES VETO NEW THEATRE

Housewives won a point in Minneapolis when they appeared in opposition to the building of a new theatre by L. E. Goodman before the City Council License Committee. Businessmen favored the petition on the ground that the district could use another theatre, but the housewives, loyal to Harry Dickerman, operator of the Northtown and Alhambra, opposed competition for him. The petition was defeated four to three.

Allied MPTOA Convention Dates

The Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners has received formal acceptance from Ed Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, of the PCCITO's invitation to hold its annual convention in Los Angeles, June 8th to 12th. The MPTOA convention will be in conjunction with the Pacific Coast group's second annual meeting. The position of exhibitors under the consent decree and in national defense efforts will be the two subjects.

Edward L. Kuykendall, in Columbus, Miss., this week, disclosed he had agreed to again run for reelection to the MPTOA presidency, for the eighth time.

The twelfth annual national convention of the Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors will be held at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel in Philadelphia on September 16th to 18th, it has been announced by the committee. Extensive plans are being made by the committee in charge to assure all those attending the convention an entertaining program, but, the committee says, more important than the entertainment will be the keynote of the convention, "strictly business" during sessions.

The film buying problems created by the Consent Decree will be thoroughly analyzed and presented to those attending by industry figures.

New Jersey Allied in June

Sales managers and executives of the major companies will be invited to define their sales policies at New Jersey Allied's annual convention scheduled for June 11th to 13th at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in Atlantic City. It will be labeled "The Good Will Convention of the Motion Picture Industry."

The sessions will include a regional conference of state units of Allied in the east. Louis Gold of Newark is in charge of arrangements. Lee Newbury will preside.

The nominating committee of Allied Theatre Owners of Connecticut, at a meeting in New Haven headed by Lawrence C. Caplan, executive secretary, Joseph Reed of the Washington, and Sam Bailey of the Whalley, Westville and Whitney theatres, in mid-week was working on a slate of officers which will be voted at the next meeting on April 29th. Al Schuman presides and the regular luncheon-meeting will be held at the Hofbrau Haus.

ALL THREE NETWORKS NEGOTIATE WITH ASCAP

License Proposals Submitted to NBC, Columbia, Mutual by Society Radio Committee

Music copyrighted by the American Society of Composers and Publishers finally appeared close to returning to the airwaves of all three major networks this week as the ASCAP radio committee submitted license proposals to Columbia and National Broadcasting companies as a basis of negotiation, and continued discussions started with Mutual two weeks ago. Meanwhile a group of nine Montana radio stations, which were instrumental in jailing ASCAP president Frank Buck at Phoenix, Arizona, last May 30th, this week signed a license contract with ASCAP retroactive to August 1940.

Since settlement of the Government's anti-trust action against the music society last month ASCAP directors and its radio and licensing committees have been drafting new by-laws and a formula for settling the dispute with broadcasters which banished ASCAP tunes from the air on January 1st. A general membership meeting is scheduled for the near future to approve the bylaws and elect new directors of the society. Broadcast Music, Inc., rival music licensing organization set up by the broadcasters meanwhile entered its second year, with almost all of its 680 radio station members renewing their contracts. It claims rights to 250,000 songs, and appears likely to continue as a source of public music.

ASCAP Claims Most Outlets

With the exception of radio, ASCAP continues to claim the largest number of music outlets and has continued to supply performance rights to the majority of bands, theatres, record players and film companies. It remains the chief copyright agent for motion picture producers and exhibitors.

The ASCAP radio committee met a week ago Friday with officials of CBS in their New York offices and at midweek was starting discussions with NBC executives on a "per program" licensing formula. Negotiation with the National Association of Broadcasters appear to have been halted in favor of direct conversations with representatives of the major networks. Negotiations with Mutual, first network to break away from the NAB, were reported continuing this week, with both sides optimistic at prospects for an early settlement.

Edward Klauber, executive vice-president of CBS; Mefford Runyon, vice president; and I. R. Lounsberry, manager of WGR Buffalo, CBS affiliate opened the discussions with John G. Paine, general manager of ASCAP and E. C. Mills and Walter Fischer, members of the administrative and radio committees.

If Mutual's copyright committee, which met in Chicago on Wednesday, approves the settlement, it will be referred to each of Mutual's stockholders.

Although there has been no specific discussion of license fees and terms under the per program scheme, officials of both NBC and CBS are studying the outline of the proposal preparatory to bargaining with the ASCAP representatives. An official of the music society characterized the meetings as friendly and predicted that ASCAP music will return to the air "within 15 to 30 days" if stalling tactics can be avoided.

On April 10th ASCAP announced nine Montana radio stations had signed a license agreement on the same terms with which several hundred independent stations accepted ASCAP contracts prior to January 1st. The Montana contract is for five years, retroactive to August 1st and ASCAP is reported to receive three per cent from local commercial programs.

The Montana deal was generally considered an important victory for ASCAP as the western broadcasters have bitterly opposed the society in the past. They enacted an anti-ASCAP law in 1937 which has barred ASCAP collections in the state for four years. The nine stations were among a group of broadcasters which caused a Montana contempt of court warrant to be issued for Gene Buck in jailing him on May 30th, 1940 at Phoenix, Arizona, in high cash bail. The action was later dropped.

The nine stations which signed are: KFBB, Billings; KGCX, Wolf Point; KGEZ, Kalispell; KGHL, Billings; KGIR, Butte; KGVO, Missoula; KPFA, Helena; KRBM, Boseman, and KRJF, Miles City. Representing the stations in the negotiations were: Edward B. Craney, owner of KGIR and manager of the Z Network, Montana; Phil Loucks, Washington, D. C., attorney; F. A. Buttrey, owner of KFBB; Henry Claxton, Montana attorney, and Edward Yocum, owner of KGHL.

ASCAP-Nebraska Hearing

Nebraska's attorney general, Walter Johnson, and William J. Hotz, of Omaha, special prosecutor prepared to leave Lincoln this week for Washington, D. C., to attend a Supreme Court review of the Nebraska anti-ASCAP law passed in 1937. The case will be heard on April 28th. The law, introduced by state senator Frank Brady, of Atkinson, was held unconstitutional by a U. S. District Court in 1939. Appeal has been delayed by lack of funds in the attorney general's appropriation and the time required to obtain affidavits from 22 of the 42 senators in the unicameral Nebraska house testifying that they voted for the law to end music monopoly rather than to discriminate against ASCAP.

Chaplin's Mutual Comedies Sold as Complete Program

Charlie Chaplin, in the dozen two-reel comedies which he made for Mutual Films for one million dollars in 1916-17, returned to the screen in New York two weeks ago, on their 25th anniversary, in brand new form, with what are generally conceded to be the most repeated motion pictures in all film history molded into a streamlined, full-length feature album. Six of the series, which started with "The Floorwalker" and ended in "The Adventurer," have been combined in a two-hour collection. A second edition will follow with the six remaining titles.

World rights to the picture were purchased recently from RKO by Guaranteed Pictures, Inc., New York independent. Mortimer Sikawitt and Samuel Goldstein, of Guaranteed, and Martin J. Lewis, operator of four "little" theatres in New York, mounted six of the pictures in a sequence linked with the album motif. Called "The Chaplin Festival," it will be booked throughout the country on an advanced price, semi-roadshow basis.

Many Ownerships

The films were circulated as short subjects by RKO as recently as 1934. The Van Buren company in 1932 synchronized a musical score and sound effects with the comedian's cakewalk and antics. As silent films they passed through numerous ownerships and distribution franchises.

Mr. Chaplin signed a contract to make the 12 pictures in February, 1916, at a conference on the Hotel Astor mezzanine in New York with John R. Freuler, president of Mutual Films. A bonus of $150,000 for signing, and the salary of $10,000 a week, payable each Saturday for a year, made the document a sensation. The guaranteed $670,000 was the largest sum ever paid for any single year's services.

Production of the films actually lasted 18 months and the comedian received well over a million dollars for the 12 comedies. The historic salary began on March 20, 1916, and Chaplin started work at a studio at Sunset Boulevard and La Brea Drive, Hollywood, site of his own studio today. For each 1,500 foot picture Chaplin shot over 120,000 feet of film "evolving his technique with great pains," to achieve the comedy which was to insure his fame, Terry Ramsaye, a participant in the contract deal, reports in his film story, "A Million and One Nights."

The six films included in the revival album show Chaplin as the plaintive fiddler in "The Vagabond"; as "The Immigrant"; "The Adventurer"; the uproarious drunk of "The Cure"; as "The Count"; and as the famed policeman of "Easy Street."

The picture opened April 1st at the Fifth Avenue Playhouse, 300-seat theatre operated by Mr. Lewis on the fringe of New York's Greenwich Village. Clientele is a mixture of wealthy Fifth Avenue apartment residents, moderate-income business people from the "Village" area, a few "intellectual" film-goers, and a balance of general patronage from north of 14th Street and other sections of the city.

$3,000 Gross

In its first week, according to Mr. Lewis, the "Chaplin Festival" grossed $3,000, doing slightly better during the second week. A weekly gross of $1,800 is a good average for the house. The third week was close to the first two and on the strength of patronage Mr. Lewis signed the picture for eight weeks.

"The slapstick star of the slum nickleodeons of 1913 had begun to be a classic and a pet of the philosophizing literati by the end of 1916," Mr. Ramsaye wrote of the initial reaction to the twelve reels. A similar response seems to have been evoked by the pictures' current sponsors. First string critics in New York papers have devoted extensive space to the "Chaplin Festival" and both the Times and Tribune have run special features on it in their Sunday drama sections. Columnists, PM, and such contrasting journals as the Christian Science Monitor and the Daily Worker have devoted extensive space to the Chaplin reissue.

Guaranteed Pictures, according to Mr. Goldstein, plans to limit the number of prints, made from the original negative which it acquired with the rights to the Mutual pictures. Probably not more than a dozen copies will be made. Sponsors of the "Festival" plan to book the 125-minute picture for extended runs, first, in approximately 110 key cities. It will be placed in independent houses able to guarantee two weeks at a 55-cent minimum admission for evening performances. The Cinema theatre, Detroit, 800 seats, and the Little, Newark 400 seats, are the first theatres to book the "Chaplin Festival" outside of New York. It will open shortly at the Arcadia in Philadelphia and deals are under discussion with independents, and at least one circuit in other cities. In Canada, Famous Players-Canadian is also reported bidding for the film.

WARNERS BUILDING AUDIENCES OF TOMORROW FROM YOUNG OF TODAY

Philadelphia Showmen Find Extra Attention to Promotions for School Children Nets Real Results at the Box Office

by M. H. ORODENKER
in Philadelphia

Present promotions and showmanship efforts to create special attention to new product, most always directed to adults only, are not enough, because they overlook important potential audiences of children. This is the conclusion of the Warner Circuit management in Philadelphia, one of the largest single circuit concentrations in the country, embracing some 110 theatres. Accordingly, the circuit's house managers, assistants and press and publicity promoters, under zone chief Ted Schlanger, are to direct just as much attention to developing moviegoers among the young folk as they do in winning and building adult audiences.

The fast pace of showmanship in the Warner Philadelphia zone, backed by Mr. Schlanger and by Joseph Bernhard, circuit general manager, is indicated by the recent selection of E. C. Callow, zone advertising director, as the winner of the 1941 Quigley Silver Grand Award for showmanship.

Attention in Contests

Various promotions aimed at children, at a minimum of cost, have proven their worth in building better grosses. Added incentive to the managers to cultivate juvenile trade comes through the circuit prizes, awarded at the end of the fiscal year in September. Added business brought in by the youngsters can be big enough to make the difference between winning or losing out on the award. For the current season, Mr. Schlanger has sponsored a drive to "Meet and Beat the Emergency." A total of $1,000 will be divided among the managers in a district accounting for the top grosses of the year. For the second consecutive year, Mr. Bernhard, circuit head, is awarding three automobiles to the three outstanding house managers in the entire zone, taking in eastern Pennsylvania, southern New Jersey and Delaware. The importance of juvenile audiences was further emphasized last winter when Mr. Schlanger sponsored a "Kiddie Check Sales" contest on the sale of special child admission coupon books, with a gold watch awarded the winner.

Attention paid to the youngsters goes far in creating good-will. Recently, a little "friendly service," mixed with diplomatic treatment, brought more than its share to Dave Seaman, manager of the Forum Theatre, and his assistant, Jack Fields. A public school art group was given the use of the lobby for an exhibit and later benefited from a 1,000-ticket theatre party.

A children's fashion show paid dividends for Henry Eytinge, manager of the Grange Theatre. Recruiting the co-operation of neighborhood merchants who contributed their latest Spring fashions, Mr. Eytinge then enlisted youngsters as models. The show was held after the Saturday matinee, and because of its unusual popularity, it will become an annual event. The stunt brought three times the average business in spite of opposition from "The Thief of Bagdad." "Second Chorus" was the Grange feature.

In South Philadelphia many of the house managers continually do good business with after-school matinees. Tieing in with the Southwark School and the "Southwark Sun," a school paper, Joe Forte, manager of the Parker Theatre, and Dom Lucente, manager of the Alhambra Theatre, put over two of the most successful of these. Both houses played to over 1,000 children at the school show, more than double average matinee business. In like manner, Sam Phillippe, manager of the Plaza Theatre, realized big returns with an after-school matinee on "Wizard of Oz."

Bob Kessler, manager of the Benn Theatre, in Louis Davidoff's district, concocted parodies which were distributed to children. Each stanza refers to youngsters selling benefit tickets for the Benn to swell their school fund. Teachers approved the idea. Mr. Kessler depended much on the school audience to sell "Thief of Bagdad," giving it special treatment that proved effective. A ruler-blotter herald, resembling a ruler but using blotter stock, was given out at schools. The front permitted nine inches of ruling space, the balance a film-frame layout containing scenes from the picture.

For the same picture, and in the same district, Johnny Sassenroth, manager of the Columbia Theatre, promoted an after-school matinee. Schools were contacted and special heralds handed to youngsters. Announcements were made from the stage Saturday and Sunday prior to the event.

Special Trailer Used

Harry Clemens, manager of the Imperial-60th Street Theatre, also directed his attention to the juvenile trade for "Thief of Bagdad." A special trailer addressed to parents urged them to send their children to his after-school matinee. Special announcements were made by the director of a Hebrew Sunday School in the neighborhood. Coloring booklets were given away as prizes on the Saturday preceding playdates. The books were stamped with playdate and message. Heralds were distributed at the schools and a 16-mm. projector in the lobby showed trailers on the picture.

Morris Conner, manager of the Hiway Theatre, conducted a campaign in behalf of "Student Tickets." Three high schools and a number of private schools were personally contacted. He promoted announcements in class rooms and auditoriums, posters on bulletin boards, publicity in respective papers and word-of-mouth contact. As a result of the campaigns, students fairly clamored for Hiway Student Cards. To bolster business for "Melody Ranch," he tried an after-school matinee and booked "Ted, the Rough Rider" as an added incentive, also selling it as an Academy Award Winner in lobby, newspapers and mailing lists.

Nat Warshaw, assistant to Roland Haynes, manager of the Keystone Theatre, promoted a contest called the "Keystone Kiddies Klub." Youngsters were given permanent numbered club cards which they bring to the theatre each Saturday, enabling them to participate in contests, parties and giveaways. Stories broke in neighborhood and daily newspapers and 40 x 60 sheets sold the idea two weeks in advance.

In Larry Graver's district, Haddon Matthews, manager of the 69th St. Theatre, staged a kiddie coloring contest in association with his neighborhood paper, and on at least one Saturday a month he stages a Kiddie Birthday Party.

Harold Brason, manager of the Diamond Theatre, uses mimeographed heralds to put his message over. Stenciled, each of the heralds bears a lucky number. When children bring them to the theatre, and their number corresponds with the one on a lobby board, they are admitted free.

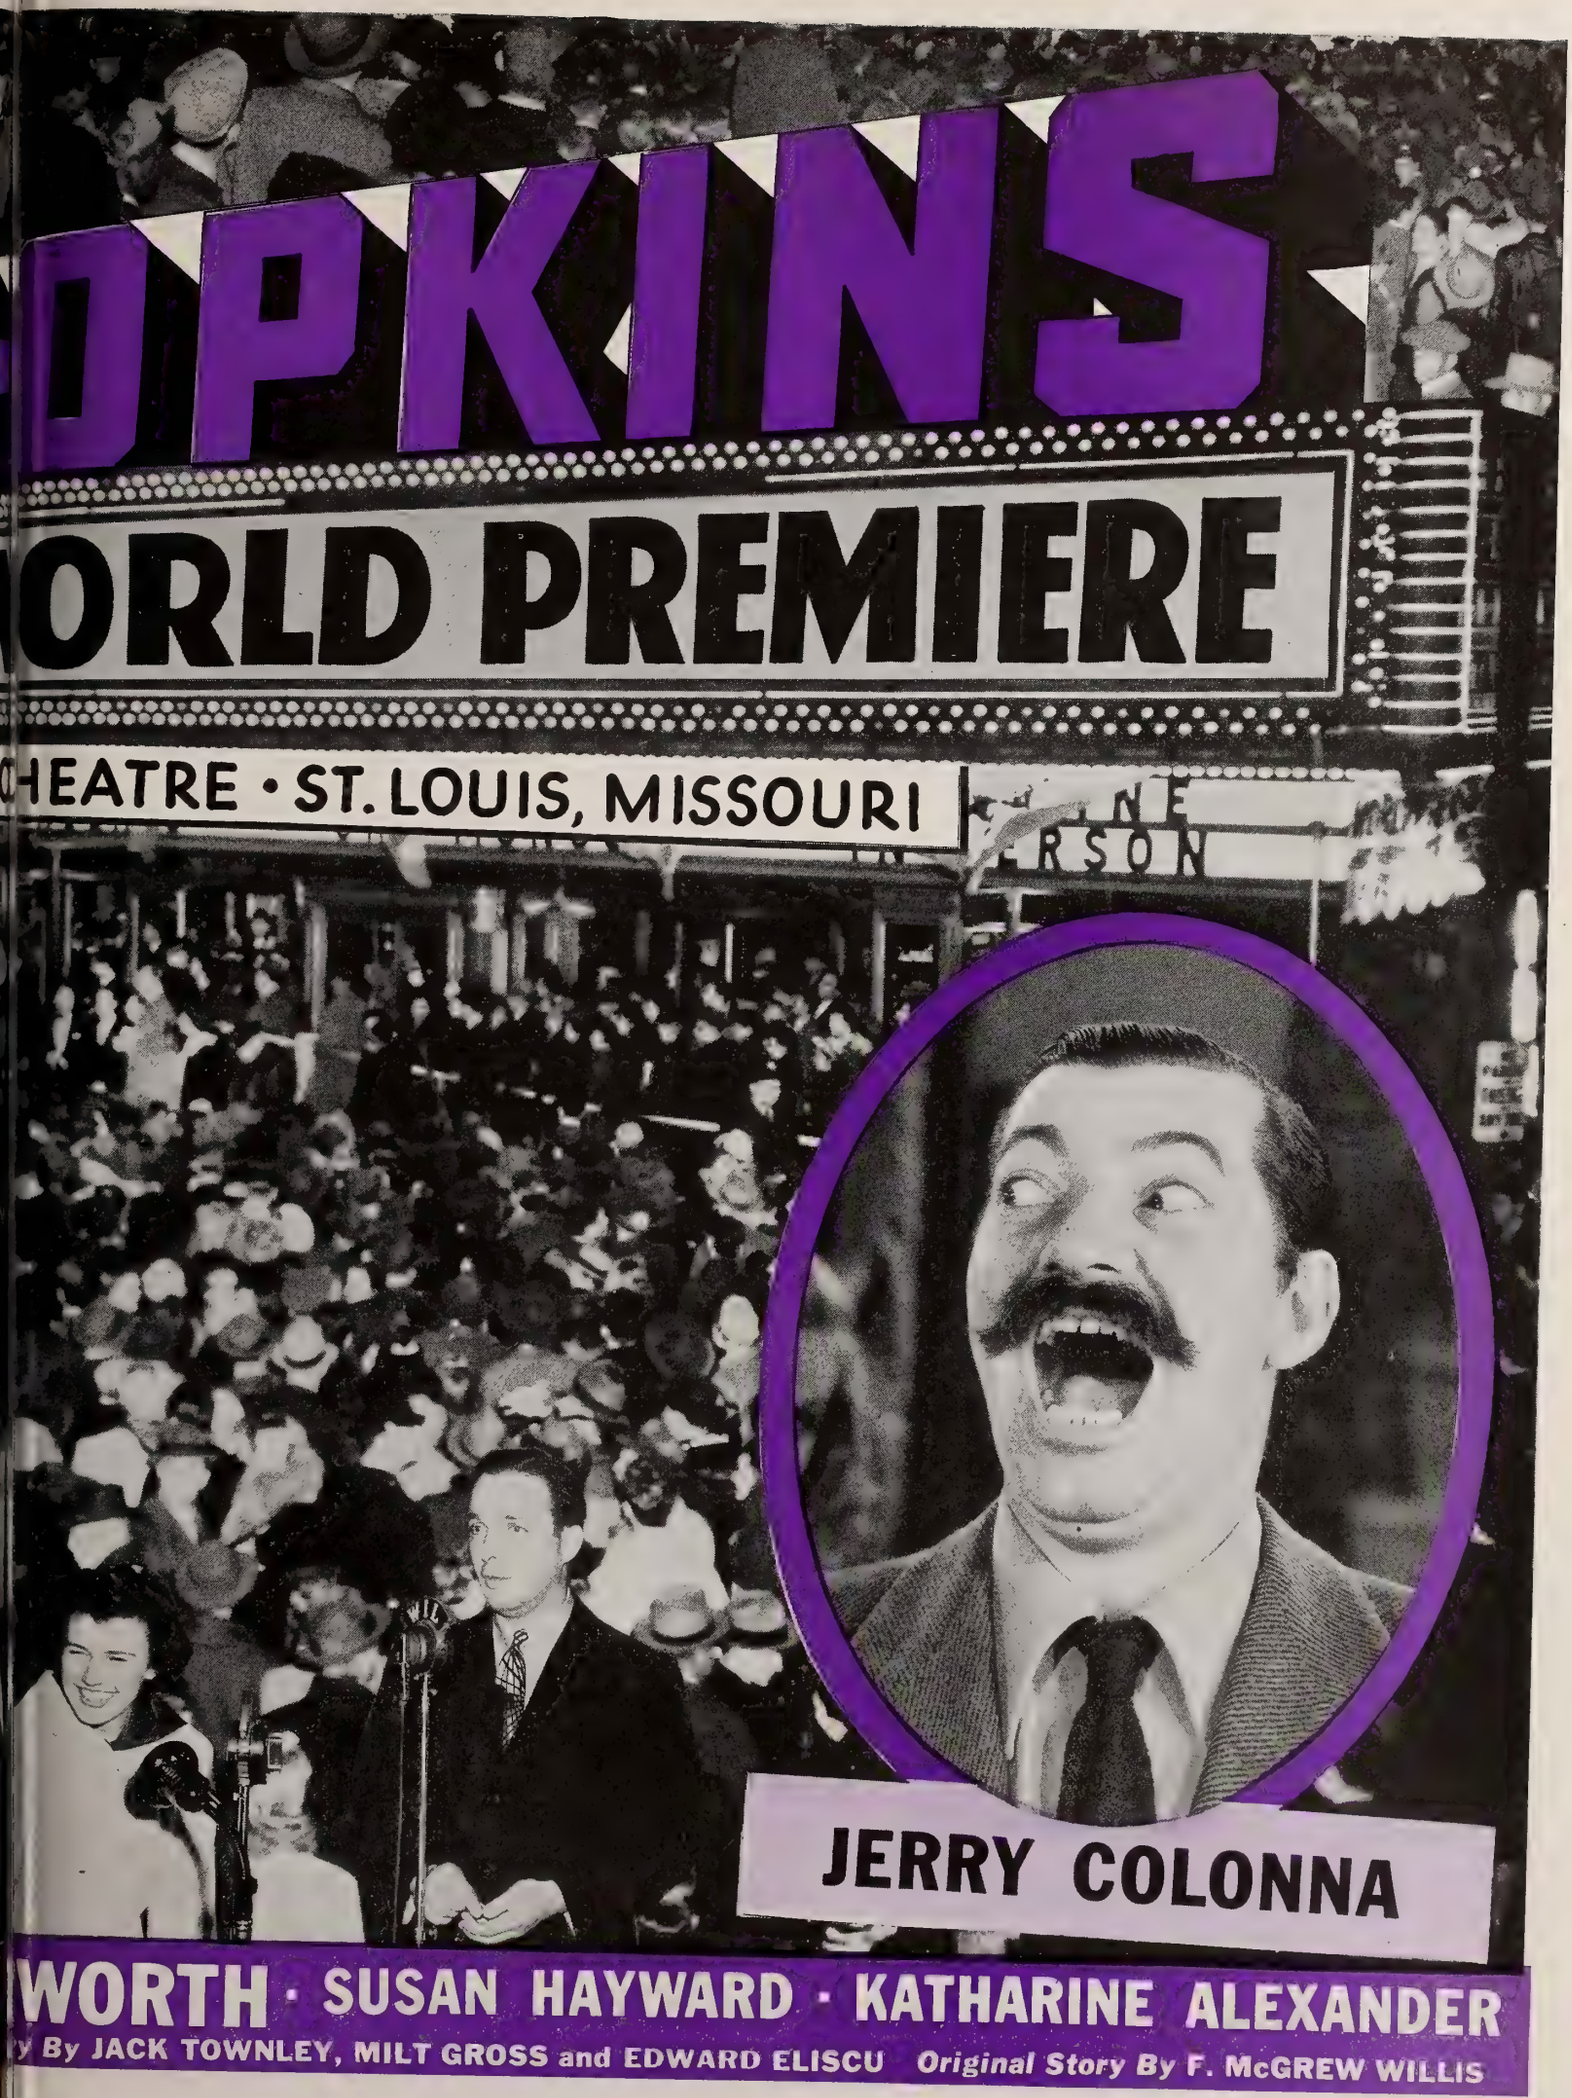
Novelties Distributed

Although one of the last runs in Philadelphia, Eddie Muehlemann, manager of the Lindy Theatre, emphasizes school tie-ups. For "Thief of Bagdad," he provided bookmarks for schools and used a pictorial events machine to excellent advantage in visual classes. In gratitude, the principal of his neighborhood school sent a personal note to all teachers asking them to announce playdates of the picture.

The Philadelphia house managers are not alone in attracting the youngsters. Bill Goldenberg, manager of the Collingswood Theatre in Collingswood, N. J., got personal endorsements at schools for "Northwest Mounted Police" and fixed an after-school matinee for "Melody Ranch," bringing in $50 for a $4 expenditure.

In Wilmington, Del., Lew Black, manager of the Warner Theatre, for "Northwest Mounted Police," had the school bulletin boards carry announcements a week in advance.

After-school matinees mean money to Johnny Latimer, manager of the Waverly Theatre in Drexel Hill, Pa. After booking "Thief of Bagdad," Mr. Latimer personally contacted all the public and high schools in the territory, and arranged for the schools to use window cards, bulletin board announcements and verbal endorsements. Schools also distributed heralds, and the schools in Springfield, because of Latimer's good-will, permitted children to leave their classes 10 minutes earlier so that they could catch the 3:30 show.



In York, Pa., Eddie Moore, manager of the Strand Theatre, landed personally written letters on the bulletin boards of schools to plug "The Long Voyage Home." Moreover, he is firmly establishing the Warner screen stars in York. In a special arrangement with local school authorities, who award special prizes to honor students each month, the manager arranged for the school heads to give out a framed picture of a film star. Mr. Moore supplies the 8 x 10 stills and the teachers supply frames. In the same city, Harry Olmstead, manager of the Capitol Theatre, arranged for 2,000 book marks to be distributed at the Penn High School for "Back Street."

Sid Poppay, manager of the Majestic Theatre, Gettysburg, Pa., arranged for free plugs in local schools and their school papers for "The Aldrich Family." For "Flight Command," he tied in with the Boy Scouts, giving passes to Scouts bringing in best plane models. On "Li'l Abner," he worked out a Sadie Hawkins Day for the school set, also promoting a sandwich tie-up with grills and restaurants frequented by students.

ARMY LIAISON FOR FILM PROMOTIONS

In observance of "Flying Cadet Week," starting April 14th, Harry Jordon, manager of the Trans-Lux Theatre, Philadelphia, has been appointed liaison officer between the U. S. Army recruiting service and the local film men. The local exhibitors are being urged to play all short subjects dealing with the life and training of Uncle Sam's flying cadets. Among the pictures already booked into the territory are "Sky Fighters," from Twentieth Century-Fox, and "Air Army," from R.K.O.

PLAN TO USE NEWSREEL SURPLUS IN SHORTS

Newsreels Study Plan to Use "Overmatter" for New Short Subjects; Details Not Decided

Extended footage on certain news events, tried by some of the newsreel companies on last Fall's football games, and described as a success locally, especially in the New England territory, is being mulled by all newsreel managements this week, with opinions at the New York home offices of the five newsreels varying on the policy's practicability.

The factors in such practicability are whether extended footage will draw more patrons to the theatre; whether such reels or combinations of such reels can be sold to the exhibitor separately; whether they can be sold in more than the one territory in which the event occurred; whether they can be sold as specials of the newsreel company, as short subjects of the major distributor, or as featurettes; whether to delegate newsreel cameramen to make extra footage of an event, or use the normal "overmatter"; whether to use such overmatter in the special or in the short subjects series of topical or pictorial nature which each of the majors distributes.

Opinions of newsreel editors, on the issuance of new subjects which will be, in actuality, extended coverage of one event, and which were bruited long as a new policy of newsreel companies to gain more money from their exhibitor customers, ranged all the way from pessimism to the guarded hint by one editor that it might soon have a "new news short series" made up from "overmatter" footage.

Fox Undecided

At Twentieth Century Fox's Movietone News, opinion was vehement that more footage in news issues, or in special subjects, was unnecessary and not contemplated. It was pointed out that all the companies issue documentary shorts of sorts, offered as short subjects, and the company itself used its "Magic Carpet" series for geographic matter, and its "Adventures of a News Camerman" series for extended footage on news events such as fires, races, steel-making, etc. Political overmatter might be used in another series, it was hinted; but this, too, would be another short subject series.

MGM News of the Day executives remarked that exhibitors expected newsreels now to supply extra footage at no extra charge so that it would be too optimistic to expect more money from that quarter, for "anything special." This opinion was qualified by the notation of the success of coverage of football games in the Boston area last Fall. Such coverage, however, would have to be local and would have to be made on special order from a local circuit, MGM officials believe. Its success in New England means it probably will be repeated, not only in football but in other events, but it will still be a local policy, they emphasized.

At Universal, the terse comment was that the company had thought over the policy of extended footage and "didn't think it so good." However, this was qualified with: "Nevertheless, if others go ahead, we will. Once you decide on a thing like that, it doesn't take long to do it."

At Pathe, it was said the company was pleased at the success of its football footage, but did not contemplate a resounding policy of "special events" short subjects. At the same time, it was denied that the company's short subjects were overmatter from newsreels, it being pointed out that newsreel cameramen were hired under the condition that they operate their machines for newsreels, not short subjects.

At Paramount, also, the consensus was that, for the present, a deliberate policy of extended coverage was not forthcoming. However, here, as with all the others, it was not denied that the policy had been under consideration, with the practicability factors already enumerated not yet resolved to anyone's satisfaction.

AMPA Raises $2,000; Sets Annual Election

The Associated Motion Picture Advertisers' silver jubilee ball at the Hotel Edison on April 4th netted $2,000 for the organizations new relief fund, Leon J. Bamberger, president reported this week. Election of new AMPA officers will take place on April 24th.

Ned E. Depinet, vice president in charge of distribution for RKO was scheduled to address the advertising men at their fortnightly luncheon on Thursday. Mr. Depinet has been active in the industry since 1907 when he started work at the Dreamland Theatre, New Orleans as a ticket chopper for J. E. Pearce. H. M. Richey of MGM was to introduce Mr. Depinet. Among RKO executives reserving places for the luncheon were A. W. Smith, Jr., John J. O'Connor, Phil Reisman, Richard C. Patterson, Jr., S. Barret McCormick, Harry Mandel and others.

The AMPA nominating committee headed by John C. Flinn this week announced the nomination of Vincent Trotta, art director of Advertising Accessories, Inc. for president, to succeed Mr. Bamberger. Other nominations to be voted upon on April 24 include: Vice-president, Edward Schreiber, Warners; secretary, Martin Starr; treasurer, Eli E. Sugarman; directors, Leon Bamberger, Paul N. Lazarus, Jr., Rutgers Neilson, Maurice Bergman, Louis Pollock; trustees, three years, William R. Ferguson, and two years, Charles E. McCarthy; auditing committee, Gordon White, Eileen St. John Brenon, Ruth Weisberg.

Two Receive MGM Awards

Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer has awarded Honor Roll Buttons to Clem Reck of the Victoria theatre in Shamokin, Pa., and Harry Frederickson of the Lafayette theatre, Lafayette, Ind., for their exploitation campaigns for "Land of Liberty," industry-sponsored feature which the company is releasing.

Talk-A-Vision Ready For Commercial Market

Talk-A-Vision, a new automatic machine with sound to be used for commercial purposes, was to be placed on the market this week it was announced by the company, and will be in operation in more than two hundred department stores in the metropolitan area of New York and surrounding states.

The machine, slightly larger than the average home refrigerator, contains the whole motion picture and sound presentation equipment. Both sound and motion pictures are accomplished by rear projection to a 22 by 28 inch screen. Musical and general entertainment numbers may be used in the machine as well as newsreels and educational subjects. Colored advertising slides can be used between numbers.

McNamee Joins RKO

Frank McNamee, former RKO branch manager in Philadelphia, joined the Jay Emanuel theatre organization in Philadelphia in an executive capacity. He resigned from RKO last winter after being with the company for more than 20 years. In recent months he conducted the paralysis fund drive for the city's Variety Club.

Grant-Hepburn Film Reissue

"Bringing Up Baby," the RKO comedy co-starring Cary Grant and Katharine Hepburn, will be reissued, it has been announced by Ned E. Depinet, vice-president of the company. The national release date has been set for May 2nd. The stars of the picture are teamed in "Philadelphia Story."

AAA ADVISES OWNERS TO FILL OUT ARBITRATION PETITIONS PROPERLY

Some Complaints Returned Because of Improper Company Designations; Demand for Arbitration" Form Analyzed

Instructions for exhibitors wishing to file arbitration demands in the system established by the consent decree were amplified this week by officials of the American Arbitration Association, following the ten weeks of operation of the film tribunals during which nearly fifty demands were submitted, and after a number of other improperly written complaints were returned to exhibitors.

The arbitration system was formulated as one in which the exhibitor could secure the services of a lawyer or represent himself, as he elected. For this reason the 28 different legal forms to be used were said by the AAA to have been made as simple as possible.

As previously reported the managers of the arbitration offices in the 31 key cities have been instructed to assist exhibitors and explain the various steps of the arbitration proceeding.

The 28 legal forms of the motion picture industry were outlined in the February 8th issue of MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

Form I Starts Proceedings

Of primary importance in the arbitration system is the "Demand for Arbitration," form number I. With this two-page form properly filled out the exhibitor inaugurates the arbitration proceeding under the consent decree. For the first month of operations mimeographed forms have been used but now the official printed blanks, identical with the mimeographed forms, have been received from the printer and have been distributed to the 31 local offices.

The first blank to be filled in on the "Demand for Arbitration" is the arbitration district, distinguished by the name of the key city in which the arbitration office or tribunal for that territory is located. An exhibitor must file his request for arbitration in the district where his theatre is located. See map of the arbitration districts in the HERALD, November 16, 1940.

The complainant, the exhibitor making the petition, fills in the legal name of the company, theatre operated and location, immediately under the line on the printed form: "In the Matter of the Arbitration between."

The exhibitor should use the legal name under which he does business. This might be in any one of the following ways:

"John Doe, doing business as the Picture Theatre."

"John and William Doe, partners, operating the Picture Theatre."

"Doe, Inc., operating the Picture Theatre."

In all cases the address of the theatre should be given. This should be as specific as it is required to avoid possible confusion with any other theatre. In the larger cities the street address might be necessary; in other places, perhaps, only the name of the city.

Unlike law cases, there is no opponent strictly speaking in an arbitration proceeding. There is no v., versus or against before the defendant or defendants are named. In arbitration it is simply "the matter" between the one party and the other party or parties.

Following the "and" the exhibitor making the demand for arbitration must fill in the legal name of the party or parties to the consent decree with whom he has the dispute. This particular point has caused the most delay and difficulty in the matter of forms returned for correction up to date, it was said. While the decree has not been very explicit, the AAA, to avoid any possible legal arguments, is requiring the exhibitors to give adequate identification of the distributor or distributors named in the demand.

The following general rules were suggested:

1. If the arbitration demand names a distributor with which the exhibitor has a contract in clearance cases and the like) the exhibitor should list the name of the distributor as given on his contract.

2. If the arbitration involves companies with which the exhibitor does not have a contract he should list the full title of one of the parties to the consent decree.

The AAA has returned for correction demands which identify companies as they are sometimes abbreviated for speedy reference: as Fox, Warners, RKO, Paramount, MGM.

The complete list of companies represented at the signing of the consent decree is as follows:

Paramount Pictures, Inc.
Paramount Film Distributing Corporation.
Loew's Incorporated.
Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation.
RKO Radio Pictures, Inc.
RKO Proctor Corporation.
RKO Midwest Corporation.
Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation
Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
Vitgraph, Inc.
Warner Bros. Circuit Management Corporation.
Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation.
National Theatres Corporation.

The exhibitor lists the distributor or distributors with which he has the dispute at the top of the form. But he does not name there other theatres which might be involved.

It is not necessary for the exhibitor to list any addresses for distributors against which he is making the demand. Fundamentally all complaints are against the home office and it is the distributor's responsibility to see that its local branch is informed of arbitration proceedings inaugurated in that district.

The demand for arbitration is addressed to the clerk of the local arbitration office in the key city in district in which the theatre is located. Names of the various local clerks or managers were listed in the January 25th issue of the HERALD (page 13) and in the February 1st issue on page 25.

With the demand an exhibitor must file a "submission agreement" in which he says he will abide by the final decision. The date of that agreement is also filled in in a blank on the demand form.

Grammatical Simplicity Stressed

From this point the exhibitor is free to use his own words. Section I of the form, "statement of claim and relief sought" is intended to be a simple explanation of the alleged unfair treatment and the proposed remedy. In this section the exhibitor is not bound by any legal procedure and is merely asked to express his alleged grievance and what he wants done about it.

In section 2 there is space for a listing of the "name and address of each exhibitor or distributor against whom this complaint is made." The same general rules as outlined above would apply. In the case of the distributor the exhibitor could list either the branch office or the home office address.

The name and address of each theatre involved in the controversy are to be listed in section 3 of the Demand for Arbitration. In cases where the exhibitor making the demand does not know the full legal name of another theatre involved he should give as full an identification as possible so that the right theatre may be notified and unnecessary confusion avoided.

Interested Parties Listed

The last section of the form, number 4, is for the "name and address of each other exhibitor and distributor whose propertly complainant believes may be affected by an award in the arbitration proceeding." In some cases it may happen that the exhibitor does not think any parties not previously named would be affected by the decision and this space would be left blank. The purpose of the section is to give the clerk or local board manager information about parties which might have an interest in the proceeding so that they can be notified. After being informed these other parties may intervene and become bound to the decision or not intervene, as they decide.

Exhibitors not wishing to go to the arbitration office in their district for any reason can obtain the necessary forms and additional information from the local offices. If an exhibitor is in doubt as to the district in which his theatre is located he may communicate with the headquarters of the American Arbitration Association in New York City.

SHORTER ARBITRATION HEARINGS SUGGESTED

Hearing of the first clearance complaint brought under the arbitration system was seen in Washington recently as demonstrating the need for adoption by the American Arbitration System of rules which will materially shorten the procedure. With four and one-half days required for the hearing of the complaint of the Walbrook Theatre, Baltimore, against the seven days' clearance given the Ambassador, Forest and Gwynn Theatres by Twentieth Century-Fox and Warners, all parties were agreed that some procedure must be adopted to cut the time and expense.

Possibility that the AAA might require that evidence regarding population, contract provisions and other matters which are of record and not disputed, be submitted in the form of stipulations were seen as a result of the hours spent at the Walbrook hearing in getting such material into the record.

Defense Matinee Policy

A "defense workers matinee" has been inaugurated at the Lindy theatre, a Stanley-Walker circuit house in southwest Philadelphia. Because the theatre is located near the Westinghouse and General Electric plants, operating 24 hours a day on defense orders, it opens daily at 12:30 P.M. for a matinee showing for the convenience of workers on the early and late evening shifts.

OBITUARIES

I. Whitmark, Music Publisher

Isidore Whitmark, co-founder in 1885 with his brothers, Jay and the late Julius P. Whitmark, of the music publishing firm of M. Whitmark & Sons, died of pneumonia Wednesday, April 9th, at the Polyclinic Hospital in New York. He was 71 years old.

The Whitmark company was absorbed in 1928 by Warner Brothers Pictures, but the name was preserved in the then-created Warner-Harms-Whitmark Co. Isidore Whitmark was the last of the brothers to retire from the business. About a year ago he wrote a history of the family firm and called it "From Ragtime to Swingtime."

It was from the house of Whitmark that most of Victor Herbert's operas reached the public. One of the first came out in 1898. It was "The Fortune Teller." Other publications that followed included "Singing Girl," "Babes in Toyland," "Naughty Marietta," "The Student Prince," "The Desert Song," and many from George M. Cohan.

He is survived by two daughters, two brothers, Jay and Frank M. Whitmark, and a sister.

William J. Worthington, Film Executive, Dies

William J. Worthington, an actor producer and director, and founder of Multicolor Films, died in Hollywood, California, on Wednesday, April 9th. He was 69 years old.

Mr. Worthington sold control of the company to the Caddo Co. some time ago, and divided his time between acting and directing He entered the motion picture business in 1913 after a year on the stage. He leaves a daughter, Mrs. Rowland V. Lee, and a son, William E. Worthington.

W. P. Florence

W. P. Florence, 53, owner and operator of the Macco theatres in Magnolia, Ark., died at his home there April 8th. He is survived by his widow, a son, a brother and a sister.

Fred L. Levenhagen

Fred L. Levenhagen, 82, one-time operator of the old Majestic theatre in Wausau, Wis., died April 10th at his home in that city. He is survived by his wife, three sons, two brothers and a sister.

William C. Tiede

William C. Tiede, 84, manager of the first talking motion picture theatre in Racine, Wis., died April 8th at his home. Mr. Tiede at one time managed the Turner hall and the old Bijou theatre. He is survived by his wife, a son and a daughter.

Kenneth Hagberg

Kenneth Hagberg, 35, projectionist at the Vogue in Kenosha, Wis., for the past several years, died in a Milwaukee hospital April 9th from injuries received when his car left the highway near that city. Hagberg formerly was stage manager at the Orpheum in Kenosha. He was a member of the Motion Picture Projectionists Union, Local 361 and of the Warner Club. He is survived by his wife, a daughter, a brother and a sister.

Andrew J. Beiter

Andrew John Beiter, 45, artist and designer of the lobby displays used by the Sparks theatres in Tampa, Fla., died on April 4th, at Tampa.

W. J. Merrill, RKO Executive

WILFORD J. MERRILL

Wilford J. Merrill, vice-president and treasurer of RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., died Thursday morning, April 10th, of a heart attack at his home in New York. He was 42 years old.

After graduation from a western college, Mr. Merrill studied at the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration. He had occupied executive posts with various organizations and was a veteran of the World War. He had been vice-president and treasurer of the Great Island Holding Corporation; vice-president, comptroller and director of the Royal Baking Powder Company, and vice-president and comptroller of W & J Sloan. For the past five years he had been with RKO.

Mr. Merrill is survived by his mother, Mrs. Elna Merrill of Richmond, Utah, and two children. Funeral services were held in New York and interment took place in Richmond, Utah, his former home.

Court Holds Robbins Complaint Is Valid

In a decision handed down on Saturday, April 12th, Justice Isidor Wasservogel of the New York supreme court denied a motion for dismissal of the complaint of Herman Robbins against Charles Casanave and ruled the defendent, Mr. Casanave, should file an answer to the complaint and go to trial. The suit charges that Mr. Casanave fraudulently obtained $45,000 while an officer and director of National Screen Accessories.

New York Supreme Court Justice Carroll G. Walters, on Wednesday, refused to restrain Mr. Robbins from proceeding with his New York action against Mr. Casanave. The defendant, who is a plaintiff in a counter-suit against Mr. Robbins in the Westchester supreme court, sought the restraining order pending his application to consolidate both suits.

A week previous, Wednesday, April 9th, Judge Peter Schmuck denied a motion by Mr. Casanave for an extension of time to file his answers to Mr. Robbins' charges. At that time Louis Nizer, attorney for Mr. Robbins, argued that Mr. Casanave was trying to prevent the case from coming to trial by getting an extension of time. Judge Schmuck, in denying Mr. Casanave's motion, said the application could serve no other purpose than to delay the ultimate result.

IN COURTS

NBC Sues Mutual For Fight Rights

In the New York supreme court on Friday, April 13th, the National Broadcasting Company brought suit against the 20th Century Sporting Club, Mutual Broadcasting System and the Gillette Razor Company, sponsors of prize fights in Madison Square Garden, to restrain them from broadcasting the 1941-42 fights. The complaint sets forth that NBC entered into a contract in February, a month before the Mutual contract, whereby NBC was to have the exclusive rights to broadcast in English all fights staged in the Garden between October 1st, 1941, and June 1st, 1942.

According to NBC officials, the February contract was oral, but an advance in the form of a check for $15,000 was given to the club. It is the contention of club executives that the check represented a loan and since has been paid back, and that the contract with Mutual is valid.

Philadelphia Theatre Foreclosed

The Pennsylvania Company, through judgment taken in the Philadelphia common pleas court, has foreclosed a $2,210,800 mortgage on the Erlanger theatre. The bank is a trustee of a $1,595,000 bond issue, payment of which has been in default since 1932. The judgment was obtained against the Forrest Theatre Corp., represented as the owner; and James M. Brenan, former treasurer of the corporation. The theatre corporation is no longer in existence and Mr. Brenan is an employee now of Warners.

Agent Sues Universal

A suit has been filed in the New York supreme court by William Lustig for $525,000 against Universal. The plaintiff, who claims to have a 10-year contract as agent for Gloria Jean at 10 per cent commission, charges the film company with persuading Gloria Jean's parents, Ferman H. and Elinor E. Schoonover, to breach the contract.

Seeks to Intervene

A motion has been filed in the New York supreme court by Rene B. Meyer, holder of 100 shares of Universal common, for the privilege of intervening as a plaintiff in the director's suit of Samuel I. Posen against Universal. Mr. Posen, with two other stockholders, is suing for the appointment of a receiver and the imposition of damages against the company's officers and directors.

Another Posen Suit

Western Electric Co. on Friday, April 11th, lost its application to have the complaint of Samuel I. Posen, former director of Universal Pictures dismissed when the Appellate Division by a four to one vote upheld the complaint. Western Electric, which was named along with other companies as allegedly participating in a conspiracy, had contended that the complaint did not tie it up as a co-conspirator.

CBS Suit Settled

The settlement of an injunction suit of Phil Stong, author, against the Columbia Broadcasting System and the William Wrigley Co., was revealed Monday in the United States district court when Federal Judge Murray Hulbert dismissed the complaint on stipulation. The plaintiff had charged plagiarism of his book, "Career," in the defendants' radio program "Gateway to Hollywood."

Mississippi Tax Admissions

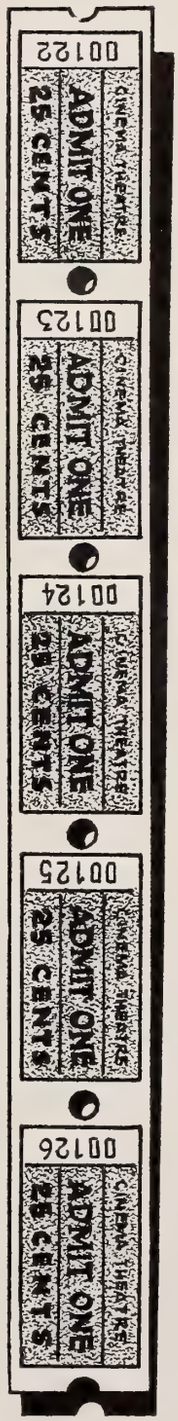
March collections of taxes on theatre admissions in Mississippi totaled $37,145.20, a new all-time high for that month, comparing with $35,541.41 in March, 1940.

DO YOU KNOW—

THAT that ticket—the currency of the motion picture industry, and which records all of the income of this gigantic industry, has not been improved upon since the beginning of the motion picture industry, and is the very self-same ticket that was used in the first Nickelodeons many years ago. . .

THAT that ticket is responsible for the loss of many thousands of dollars to the motion picture industry. . .

THAT that ticket is mainly responsible for "palming" by doorkeepers, and the passing back of tickets to cashiers, for resale by them. . .



THAT that ticket assists in the making of false refunds of admissions. . .

THAT that ticket encourages dishonesty on the part of theatre employees . . .

THAT that ticket helps dishonest exhibitors to cheat on percentage engagements. . .

THAT that ticket can be easily counterfeited, and when stolen can be easily passed for admission. . .

THAT that ticket and its use by theatre owners is largely and mainly responsible for the larger portion of all the defalcations that occur in connection with the box-office. . .

IT'S the old, wornout, outmoded ticket that's to blame. Away with it. Every Dollar Lost Comes Out of Profits.

ALL this may be prevented. Watch for further announcements calling your attention to a new, revolutionary, and greatly improved system of box-office control known as the UNICON Cash Control System.

Columbia

DEVIL COMMANDS, THE: Boris Karloff, Amanda Duff, Richard Fiske—These pictures get worse as they go along. It seems that Columbia isn't doing justice by Boris Karloff and is casting him in some very poor stories. Our patrons at one time liked this series but now they are staying away in droves.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

DURANGO KID: Charles Starrett, Luana Walters, Sons of the Pioneers—This is a good western series. Charles Starrett is a very good actor and has a pleasing personality. The Sons of the Pioneers enhance this series very much and with good riding and two-fisted action by Starrett these pictures seem to set.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

ELLERY QUEEN—MASTER DETECTIVE: Ralph Bellamy, Margaret Lindsay—Double billed it with "Comrade X." Business was fair and the audience seemed satisfied as there were no complaints. Played April 4-5.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

FACE BEHIND THE MASK, THE: Peter Lorre, Evelyn Keyes—A good little program picture that passed by without too much adverse criticism. From the title and from the trailer I expected to see a horror picture but all of it was confined to one scene. Nevertheless, it will do well on a twin bill.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

THIS THING CALLED LOVE: Rosalind Russell, Melvyn Douglas—Doubled with "Ridin' on a Rainbow," a Gene Autry, and it certainly made a great program and was immensely enjoyed by all. Running time, 98 minutes. Played March 30-April 1.—D. P. Thomas, Garrettsville Theatre, Garrettsville, Ohio. General patronage.

First National

THE LETTER: Bette Davis, Herbert Marshall—Audience was well satisfied with this stirring drama, especially with the work of Bette Davis and the entire cast, excepting Herbert Marshall. Business fair. Running time, 96 minutes. Played March 30-April 1.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

SHE COULDN'T SAY NO: Roger Pryor, Eve Arden, Cliff Edwards—I didn't think much of this one, so teamed it up with "Li'l Abner" and received a pleasant surprise. Both pictures well liked by a fair size crowd. I give the kids credit for bringing in the business; they know what's doing down in "Dogpatch." I don't. Running time, 63 minutes. Played April 1.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

STRAWBERRY BLONDE: James Cagney, Olivia de Havilland, Rita Hayworth—Good picture; good business. Did not please everyone, as I had a few walkouts. Cagney fans expect more action and less singing. Running time, 97 minutes. Played April 6.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

TUGBOAT ANNIE SAILS AGAIN: Alan Hale, Ronald Reagan, Marjorie Rambeau—Very good; little rough for some but enjoyed a good business on Foto Nite with it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

COME LIVE WITH ME: James Stewart, Hedy Lamarr—Clever little comedy that had smart lines and funny situations. You won't suffer from brain fog on the plot. It is thin; of that there is no doubt, but that matters not, if they sit back, chuckle, relax and forget troubles. The picture has fulfilled its purpose.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

COMRADE X: Clark Gable, Hedy Lamarr—I did not care for this title and considered its stars the only potential box office value. Therefore, double billed it with "Ellery Queen—Master Detective." My judgment proved I was right. Business was fair and the audience seemed satisfied as there were no complaints. Running time, 86 minutes. Played April 4-5.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

COMRADE X: Clark Gable, Hedy Lamarr, Felix Bressart—This is a swell picture spoofing the Soviets. The tank scenes are sure roaring thrillers. I was wondering whether the tank scenes were the real thing or partly miniature but whatever they were it was sure hot stuff. Hedy Lamarr proved to be more than ornamental; she held her own right well in this. Felix Bressart deserves special mention for his fine work in this. This was doubled with "Queen of the Yukon," Monogram. Business on this program was a good average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

DR. KILDARE'S CRISIS: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day—Double featured with "The Man I Married." Most of the credit should go to the Kildare series which is excellent and this was no exception. Business was above average and my patrons were well satisfied. Played March 26-27.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

GONE WITH THE WIND: Clark Gable, Vivien Leigh, Leslie Howard, Olivia de Havilland, Hattie McDaniels—Good picture; good business. Did more than I expected. Most people thought it was too long. Running time, 230 minutes. Played April 2-3.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GO WEST: Marx Brothers—Double featured with "Jennie" to just ordinary business. Both pictures were fair but my public does not care for the Marx Brothers. However, this was the best one I have received with them in from Metro. If you can get your public in to see it, they will be satisfied, but how? Played April 2-3.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

GO WEST: Marx Brothers—Typical Marx Bros. picture. Had been shown all around, so did not draw the usual Marx fans. Kids and young folks like them. Running time, 82 minutes. Played March 14-16.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HULLABALOO: Frank Morgan, Billie Burke—Played as a double bill with "A Dispatch from Reuter's," one day to cheap admission; did not take in film rental. Played March 25.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

LITTLE NELLY KELLY: Judy Garland, George Murphy, Charles Winninger—At long last, a good picture from Metro. I was beginning to wonder if they would ever make another good one but this is tops. Judy in her very best performance. George Murphy is a grand policeman, while Charles Winninger is a wow. This one pleased one hundred per cent. Good story, good music, good stars. Running time, 100 minutes. Played February 28-March 1.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

WILD MAN OF BORNEO: Frank Morgan, Billie Burke, June Preisser—A flop. Did not please anyone. Pass this one up. Played March 1.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

WILD MAN OF BORNEO: Frank Morgan, Billie Burke, June Preisser—This picture is so goshawful that, believe it or not, words fail me in describing it. Just a long line of walkouts. I felt like a bandit for taking their money. I ought to have known when Metro gave me an early date there was something wrong with the picture but I had no idea it was so bad. If this is on your contract, pay for it and do not run it. It is not even worth transportation charges. Played March 7-9.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Monogram

PHANTOM OF CHINATOWN: Keye Luke, Grant Withers—Fair mystery drama with about 10 minutes of expedition scenes and 50 minutes of the story. Business above average. Running time, 60 minutes. Played March 28-29.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

QUEEN OF THE YUKON: Charles Bickford, Irene Rich—This was doubled with "Comrade X," MGM. It is a good all around Alaskan story. Business on this program was a good average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Republic

ARKANSAS JUDGE: Weaver Brothers and Elviry—Just a fair programmer and not up to the standard of the other Weaver Bros. and Elviry hillbilly musicals. Very slow moving and not enough pep to keep one thoroughly occupied.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

OKLAHOMA RENEGADES: Three Mesquiteers (Robert Livingston, Raymond Hatton, Duncan Renaldo)—They do nicely on the second half of a dual bill for week-end business. Lots of action; that's what our farm lads like.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, and Alexander Theatre, Wallaceburg, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

RIDE, TENDERFOOT, RIDE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey—A good western picture with music which is a relief from the usual "shoot 'em down, drag 'em out" westerns with a twenty or thirty years appeal. Today's audiences are too educated and too sophisticated to fall for the old escapade with lots of shooting and picking unnecessary fights. That's why most western pictures released today have not public appeal, unless pictures like "Ride, Tenderfoot, Ride," a western without a single shot or a single fight and still a very good western picture. Business above average. Running time, 65 minutes. Played March 28-29.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

RIDIN' ON A RAINBOW: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Mary Lee, Carol Adams—This is a good Autry entry. Plenty of music, lots of comedy, not too much action and the two supporting stars, Smiley Burnette and Mary Lee, certainly do carry Gene Autry along. If you have a small town patronage, this will certainly please your people.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

RIDIN' ON A RAINBOW: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Doubeld with "This Thing Called Love" and it certainly made a great program and was immensely enjoyed by all. Played March 30-April 1.—D. P. Thomas, Garrettsville Theatre, Garrettsville, Ohio. General patronage.

TRAIL BLAZERS, THE: Three Mesquiteers (Robert Livingston, Bob Steele, Rufe Davis), Pauline Moore—Republic's "Three Mesquiteers" series are good western film fare but they are certainly not up to the original cast of the "Three Mesquiteers" that Republic started with. It seems that the shifting around of characters has not done this series any good at all. Nevertheless, it is still good western film fare.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

RKO Radio

GIRL, A GUY AND A GOB, A: George Murphy, Lucille Ball, Edmund O'Brien—I sold Lloyd big. Swell picture but not in actor Harold Lloyd class. Business no soap. Pleased those who came. Honors here to O'Brien. May be best to sell screwy situations and laffs, forgetting names. May be good idea to screen first for working material and angles. Played March 30-April 1.—C. A. Skelly, New Lamax Theatre, Wilmington, Ohio. General patronage.

HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME, THE: Charles Laughton, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Thomas Mitchell, Maureen O'Hara, Edmond O'Brien—This is really a picture of pictures. Adults as well as children liked it. In places Charles Laughton is not understood because he tried to act the role too much. Running time 115 minutes. Played March 23-26.—Crist S. Caporal, Bison Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General and neighborhood patronage.

KITTY FOYLE: Ginger Rogers, Dennis Morgan, James Craig—I don't believe you can go wrong on this one.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, and Alexander Theatre, Wallaceburg, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LI'L ABNER: Granville Owen, Mona Ray, Johnnie Morris, Martha O'Driscoll—Played with "She Couldn't Say No" and received a pleasant surprise. Both pictures well liked by a fair size crowd. I give the kids credit for bringing in the business; they know what's doing down in "Dogpatch." I don't. Played April 1.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

RAMPARTS WE WATCH, THE: Documentary—Doubled with "Six Lessons from Madame La Zonga." Very good picture and enjoyed by all. Running time, 98 minutes. Played March 25-26.—D. P. Thomas, Garrettsville Theatre, Garrettsville, Ohio. General patronage.

THAT'S RIGHT, YOU'RE WRONG: Kay Kyser and Orchestra, Adolphe Menjou, May Robson, Lucille Ball, Edward Everett Horton, Dennis O'Keefe—This picture is a real scream but I think Kay Kyser should stick to radio. Over the radio the public can't see his face. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 13-15. —Crist S. Caporal, Bison Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General and neighborhood patronage.

TOO MANY GIRLS: Lucille Ball, Richard Carlson, Frances Langford, Ann Miller—A good peppy, zippy musical with a better than average musical comedy plot. It is lively from the word go till the end, properly mixed with songs, dances, and swell dances they were too, and gags. I have seen some adverse reports on this but then there is no accounting for tastes, which no doubt includes the writer of this. Business on this just a fair average on Sunday, a little above average Monday.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

YOU'LL FIND OUT: Kay Kyser and Orchestra, Peter Lorre, Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi—I thought this was a fair chiller-thriller show and they usually go for that kind here, especially on Friday-Saturday. However, I must be mistaken; it fell badly at the box office and the kids even razzed me for putting it on. His other picture last season, "That's Right, You're Wrong," played Friday-Saturday, May 3-4, did plenty of business. Running time, 95 minutes. Played March 28-29.—A. F. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

DEAD MEN TELL: Sidney Toler, Sen Yung, Jean Rogers—Just another "Charley Chan" picture. It just got by. Running time, 61 minutes. Played April 4.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GOLDEN HOOFS: Jane Withers, Charles Rogers—Fox will not give up the idea that child stars last just so long. Jane is through; they just won't come in on her pictures anymore; they have no one in the cast that is known and there is a defeatist air to them that makes them just a wasted date. I have taken the two from this year's contract and if Fox does not have the good jugdment to retire her I am retiring her myself by paying and not playing.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

GOLDEN HOOFS: Jane Withers, Charles Rogers, George Irving, Phillip Hurlick—My first Jane Withers picture for some time. Jane is growing up and is very charming and very nice looking. She gives her usual excellent performance. Buddy Rogers as "Dean MacArdle" (Nope, none of my relations. "Mac" is Scotch, I am Irish) is good and George Irving splendid as the country doctor, but a big orchid to Phillip Hurlick, the little colored boy. He's tops. Altogether a very pleasing production. Running time, 67 minutes. Played March 21-22.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HUDSON'S BAY: Paul Muni, Gene Tierney, John Sutton, Laird Cregar—Doubled with "The Invisible Woman." Very good pictures and were enjoyed by all. Running time, 91 minutes. Played March 27-29.—D. P. Thomas, Garrettsville Theatre, Garrettsville, Ohio. General patronage.

JENNIE: Virginia Gilmore, William Henry—Double featured with "Go West" to just ordinary business. Both pictures were fair. Running time, 78 minutes. Played April 2-3.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

MAN I MARRIED, THE: Joan Bennett, Francis Lederer, Lloyd Nolan, Anna Sten—Double featured with "Dr. Kildare's Crisis." I do not suppose it would stand alone, although Fox thought a lot of it by allocating it into the second group. Most of the credit should go to the "Kildare" series. Business was above average and my patrons were well satisfied. Running time, 65 minutes. Played March 26-27.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

TIN PAN ALLEY: Alice Faye, Jack Oakie, Betty Grable, John Payne—A grand picture. Alice Faye gives her usual charming performance. Betty Grable is good, so is John Payne, but Jack Oakie is a scream. The beautiful "Katy" song is a riot. Fox makes real musicals and this is one of the best. Book this early and don't be afraid to advertise it. Running time, 92 minutes. Played March 27-30.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

TOBACCO ROAD: Charley Grapewin, Marjorie Rambeau, Gene Tierney—Opened to good business, then the squawks. Did not please. Only a little better business than average run. Picture is clean. Played March 19-21.—C. M. Hartman, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla. Small town patronage.

United Artists

COWBOY AND THE LADY, THE: Gary Cooper, Merle Oberon, Patsy Kelly, Walter Brennan—One of the best comedies ever produced. Fine acting by entire cast. Entire audience well pleased. Mix a cowboy and a modern time picture together and if this is the result, you have another hit. Running time, 90 minutes. Played April 3-5.—Crist S. Caporal, Bison Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General and neighborhood patronage.

PASTOR HALL: Nova Pilbeam, Wilfrid Lawson—Ran it Sunday midnight in conjunction with a war savings drive to real nice business. The picture is very impressive and timely.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, and Alexander Theatre, Wallaceburg, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PASTOR HALL: Nova Pilbeam, Wilfrid Lawson—I was afraid of this but it was under contract so it was a case of play or pay. I decided to play it and I am glad I did for two reasons. First, it is a good picture for the message it tries to deliver, in fact, very good. Second, it did above average business both days of midweek playdates.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

REBECCA: Laurence Olivier, Joan Fontaine, George Sanders, Judith Anderson—Although it may have won the award, it didn't do the business we did on "Love Thy Neighbor." It's class merchandise but not box office. Don't feel any too happy that I bought it so late.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, and Alexander Theatre, Wallaceburg, Ontario, Canada.

TRADE WINDS: Fredric March, Joan Bennett, Ralph Bellamy, Ann Sothern—Very good picture. Patrons well pleased. Ralph Bellamy and Ann Sothern provide all the comedy. Would do well for a Sunday program. Running time, 94 minutes. Played March 20-22.—Crist S. Caporal, Bison Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General and neighborhood patronage.

Universal

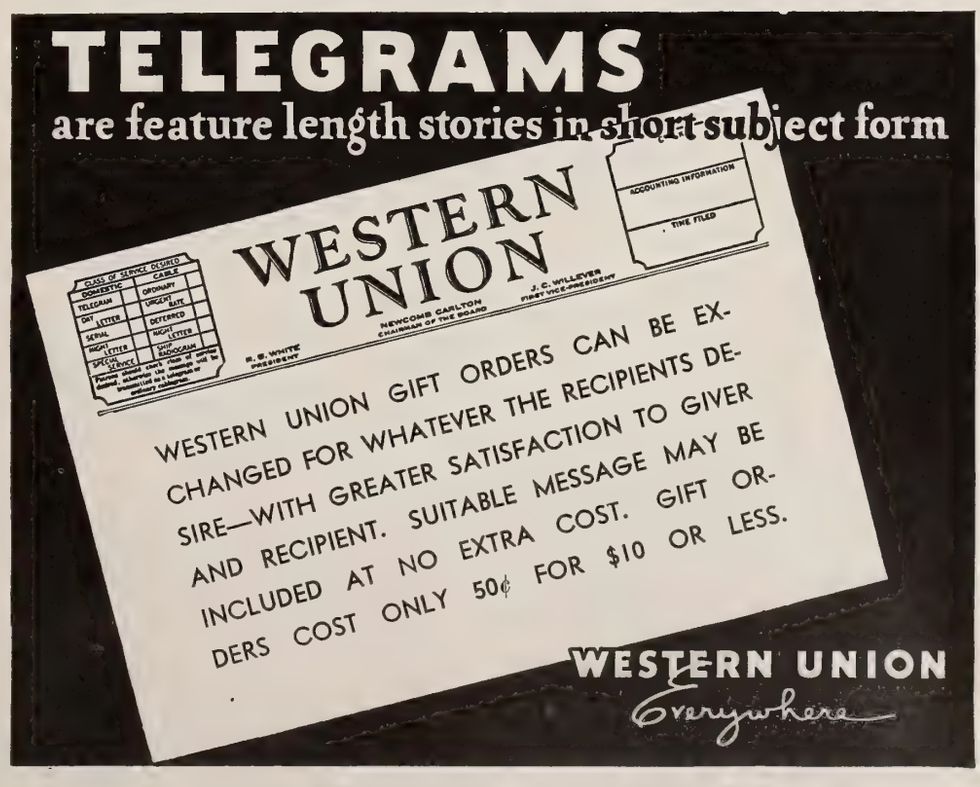
BIG GUY, THE: Jackie Cooper, Victor McLaglen —This was doubled with "Ragtime Cowboy Joe." Jackie Cooper is popular at this theatre. This double bill did good average business.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

BUCK PRIVATES: Abbott and Costello, Andrew Sisters—I knew it. The bit they had in "One Night in the Tropics" put these lads right in the public mind and when this cheaply made little picture came, it did business and how. It's screwy, and so perhaps we all are, for we would rather get a laugh these days than sit through a problem picture. That was evident in "Buck Privates."—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

BUCK PRIVATES: Budd Abbott, Lou Costello, Andrew Sisters, Jane Frazee—This town sold solid on Abbott and Costello. Three big roaring—I mean roaring—days of swell business. The talk of the town; play it big; they've got it. Do it again, Universal, keep the gags fast and furious as in this but remember to pace 'em good to care for spontaneous audience reaction. Played April 5-7.—C. A. Skelly, New Lomax Theatre, Wilmington, Ohio. General patronage.

GIVE US WINGS: "Dead End Kids," Anne Gwynne, Wallace Ford—Good picture for any day of the week with plenty of action, thrills and comedy. Running time, 62 minutes. Played March 30-April 1.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

INVISIBLE WOMAN, THE: John Barrymore, Virginia Bruce, John Howard, Charles Ruggles—Doubled with "Hudson's Bay." Very good pictures and were enjoyed by all. Played March 27-29.—D. P. Thomas, Garrettsville Theatre, Garrettsville, Ohio. General patronage.



LITTLE BIT OF HEAVEN, A: Gloria Jean, Robert Stack, Eugene Pallette, Billy Gilbert, Stuart Erwin, Nan Grey, Hugh Herbert, C. Aubrey Smith—Gloria Jean continues in a story that allows her family, her uncles and her grandpop to play important parts as they did in "The Under-Pup." This was enjoyed by both our customers and the box office, as receipts were above average Sunday and Monday. It looks as if Gloria Jean could continue in stories which would use her family again for a background and they make a swell background, providing stories could be had as entertaining as "The Under-Pup" and "A Little Bit of Heaven."—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

RAGTIME COWBOY JOE: Johnny Mack Brown, Fuzzy Knight—This can hold its own with the popular westerns of today. The group singing is good. Fuzzy Knight gives it proper comedy relief. The story more than passes muster as western stories go. John Mack Brown is ideal as a western hero. One slight criticism: he is inclined to be a little stout for a western hero. At least so it seemed to me, but working in western pictures ought to work off a few pounds. This was doubled with "The Big Guy." This double bill did good average business.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

SPRING PARADE: Deanna Durbin, Robert Cummings, Mischa Auer—This I consider grand entertainment. While Deanna Durbin is as good as usual, much of the credit should go to the story, the cast, director and the production. It's a fairy tale like story in which no one was killed and no hearts were broken and no tears were shed. Just solid movie enjoyment. Business started slow first day, extra good second day, third day a good average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Warner Brothers

CITY FOR CONQUEST: James Cagney, Ann Sheridan—This picture was held back on account of the title, which has no value. It grossed below par. My audience considered it a worthwhile offering but failed to talk it up, consequently the second showing on Monday was light. Running time, 104 minutes. Played March 30-31.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

DISPATCH FROM REUTER'S, A: Edward G. Robinson, Edna Best—Played as a double bill with "Hullabaloo" one day to cheap admission prices; did not take in film rental. There was no reason for my public being present. They get that from the fan magazines. When they don't want to see it, you cannot give it away. Running time, 89 minutes. Played March 25.—A. E. Andrews, Emporium Theatre, Emporium, Pa. General patronage.

FATHER'S SON: John Litel, Frieda Inescort—Definitely a small program picture which pleased but did not draw. Running time, 57 minutes. Played April 5. —E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FLIGHT FROM DESTINY: Thomas Mitchell, Jeffrey Lynn, Geraldine Fitzgerald—Our audience definitely did not like this picture. It is too morbid and how it dragged. It took forever to get anywhere and the preponderance of dialogue for full four reels, just wore the audience down and then they did not care how it finished. Skip it.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

GREAT MR. NOBODY, THE: Alan Hale, Eddie Albert, Joan Leslie, John Litel—Just a program picture which pleased on family night. Running time, 71 minutes. Played April 1.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

A PLUMBING WE WILL GO: Three Stooges—A riot if there ever was one. The patrons really laughed at this one and I can't blame them. No one was displeased.—Crist S. Caporal, Bison Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General and neighborhood patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

DREAMS: Passing Parade—Entertaining short subject dealing with nightmares. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

KIDDIE KURE: Our Gang Comedies—Fair Our Gang but they are slipping.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

LONESOME STRANGER: Technicolor Cartoons—Good.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

OLD NEW ORLEANS: FitzPatrick Traveltalks—A grand travel talk on one of the most interesting cities in the U. S. Color beautiful. Twice the time could be devoted to New Orleans, as there are so many interesting places that were not mentioned.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

THIRD DIMENSIONAL MURDER: Metroscopix—Very good entertainment. When viewed through special glasses of cardboard and colored transparent paper, the actors stand out and give you a big thrill when they throw things at you. Play it. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Republic

MEET THE STARS, NO. 3: Variety Reel—Very good reel showing the stars in Hollywood, at work and at play. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

SNOW EAGLES: Sportscopes—Interesting picture of skiing at Sun Valley. Appealed to us as we were born and bred in them thar hills.—S. L. George, Mountain Home Theatre, Mountain Home, Idaho. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CLUB LIFE IN THE STONE AGE: Terry-Toons—A very good black and white cartoon. Was afraid of this after the colored cartoons but it went over very well.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

NEW AND PRODIGAL CONTRIBUTORS

One new contributor and two prodigals sent reports to the What the Picture Did for Me department this week. The new member is:

D. P. THOMAS, Garrettsville Theatre, Garrettsville, Ohio.

The contributors whose reports have been missing for some weeks are:

THEODORE J. FRIEDMAN, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y.

C. M. HARTMAN, Liberty Theatre, Carnegie, Okla.

Read the reports from these and other regular contributors in the adjoining columns.

FIRST LINE OF DEFENSE: A timely and entertaining short that other firms would charge from two to four dollars for and Fox puts out gratis. Splendid comments on this one. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

LUCKY DUCK, THE: Terry-Toons—An excellent colored cartoon.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

CAT'S TALE, THE: Merrie Melodies—Very, very good cartoon in color. One of the best. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

CRAWFORDS AT HOME, THE: Vitaphone Varieties—Another fine musical short that brought loud praises and applause. Real good with family appeals.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, and Alexander Theatre, Wallaceburg, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

JAN GARBER AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Just what the doctor ordered. Give us more of these, Vitaphone. Couldn't be better.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, and Alexander Theatre, Wallaceburg, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

JOE GLOW, THE FIREFLY: Looney Tunes—Average black and white cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PORKY'S BASEBALL BROADCAST: Looney Tunes—Very good. They liked it immensely.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, and Alexander Theatre, Wallaceburg, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SOUR PUSS: Looney Tunes—Passable. Seen better.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, and Alexander Theatre, Wallaceburg, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

WACKY WILDLIFE: Merrie Melodies—"Wacky" is the word for it. Give us more like this one, Hollywood. Running time, nine minutes.—Fred C. Allen, Princess Theatre, Piedmont, Ala. Small town patronage.

Serial

Columbia

MANDRAKE, THE MAGICIAN: Warren Hull, Doris Weston—Only fair. Why can't we get an adult serial? Wish Universal would remake "The Collegians." They were not exactly a serial, but a series, and I believe they would draw now better than some serials. What about it, Universal?—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Republic

LONE RANGER SERIAL: Not liking serials myself, I always feel like panning them but I believe if you have western lovers it may do extra business. In our own situation I'm not sure whether or not we are doing extra business. Seemed to get by all right on a double bill.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, and Alexander Theatre, Wallaceburg, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MYSTERIOUS DR. SATAN: Eduardo Ciainnelli, Robert Wilcox, Ella Neal, William Newell—Pretty good but haven't seen an extra good serial since Republic's "Lone Ranger" unless it was Columbia's "The Shadow" which was O. K.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

National Decency Legion Classifies Nine Pictures

Of the nine films classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week six were found unobjectionable for general patronage and three were classified as unobjectionable for adults. The pictures and their classifications follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Billy the Kid's Fighting Pals," "Border Vigilantes," "The Devil and Miss Jones," "North from Lone Star," "Power Dive" and "Two-Gun Sheriff." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Knockout," "Mr. District Attorney" and "Shot in the Dark."

Film Daily's Yearbook Out

The Film Daily 1941 Year Book appeared on Tuesday, with 1,064 pages. The foreword, by Jack Alicoate, publisher, remarks that the 12-month period ended December 31, 1940, was "replete with momentous developments" within and without the industry, as no similar period has been. A message by Will Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, says, in part, that, despite all that has happened, the Hollywood studios have improved their product.

The Year Book lists industry statistics; news events of 1940; prominent show persons deceased in 1940; telephone numbers in New York and Los Angeles; a resume of the foreign market; a summary of 1940 film stock movements; labor developments; the color situation; television progress; nontheatrical films statistics; some theatre records; "Film History," a tabloid review of industry highlights; credits on features released in 1940; short subjects titles of 1940; that year's releases, by companies; 1940 imported films; serials released; original titles, features released, producers, directors, players, and other Hollywood credits for 1940; personnel and activities of non-theatrical film companies; associations; production companies; theatres of the U. S. and Canada; financial reports of film companies; reports from foreign countries, by persons authoritative; and other pertinent film industry factors.

Harmon Tells D.A.R. of Films' Defense Role

The young men and women of America will rise to the present emergency, as they have in every other, Francis Harmon, coordinator of the Motion Picture Committee Cooperating for National Defense, told the 50th annual Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution, in Washington, on Friday.

Mr. Harmon, executive assistant to Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, reminded the assembled women that the film industry had grown up in an atmosphere of freedom, and therefore recognized an obligation "to the system of government which has nurtured it, and enabled it to become the most influential form of mass entertainment the world has known."

He outlined the work of films in boosting national morale and depicting the defense effort in its varied phases. He also remarked the film industry's increased recognition of the need for cultural relations with the Latin-American countries.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

HERE IT IS, AGAIN

Well used but hardly outworn are terms such as "efficiency", "service", etc., since members keep making much of them. They are all a part of institutionalizing to be stressed here again because of recent thrusts in that direction. One would be the institutional copy suggested by Charlie Ryan and set down on another page. Editor of the potent Warner Chicago zone weekly exploitation manual, Ryan considers strong copy of this nature—and what stands in back of it—somewhat of a "must", as it should be.

Recently arrived is a communication from Round Tabler Charlie Zinn, manager of Minnesota Amusement's Century, in Minneapolis, and a consistent exponent of institutional emphasis as a distinct aid to the grosses. Zinn is all for service. He notes that the opposition has the same pictures, the same advertising facilities. So his attack is aimed to include the best of service in all departments, which the Round Tabler feels is "creating a steady patronage and especially during the off weeks".

This was brought out emphatically by Zinn in a talk to the personnel in pointing out that only through a perfection of service given by the staff could these institutional gains be maintained.

It was during a scotch-and-soda hour some weeks back that another one of the members said the same thing by coupling efficiency and sound housekeeping to spell his version of "service". Eternal vigilance by everyone on the payroll was his answer, for he too felt that, while good product and smart merchandising were generally to be had, the extra something that lifted one situation higher than another in patron opinion was the spirit, the manner in which the manager and his forces tackled the problem of institutionalizing the day-in and day-out appeal of the theatre.

It is not to be expected that every theatreman everywhere can claim the title of expert exploiteer, expert adman, or expert publicist. But it is within the province of every theatreman to give expert service in building his house institutionally to compete consistently and successfully with the rest of the field.

That he can do so is no fanciful wish plucked out of the air. It is plain statement-of-fact offered in evidence by the Ryans and the Zinns who have made of it a definite factor at the ticket window.

That screen units hardly exhaust opportunities for publicity is pointed out in "Better Theatres" for April, wherein able Editor George Schutz demonstrates the possibilities of newspaper attentions to the "physical theatre". Examples are given of news stories on redecorations, reseating, air-conditioning, and projection, to indicate how equipment may serve to do its part in keeping the public theatre-conscious.

The Schutz article is timely and informative. It will be taken to heart by theatremen on the hunt for extra promotional material "beyond the program".

AN EXCELLENT EXAMPLE

This time it happened during the second feature of a recent Thursday night, when the sound at the Famous Players Canadian Oakwood, a Toronto neighborhood, went completely dead. The house was packed and Manager Allan Easson had no taste for refunds. So what to do. Recalling that the final hockey playoff game between Toronto and Boston was in progress downtown, the Round Tabler rushed a radio to the stage and, while the sound engineers cleared up the trouble, kept his patrons thrilled with a play-by-play broadcast of the game. Result: An audience pleased with the surprise feature. Better yet—not one refund.

Called upon infrequently for exercise, yet a most important part of the manager's equipment, is his ability to proceed with lightning speed in a pinch. Easson's action pushes split-second thinking a notch higher in the long listing of virtues by which your dependable showman is to be judged.

COLUMNS of feature publicity and art in the Denver papers recently were given over to the twenty-second anniversary in showbusiness of B. D. ("Dave") Cockrill, successful independent operator of the Denham theatre, from where "Dave" has been reporting many a smart campaign. Congratulations are distinctly in order. May the Round Tabler's keen exploitation eye never grow dim.

Round Table In Pictures

In the spring a theatreman's fancy turns to thoughts of lobby decoration, and so George Avis at Loew's Century, Baltimore, planted papier mache sunflowers, centers of which carried titles, dubbed as "choice blossoms of the entertainment world".

Blowups of caricatures of James Stewart and Hedy Lamarr, which appeared in the "Come Live with Me" pressbook, were utilized by Maurice Drucker at Loew's State, Cleveland, for lobby setpiece. Gift boxes colorfully wrapped were planted alongside.

Harry Rice, exploitation head for Arthur Ziehm, devised this colorful flash front for opening of "King of the White Elephant" at the New York Belmont. Elephant fights and dancing girls were vividly portrayed.

Two weeks ahead of Easter Robert Busch of the Jeffery Theatre, in Chicago, planted an attractive lobby display consisting of cutout bunnies. Each held cards with picture titles, which were changed with each new show. Large bunny overall held card carrying Easter greeting.

North woods atmosphere was the keynote of the "stop 'em" lobby display created by Hadden Matthews for "Hudson's Bay" opening at Warners' 69th Street Theatre, in Upper Darby, Pa. Cutout of Muni was planted at entrance of tepee, base of which carried blankets and other outdoor equipment promoted from cooperating merchant.

"Bowling" Shorts Tied to Tourney

Hooking up to the Southwest Bowling tournament meet held in Fort Worth recently, Manager Lowell T. Bodiford at the Parkway put on a bowling show which was built around three shorts on the subject combined into a 30-minute unit and prefaced with an explanatory tieup trailer. The shorts were: "Splits, Strikes & Spares," "Bowling for Strikes" and "Set 'em Up" and brought to attention with various devices.

These included notices to all bowling clubs and entrants in the tournament, Bodiford giving guest tickets to high scorers at the contest each night. Sports pages as well as movie columns were utilized ahead and announcements made at all local bowling alleys, the same being had at the tournament in advance of each session.

In the lobby the Interstate theatreman set up a display of pins and balls with shelves for equipment. Window cards were planted around town where they would do the most good.

Bodiford also used a trick want ad tieup, copy reading: "Talk to London," to which was added the house telephone number. On every call, and there were many, boy stationed at phone answered "This is Bill London, reminding you to see," etc., etc.

Break on the sports page for "Lady From Cheyenne" at Warner's Hippodrome, in Cleveland was obtained by Dave Bachner with an offer of a "Loretta Young" trophy to the city's leading woman bowler. The offer was made to share in the wide publicity given by the local News in connection with the paper's bowling sweepstakes.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Theatre Party Arranged By Dowler for Smiths

O. I. Dowler of the Longmont, in Longmont, Colo., went to town on "Mr. and Mrs. Smith" and "Scattergood Baines." On the former arranging with local paper and radio station to hold a special "Mr. & Mrs. Smith" theatre party on the opening day. It was announced that if all the Mr. and Mrs. Smiths would meet at 7:30 p.m. at a nearby confectionery they would be served free refreshments and go in a body to the theatre. Dowler reports that the turnout was excellent and he promoted the refreshments and radio announcements.

For "Scattergood Baines" Dowler planted newspaper contest offering cash prizes and ducats for the best "Scattergood Quotations." This netted him a raft of free space and art, also cracking radio for special announcements trying to find a horse and carriage similar to one Scattergood might drive.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Phillips' Goodwill Builder

To build goodwill among the townsfolk, Carmon Phillips at the Onate, in Belen, N. M., distributes guest tickets to managers of large concerns thanking them and the employees for their patronage. By only sending them to about two or three firms a week, Phillips keeps the list under control.

PATRONS WRITE 'HARDYS'

Direct tiein in keeping with title was made by Bill Elder on "Andy Hardy's Private Secretary" at Loew's, in Harrisburg, on stunt illustrated above, wherein patrons were invited to dictate letters to their favorite stars in the picture, as shown. Secretary typed the letters, with originals going to patron and copies sent to the star in Hollywood. Giant display behind carried invitation copy, stunt being built further with lifesize cutout of Mickey Rooney inviting the folks to "Step this way".

Redmond Promotes Paper For Full Page Section

Reported by Jimmy Redmond, as a first timer, was the crashing of the local paper for a full four-page section to publicize attractions at the Bonham, in Fairbury, Neb. Entire cost to the theatre was thirty-five dollars for the 5,000 circulation and an additional 1,500 copies for house-to-house distribution.

Imprinted tent cards were recently distributed by Redmond ahead of "Comrade X" and planted on all store counters week ahead of opening. For "Back Street," Jim distributed four-fold heralds front of which carried cut of Boyer and Sullavan with copy, "What I know about women" and signed by Boyer. Inside spread was blank and back page was devoted to title, cast and playdates.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Author Tied to "Bishop" Opening

Since Bess Streeter Aldrich, author of "Cheers for Miss Bishop" attended college in Cedar Falls, Ia., Merle Blair at the Regent Theatre there hinged his campaign thereto, and planned a gala opening in premiere fashion. Invitations were extended to the authoress by the Mayor and Chamber of Commerce. However, since previous engagements precluded Mrs. Aldrich's presence in Cedar Falls at that time, she addressed a letter to the people of the city expressing her regrets. This Blair used for the basis of a transcription which was reproduced over sound system and used as a prologue preceding opening of picture itself.

Invitations to attend the premiere were extended to relatives of Mrs. Aldrich, who attended; this was good for newspaper stories and photos. Local flower shops and greenhouses cooperated, sending large baskets of blooms for the opening, and front was brilliantly illuminated with floods borrowed from Athletic Field.

For "Land of Liberty," Blair contacted school authorities and arranged for them to mimeograph letters pertaining to the picture, which were signed by superintendents and principals and distributed to students. Special student matinee was held at reduced rates, children going in a body to see the film.

Walsh Ties Telegraph Company To "Men of Boys Town" Date

Highlighting his "Men of Boys Town" campaign at the Comerford Theatre, in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Bill Walsh and his assistant, Paul Tigh, effected a tieup with Western Union whereby special tabloid heralds were distributed. A full-page promotion of statements and pictures by Father Flanagan, Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney were featured along with scene mats in Sunday paper and similar by-line statements in the dailies. In addition, a 20-minute transcription of the nationwide broadcast of the banquet for Father Flanagan was held and outdoor campaign included posting of 24's and 2-sheets, plus bus cards and bumperettes.

TERRELL "PENNY" TIEIN

Picture of a business man trying to smuggle a friend home for dinner. He'd have less wear and tear on his nervous system if he'd take the "little woman" to see "PENNY TO THE RESCUE" at Loew's Palace tomorrow. She offers the solution for hubby's extra dinner guests.

(2)

Hungry husbands, hundreds of them— are pouring into Loew's Palace this week to see a Food Extravaganza!

№14

Husbands Are you gloomy, restless, without appetite? .. Here's a remedy! Drop into Loew's Palace this week!

№15

Reproduced above, the three one-column ads plugging the M-G-M Pete Smith "Penny to the Rescue" short, are representative of the campaign put on in advance and during the run at Loew's Palace, Washington, D. C., by Dan Terrell, ad head, in co-operation with the local gas company, which made up and paid for a total of 38 one-column ads. These appeared in every local paper, on woman's and sport pages, and "run-of-paper", with different copy in each, and, as noted, credits were confined to the theatre. About $500 in space was involved.

Cantor Promotes Merchants For Easter Patron Outfit

Recent activities engaged in by Irving Cantor at Schine's Palace, in Syracuse, included tieup with music store to pay for local radio artist, who appeared on theatre stage playing a Hammond Solovox, store advertising the show through newspapers and windows. Another stunt which Cantor reports as going over nicely is the orchestra comprised of kids in the neighborhood and entirely organized by the theatreman, for occasional shows on stage.

Most recent endeavor was a popularity contest in connection with Easter, with promoted merchants coming through with complete outfits, stores and theatre plugging the event well in advance. On Boy Scout Week, Cantor turned the theatre over to them for a matinee with canned goods and old clothes good for admissions, cooperating dailies took pictures of the event and publicized it generously.

Fitz Ties "Monte Cristo" To Local Fencing Club

Contacting officials of a local fencing club, previous to their exhibition at the YMCA, Ed Fitzpatrick at Loew's Poli, in Waterbury, Conn. secured permission to plant blowups of duelling scenes from "The Son of Monte Cristo." Banners carrying title and playdates were strung above the entrance and exit doors and appropriate stills typed with credit cards were displayed on all bulletin boards throughout the building. During the exhibition, theatre received several plugs over the public address system.

On "Western Union," Ed received cooperation of the telegraph company, which permitted its boys to parade to the theatre en masse opening day, carrying jumbo wires on the attraction. In addition their staff wore special "Western Union" buttons carrying theatre name. Several thousand colored inserts on the picture were included with all social messages leaving branches 10 days ahead.

With spring and Easter in the air, Fitz for his date on "Little Men" secured the cooperation of a leading hat shop and arranged a contest with high school girls, whereby an Easter bonnet was presented to winner of best chapeau designed for Elsie. Heralds were printed and distributed to students and a huge display featuring all the Elsie designs was arranged for window display in cooperating merchant's store.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Notaro's "Jitterbug Session"

Since it has been Pat Notaro's experiences with bands at the Columbia, Sharon, Pa., that the "jitterbugs" come to the theatre in the evening and cause a lot of commotion, the theatreman recently planned a five o'clock show in connection with Johnnie "Scat" Davis' personal and dubbed it a "jitterbug" session. Thus did he get all the kids in at an hour that would otherwise have been slack and gave them the run of the house. Running story in his local dailies, Notaro addressed his message to the "hep cats" and informed them it was field day at the Columbia.

Beavis Takes First In Hanson Contest

Final results for February in the annual competitions sponsored by Hanson Theatres of Canada, found Gord Beavis of the Royal, in North Bay, Ontario, voted honors for the best campaign of the month on "Let George Do It." Reported by H. D. Main, circuit ad head, and detailed in "Topics," circuit house organ, Beavis featured his campaign with a contest sponsored by local merchant with entrants invited to write letters giving one or more reasons why one should not sit back and "Let George Do It" in putting over the Canadian War Certificate campaign. Prizes were specially processed portraits of Winston Churchill, these portraits displayed in the town's leading windows. Accompanying each was a card listing the contest rules.

Newspaper reviews from the Toronto papers on the picture were displayed in the lobby and opening days ad carried an endorsement by well known local alderman. Among other things that gathered attention was a wallpaper herald, copy reading "we are tearing the paper off the walls to make room for the crowds who want to see," etc.

Finishing close behind Beavis for second honors was Emmett Stark at the Palace, in Timmins, who put on a street parade of bannered bicycles and taxi cabs for "Strike Up the Band." Day after opening, Stark arranged a patron interview recording in the lobby after the matinee. Patrons were asked to give their reaction to the feature, the recording was then broadcast the same evening over local station.

Plants Drawing Contest in Paper

In St. Thomas for "Let George Do It" at the Granada, Wannie Tyers caused a bit of buzzing with a newspaper tiein on a drawing contest, guest tickets given to those sending in best caricatures of George Formsby, star of the picture. To draw attention of Saturday shopping crowds, Tyers planted a record player and loud speaker in the lobby using Formsby records from the picture. At intervals, the Round Tabler interrupted the record playing to make a personal pitch over the p.a. system.

Imprinted stickers were distributed by members of the staff on taxis and private cars and permission was also obtained to use them on restaurant mirrors, store windows, etc.

School Cooperation Sought

Honorable mention was also voted to Don Doberer at the Granada, in Dunnville and Leo Coyle at the Granada, in St. Catharines. The former for "North West Mounted Police" tied in with schools with a special matinee and award of passes for the best essays on the North West Rebellion. In addition, special numbered and tinted cards were distributed to boys and girls in schools, those finding one of opposite sex with same color and numbered card were admitted as guests.

While for "World in Flames," Coyle also solicited school cooperation by attending a general meeting of the school board attended by all teachers and delivered a talk on the picture. This brought recommendations from teachers to students to attend the show. Large action "see" board was planted out front ahead and during run with scene stills.

FEULNER'S ANIMATED LOBBY

Feulner's Display Sells 'Night Train'

Translating the title of the picture into action considerably in advance to arouse curiosity on the date of "Night Train," Manager J. H. Feulner, made a bid for public attention with a unique railroad display for the run at the Des Plaines Theatre, in Des Plaines, Ill. Since the folks in that sector are railroad minded, Feulner struck upon the device of a model locomotive, right of way, etc., with a crossing sign carrying "watch for" copy.

This was followed shortly by a model railroad bridge and borrowed model locomotive shown crossing the bridge, the latter supported by a one-sheet (see cut). For animation, the locomotive was set up a fraction of an inch above the track with a concealed block of wood, and engine was hooked up so that the wheels freely revolved. The motion and noise attracted the attention.

In addition, the Round Tabler used a special trailer on the "sleeper" angle, stressing the same in lobby displays and window cards. Added space was taken in newspaper ads and stories to put over the date.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Lobby Memo Pads Plugs "Dictator" for VanDyck

On attractive lobby easel, Eric VanDyck at Loew's 83rd, New York, planted pads of inter-office memo type with messages from him to Mr. and Mrs. Moviegoer calling attention to the opening of "The Great Dictator." This was followed by picture copy and signed by the theatreman.

For "Go West," Groucho Marx impersonator at peak hours entertained folks out front. As cars rolled up to the door, the lad would unroll carpet and help patrons alight. During intermissions the impersonator ran up and down aisles cavorting in the usual screwy Marx manner.

RYAN "INSTITUTIONALS"

Leading off in the weekly "Wisconsin and Chicago Manager," exploitation zone manual edited by Charles H. Ryan, district supervisor and assistant to James E. Coston, zone manager, is meaty institutional copy by Ryan, touching upon various branches of appeal. Copy in recent issues suggested for use by the Warner theatremen for trailer, program or newspaper advertising, under appropriate heads, is as follows:

"SPRING FEVER RELIEF"

Spring's here. Let's inspect the fishing tackle, and get out the old bus, polish it up and spend a day in the open.

Then when we return home tired and hungry, we'll wash up, eat a good meal, and go to see a program at the Venetian Theatre.

Three hours' entertainment at the Venetian provides a physical relief combined with a mental refreshment worth many times the admission fee.

For spring fever relief go to the Venetian Theatre.

"KEEPING THE FAMILY TOGETHER"

It takes more than three meals a day to hold the family together. That's only cupboard love. No! The real cementing influence as many parents have found is for the family to enjoy itself together as it does at the BADGER Theatre. Son will chip in on the party as well as daughter when it comes to viewing the current screen hits with the old folks.

They all go because the fascination of the pictures showing at the BADGER gets them.

The BADGER is an economical pastime where you get more and better for your money in real entertainment value. IT'S RACINE'S GREATEST AMUSEMENT BARGAIN.

"OUT OF THE KITCHEN"

Supper is over. No romance in a dishpan. No! So why let mother do the dishes alone? Dad and Sonny will help—six hands now and good seats much sooner at the REX. Much of our evening's entertainment depends upon the careful selection of the theatre. What theatre? You need not give it a thought. The REX is the theatre that you can always depend upon to give you an entertaining program. Another day in the REX is different, so may we suggest that you get out of the kitchen and into the world?

"YOU ARE THE JUDGE"

The theatre wants to show good pictures. It is our aim to serve the people.

The idea that "motion picture people" try to break down morals with immoral pictures is as much nonsense as to say we try to make people look at pictures which no one wishes to see. We are eager to show the pictures that will bring everyone to the theatre.

So the real test of the "goodness" of a picture is the number of people who come to see it.

You are the judge of the pictures we bring to the BEVERLY. If you want to encourage good pictures, come to see every one that we show.

Navy Aids Collins On "Girl, Guy, Gob"

Ken Collins of the Indiana Theatre, Indianapolis, won news and pictorial breaks in the Indianapolis News and the Star for "A Girl, a Guy and a Gob" through cooperation with the local navy recruiting officer. An office was set up in the lobby of the Indiana and early on the morning of the first day's run a high school senior showed up for enlistment. A photograph of the recruit, Chief Petty Officer A. M. Morris and Margaret Kurtz, Indiana Theatre secretary, was used by the Star and was spotted alongside a review of the Harold Lloyd comedy for a three-column break. Collins also obtained permission from the Navy authorities to snipe twelve recruiting boards.

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS FROM A-FIELD

For his double horror show at the Uptown in Oklahoma City, Robert Busch distributed tinted heralds, dubbing the show "America's first blackout preview." Picture copy with cut was also featured. For the opening of the theatre, Busch staged a regular Hollywood affair with klieg lights, etc. Broadcast of special events was held in lobby, blowup telegrams from stars were used in lobby and pictures of crowds attending opening night were taken and shown following week.

Measuring some 10 feet wide by eight high with a background of 24-sheet paper, Jerry Westergren constructed his lobby setpiece for advance on "Arizona" at the Genesee Theatre, in Buffalo. Featured was cutout of Jean Arthur on horse, concealed motor causing equine to rear. At base of display sand was planted with two actual cow skulls promoted from local packing house; to further give realism to the setpiece, house artist designed cacti plants.

With his local paper reportedly refusing to handle theatre promotions, Jim McDonough at the Grand, in Galt, Ontario, personally sold his co-op ads for "You're the One." Each store ad was tied into picture with such copy as "you're the one who'll look smart in," etc., etc. Tieup was also effected with two local dance halls with "spot dances" planted in exchange for tickets, juke boxes around town were also covered with picture cards.

In connection with "Here Comes the Navy" at the Fox Granada, in Inglewood, Cal., Dave Martin and his assistant, Bill Erickson, distributed small cards with title and cast attached to which were miniature airplanes. With the Douglas, North American and Northrup Aviation companies in his immediate vicinity, Martin says the stunt created plenty of comment and brought them in.

Promoting local confectioner for candy kisses, Louis Marcks at the Strand, in Westfield, Mass., distributed them in imprinted bags with copy "Blank store offers you a kiss from the 'Strawberry Blonde,' who will be at the," etc., etc.

Through tieup with Western Union, in connection with that picture's showing at the Paramount, in North Adams, Mass., Francis Faille promoted blanks and envelopes which were imprinted with picture copy and delivered by boys to all business houses about town.

For his date on "Tobacco Road" at the RKO Franklin, in the Bronx, N. Y., Sam Rydell promoted a miniature stage set from the theatre where the show is now playing and used it for his lobby week ahead. In addition, cutouts of the stars were planted overall.

MGM's caricature trade paper insert on "Come Live With Me" was turned into a lobby set piece by Joe Longo, State, Cleveland, as part of his campaign for that film.

Goodwill idea promoted by Francis B. Schlax at the Kenosha, Kenosha, Wis., consisted of tieup with two parking lots adjacent to house whereby the theatreman planted cards, illustrated above, on windshields of cars.

For the first anniversary of "Gone With the Wind" at the Paramount, in Jackson, Tenn., Round Tabler J. R. MacEachron promoted birthday cake from local baker. In connection with this a guessing contest was held with guest tickets going to those coming closest to guessing correct amount of ingredients. Stories were planted in paper daily and banner was stretched across street in front of theatre. Radio, heralds, cards on street posts and school announcements were some of the stunts employed by Mac to herald the opening.

At no cost to his theatre, Bill Harwell, at the Ohio, Mansfield, arranged for high school's Capella Choir to sing "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia" as a prologue for his opening date on "Virginia." As the chorus was finishing, the traveler was closed and shot with picture, sound was cut until screen could be lowered. Harwell says this proved very effective, as the singing was still audible while the picture was on the traveler.

Promoted by Pat Notaro at the Columbia, in Sharon, Pa., is tieup with local shoe company whereby six bicycles will be given away within two months during kid matinees. Cooperating merchant paid for co-op ad plugging the giveaway.

Tying up a local orchestra, composed of high school kids who organized their band at the Schine Webster, in Rochester, Joe Goldstein arranged for them to appear on stage in connection with a musical quiz night. Promoted watch and cash prizes were awarded to those submitting questions used on the program and those answering correctly. Cooperating merchants paid for distribution and printing of heralds and each week Goldstein honors another school in the location, with students participating.

Cutout figures from eight by ten stills, mounted so that they stood up formed part of Bob Busch's "Chad Hanna" display for that date at the Jeffery Theatre, in Chicago. Planted on table in conspicuous part of his lobby, patrons on entering were supplied with hoops and invited to ring the figures. Guest tickets went to those clicking.

For his date on "No, No, Nanette," at the Palace, in Hamilton, Ont. Manager Bert Brown contacted local radio station and secured two special 15-minute programs gratis over which hit tunes from the picture were plugged. Beauty shop pay for co-op ads and cuts showing hair styles featured in the picture, production stills proved valuable for tieups in men's shops and millinery stores and window and counter displays were landed in music stores.

Recently started by Bill Decker at the Capitol, in Steubenville, Ohio, is a kiddie amateur broadcast each Saturday morning which is sponsored by local furniture store at no cost to the theatre. In addition, each Monday night, Decker runs a "search for talent" broadcast, with winners awarded a paid radio contract by sponsors. Both of these tieups are widely advertised by the merchants. Decker credits his assistant, Bill McClain, with aiding on the shows.

Latest Round Tabler to invite draftees to special midnight preview of "Buck Privates" is Bob Fulton at the Paramount, in Waterloo, Ia. Ceremony was held before the showing with the recruits introduced to the audience from the stage. Local dailies covered the event with stories and art.

Since Lindsay, Cal., is situated in a warm orange belt, Harry Stark at the Lindsay Theatre for "High Sierra" arranged to have snow brought from the nearby Sierras to his theatre. Theatreman reports the snow lasted two days and while it was there, much was made of the stunt in local dailies.

Arranged by Rex A. Carr, general manager of the Central City Amusement Co. were various promotions in connection with the "Captain Marvel" serial at the Alamo Theatre, in Indianapolis. Special front was constructed for the opening with lifesize blowup of "Captain Marvel" indicating his superhuman feats. Carr also arranged for distribution of membership cards, holders attending each week, entitled to free admission for final chapter. Heralds were inserted in Liberty magazines and miniature "Marvel" cuts carrying date line were distributed week ahead.

Al McCoy of the Strand Theatre, Louisville, won a number of excellent plugs for "A Girl, a Guy and a Gob" through the purchase of a hundred special navy hats. These, which carried inscriptions, were worn by newsboys and by soda clerks in the downtown drug stores. Art of stars was spotted in the drugstores where the hats were worn. A "Gobs of Joy" sales line was used with the displays.

AMERICANISM PROGRAMS ADVANCED IN EXPLOITATIONS BY THEATREMEN

Promotions on Pictures Tied to National Defense Publicity and Patriotic Organizations; . Short Subjects Also Plugged

by A-MIKE VOGEL

MANIFESTATIONS of community leadership on behalf of Americanism and defense programs featured by showings of military, historical and patriotic pictures, full-length and short subjects, are indicated in theatre promotions reported by Round Tablers in widely separated sections of the nation, in small town and big city.

In cooperation with youth associations, patriotic societies, branches of the federal military services, and other organizations similarly pointed, campaigns to impress upon the public the important part played by the motion picture in support find enthusiastic citywide particpation in the projects stimulated by theatre managers.

The highly successful National Defense Week program, in Glendale, Cal., arranged by Ed Harris, manager, at the Fox West Coast Glendale, in conjunction with the Glendale Star, daily newspaper, is presented as an outstanding example. Here, the theatreman had the backing of civic heads, patriotic veterans' organizations and other patriotic societies, the program opened with presentation to the city of an official proclamation by the Mayor from the stage of the theatre.

Football Coach Honored

All succeeding observances were also held at the theatre, the second night's program featuring a "Civic Night" ceremony where the City Manager, police and fire chiefs addressed the audience. The third night celebration centered around a tribute to Knute Rockne, in conjunction with showings of "Knute Rockne," the week's screen attraction. Guest of honor was Marty Brill, local college football coach and former Notre Dame pigskin great. The event was tabbed in the publicity as a tribute to sportsmanship, as necessary for National unity.

American Legion Night and U. S. Army Air Corps Night, followed next, with patriotic exercises and talks by executive service officers stressed by the theatreman. The "week" was brought to a close at the Saturday matinee with a "Junior Americanism" program, headed by talented youngsters in a military pageant. March of Time's "Soldiers With Wings," filmed at the nearby Lockheed plant, was an added feature.

Tompkins Hosts Scouts

"Boy Scout Week," recently observed, was made more important in Whiting, Ind., by Chick Tompkins, at that time manager of the Hoosier theatre, who played host to the Scouts at two theatre ceremonies during the locally-designated "Civic Day." Held on Saturday, the day was marked by a parade of the boys in uniform from the City Hall to the Hoosier where service drills were put on before hundreds of observers. In the evening, the Scouts conducted a flag-raising on the theatre stage, followed by the national anthem short on the screen with the audience joining the singing. Both events were adequately presentd in the newspapers.

In Rochester at Schine's Dixie, Manager Samuel L. Shafer availed himself of the recent designation by the New York State Legislature of a two-week period for the compulsory study of the Bill of Rights in all state schools. This allowed the Schiner an opportunity to obtain the full cooperation of the school system in direct theatre advertising despite a strict ruling against such promotion.

The advertising had to do with a "Bill of Rights Week" program made up principally of Warner historical shorts, a different subject shown with each change of program during the period. The shorts were "Bill of Rights," "Lincoln in the White House," and "The Declaration of Independence."

Shafer Features Student Essays

To emphasize the significance of these films, Shafer was able to interest one of the merchants in offering prizes on a student essay contest having to do with the shorts at the theatre, or other historical event, fact, or document that entrants wished to cover. Contest was open to grade and high schools, public and parochial, with essays limited to 250 words. In addition, a special cash award was set aside for the best entry from any local boy or girl Scout troop, duly noted at all Scout assemblies in the neighborhood.

Publicity was had by Shafer through special programs paid for by the merchant in exchange for store tieup credits. The programs were distributed at schools, in the theatre neighborhood and in the surrounding area. They were also given to all English and history school teachers. Further, the superintendent of schools forwarded bulletins to all units announcing and recommending the shorts and the contest. As a result, excellent breaks were obtained, according to the Round Tabler, who reports in one instance entries from all pupils in one class.

Since March of Time's "Americans All" opens with a sequence showing the taking of the oath of citizenship by 350 residents of Bridgeport, Conn., in the city's Naturalization Court, and otherwise filmed in and about the city, Manager Morris Rosenthal was able to obtain the full cooperation of the Chamber of Commerce and the local "I Am An American" committee for the premier on the subject at the Majestic. Publicity well in advance was had by a special screening at MOT's New York office attended by the organization heads and Bridgeport picture critics. As a result, it was decided to stage an "All-American" stage presentation in conjunction with the premiere, the Mayor and other civic heads participating.

Program, preceding the picture, opened with a welcome by the general chairman of the "I Am An American" committee, who presided. Next, came selections by popular Hungarian orchestra, then remarks by Mayor Jasper McLevy. Folk dances by a Polish group followed, preceding a talk by Jack Glenn, production director, March of Time. Then came selections by a Russian choir, talk by Charles Weidman, representing the Boy Scouts of America, the program closing with the singing of anthem.

Rosenthal Ties In with Radio

Lobby and front were decorated with 40 by 60's, marquee banner, flags and pennants inside and out and a 40-foot American flag was used for the stage show back drop. Street parade was made up of uniformed band which marched to the theatre and gave a concert out front while the celebrities were arriving. Bulletins about the show were placed on boards at all factories and the night before, Rosy promoted a program plugging the event on WICC.

Instance of the Malco circuit's cooperation with the national defense program is noted in the tieup made by Manager Harold H. Thomas, in Fulton, Ky., to show a film detailing activities of the U. S. Coast Guard at the Strand, to all school students. Classes attended in a body and a member of the Guard's educational division was on hand to answer questions.

Holds Aerial Bombardment

On "Ramparts We Watch," at the Fresinia Lincoln Theatre, Robinson, Ill., Manager Pete Nepote highlighted his campaign by simulating an aerial bombardment in the court house square. Replicas of anti-aircraft guns were set up and aimed at cardboard cutouts of bombers placed high on the face of the court house, the display properly credited. Sound effects heightened the effect and at night spotlights were employed.

Letters were forwarded to the clergy, club officials and other prominents, and the newspaper campaign was in keeping. For the opening, Nepote staged an impressive presentation with Boy Scout troops and high school band on the stage.

SELETTE AIMS AT "CARRIAGE" TRADE

Eddie Selette, who goes in heavily for goodwill at Warners' Albany, in Albany, N. Y., among recent innovations has installed a baby carriage garage adjacent to his house. Through heralds, house program and readers in local dailies, the enterprising theatreman informed his patrons that they could "roll their own" right to the door, check the perambulators and come in with the baby and enjoy the show in comfort.

A WOMAN'S FACE
(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Drama

Produced by Victor Saville. Directed by George Cukor. Based on the play, "Il Etait Une Fois", by Francis de Croisset.

SYNOPSIS

Anna Holm (Joan Crawford) is being tried on the charge of murdering Torsten Barring (Conrad Veidt). As various witnesses testify, flashbacks show the action described to tell the story . . .

Anna has a criminal record, including blackmail. When a child her face had been burned and bady disfigured. As she grew up, shunned because of her repulsive appearance, Anna became an unscrupulous criminal. Operating a restaurant as a front for blackmailing operations, she met Barring, the first person who did not shrink from her. Like herself he was an unscrupulous person.

While attempting to blackmail Vera Segert (Osa Massen), wife of a noted plastic surgeon, Dr. Segert (Melvyn Douglas), Anna meets the doctor. He restores her to her natural beauty. Barring obtains for her the position of governess of the young son of Consul Barring (Albert Basserman), Torsten's uncle. She and Torsten have plotted to kill the child, Lars Erik (Richard Nichols), that Torsten may inherit the family fortune.

Anna is happy in her new surroundings and is attracted to the child. When Torsten arrives for his uncle's birthday celebration and orders Anna to kill the child that day, she refuses. Later in the day the guests go for sleigh rides. Torsten gets the boy into his leigh. Anna confides in Dr. Segert and they pursue Torsten's sleigh. Torsten attempts to attack Dr. Segert. Anna shoots him and rescues the terrified child . . .

The court is still convinced of her guilt. Then Emma (Marjorie Main), a servant, produces a note, written by Anna to Consul Barring before the fatal sleigh ride, warning him of Torsten's intentions. Anna is free to begin a new life.

ROOKIES ON PARADE
(Republic)

Song Writers in the Army

Associate producer, Albert J. Cohen. Directed by Joseph Santley.

SYNOPSIS

Duke Wilson (Bob Crosby) and Cliff Dugan (Eddie Foy, Jr.), song writers, gamble away all the money they make. Duke's marriage to Lois Rogers (Ruth Terry) is constantly postponed because of his gambling. Finally on the advice of her chorus girl roommate, Kitty Mulloy (Marie Wilson), Lois breaks the engagement. Then Augustus Moody (Sidney Blackmer), musical comedy producer, hires the boys to write songs for a show in which Lois and Augustus' girl friend, Marilyn (Gertrude Niesen) are to be principals.

Meanwhile, Duke and Cliff are drafted into the army, as is Bob Madison (William Wright), the young millionaire who is backing the show. Lois and Kitty volunteer as hostesses in the army camp. Things go bad for Duke under the iron rule of his sergeant, Mike Brady (William Demarest), and the thought that Lois prefers Bob to him.

Duke, however, conceives the idea of putting on an army show. Secretly he plans to cash in on the resulting publicity. The show is a great success but Duke, inspired by the words of the army officials, abandons his plan to sell the show to Moody. Lois is impressed by his change of heart and they are reunited. Kitty and Cliff also find themselves mutually interested in one another.

MILLION DOLLAR BABY
(Warner Brothers)

Former title—
Miss Wheelwright Discovers America

Drama

Directed by Curtis Bernhardt

SYNOPSIS

Miss Cornelia Wheelwright (May Robson) is fishing in a Swiss mountain stream when James Amory (Jeffrey Lynn) arrives from America to tell her that Saintsbury of the law firm of Saintsbury, Marlin, Barlow and Fish has passed on. The firm has been handling her finances for the past 31 years while she has resided in Switzerland. Saintsbury has left an envelope for her. Opening it she learns that her father once cheated Fortune McAllister, his partner, out of a million dollars. She decides to find McAllister's remaining relatives and right the wrong committed long ago by her father.

Accompanied by Amory, Miss Wheelwright arrives in America. Amory finds that the one McAllister left is a granddaughter, Pamela (Priscilla Lane), who works in a department store. Miss Wheelwright goes to Pamela's boarding house and under the name Miss White meets Mrs. Galloway (Helen Westley), the landlady; Peter Rowan (Ronald Reagan), who spends his time playing the piano; Josie La Rue (Lee Patrick), bubble dancer, and Dr. Patterson (John Qualen), and the other paying guests of the establishment.

Miss Wheelwright has Amory give Pamela a million dollars without disclosing the source, and happy in the thought that she is doing the right thing Miss Wheelwright leaves the boarding house and Pamela and Peter, who are in love.

But Pamela is now an object of envy among the other boarders. Finding out who the donor is, Pamela tells Miss Wheelwright she doesn't want the money. The old lady persuades Pamela to improve her education and gives a coming-out party in Pamela's honor. Pamela, in the end, however, returns to the boarding house after telling Amory to give the rest of her money away. She would rather live on Peter's salary.

GREAT COMMANDMENT (20th Century-Fox)

Religious Drama

Produced by John T. Coyle. Associate producer, Reverend James K. Friedrich. Directed by Irving Pichel.

Joel (John Beal) and Zadok (Warren McCullum) are sons of Lamech, the Scribe (Maurice Moscovich), in a village of Judea at the time of Christ. Joel is leader of the Zealots in the village, a secret organization to overthrow Roman rule. Zadok also is a Zealot. Tamar (Marjorie Cooley), daughter of Jemuel (Lloyd Corrigan), a merchant, finds favor in Joel's eyes.

Nathan (Olaf Hytten), the innkeeper, returning from a trip, reports that a King has appeared in the north who is called Jesus of Nazareth and whom multitudes are proclaiming their leader. Lamech is skeptical but to Joel it means a King for his people and a possible army to fight the Romans. The Roman soldiers, commanded by a Centurion, Longinus (Albert Dekker), arrive. With them is a tax collector (Ian Wolfe).

That evening Lamech tells his sons that for certain reasons Zadok is to marry Tamar. Joel accepts with protest the decision in favor of Zadok. Later that night Zadok and other Zealots free some villagers imprisoned for inability to pay the tax. Longinus learns that this was the Zealots' work. He plans to leave the village and return in force to wipe them out.

Joel, meanwhile, goes in search of the new leader, Jesus. When he finds Jesus and is convinced of His power and authority, after hearing Him and seeing His great works, Joel tells Jesus of the need for armed revolt against Rome. He offers Jesus his sword as a symbol of the Zealots' support but Jesus declines the offer. Encouraged by Judas to believe that Jesus may yet be persuaded, Joel follows Him for a time longer, until he is convinced that Jesus never will take up the sword. Learning that Jesus will pass through his village, Joel returns home with a plan for seizing Him and proclaiming Him King.

Joel arrives on the night of the wedding feast of Zadok and Tamar. That same night Longinus returns with a body of soldiers. Zadok, finding Longinus alone, attacks him and is killed; but leaves Longinus desperately wounded. Jesus and His disciples arrive and Lamech challenges Jesus with a question from the law. He is answered with the parable of the Good Samaritan. Joel thereupon revives Longinus, who then has Joel imprisoned to protect him from his own people.

Upon recovering from his wounds, Longinus frees Joel and learns that he, Longinus, owes his own life to the teaching of Jesus whom he has, that same day, helped to crucify and into whose side he had a spear as Christ hung on the cross. Joel and Tamar are reunited and start out to spread the teachings of Christ. The Centurion, overcome with remorse, lays aside his sword and joins them.

CAUGHT IN THE DRAFT (Paramount)

Comedy

Produced by Buddy DeSylva. Directed by David Butler.

SYNOPSIS

Don Gilbert (Bob Hope) is an actor engaged in portraying a sergeant of World War I days, when Steve (Lynne Overman), Don's agent, walks on the stage with Colonel Fairbanks (Clarence Kolb) and his daughter, Tony (Dorothy Lamour). Don and his stooge, Bert (Eddie Bracken), thinking the Colonel another extra, get a makeup man to daub mud on the Colonel's immaculate uniform. Don turns his charm on Tony without much success.

Don, who is 32, is worried about a conscription bill before the Senate with 40 as the age limit. He decides to marry Tony to avoid being drafted. Following a series of hectic meetings they become engaged. When the bill is passed by the Senate, the age limit has been changed to 31. Realizing he is safe from the draft, Don tries to back out of the engagement. Tony is furious. Then the House makes a few alterations in the draft bill, including raising the age limit to 35. Don plans a fake enlistment to impress Tony, but the ruse boomerangs and Don finds himself in the army, along with Steve and Bert.

Don tries hard to impress Colonel Fairbanks, in whose outfit he is, but manages to make a mess of everything he atttempts. Then Don is transferred to the parachute troops. Don is petrified with fear when it comes time to make his first jump. But Don's jump never comes off, for Don has lost his parachute.

The troops then engage in war games. Don, Bert, and Steve are assigned a hill several miles away from the battle. Tony arrives at the hill and tells Don that the Blue Army, because of the switching of road signs, is marching straight into the artillery target range, where real shells are being dropped. The boys start after the troops. Steve is hit, but Don and Bert make it and the troops are saved.

EMERGENCY LANDING (Producers Rel. Corp.)

Air Drama

Produced by Jed Buell. Directed by William Beaudine.

SYNOPSIS

Jerry Barton (Forrest Tucker), test pilot, and Doc Williams (Emmett Vogan), weather bureau observer, have developed a robot-controlled plane. When Lambert (William Halligan), head of the Lambert Airplane factory, refuses to see their working model, Jerry and Doc follow him to a golf course and demonstrate the plane. Although his daughter, Betty (Carol Hughes), gets a dousing when the model ship comes to rest in a puddle of water, Lambert is enthusiastic. He authorizes the pair to test the device in one of his planes.

The plane crashes due to sabotage by foreign agents. Fired, Jerry returns to the desert weather outpost with Doc. Meanwhile, Betty, en route to Hollywood with her aunt Maude (Evelyn Brent), runs out of gasoline on the desert. Jerry finds them. The girl and her aunt pay for their keep by doing housework.

A Lambert bomber is hi-jacked by two enemy agents, who crash in the desert. One spy is killed, but the other makes his way to the weather station. The spy makes his getaway in Doc's plane, in which, unknown to Jerry and Doc, Betty and Maude are hidden. When Jerry discovers the ruse he signals Betty by radio to connect the robot control radio beams, and working from the ground, brings the plane to a landing. The spy is captured.

ONE NIGHT IN LISBON (Paramount)

Drama

Produced and directed by E. H. Griffith. Based on a play by John Van Druten.

SYNOPSIS

In a London air raid shelter, Dwight Houston (Fred MacMurray), an American flyer engaged in ferrying planes across the Atlantic for the RAF, meets Leonora Perrycoste (Madeleine Carroll). Dwight falls hard for the English girl and follows her to the home of Catherine Enfilden (Billie Burke), an American long resident in London. Dwight is an old friend of Catherine's. Arriving at the same time as Houston is Commander Peter Walmsley (John Loder), young Englishman who is interested in Leonora.

From Catherine's house, Dwight follows Leonora home and demands entry. Then Walmsley arrives and the two of them sit each other out. Later that night, Dwight gains entry into Leonora's bedroom. Leonora promises to meet him for lunch on the morrow to get rid of him. Waiting for Leonora, Dwight strikes up an acquaintance with Lord Fitzleigh (Edmund Gwenn), an official of importance. Leonora is amazed to find the two of them in friendly conversation.

That evening, Dwight and Catherine discuss Leonora in Catherine's living room. Dwight confesses himself in love with Leonora, but says he must return to America by Clipper from Lisbon shortly. Catherine suggests that Dwight take Leonora to Lisbon. Leonora arranges a pass through Lord Fitzleigh, who gives her two letters to deliver to the British Ambassador in Lisbon.

In Lisbon Major Erich Strasser makes plans to obtain the letters. His first attempt is thwarted by Sausalito Joe (Akim Tamiroff), an American cab driver, recently returned to his native Portugal. At the Grand Hotel, Leonora meets Gerry (Patricia Morison), former wife to Dwight. Leonora is furious, but meanwhile Leonora has other troubles. Kidnapped by Strasser, she is searched and help prisoner. Dwight and Sausalito Joe rescue her. Leonora and Dwight patch things up.

BLOOD AND SAND (20th Century-Fox)

Romance and Bull Fights

Produced by Darryl F. Zanuck. Directed by Rouben Mamoulian.

SYNOPSIS

Juan (Rex Downing), 12 years old, his older sister, Encarnacion (Cora Sue Collins); and the mother, Senora Augustias (Nazimova), are bereaved by the death of the father, Juan Gallardo, Seville's greatest bullfighter. Juan treasures the memory of his father and one night in a cafe when Natalio Curro (Laird Gregar), a newspaper critic, is praising the prowess of Garabato (J. Carrol Naish), little Juan disputes him.

Later Juan enthrals a small audience at the Marquis de Muira ranch with his bull fighting. Watching him are Carmen Espinosa (Ann Todd), 10 year old daughter of the overseer; her father, Pedro (Fortunio Bonanova), and Don Jose Alvarez (Pedro de Cordoba), who is the number one aficionado of Spain. Accompanied by four boys his own age, El Nacional, La Pulga, Pablo Gomez and Manolo de Palma, Juan sets of for Madrid. The years pass . . .

Juan and his cuadrilla fight throughout Spain. By now El Nacional (John Carradine) is more interested in the welfare of the poor and Manolo (Anthony Quinn) wants to become a matador in his own name. La Pulga (Michael Morris) and Pablo (Charles Stevens) remain loyal. Juan (Tyrone Power) has become Spain's greatest matador.

Juan sets his sister's financee, Antonio (Monty Banks), up in business so that Antonio and Encarnacion (Lynn Bari) may marry. He finds that Carmen (Linda Darnell) has waited for him all these years. They marry. They are happy until Juna becomes infatuated with Dona Sol (Rita Hayworth), niece of the Marquis de Muira. After a runin with Dona, Carmen packs her clothes and goes back to the home of her childhood.

Juan slips fast. Manolo becomes Spain's great hero and one night at a cafe he takes Dona Sol away from Juan. Juan takes to drink and while unsteady in the arena makes a false move and El Nacional is gored to death by a bull. Seeing Carmen in the chapel where he has gone to pray gives Juan new courage and he goes forth to give the crowd a fight they will remember. Executing the best passes of his career, Juan has regained the favor of the crowd when he turns his back on the bull to make the usual dedication. The bull charges. Carmen, still praying in the chapel, hears a cry of horror go up from the mob. She knows it is the end. By now, Manolo is in the arena and the fickle crowd is shouting its praises. Carmen tells Juan that they'll go away to some little place in the country and he whispers his love for her. He dies, a smile on his face, at last having found peace.

SERGEANT YORK (Warner Brothers)

Story of the World War Hero

Produced by Jesse Lasky. Directed by Howard Hawks.

SYNOPSIS

Alvin C. York (Gary Cooper) is tall, strong and a dead shot with a rifle. Living high in the Cumberland mountains of Tennessee in the Valley of the Three Forks of the Wolf, York in 1916 supports his mother, young brother and sister. A steady fellow, except when he's drinking; then he's a "heller." Interested in York is Pastor Pile (Walter Brennan), but love comes to York before religion.

Hunting a fox, he stumbles into the cabin clearing where Gracie Williams (Joan Leslie) lives. After thrashing a rival into giving up his suit, York informs Gracie he is going to marry her, eventually persuades her to his point of view. Getting a section of bottomland now becomes an obsession with him. When he is thwarted he feeds his fury on corn liquor. Bent on vengeance, he is riding through a mountain storm when a lightning bolt kills the mule under him. To York it is a divine manifestation. From that moment he becomes a deeply religious man.

The United States declares war and York is called in the draft. He applies for exemption as a conscientious objector but his claim is denied. York goes to camp. Respecting his unmistakable sincerity, his officers discuss his problems with him. Finally he is given a furlough to think things out. Back in his native hills he decides to stay in the army. York's division goes overseas.

On an October morning in 1918 German machine guns are holding up the American advance in York's sector. He is one of seventeen men detailed to circle behind the German lines, silence the guns. In the face of seemingly hopeless odds, York, who is the only non-commissioned officer not a casualty after the first blast of the enemy, takes command and refuses to surrender. Shooting with the markmanship he learned in his native hills, York accounts for twenty-five Germans. The rest surrender. On the way back to the American lines, York and his men pick up more prisoners. They turn over 132 Germans.

For his amazing exploit York is hailed as the outstanding soldier hero of the war, receiving from the hands of General Pershing the Distinguished Service Cross and from Marshal Foch, the Croix de Guerre. He is also awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor. In May, 1919, York returns to his native land to meet a hero's reception in New York. He is greeted by Cordell Hull, now Secretary of State, but then representing York's mountain district in Congress.

Turning his back upon contracts from motion picture companies, theatrical contracts and business concerns, York returns to the Valley of the Three Forks of the Wolf. Gracie, his wife, takes him to a fine farm—the richest bottomland in the Valley. It is his, a gift from the people of Tennessee.

NIGHT TRAIN
(20th Century-Fox)

Topical Melodrama

Maurice Ostrer Production. Produced by Edward Black. Directed by Carol Reed.

SYNOPSIS

Axel Bomasch (James Harcourt), chief of the Harska Works, Czechoslovakia munitions factory, with his fellow directors, awaits the Nazi invasion. Bomasch is apprehensive for he alone possesses the formula of a manufacturing process. He knows the Nazis are prepared to go to any length to get it.

Bomasch, it is decided, must leave for England at once, taking with him his daughter, Anna (Margaret Lockwood). At the airport, Bomasch is forced to leave without Anna. He arrives safely in England, greatly worried about his daughter, who is thrown into a concentration camp.

In the camp Anna becomes friendly with Karl (Paul von Hernreid), a young German prisoner in the adjoining men's compound. They plan their escape and succeed in making their way to England. Karl actually is a Gestapo man, who was purposely "imprisoned" in order that he might stage the escape and thus follow Anna to her father. His job is to get Bomasch back to Germany.

In England, Anna is befriended by Gus Bennett (Rex Harrison), an intelligence officer, who knows quite a lot about Karl and his work. There follows a battle of wits, with Benentt carrying war into the enemy's camp by going to Berlin. Meanwhile Bomasch is forcibly returned to his country's oppressors. Bennett delivers him from the Nazis.

ARIZONA
(Columbia)

Western Drama

Directed by Wesley Ruggles. Based upon the story by Clarence Budington Kelland.

SYNOPSIS

Peter Muncie (William Holden), young Missourian, arrives by wagon train, en route to California, in the Tucson, Arizona, of 1860. He finds Phoebe Titus (Jean Arthur), who has been earning her living selling pies since her father's death, cowering two villainous gamblers with a buffalo gun. Phoebe is possessed with the idea of amassing a fortune and owning the biggest ranch in Arizona. As a start she forms a freighting partnership with Solomon Warner (Paul Harvey) and offers Peter the job of head teamster. He, however, continues on to California.

Phoebe's business prospers despite Apache raids, fomented by her rival, Lazarus Ward (Porter Hall) and Jefferson Carteret (Warren William), a renegade gentleman. Meanwhile, the Civil War has broken out and the Union troops are withdrawn from Tucson, leaving the town without protection. Then Confederate troops enter the town. Word arrives that a Union column is crossing Arizona from California. The Confederates withdraw and the Union troops enter. Peter, now a sergeant, is instrumental in obtaining Phoebe an army freighting contract, which is nullified when Carteret has Phoebe reported as a southern sympathizer.

Peter resigns from the army and heads for Nebraska to buy 500 head of cattle for Phoebe. He returns on the day a loan, obtained from Carteret, is due. Carteret arranges for the Apaches to attack the herd and kill Peter. Peter stampedes the herd into the midst of the Apaches. Reunited, Phoebe and Peter marry. Then Peter goes in search of Carteret. They meet and Peter emerges the victor.

GONE WITH THE WIND
(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Epic Drama (Technicolor)

Produced by David O. Selznick. Directed by Victor Fleming. From the Margaret Mitchell novel.

SYNOPSIS

The story covers the years immediately prior to the Civil War, the War years and the Reconstruction period. The locale is Georgia.

The central character is Scarlett O'Hara (Vivien Leigh). She is alternately and unpredictably tempestuous, cool, cowardly, heroic, generous, avaricious, tender, venomous, shrewd, stupid, forced this way and that by need, circumstance ambition, envy, hate, selfishness, and a distorted devotion, but mostly by emotions she never fully understands

Only slightly secondary in story importance is Rhett Butler (Clark Gable). He is a man of unbridled emotions. Of forceful personality, Rhett is a brigand who prefers less hazardous pursuits than soldiering, although he is not a man without courage. He employs force and a liberal ballast of liquor as a means of contriving to have his husbandly way with his wife (Scarlett), who has forbidden him her bedroom.

Melanie Hamilton (Olivia de Havilland) is a gentle lady of the Old South, faithful to tradition and loyal to family, a character in sharp contrast to that of Scarlett. In similar contrast to the robust crudity of Rhett Butler is Ashley Wilkes (Leslie Howard).

Other important characters are Gerald O'Hara (Thomas Mitchell), father of Scarlett; Mammy (Hattie McDaniels), Scarlett's colored mammy; Belle Watling (Ona Munson), madame of a brothel; Jonas Wilkerson (Victor Jory), a slave driver who turns carpetbagger; Aunt Hamilton (Laura Hope Crews), a fussy matron, and Doctor Meade (Harry Davenport), a doctor of the old school.

The story depicts the War's effect on these people and in particular Scarlett, the thrice-married Scarlett who even as a young girl on the family plantation, Tara, schemes to entice Ashley away from her cousin Melanie, the Scarlett who rises to superb heights of courage during the burning of Atlanta as she comforts Melanie in childbirth, the ruthless Scarlett who kills a Union soldier when he attempts to invade Tara, the Scarlett who marries Rhett and the Scarlett who, at the picture's end, asks Rhett what will become of her as he prepares to leave her.

SPECIAL REMARKS

"Gone With the Wind" runs 220 minutes and is literally a page presentation of the Margaret Mitchell novel. Rather than present an incomplete synopsis, the principal characterizations and other salient information from the review in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, December 16, 1939, are detailed here.

The uncut original version is now being released to subsequent runs. Exploitation on picture which has appeared in Round Table Section of MOTION PICTURE HERALD can be found by referring to Alphabetical Index under service data.

THE GIRL IN THE NEWS
(20th Century-Fox)

Melodrama

Maurice Ostrer Production. Produced in England by Edward Black. Directed by Carol Reed.

SYNOPSIS

Anne Graham (Margaret Lockwood) is nurse to Miss Blaker (Irene Handl), a soured old woman. During Anne's absence the old woman takes an overdose of sleeping tablets and dies. Anne is accused of murder. Stephen Faringon (Barry K. Barnes), a young lawyer, manages to get Anne acquitted. The stigma remains, however, and she can't get work. Anne changes her name to Lovell and is taken on as a nurse to invalid Edward Bentley (Wyndham Goldie). Bentley's wife, Judith (Margaretta Scott), is secretly in love with her butler, Tracy (Emlyn Williams), who is aware of Anne's identity.

Tracy, with the aid of Mrs. Bentley, murders Bentley with an overdose of sleeping tablets, knowin that Anne will inevitably be recognized and accused of the crime. Stephen destroys evidence that Tracy planted in the lining of Anne's coat but she is again brought to trial for murder. Stephen, who suspects Tracy, unmasks the butler in court and wins Anne an acquittal.

BRINGING UP BABY (Reissue) (RKO Radio)

Comedy-Romance

A Howard Hawks Production. Associate producer, Cliff Reid. Directed by Howard Hawks.

SYNOPSIS

David (Carry Grant), a young anthropologist, is anxious to get an endowment of $1,000,000 for his museum, and to marry his assistant. Then David meets Susan (Katharine Hepburn), a rich girl, who, in her enthusiasm to help him, mires him further in difficulties with the attorney representing the possible donor. Susan, with the aid of a tame leopard, forces David into accompanying her to her aunt's (May Robson) farm in Connecticut.

At the farm, Asta, the dog, steals the fossilized bone David needs to complete the skeleton of a dinosaur. Hunting for the bone, Susan and David run into all sorts of complications highlighted by their mistaking a wild leopard, which has escaped from a zoo wagon, for Susan's tame leopard. Local police are convinced that Susan, David, her aunt, and the other characters, are all insane, as the hunt is climaxed by a trip to the local jail.

SHE KNEW ALL THE ANSWERS (Columbia)

Comedy-Romance

Produced by Charles R. Rogers. Directed by Richard Wallace.

SYNOPSIS

Gloria Winters (Joan Bennett), a chorus girl, and Randy Bradford (John Hubbard), millionaire Broadway playboy, start to elope after Randy proposes marriage at the Club Caliban, where Gloria works. En route they are stopped by a motorcycle cop. Gloria advises Randy to wait when it is learned Randy will lose his fortune if he goes through with the elopement. Back in New York, Randy has it out with Mark Willows (Franchot Tone), partner in the Wall Street firm, which Randy's father helped form.

Concealing her identity, Gloria talks Mark into giving her a job on the office switchboard. When Mark a few mornings later is in a bad mood, Gloria tells the barber downstairs that her boss is "bearish." The word is interpreted as meaning that he is in a selling mood. The word spreads and holders of Yaqui Oil, Mark's pet stock, start to unload and by night the firm has taken a bad beating.

Mark fires Gloria, but not before, with the same innocent dumbness, she suggests that the firm turn "bullish" and buy. The firm makes twice as much as it lost. Gloria gets her job back and also the attentions of Mark. Randy, jealous, lets the cat out of the bag and Mark is enraged at the deception. Gloria and Randy go ahead with their wedding plans but at the last minute Mark and Gloria elope.

THE SINGING HILL (Republic)

Western with Music

Associate producer, Harry Grey. Directed by Lew Landers.

SYNOPSIS

Gene (Gene Autry), foreman of the Circle R ranch and head of the Cattlemen's association, is concerned about the future of his friends and associates when Jo Adams (Virginia Dale), frivolous owner of the ranch, announces her intention to sell the ranch to John Ramsey (George Meeker). Gene, Frog (Smiley Burnette) and Patsy (Mary Lee), an orphan adopted by the cowhands, plead with Jo to reconsider her plans but she refuses.

Gene has his old friend, Judge Starrbottle (Spencer Charters), adjudge Jo incompetent to manage her affairs and has himself appointed her guardian. Gene then tries to raise the money necessary to repay a down payment made by Ramsey on the ranch. When the cattle that Gene is driving to the railroad center are stampeded and dispersed by thugs Jo, realizing that the cattlemen will be driven from the valley, stops the sale of her ranch. Gene has Ramsey brought to justice as the instigator of the cattle stampede.

BABY STARS (Rep.)

Meet the Stars (028-2)

In another of the series of twelve subjects featuring Harriet Parsons, Republic this time takes the audience to a Hollywood dinner party at which thirteen young actresses perform before a judging board of the film colony's ace directors in the hope of some day gaining recognition and a starring role. Those performing in numerous and various sketches exhibiting their talents are Lois Ranson, Patricia Van Cleve, Ella Bryan, Joan Leslie, Peggy Diggins, Tanya Widrin, Gay Parks, Lorraine Elliott, Lucia Carroll, Sheila Ryan, Marilyn Merrick, Jayne Hazard and Kay Leslie, while such former "baby stars" as Janet Gaynor, Anita Louise, Sally Eilers and others watch their performances. Also pictured are directors Tay Garnett, Raoul Walsh, Eddie Goulding, Paul Sloan, the youthful Orson Welles, S. Sylvan Simon, John Brahm and J. Theodore Reed.

RESPECT THE LAW (MGM)

Crime Does Not Pay (P-203)

This is another subject in the Crime Does Not Pay series. Here is shown what has happened in an unnamed waterfront city. An inspector for the Health Department, who had turned in a report condemning the rat-proofing of a waterfront property, changes his report when given an "advisory" job at an attractive salary by the owner. Because of the faulty docks, rats come down onto the wharves from the ships carrying bubonic plague. The disease spreads and the entire city is threatened by the plague when the police locate the health inspector and determine the source of the disease.

THE HAPPIEST MAN ON EARTH (MGM)

Miniature (M-233)

A realistic short subject, "The Happiest Man on Earth" is devoid of action, in the customary sense, and is hardly a story so much as it is the conversation of two men. And, it is not entertainment so much as it is a social document on the ills of unemployment. The setting is the rather worn office of an Oklahoma oil drilling supply company in the heat of summer. To the office comes "Jess Fulton" from Kansas City to ask his brother-in-law, "Tom Brackett," the manager, for a job, because "Jess" has heard that "Tom's" drivers make as much as $600 some months. "Tom," who makes only $35 a week himself, confirms the high pay of his drivers but is reluctant to give "Jess" a job, for the job is driving nitro-glycerine and drivers don't last long. "Jeff," father of a boy crippled from lack of proper nouishment, isn't easily deterred. He talks himself into a job and leaving the office soberly remarks that he "guesses he is about the happiest man on earth." The leading roles are enacted by Paul Kelly portraying "Jess" and Victor Kilian as "Tom." The subject was produced by Jack Chertok from the O. Henry Memorial Award-winning short story of the same name by Albert Maltz.

THE SEEING EYE (W.B.)

Broadway Brevity (6206)

The work of the Seeing Eye Institute of Morristown, N. J., in training shepherd dogs to be the "eyes" of the blind is depicted in this two-reel Broadway Brevity short subject produced by Jerome Hill for Warner Brothers. Herein is shown the painstaking care necessary for the complete training of the animals and the persons they are to lead. The animal, upon completion of the fundamental drills is assigned to a sightless individual. From there and under the guidance of an instructor both the dog and master learn to cooperate until both have acquired confidence in each other. The Institute is cooperating with Warners in publicizing the film, while the motion picture company has assigned some of its feature film publicists to the subject.

THIS IS ENGLAND (Col.)

Cinescope (2977)

Following such subjects as "London Can Take It" and "Christmas Under Fire," Columbia presents "This Is London," produced in England by the Crown Film Unit and narrated by Ed Murrow, European director of the Columbia Broadcasting System. In "This Is London," the peoples of the various sections of the country are seen at work, preparing to further defend themselves from the totalitarian tentacles of the enemy, voluntary war dusty, finding momentary recluse and freedom of war worries in churches and music halls, and enjoying the music of the Halle Orchestra playing Beethoven's Fifth and the Huddersfield Choir singing the Messiah. All in all, the film shows that England still has her "thumbs-up."

THE FIGHTING 69TH½ (W.B.)

Merry Melody (6710)

A "Merrie Melody" cartoon, this is a take-off on Warners "The Fighting 69th" and has red ants and black ants at war over the food left by a group of picnickers. Some ingenious goings-on are resorted to by both sides before it is decided that the war is a stalemate and arbitration seems a solution. But arbitration fails also so the red ants and the black ants start fighting all over again.

DOG IN THE ORCHARD (WB)

Broadway Brevity (6204)

"Dog in the Orchard" is the screen version of Mary Roberts Rinehart's Cosmopolitan Magazine story. It tells the story of a farmer who kills his wife so that he will be free to marry a girl on a neighboring farm. He buries the wife in his orchard. The sheriff of the county becomes suspicious but the farmer has contempt for the law. The unforeseen flaw in the farmer's plan is his wife's dog. The dog disappears by day and at night howls in the orchard. The constant howling enrages the farmer and is eventually his undoing. Players include Howard Da Silva, Barbara Pepper, Addison Richards, David Bruce and Virginia Sale. Directed by Jean Negulesco.

SKY RAIDERS (Universal)

Serial—12 Episodes

Captain Bob Dayton (Donald Woods), former World War ace, with his buddy, Lt. Ed Carey (Robert Armstrong), operates Sky Raiders, Inc., an airplane manufacturing concern. Dayton has perfected a fast pursuit plane for the U. S. Army. Felix Lynx (Edward Cianelli), agent for a foreign government, is kept informed of the Sky Raiders' planes by a spy in Dayton's office.

While testing a plane Dayton lands in a clearing and is attacked by Lynx men. When Dayton shows up unharmed, Mary Blake (Kathryn Adams), the captain's secretary, insists he has a charmed life. Dayton hires Tim Bryant (Billy Halop), member of the Air Youth of America and an expert model plane builder, to do experimental work for him.

Lynx turns his attention to Dayton's new bomb sight after several attempts to steal the plane. The bomb sight test is to be made in Honolulu. The spy agent, in a fast fighter plane, machine guns a Honolulu bound clipper and the passengers, Dayton, Mary and army officers, are rescued from the sea by a government cutter.

Returning to the mainland, Dayton and Mary are met by Carey and Tim. A powerful car, containing Lynx and his henchmen, tries to force Carey's car off the road, but the foreign agents crash head-on into a big truck, eliminating the spy and his gang from the picture.

BOOBS IN ARMS (Col.)

Three Stooges (2404)

The Three Stooges, Moe, Curly and Larry, are now in the army. The three mad caps start off here by selling post cards and getting themselves heartily disliked by a big burly fellow, who turns out to be a sergeant, when the boys find themselves in a recruiting line instead of a bread line. The sergeant drills the boys, who perform their duties in the manner to which they are accustomed. There is a lot of face slapping and head knocking and the rest of the routine. Finally the boys go to war and are bombed by a shell containing laughing gas. They just about win the war single-handed with their laughing before another shell carries them skyward.

MEN OF THE F. B. I.—1941 (RKO

March of Time, No. 9 (13,109)

March of Time presents another in the series of subjects revealing how the American people and government are preparing to defend themselves again any internal or external situation that might arise. In "Men of the F.B.I.—1941" the new work of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in tracking down saboteurs and espionage agents and the training necessary for the 2,000 G-Men now in the field to find and capture the subversive groups is depicted. To show more clearly to the audience March of Time presents a dramatization of the "Stuart Case"—a typical recent instance of espionage involving murder and burglary in a factory working on defense orders. The sequence illustrates the painstaking methods used by the Bureau in assembling, analyzing and piecing together the bits of evidence necessary to find and convict the nation's internal army of foreign spies.

THE JUNGLE ARCHER (Col.)

World of Sport (2806)

Tex Stone has one of the most unusual occupations of any man in the world. He makes his living with his bow and arrow. On a hunting trip, west of Monterey at the edge of the Yaqui Indian country in Mexico, Tex and Mrs. Stone are out to secure specimens of various animals. Encountering the ferocious javelina who fights back, they easily down the vicious animal with a swift dart of the arrow. One of the big moments in the film comes when they stalk a large mountain lion, who has charged them. In this scene, Mrs. Stone faces the enraged beast. Just when tragedy seems imminent, a well-directed arrow from Tex Stone's bow kills the animal. Thus, he rescued his wife and at the same time added another trophy to his collection. The capture of a wild puma is also pictured. The locale is an unexplored tract of the Mesquito country that has not changed in a thousand years.

GOING PLACES, NO. 89 (Univ.)

(5359)

The subject of this number of the series is oddly enough, tombstones. But there is nothing dreary about it for the tombstones are some of the old ones along the Atlantic seaboard that have some amusing epitaphs chiselled on the stones. In those days of few newspapers and joke books many a jest was preserved on old headstones.

OLD NEW ORLEANS (MGM)

FitzPatrick Traveltalk (Color) (T-215)

One of the older cities in the United States, New Orleans is more a setting for bygone costumes than the dress of today. FitzPatrick has seen to it that the camera records the costumes of yesteryear, dressing up a group of the younger set. Filmed in color the subject shows some of the famous landmarks of the Louisiana city, including the Cathedral of St. Louis, the old Spanish shrine of Gabildo and the old French Market.

INFORMATION PLEASE No. 8 (RKO)

(14,208)

Boris Karloff, usually cast as a ghost expert, is a guest expert for this session of the query crew and to make Mr. Karloff feel at home Mr. Fadiman starts with a question about mausoleums. After the panel has correctly named four famous tombs, and identified an assortment of costumed "men in white" as surgeon, butcher, and soda jerker, the examination reverts to a question about who killed whom, and Karloff fails to remember the name of the man he killed in "Frankenstein." Pantomimed episodes from movies and plays make up the next question, followed by a poser on poetry, easy for the poetry experts, Kieran and Adams, even though they were on expert Karloff's favorite subject of wretches, villains, and monsters. The final query from Fadiman's bag of puzzlers concerns three famous ghosts, the last of which is Red Grange, the Galloping Ghost.

MEMORY TRICKS (MGM)

Pete Smith Specialty (S-266)

The trick in memory training which Pete Smith describes is to associate the numbers from one to 10 with objects whose names rhyme with the numbers. Then, if there are 10 things to be remembered, each one is associated with one of the objects whose name rhymes with the number. It is an old trick in mnemonics but will be new to most audiences. The beauty of the trick is that the audience can convince itself that it really works because Smith, after explaining the stunt, goes all through it again. The reel lends itself readily to exploitation on the basis of mind improvement generally and the memory in particular.

MARCH OF TIME, No. 5 (RKO)

"Labor and Defense" (13,105)

The country's two largest labor organizations, the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organization, embracing a membership of nine million workers, and the part these organizations play in the lives of American people are brought to the screen in this issue of March of Time. In reportorial fashion is revealed to the audience not only the achievements of these organizations but also their failures, both affecting the members, individually and collectively, and the country as a whole. Through the medium of the camera the big labor strikes of the past twenty-five years are brought to the screen while off-screen commentary recites that during the first eighteen months of World War I the two-and-a-half million skilled workers of the AFL voted on more than 3,000 strikes, many of which affected U. S. war industries. Samuel Gompers, Eugene V. Debs, and other outstanding labor leaders of that era figure prominently in several historic scenes. Labor conditions of today, during this period of defense production and organization leaders including William Green, president of the AFL, John L. Lewis, retired president of the CIO, Phillip Murray, recently elected president of the CIO, David Dubinsky and others are brought to the screen. Westbrook Pegler, newspaper columnist whose attacks on some labor organization methods are presented in Scripps-Howard newspapers, is seen in action preparing one of his daily columns.

THE SPIRIT OF 1941 (Col.)

Washington Parade (2904)

Produced with the cooperation of the United States Civil Service Commission, this deals with the employment of civilians, showing all phases and the greatest mobilization of production the world has ever seen. The workers, it is pointed out, are not soldiers who shoulder guns, but men to serve on the industrial front, that is the spirit of 1941.

HOW TO USE IT

On the opposite page appears the cumulative alphabetical index to another issue of Motion Picture Herald's new and valuable exhibitor service section, Product Digest. It is a master index to all information available to date on 1940-41 product and which has been published in the several preceding issues of Product Digest.

Check the title of any feature that you want to look up, turn to the designated page or pages, and you will find all buying and booking information available up to this very minute — synopses, casts, credits, release dates, production numbers, running time, review references, Round Table references and Legion of Decency ratings.

Product Digest is published every other week alternately with the regular Release Chart.

The Release Chart carries, as always, an alphabetical index of titles, a breakdown by companies, star information, release dates, running time and review references. The Release Chart, published every other week, is a compact compilation of certain important booking information.

Product Digest, on alternate weeks, is cumulative, a more extensive compilation of similar information. The Release Chart is complete in itself. Product Digest carries only current information, but if you maintain a complete file of Product Digest, you will have, at your instant service, synopses, casts and other detailed data which could not conceivably be compressed into one issue. The cumulative alphabetical index of Product Digest, however, is a reference to all information that has been printed to date in all the issues of Product Digest.

An introductory issue of Product Digest was mailed to exhibitor subscribers of Motion Picture Herald. If you misplaced your copy or have not saved the subsequent issues, write for duplicates.

Having made two pictures with IRENE DUNNE and CARY GRANT, I was more than merely anxious to see "PENNY SERENADE". It is a wonderful picture and I was deeply touched. It's a fascinating story that will move audiences alternately to tears and laughter. You have made an outstanding picture. I congratulate you.

MIRACLE in GLASS

DUE to a remarkable discovery in glass composition in the Eastman Research Laboratories, an optical revolution is under way, with prospect of very important contributions to the capacities of the camera and all related instruments in the service of human sight.

To the motion picture the new glass promises lens developments which will affect many aspects of production by reason of improved definition and high efficiency in the utilization of light.

The new glass is already at work in Eastman lenses designed for the Government in the last year. The existence of the new glass has just been revealed in a summary of Eastman defense work in the company's annual report for stockholders. By happy coincidence this new glass, which has been on the way through eight years of research, arrives in time to make new "eyes for the army".

The technology of the new glass is as radically different from that of standard optical glass as would be steel made without iron. From the days when glass was accidentally produced in the beach fires of Phoenician traders, some thousands of years ago, until now glass has been made basically of silica sands, with dashes of alkaline substances, also boron and lead. The new glass uses components of the rare metals tantalum, tungsten and lanthanum. Among the results is new effectiveness in the angle of refraction or, in other words, light-bending capacity. This is the first development in optical glass since the discovery of the Jena glasses in Germany in 1886—and that was the year before Mr. Thomas A. Edison started to work on the problem of the motion picture, three years before Mr. George Eastman produced the first film stock.

CONSIDER THE COW

EVEN a cow knows better than those Hollywood exponents of the "sweater set" publicity. That strangely willful campaign has made open flaunt to the public and challenge to social critics by giving to the public a strictly internal communication of the Production Code Administration advising against the deliberate and obvious exploitation of the female breast in motion pictures. Within forty-eight hours recipients had delivered it to the daily newspapers.

That was just about concurrent with the issuance of a Borden milk advertisement pertaining to "Elsie", in which the heroine was pictured casually covering her mammillary aspects with a guitar, a slight bomb explosion and with a reply coupon. A picture star might, with assistance, do as much.

There is that about the "all-out-in-front-breast-movement" in the face of the purposes of the Production Code, pursuing today's dime regardless of tomorrow's dollar, that reminds one of the costly methods of some of the steamboat captains in the days of the racing on the old Mississippi. In order to get extraordinary power it was sometimes the procedure to "set a nigger on the safety valve". That produced pressure, speed and, often, boiler explosions.

There's a lot of that school of blind, for-the-moment, practicality which has set up a Production Code of self-regulation for the industry of the motion picture, and has then set about employing shifty minded, nimble witted young men to see how far they can outwit the Code and its administration.

The contenders for the sweater phase of our art who insist on the charm of youth, the sanctity of health and the significance of beauty would be extremely disappointed if they really thought that were the appeal.

What they want is to get away with something, to promote and purvey to the lusty leer and the calculating eye.

That enterprise and pursuit does have a place, of a sort, in what we so optimistically call civilization, but that place is neither in "Macy's window" nor yet on the screen of the theatre which serves the American multitudes.

EVERY day brings some new eruption on the subject. So it is with no surprise that the morning's snowdrift of clippings should bring along one from "Justice", weekly organ of the big and powerful International Ladies Garment Workers Union, with a letter addressed to Mr. Will Hays from Louis Nelson, manager of the union, protesting: " . . . Aesthetic reasons are important for the future of the screen as a medium of art. . . . There are over 50,000 workers in the knitwear industry. . . . The knitted sweater on a movie star may be a feast for the eyes of millions, but to us it is bread and butter. . . . Put our stars back into sweaters."

To Mr. Nelson it might be observed that garment makers prosper by making "what they are wearing", not by telling "them" what to wear.

It is also presumably proper for the screen to offer among its assets both youth and beauty—but this does not imply license to serve on the half-shell with tabasco. Whether that sector of Hollywood knows it is or not—that is not "the American way".

ABOUT the middle of March, the Round Table section reported upon the "eighth spicy week" advertising of a French picture, imported as "Mlle. Ma Mere" and offered as "The Virgin Bride" by the Central Theatre in New York's Broadway, independent house. Last week the Brooklyn Strand theatre, considerably more intimately related to the organized industry responsible to disciplines and codes, was in print with the same exploitation. That is progress—to where?

PROVISIONS for the trade practise scandals of tomorrow are being made by forces now engaged in endeavoring to hamper, prevent and delay press reporting and coverage of complaints and findings in arbitration proceedings under the provisions of the Consent Decree.

Invasions of the ethics of industry, and legal ethics, too, are involved.

Reports of suppressive endeavors come from correspondents south, southwest and east.

Ultimate public ventilation of the subject is a likely consequence, as usual in issues of trade practise and malpractise.

Majors Owe Exhibitors?

HOW MUCH distributors owe exhibitors on short subjects undelivered under 1939-40 season contracts will be determined by an investigation started by Allied Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Sidney Samuelson, the organization's business manager, promised in Philadelphia on Wednesday.

He asserted that under the majors' weekly rental payment plan distributors have never given the exhibitors an accounting; so that the latter do not know if any credit is due them. He added that one such situation has already been uncovered. Similar investigation is under way on 1940-41 contracts; and the 1941-42 pacts will be closely scrutinized, he said. Buying for the latter has already started in the zone.

At a Pennsylvania Allied meeting three weeks ago four of five majors in the consent decree were charged with violating it by "forcing" shorts and newsreels. The "forcing," ran the charge, was done by hints that the exhibitor buying shorts now would receive preferred treatment in bidding for the "blocks of five" features under decree selling.

Dimes for Deanna

WHAT appeared to be the week's timeliest showmanship stunt was reported by H. A. Bishop, manager of the Capitol in Winnipeg, Manitoba, who put on a "Dimes for Deanna Wedding Gift Fund," with proceeds from the benefit turned over to the Canadian War Services Campaign. The unique "dime shower" for Deanna Durbin benefited by newspaper accounts of the star's wedding in Hollywood last weekend, and was conducted for Mr. Bishop's run of "Nice Girl?" Every patron who gave a donation to the fund was permitted to sign a register which was subsequently bound and forwarded to Deanna Durbin with the good wishes of the signatories.

Many other special promotions are described in the showmanship department of MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S Managers' Round Table which opens on page 53.

Unions Told to Pay-Up

IN WHAT is said to be the first court ruling of its kind on labor, Philadelphia Musicians Local No. 77, was ordered on Monday, by the State Superior Court, to reimburse three of its members for the loss of pay suffered during the time the union barred them from their jobs at the Carmen Theatre, Philadelphia.

The thre members of the union, Leon Gordon, George Tipton, and Alvin Schatz, charged the executive board of the American Federation of Musicians had withdrawn them from the theatre, after the local's trial board had already found them not guilty of violating the union wage scale.

Hearst and Welles

THE NEW YORK Journal-American, on Tuesday, devoted a full page to the Hearst newspapers' national campaign against the "Free Company" play program on the Columbia Broadcasting networks, and against CBS for carrying so-called "radical radio broadcasts"—a campaign aimed more specifically at Orson ("Citizen Kane") Welles, a member of the Company.

The Journal-American's keynote "Shall Radio Become the Voice of Subversion?," asserted it is "the paramount duty of the Federal Communications Commission to keep subversive and un-American radio performances off the air" and that, if the FCC has not the authority to do so, Congress should give it that authority. The paper also asked readers to protest to their Senators and representatives.

On Tuesday, also the Free Company answered the Hearst barrage, in statements by James Boyd, novelist and organizer of the Company. Mr. Boyd, with the Department of Justice, said that Department had "suggested" the Free Company's series of programs, and is "intensely interested" in their progress, although it cannot participate officially. He added that the assaults of the Hearst papers are in reality attacks upon Mr. Welles, and he noted that in introducing one of his plays, "His Honor, the Mayor," Mr. Welles had remarked the players were from the film, "Citizen Kane."

Mr. Boyd noted that radio station WISN, Milwaukee, though owned by Hearst, carried the Welles' broadcast.

Sale of reserved seats for the premiere of RKO's "Citizen Kane" next Thursday, at the New York Palace, began Monday.

No Divorcement

THE THEATRE divorcement bill in the Nebraska single-house legislature was killed Wednesday in committee. It had been introduced by Senator E. M. Nebauer, of Orleans, a former movie exhibitor.

Meanwhile, at mid-week in Washington, decision of Senator Harley M. Kilgore, of West Virginia, was awaited after he indicated he might call his special Senate subcommittee to consider "pushing" the Federal theatre divorce bill sponsored by former Senator Matthew Mansfield Neely, now Governor of West Virginia.

Vale Elsie

THE MANY friends of "Elsie," the famed Borden-Walker-Gordon-RKO cow, were saddened this week to learn that she had passed away at her home at Plainsboro, N. J., as a result of injuries in a motoring accident while on her way to attend a function in New York's Greenwich Village.

Elsie leaves a heifer calf, Beulah, expected to inherit the publicity glories implied by her mother's career. No mention of Beulah's father accompanied the official reports. He was said to be out of town on business.

It developed upon the demise of Elsie, as it goes in the world of glamour, fame and Hollywood, that that was not after all her real name. In the Jersey genealogies, the Almanach de Gotha of the milky way, she is listed as "You'll do Lobelia." Her coat-of-arms was the golden crest. She made appearances at the World's Fair, worked in the cinema and had many, many publicity dates. Unlike "Gargantua," the circus gorilla, and many Hollywood figures, her private life was not aired. She was, incidentally, the first cow to make the editorial page of the HERALD—which see.

Off to Rio for Goodwill

EVEN AS Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., the new U. S. "cultural envoy" to Latin-America, flew Wednesday morning from Miami to Rio de Janeiro, first stop on a governmental tour, the U. S. State Department and Nelson Rockefeller's Division of Commercial and Cultural Relations with the Latin American Republics, sponsoring Mr. Fairbanks, indicated it might also sponsor other goodwill visits by Hollywood personalities, possibly in U. S. Army bombers. Mr. Fairbanks is accompanied by his wife, the former Mary Hartford, and by Edward H. Robbins, assistant to Mr. Rockefeller.

No Axis Screenings

APPROXIMATELY 200 exhibitors of New York, members of the Independent Theatre Owners Association, on Wednesday, took action, previously promised, to stop the flow of Axis "ideology" and propaganda films into the United States.

They went further than their original intention of merely petitioning the U. S. Government to act, by also pledging that they would not exhibit "any motion pictures produced or distributed under or through the direction, control, or instigation of the governments of Germany, Italy, or Russia, or their subjects."

The U. S. was asked "to take appropriate steps to bar the importation into this country of all such films."

Minnesota Outlaws Blocks-of-5 in 1st States-right Challenge of U. S. Decree

Minnesota this week became the first state to challenge the Federal Government's motion picture consent decree, enacting a law requiring the distributors to offer an entire season's program at one time with a minimum cancellation right of 20 percent, instead of the decree "blocks-of-five" system.

The Department of Justice will test the constitutionality of the Minnesota law up to the U. S. Supreme Court, if necessary, it was indicated this week in Washington. The "Big 5" which signed the decree are expected to act similarly.

("The Minnesota legislation places the consenting companies in a hazardous position," Thurman W. Arnold, assistant U. S. attorney general, declared on arrival in New York on Wednesday afternoon for a speaking engagement. Mr. Arnold said that it was contrary to Department of Justice policy to intervene in state legislation, answering reports that the department would ask the Minnesota governor to veto the bill.)

Almost unanimously, by a vote of 103 to 4, the Minnesota bill, sponsored by Northwest Allied, was passed by the House on April 4th. Then, on Monday the Senate approved the bill by a vote of 53 to 8, after making two minor amendments, emphasizing the cancellation right and making it necessary for cancellation notices to be sent to distributors by registered mail. The House immediately concurred in the Senate amendments by a vote of 101 to 3 and the measure was sent to Governor Harold E. Stassen.

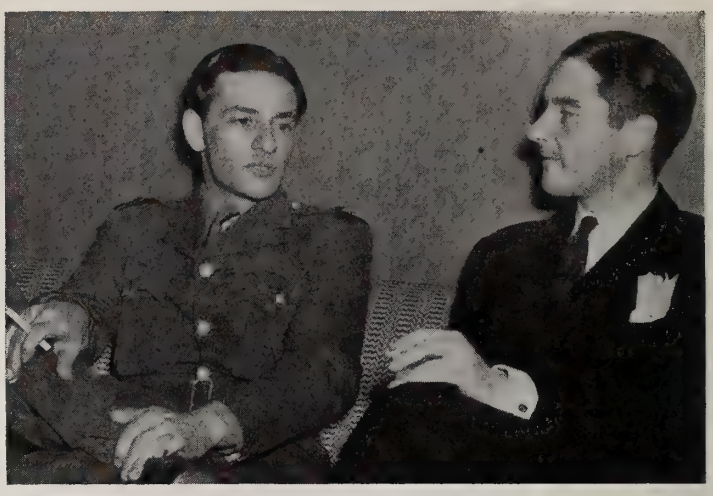
At legislative hearings the anti-decree bill was attacked by representatives of four of the five major distributors which signed the decree, Paramount only excepted. The measure also was opposed by parent-teacher groups, Minnesota Federation of Women's Clubs and the Federal Motion Picture Council of America. Fred Strom, executive secretary of Northwest Allied, directed the successful fight for passage of the bill. He claimed that the consent decree complicated rather than improved the alleged block-booking evils.

Half a dozen amendments offered by Senator Donald O. Wright of Minneapolis were rejected during the Monday Senate session. Most important of the proposed amendments provided for exercise of the cancellation clause through the consent decree arbitration board. Another would have added the word "social" to the list of "religious, charitable and fraternal" organizations exempted by the bill.

The Minnesota law is not expected to affect the arbitration system in that state, except, of course, complaints on the subject of blocks-of-five could not be arbitrated if the measure were upheld. All other parts of the consent decree are not affected.

At the same time, it was indicated that no Federal action will be taken unless attempted enforcement of the Minnesota statute leads the consenting companies to apply to the Federal court for relief from the consent decree provisions for the sale of films in blocks of five. Such relief could be sought under Section XXIII of the decree.

The filing of an application for relief would be the signal for a challenge of the constitutionality of the state law on the ground that it attempted to over-ride the Federal courts. Department officials made it clear that they considered the procedure under Section XXIII to be more than a mere formality, and intimated that state laws designed to check the application of the decree would have to withstand a severe test of their validity before the Government would accede to modification.



Meanwhile the Michigan anti-consent decree bill introduced at Lansing by Representative Raymond J. Snow moved towards a vote with the backing of the independent Cooperative Theatres of Michigan, while rumors were circulated in Detroit that the big five signatories to the consent decree would close their Detroit exchanges and withdraw business from Michigan if the measure passes. Despite the Cooperative endorsement Allied Theatres of Michigan maintained a silence on the law. Pearl M. Sprott, Allied business manager, however, has expressed her personal objection to the bill. The measure is similar to the Minnesota law.

PRODUCTION REACHES ALL-TIME HIGH BUILDING "BLOCKS OF 5"

Hollywood All A-Fever Rushing Picture Processes from Story Buys to Camera, with Many Earmarked for Decree Sales

Hollywood, as of the closing days of April, enters the 11th straight week of a production boom which may have been surpassed previously for brief periods, but has never been approached in terms of consistency and indications of continuing activity at the same levels.

For 11 consecutive weeks, there has been a minimum of 42 pictures shooting and 63 being edited each week, with many a higher figure being reached along the line.

And this week, for the first time, as the tremendous product backlog continued to pile up, it became possible to distinguish some of the studio output definitely earmarked for the 1941-42 season, the first in which selling will be under terms of the Consent Decree's "blocks of five" proviso for the five majors.

The boom was manifested in all phases of the production cycle, in all departments, ranging from peak activity among stars and featured players to a great upsurge in extra employment, from the unusually large number of writers currently at the studios working on new film subjects to the great number of cutters finishing up on completed product, extending from executive personnel, producers and directors down through all the crafts. Concurrently, story purchases since January 1st at several studios reached a new high both in number of properties acquired and in the cost of those properties.

Warners Working 4,750

Reflecting the drive at Warners is the fact that the studio has added 26 new acting names to its roster in the first quarter of 1941, so that its stars now number 21 and its featured players 58. In addition, 13 off-lot stars and featured players are now at the Burbank plant. This constitutes an all time record, according to the studio.

An all time industry record has been set by Warners with a backlog of 20 pictures completed and in the vaults, none of which will be released before the beginning of May.

Of the 50 pictures announced for the 1940-41 season, Warners has completed all but two, while, for next season, 33 are in various stages of preparation. Now shooting for the 1941-42 program are "Sergeant York," "Navy Blues," "Flight Patrol" and "Dive Bomber."

There are currently 51 writers and 21 directors and dialogue directors at the studio, while 26 cutters are at work, a new high for the department. The weekly payroll now numbers 4,750 employes, reflecting the 155 per cent increase in all crafts. Three shifts, totaling 18 hours a day, are operating, and the craft employment of 1,400 compares to a norm of 550. Meanwhile, over 500 extras were on the Warner lot one day last week, for "Sergeant York" and "Navy Blues" companies alone.

The studio has bought 17 published novels and stories, and Broadway plays, since January, including "Arsenic and Old Lace," by Russell Crouse and Howard Lindsay; "The Corn Is Green," by Emlyn Williams; "The Man Who Came to Dinner" and "George Washington Slept Here," both by George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart; "Saratoga Trunk," by Edna Ferber, and "The Gay Sisters," by Stephen Longstreet.

20th Century-Fox Finishes 12

Twentieth Century-Fox has 52 writers working on 41 scripts, and 12 screen plays already completed for the new season. The company's plan is to have two blocks of five ready by July 15th, with the first picture of the 1941-42 schedule to be "A Yank in the R.A.F.," starring Tyrone Power and Betty Grable. This is already in production, with Henry King directing.

Other pictures slated for the coming season include "Dance Hall," with Cesar Romero and Carole Landis; "The Dead Take No Bows," with Lloyd Nolan and Mary Beth Hughes; "Charley's Aunt," with Jack Benny and Kay Francis; "Private Nurse," with Brenda Joyce; "The Last of the Duanes," with George Montgomery and Lynn Roberts; "Charlie Chan in Rio," with Sidney Toler; "Wild Geese Calling," with Henry Fonda and Joan Bennett; "Caribbean Cruise," with Carmen Miranda; "Remember the Day," with Claudette Colbert and John Payne, and 'How Green Was My Valley," for which no cast has yet been assigned.

Believing that the studio operates at maximum efficiency with not more than five pictures in production at any one time, Twentieth-Fox production manager William Koenig has arranged production of the foregoing pictures in that manner, as to starting dates, with June 2nd the latest, according to present plans.

RKO Shooting Eight

RKO Radio, driving toward the busiest spring and summer schedule in its history, has now completed all but three of the 46 features it announced for this season, and has finished all six Tim Holt westerns and is starting on the first for the new season's schedule.

Definitely set for 1941-42 release are "Before the Fact," co-starring Gary Grant and Joan Fontaine; "My Life with Caroline," starring Ronald Colman; "The Devil and Daniel Webster," with Thomas Mitchell, Walter Houston, Anne Shirley, James Craig and Simone Simon; "Father Takes a Wife," with Adolphe Menjou and Gloria Swanson.

The studio has eight pictures shooting, and is preparing for early starts the following: "Unexpected Uncle," "Journey Into Fear," starring Michele Morgan; "Joan of Paris," with the same star; "Through the Thin Wall," starring Charles Laughton; "The Mayor of 44th Street;" a new Kay Kyser musical; "Valley of the Sun;" an untitled feature on radio news broadcasting, to be directed by Irving Reis; an untitled horse racing yarn in Technicolor to be produced and directed by David Butler.

At Metro

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has 14 films being prepared for the 1941-42 season, as well as two now shooting: "Unholy Partners" (formerly called "The Uniform") with Clark Gable and Rosalind Russell, and "Barnacle Bill," with Wallace Beery, both for the new term.

"Dr. Jekyll and Mr Hyde," just completed, and starring Spencer Tracy, Ingrid Bergman and Lana Turner, is also for the coming season, as are these, now in preparation: "Smilin' Through," with Jeanette MacDonald; a new Greta Garbo picture; "The Yearling," starring Spencer Tracy; "We Were Dancing," starring Norman Shearer; "The Chocolate Soldier," with Nelson Eddy and Rise Stevens; "Johnny Eager," with Robert Taylor; "Babes On Broadway," with Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland and Shirley Temple; "Panama Hattie," with Ann Sothern, and new Kildare, Hardy and "Thin Man" films, as well as a "Tarzan" picture with Johnny Weissmuller and Maureen O'Sullivan.

Paramount Buys

At Paramount, eight new pictures were started in April, besides the minimum of seven which were before the cameras during the month, with completed films rapidly being replaced by those ready for shooting.

That studio has purchased 25 stories and

INDUSTRY'S AID FOR THE GREEKS

The film industry, with contributions to date in excess of half a million dollars, is the largest single contributor to the Greek War Relief Fund, it was indicated this week. At Hollywood, Samuel Goldwyn, chairman of the Motion Picture Permanent Charities Committee reported its drive had raised $404,833.04. Of the sum $104,833.04 was raised by workers in the industry while $300,000 was raised through voluntary contributions following the Greek War Relief broadcast from Grauman's theatre and by lobby collections.

New York officials of the Greek Fund estimated that the final amusement division returns will top $1,000,000. Rentals from "Greece Fights Back," short subject are expected to reach $100,000.

Nicholas J. Basil, secretary of the Buffalo chapter of the Greek War Relief Association, reported a record attendance at the informal spring dance sponsored by the association in the Memorial Auditorium on Tuesday evening.

The Jewish Welfare Fund at Chicago has reached $50,000 and will top the $60,000 quota this week, Jack Kirsch, president of Illinois Allied, reported on Tuesday.

DISTRIBUTORS DIG FOR REISSUES, TAKE 19 MORE FROM THEIR VAULTS

Reissues Help Build Backlogs for New Season; Hardly Any War or Service Films Being Reissued; Enough Are on Hand

The motion picture industry, digging anew into its film vaults for suitable reissues of features which had been taken out of circulation, is not resurrecting previously released features and shorts on service and military subjects, or Americanism and patriotic themes, despite the wide attention being given these items in new material in line with the American defense and international war situations.

The period running between now and the beginning of a new film year, on September 1st, is usually pegged in some distribution quarters as suitable for strong reissues, to aid in the building of a new-product backlog with which to start a new film season. New-product backlogs for the approaching season are more important than ever, and are being built bigger than ever, to meet the United States Government's consent decree requirements imposed on the "Big Five" to sell in blocks-of-five and only after the pictures have been offered to exhibitor customers for advance trade screenings.

Enough Service Films on Hand

The vaults of distributors are generally understood to be packed with pictures on "straight entertainment" on Army, Navy and U. S. Marine service themes whose exhibitions have been liquidated in recent years. But hardly any of them are being reissued at this time, principally because commitments to cooperate with Army and Navy and defense channels has created a large supply of films, especially shorts, on these subjects.

Another important factor precluding any wholesale reissuance now of previously released service films is the complaint in many sectors against any flooding of the market by distributors with such subjects. There seems to be plenty of new war-and-service material on the market, modernized as to technical and subject treatment. Cited as typical of the 'streamlined' service features now in circulation, and produced with the close cooperation of the Army, is Paramount's "I Wanted Wings." Other new service films are Universal's "Buck Privates," RKO's "A Girl, a Guy and a Gob," Paramount's "Power Dive," and "Caught in the Draft," Warners' "Flight Patrol," and others.

Among the very few service pictures of earlier vintage being released are Howard Hughes' "Hell's Angels" (1930), Warners' "Here Comes the Navy" (1934), the United Artists-Sutherland production of "Sky Devil's" (1932), Warners' "Devil Dogs of the Air" (1935).

Reissuance of old product is not to be confused with a repeat booking, by which a picture is brought back to a theatre by an exhibitor because of specific requests of patrons or because the exhibitor feels the previous, original gross of the picture rates a repeat. Reissues are generally given a new, national release date, frequently with new "paper," new prints and new field sales staff attention.

In the latest batch of reissues is "Vivacious Lady," redistributed as a result of the Academy Awards being given to Ginger Rogers and James Stewart, stars of that film, for their work in the newer "Kitty Foyle" and "Philadelphia Story," respectively.

Nineteen Old Ones Added

Nineteenth features of earlier release have been taken from the vaults by distributors for reissuance, to be added to the dozens of reissues already on the market. Many exhibitors, who frequently, in their subsequent runs, and with double bill policies, find themselves short of new product, depend on strong reissues for their houses. This is established by mail received by this publication direct from exhibitors. The latest 19 reissues include the following:

ADVENTURES OF TOM SAWYER, THE (United Artists-Selznick), originally released February 17th, 1938, with Tommy Kelly and Ann Gillis.

BAT WHISPERS, THE (United Artists-Art Cinema), originally released November 29th, 1930, with Chester Morris and Una Merkel. Now reissued nationally by Astor Pictures, New York.

STREET SCENE, (United Artists), originally released September 5th, 1931, with Sylvia Sidney and William Collier, Jr. Now being reissued nationally by Astor Pictures, New York.

THREE BROADWAY GIRLS (United Artists-Goldwyn), originally released February 13th, 1931, with Ina Claire, Joan Blondell and Madge Evans. Now being reissued nationally by Astor Pictures in New York.

TONIGHT OR NEVER, (United Artists-Goldwyn), originally released December 26th, 1931, with Gloria Swanson. Now being reissued nationally by Astor Pictures, New York.

TUMBLEWEEDS, originally released in 1925 with William S. Hart. Astor Pictures have acquired the film, added sound and are currently distributing the picture nationally.

VIVACIOUS LADY, (RKO-Radio), originally released May 13th, 1938 with Ginger Rogers and James Stewart.

CHAPLIN CITED AS GOOD-WILL BUILDER

Charlie Chaplin is more effective as a good-will builder for the United States than a dozen ambassadors, said Hubert Herring, who has returned to New York from Latin America where, as an author and traveler, he gathered material for a book. Lecturing at the Hotel Statler in Buffalo, N. Y., Mr. Herring advocated the use of motion picture and radio as a means to spread our cultural propaganda—"the propaganda of democracy"— to our southern neighbors. Mr. Herring said:

"Charlie Chaplin, in his film, 'The Great Dictator,' exerted a tremendous influence in those theatres in Latin America where it was allowed to be shown. Latin Americans like our good movies, and in the cultural drive to win their amity we should send our best movies. They are the most effective propaganda we have."

Atlas Cuts Capital

The Atlas Corporation, headed by Floyd B. Odlum, lowered its capitalization from $37,774,750 to $34,249,985 in a certificate of reduction filed with Earle D. Willey, secretary of state, at Dover, Del., last week. The company, one of the principal stockholders in RKO, will retire 704,953 shares of $5 par common stock.

General Theatres Income Up

General Theatres Equipment and subsidiaries, excluding Cinema Building Corporation, reports for the three months ended March 31st a consolidated net profit, after depreciation and estimated Federal income taxes at prevailing rates, of $256,886. This compares with $212,681 earned in the corresponding period last year.

Eastman Payroll Peak

Payroll of Eastman Kodak in Rochester reached a new high on April 19th when a total of 19,100 persons were employed there.

COLUMBIA PICTURES AND KAO ARE REFINANCING

Columbia Gets Three Millions to Retire Bonds; Deal On for Returning KAO Control to RKO

A $9,500,000 refunding operation under consideration by Keith-Albee-Orpheum, subsidiary of RKO, would involve loans from several New York and California banks, it was reported this week. Bankers Trust Company, of New York, is a leader, in conjunction with a Los Angeles institution, in forming a syndicate to float the issue, it was indicated. Reports that the First Boston Corporation was involved were denied. Equitable Life Assurance of New York was mentioned as a possible source of approximately $6,000,000 to be lent RKO for ten years at 4½ per cent interest.

A substantial portion of the refunding operation will be directed towards purchasing the M. J. Meehan shares in KAO. The Atlas Corporation currently holds under option an estimated 7,000 shares of Meehan stock in KAO. The refunding will permit the company to acquire the stock at about $750,000, the price paid by Atlas, reports indicate. They represent approximately 20 per cent of Meehan's KAO holdings. The remainder, about 20,000 shares, valued at approximately $2,500,000, is subject to an Atlas option.

RKO owns the bulk of common stock in KAO and about one third of the 64,300 outstanding preferred shares. When KAO defaulted dividends on the preferred several years ago, control of the RKO theatre subsidiary defaulted to stockholders, of whom M. J. Meehan held the majority of controlling shares. The refunding move is interpreted as a move to return control of KAO to the parent company, RKO.

Collateral for the loan is understood to include certain fee-owned theatres held by RKO. George J. Schaefer, president of RKO, at Hollywood, emphasized that the loan was for the purpose of repurchasing KAO preferred stock and retiring the B. F. Keith bonds, not to refinance RKO's six per cent preferred stock.

Columbia Retires Bonds, Borrows $3,000,000

Columbia Pictures has negotiated a $3,000,000 credit with three banks to retire bonds and cover future operational expansion. One-third of the sum has already been drawn to retire $1,000,000 worth of six-year, 4½ per cent indentures. The First National Bank of Boston, Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association and the Manhattan Company participated in the credit agreement.

CBS Quarter Report Shows Net Increase

Columbia Broadcasting Company reported a net profit of $1,487,685 for the first quarter of 1941 after all taxes and charges had been deducted, at the annual stockholders meeting in New York on April 16th. The profit, equal to a dividend of 87 cents a share on 1,716,277 outstanding shares of Class A and B stock, compared with a profit of $1,284,331, or 75 cents a share, for the first quarter of 1940.

William S. Paley, president, reported a substantial first quarter increase for the subsidiary Columbia Recording Corporation and predicted further gains for both the broadcasting and record firms during 1941. He warned against a possible reduction of profits through new taxes, however.

Reckon Paramount's Quarter at $2,600,000

Paramount's net earnings for the first quarter of 1941 will exceed that of the same quarter of 1940 by more than $1,000,000, it was heard in Wall Street Wednesday. It was estimated that earnings for the quarter ended March 27th will top $2,600,000. In the first quarter of 1940, Paramount earned approximately $1,606,000. The Paramount financial report will appear in about two weeks; and, if the current reports tally, the quarter will be the best since the reorganization in 1935.

Production Hits An All-Time High

plays since January 1st, including "Lady in the Dark," bought for $283,000, and "Louisiana Purchase," which cost the studio $150,000.

Of the 44 the company announced for 1940-41, all but three have been completed, while 11 have been completed or are shooting for 1941-42. These include "Reap the Wild Wind," with Ray Milland, John Wayne, Paulette Goddard, Susan Hayward, Robert Preston; "Skylark," with Claudette Colbert and Ray Milland; "The Great Man's Lady," with Barbara Stanwyck and Joel McCrea; "Hold Back the Dawn," with Charles Boyer, Olivia de Havilland and Paulette Goddard; "Nothing but the Truth," with Bob Hope and Paulette Goddard, and "Birth of the Blues," starring Bing Crosby and Mary Martin.

At Universal

Universal has been operating at maximum capacity during the whole month, with eight films constantly before the cameras. Fifty of the 59 features announced for this season have been finished, and four of next season's releases have been completed and another three are shooting.

Those completed are "Sing Another Chorus," "Hello, Sucker," "Oh, Charlie," and "Unfinished Business." The new season product now shooting consists of "Half Way to Shanghai," "Beyond the Law" and "Rhapsody in Stripes."

Columbia's Six Musicals

Of Columbia's 44 for 1940-41, 32 have been completed, seven are being prepared and four are shooting, leaving but one to go for the completion of the year's schedule. Indicative of the studio's operations at present is the fact that 40 writers are currently working on 31 properties, almost all of which are for next season. Additionally, Columbia's music department is now at peak capacity, with six musicals on the schedule.

Now being prepared for an early start, and slated for the balance of the current film year, are such Columbia properties as "Our Wife," first feature to be produced and directed for the studio by John Stahl; "Heaven Can Wait," starring Robert Montgomery; "Texas," starring William Holden and Glenn Ford; "Ladies in Retirement," which Lester Cowan will produce in association with Gilbert Miller; "He's My Uncle," co-starring Fred Astaire and Rita Hayworth, and "Tonight Belongs To Us," with Loretta Young.

At Edward Small's production center on the General Service lot, cameras are rolling on "G-Man versus Scotland Yard," starring George Brent, Ilona Massey and Basil Rathbone. This is the first of the eight films he plans for 1941-42, others including "The Corsican Brothers," with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., "Twin Beds," "Murderer's Holiday," "My Official Wife," "Heliotrope," "The Life of Valentino" and "Two Years Before the Mast."

Samuel Goldwyn is planning four films, most if not all of which will be for next season. Now shooting is "The Little Foxes," with Bette Davis. A Gary Cooper starring film is slated for a July start, when the picture on Hans Christian Anderson, made in conjunction with Walt Disney, is also scheduled to begin. In August, an aviation musical with a South American background, starring Bob Hope, is to go before the cameras.

Alexander Korda is currently shooting "Illusions," starring Merle Oberon. The picture is tentatively set for next season release.

Set to go before the cameras at the end of May is Sol Lesser's tentatively titled "Strange Victory," a Rose Franken story starring Martha Scott and directed by Reinhold Schunzel. This will be for next season release, as will the second Lesser-Lubitsch comedy to be released through United Artists, which will be made before Mr. Lubitsch goes over to Twentieth-Fox as a producer.

United Artists also has three pictures completed and not yet set for release: "William Sekely's "New Wine," Hal Roach's "Broadway Limited" and Gabriel Pascal's "Major Barbara."

Republic Writing 33

Unprecedented in Republic's history are the 34 writers now working there on 33 screen plays, a condition which made the studio turn the reception room of the recently completed writers' building into offices. For the month of April, a minimum of four films have been before the cameras daily, a schedule occupying nine producers and three producer-directors.

In active preparation for next year's program are 22 stories: "How To Die Young," "Newspapermen Are Human," "Gold in the Hills," "State Park," "Cindy," "King of the Texas Rangers" (a serial), "Alibi at Midnight," "Mr. District Attorney, No. Two" "Memphis Belle," "Pardon My Stripes," "Backdoor to Happiness," "White House Correspondent," "The Best American," "Gangs of Sonora," "Pirates On Horseback," "Hurricane Smith," "The Old Grey Mare," "Jason the Bucket," "The Big Bonanza," "Rose Parade," "Mercy Island" and an untitled comedy drama.

Monogram has in work the last two of the current season's 42 pictures, consisting of 26 features and 16 westerns. Four are in the cutting room and one of this group shooting.

RCA'S THEATRE TELEVISION IN TWO WEEKS, B. & K. READY IN ONE

Paramount Affiliate Equipping First-Run Chicago Houses; RCA Markets Theatre Equipment After Preview May 9th

Television in motion picture theatres is only a few days away, according to the Radio Corporation of America and the Paramount-DuMont-Balaban and Katz interests, which are readying for the race to break to exhibitors' screens.

Thomas F. Joyce, vice-president of RCA Manufacturing Company, announced, Tuesday, the company's official bid to interest motion picture exhibitors in television for their theatres, confirming reports that a "world's preview demonstration of theatre television will be held for leaders of the movie trade," and others at the New Yorker Theatre on West 54th Street on the evening of May 9.

Immediately following the demonstration, RCA will be ready to accept orders for television equipment for theatres in the New York area, and later in other key cities, including Chicago, Philadelphia and Los Angeles.

The Balaban and Katz-DuMont theatre television interests in Chicago announced this week that beginning Monday, April 28, six special television receivers will be installed at various points in the lobby of the Chicago theatre. Television pickups will also be made inside the theatre. Meanwhile the company's main transmitter atop the State-Lake theatre building was reported to be nearing completion.

Television programs on the special receivers set up in the Chicago theatre are expected to feature informal interviews picked up by a television installed in a temporary studio in the theatre and also carried by wire or transmitted from the main B & K television station in the State-Lake theatre building or from a mobile television unit. The B & K television station has been transmitting various types of programs including playlets performed by amateur and college players. What part films will play in B & K television has not been announced.

B & K-DuMont "theatre television" at this time is by means of small receivers placed inside the lobby and elsewhere around the theatre; RCA's theatre television has advanced to regular screen projection.

DuMont Equipment Tested

The Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, a Paramount television affiliate, also has announced that most of the equipment of its New York station, atop 515 Madison Avenue, has been installed and tested and the company "is rapidly mobilizing its technical and program facilities for anticipated commercialized television."

Columbia Broadcasting plans to be on the air in New York by June 1st with its color television system, according to Adrian Murphy, executive director of television. At that date delivery is expected on a small group of color television receivers for field tests. CBS announced this week that it is completing negotiations with several manufacturers for the sets which will be based on standards proposed by the broadcasting company.

The demonstration of RCA large-screen television at the New Yorker theatre on May 9th is to mark the official opening of the company's drive to sell television projectors to theatres in key cities.

The program which will be used to show the possibilities of large-screen television to motion picture exhibitors will feature the middleweight championship boxing bout between Billy Soose and Ken Overlin from Madison Square Garden, a news broadcast, plus a drama and roundtable discussion from the RCA-NBC television studios in Radio City.

RCA plans to market television projectors first in the New York area and then in such key cities as Los Angeles, Chicago, and Philadelphia.

The New York area and three other cities have already been surveyed for theatre television. New York has been divided into 44 "zones." Projectors will be available on a "first come first served" basis with only one permitted in each of the designated competitive zones, says RCA.

Cost of the first theatre television projectors is expected to be relatively high, as in the first days of sound motion pictures. Quantity production is expected to reduce the price of the television equipment and ultimately make it available to large theatres in key spots.

In January, the first demonstration of the RCA large-screen system was held in the New Yorker theatre for members of the Federal Communications Commission and the National Television Systems Committee. (See Motion Picture Herald, February 1, 1941, pages 30 and 31.)

RCA officials see two distinct television services for the future: one for homes and the other for theatres. Programs for theatres are expected to be chiefly sporting events. For example, it was said that there are some 65 events at Madison Square Garden, all suitable for television, each year.

Theatres equipped for television will have to acquire rights to carry a particular program from the organization putting on the event or from a special organization which will probably be set up to act as a clearing house for such rights. A certain percentage of the gross, or a payment of so much for each seat in the theatre will probably be charged by the company controlling the event.

In the beginning RCA would seek to have its equipment placed only in large theatres, seating from 2,000 to 5,000.

"In the presentation of large-screen television," RCA's Mr. Joyce said Monday, "promoters see the possibility of providing ringside seats to championship boxing bouts through television theatres in key cities throughout the United States. They visualize 1,000,000 or more people seeing a Joe Louis fight held in New York or Chicago. Of an even larger number of people witnessing a future baseball World Series."

Colonel J. R. Kilpatrick, president of Madison Square Garden Corporation, and Mike Jacobs, according to Mr. Joyce, are "two leading sports personalities who have already expressed their enthusiasm over the future of large-screen theatre television."

DuMont Station Nears Completion

The Paramount DuMont station in New York, W2XWV, has about finished installing and testing equipment, it was announced this week. The antenna is located 650 feet above 515 Madison Avenue, New York. The sight-part of the transmitter has a rating of 4,000 watts and 1,000 for sound (2,000 for FM sound).

Both 35 and 16 mm projectors have been installed for film use. "The pictures are projected through loopholes in the fireproof wall, on to the image-dissecting tube of the television pickup equipment." The television pickup-tube is mounted on wheels so that it can be lined up before whichever projector is being used.

A remote pickup transmitter, W10XKT, will be installed in a truck for use throughout the metropolitan area, the company said.

"It is the present opinion that much of the direct pickup program will be handled by remote pickup," the DuMont announcement concluded, adding: "With the early delivery and installation of two more units, the transmitting facilities will be completed, and Station W2XWV will be ready for its debut as an entertainer. With the anticipated granting of commercial television licenses, or at least limited commercial, this station will be available for scheduled programs."

DuMont also has announced that fluorescent illumination has reduced glare and heat to a minimum in the television studios. DuMont engineers have installed 24 fluorescent lamps, totalling 960 watts in the New York studio. For dramatic or modeling effects, one or more "baby" spotlights are added to the general fluorescent lighting.

B & K's Theatre Television Tests

Paramount's Balaban and Katz Circuit, in Chicago, announced that, beginning April 28th, six television receivers will be installed in the lobby of the Chicago theatre. The machines will be used for special tests and demonstrations. A television camera will also be set up in the theatre. The theatre tests are intended to increase public interest in television in the Chicago area. Balaban and Katz, at the FCC March television hearing in Washington, stated that the organization was ready to go ahead with immediate commercial television operations.

Construction of the television antenna mast atop the B. & K. Chicago State-Lake theatre building, meanwhile, was nearing completion. About 50 additional feet had to be added to bring it to the designed height of 400 feet above street level.

The B. & K. station at present using low power and a smaller, lower antenna system, is engaged in experimental transmissions from studios on the top floor of the State-Lake Build-

FILMS ABSOLVED AS FATAL FIRE CAUSE

The discovery of eight cans of films in the debris of the Strand theatre in Brockton, Mass., led investigators to discard the theory that exploding films had contributed to the disaster in which 13 lives were lost some weeks ago. Thirteen firemen met death on March 10th fighting the blaze when the building collapsed. Workmen engaged in demolishing the interior of the structure found the 20,000 feet of film in sealedc ontainers. The film was turned over to Proven Pictures Corp., which operated the house. Reports were that the film was still in good condition.

Producers, Unions Delay New Pact, Awaiting NLRB

Producers and the heads of the five international unions in the basic studio labor agreement continued this week to delay negotiations on a new pact, pending findings of the National Labor Relations Board anent disputed classifications of studio workers. Meanwhile the Screen Actors' Guild in Hollywood appeared scheduled to obtain from the producers a series of revisions in its contract which may mean $500,000 more in wages to extras and actors of small earnings.

The demands of the Actors' Guild were presented to the producers some while ago; decision of the latter was expected this week. The demands involve reclassification of extra players' earnings. It was rumored the $8.25 and $11 calls would be replaced by a standard $10 call; that $5.50 extras would not be used as extensively, under the new order.

A result of the producers' meeting this week might be a decision to abolish the standing committee, composed of representatives of producers and the Guild, and which has cost approximately $36,000 a year. The Guild has recommended the committee's abolition.

Report Office Worker Meeting

Meanwhile, Pat Casey, producers' labor contact, who has been in New York to discuss, with major company executives, and with heads of the international unions, the site, time, and agenda, of the forthcoming negotiations to renew the five-year basic studio labor agreement, this week was reported to have assumed, for the producers, representation in conferences with the American Federation of Office Employees, which is seeking a contract in the Albany exchanges of Warners, RKO, Universal, Republic, and Twentieth Century-Fox. The union had been negotiating separately with the companies.

The Screen Publicists Guild last week unanimously elected Harry Hochfeld, artist, of Twentieth Century-Fox, first vice-president, replacing Joseph Chasin, resigned from Warner Brothers and the Guild.

The Guild's display of art works by its membership opened Sunday at the gallery of the Barbizon Plaza Hotel, New York, and will run through next Wednesday.

The Wilkes-Barre projectionists local, No. B96, will hold its first annual dinner May 2nd. Ruth Martin is chairman for the affair. On various committees are Robert McWilliams, Mary Freeman, Dorothy Peters, Eva Davis, Eugene Carroll, Karl Thomas. William Tosline, Loretta Stewart, Marion O'Neill, Thomas Groves, William Rosline.

In Detroit, the theatre managers' union is asking recognition from the Moss Brothers' and Krim Brothers' circuits. Last week, the union won its strike against the Palmer Park Theatre, with manager Walter Morgan being reemployed.

Walter P. Spreckels has become labor counsel to the Walt Disney Studio, Hollywood. He had been Los Angeles regional director for the National Labor Relations Board.

ST. LOUIS GROUPS HIT DUAL BILLS

The Better Film Council of Greater St. Louis has elected the following officers for the coming year: Mrs. Jacob Lashly, wife of the president of the American Bar Association, president; Mrs. Edgar Littman, Mrs. Lilly Albrecht, Mrs. Leslie T. Barco and Mrs. John Sheply, vice-presidents; Mrs. George Attlage, recording secretary; Mrs. H. S. Tremain, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Thomas G. Donnell, treasurer, and Mrs. Al Biermann, auditor. Mrs. A. F. Burt, honorary president and chairman of the council's advisory committee, reported about 35 groups in St. Louis and vicinity have endorsed the council's bill aimed at eliminating double and triple features and now pending in the Missouri Legislature.

Theatre Television Within Two Weeks

ing. These tests are being conducted by William C. Eddy, who is in charge of television for Balaban and Katz.

To carry out the experiments about a dozen receivers have been placed in various sections of Chicago to check the reception of the programs.

Programs are being broadcast daily at five P.M., but in the near future several such programs will be telecast several times daily.

Many types of amateur performers and college dramatic players have appeared on the programs.

Balaban & Katz's W9XBK uses the DuMont system of 525 lines per image.

Mr. Eddy said that the B. & K. station had received permission from the Federal Communications Commission to operate a transmitter on the 384-396 mc. band for special experimental work in the upper spectrum and for relay uses. The regular B. & K. television transmitter operates on the 60-66 mc. band, television channel No. 2.

Don Lee Station Resumes Television

W6XAO, Don Lee station in Hollywood, has resumed television operations. Programs had been discontinued for some months pending construction of a new station and a change in the assigned television channel.

Wynn Joins RKO

Ted Wynn, formerly motion picture editor of the Milwaukee Post, has been placed in charge of RKO field exploitation in the Buffalo and Albany districts, by Terry Turner head of the field staff. James Boyle, formerly with the home office publicity department in New York and more recently with the up-state New York exploitation staff, will be transferred to Chicago, where he will assist Robert Hickey.

Theatres Reduce Admission

First-run theatres in San Francisco have adopted a new "junior admission" scale, reaching a top of 25 cents at night. Second-run houses have also announced the same policy with 15 cents highest in the afternoon and 18 cents at night.

Newspaper Owners Form War Chest to Fight FM-Air Ban

The publishers of America's newspapers, stung by the United States Government's halting of their Frequency-Modulation broadcasting expansions, organized this week to fight the issue.

The newspaper publishers, who operate approximately 32 per cent of the nation's radio stations, gathered in New York Tuesday for a special FM-radio conference, preliminary to the annual convention of the American Newspaper Publishers Association. They voted a $200,000 radio "war chest" and established a permanent organization to defend their interests in both standard and Frequency Modulation broadcasting before the Federal Communications Commission. More than 200 representatives of papers and radio stations, large and small, attended the meeting.

Mark Ethridge, general manager of the Louisville Courier-Journal and Times headed the preliminary survey committee which recommended establishing a permanent publishers' radio board. Because of a new assignment from President Roosevelt to survey the country's radio situation, Mr. Ethridge resigned his chairmanship of the publishers' committee group. Harold V. Hough, publisher of the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, succeeds him. Tennant Bryan, of the Richmon News Leader, is treasurer.

Open Headquarters

The publishers will open a permanent office adjacent to ANPA headquarters at New York and appoint an executive director and legal staff in preparation for the FCC hearings questioning joint ownership of radio and newspapers.

The $200,000 radio fund will be assessed against press-radio owners on the basis of their radio income. Assessments will range from $50 for stations grossing up to $15,000 annually to $10,000 from stations earning $1,000,000 or more.

Former Federal Judge Thomas D. Thacher, author of the "Thacher decision," which outlawed the original motion picture compulsory arbitration system in 1930, and who acted for Paramount during the 1940 film consent decree hearings, is legal counsel for the publishers' radio committee. Sidney Kaye, counsel for Broadcast Music, Inc., will assist him.

The Federal Communications Commission is attempting to work out a policy on newspaper ownership of broadcasting stations which will prevent newspaper interests from getting control of radio without being so inflexible as to work to the detriment of either the papers, broadcasting or the public, FCC Chairman James L. Fly told members of the Senate last week.

Blake Takes Office

Foster Blake has arrived in Seattle to assume management of the Universal branch, succeeding L. J. McGinley, who has been promoted to a California post. Mr. Blake was formerly a salesman out of Seattle, and more recently was in California.

EXHIBITORS FILING ARBITRATION CASES AT THE RATE OF 16 A MONTH

First Pacific Coast Cases Filed at Los Angeles and Portland; One Action Settled; Two Cases Won by Distributors

Independent exhibitors are seeking relief from local trade practice grievances at the rate of about 16 a month under provisions of the Government's "Big 5" consent decree settlement and the arbitration system created thereby. Forty-nine cases have been filed since arbitration became effective on February 1st. The pace is expected to quicken considerably. Six new cases were filed this week.

Activity on the arbitration front has shifted to the West Coast, where the first cases were filed this week at the Los Angeles and Portland boards.

On Friday of last week two clearance cases were filed in Los Angeles and one "some run" demand in Portland. Other new cases were filed in Dallas and Philadelphia.

Helen Weisenberg, operator of the Sun theatre, Rochester, N. Y., withdrew a clearance complaint filed against the "Big 5" (Buffalo Case No. 3). A compromise settlement was reached before a hearing was held.

The "some run" complaint of Charles K. Woolner of the Drive-In theatre (Modern Theatre, Inc.) against Paramount (New Orleans Case No. 1) was dismissed Tuesday by Phillip E. James, arbitrator. The hearing had been held on April 5th and 16th. Mr. James ruled that the exhibitor would not agree to buy more than five films even when more were offered by Paramount. The original hearing had been private in violation of the policy set up for the motion picture arbitration system by the Department of Justice and the American Arbitration Association. The "verdict", however, was readily given to the press by the New Orleans local office.

Mr. James said that the exhibitor had thought that the "block-of-five" provision of the consent decree had already gone into effect and wished to license only five picture at a time. That provision of the degree goes into effect September 1st. The arbitrator said that Paramount has clearly indicated its willingness to so license on reasonable terms, and if the complainant does not consider these terms reasonable he will be granted the relief desired under the consent decree after August 31st.

Philadelphia's First Decision

A decision in the first arbitration case in the Philadelphia area and the filing of a fourth case, both on Tuesday, marked the activity of the local arbitration board this week. Robert J. Callaghan, Philadelphia attorney, arbitrating the clearance complaint of the Florence Theatre in Florence, N. J., filed March 3rd, and heard April 4th, totally disallowed the claim of the independent theatre. John Geyser, president of the High Bridge Corp. operating the house, sought clearance of pictures immediately following the Fox theatre in Burlington, N. J., operated by Ben Amsterdam's independent Atlantic Theatres circuit. The complaint was registered against the five consenting major distributors.

The fourth complaint was entered by Bryant Wiest, operator of the Hollywood Theatre, Elizabeth, Pa., against M-G-M, asking for the same clearance and availability, under Section 8 of the consent decree, as the Theatorium theatre in Lykens, Pa. He pointed out that he has been operating the house for the past four years, and in all that time, has maintained the same box-office scale while other houses in the territory have continually cut admissions.

The first complaint in the Los Angeles arbitration territory was filed by O. W. Lewis, Mission Playhouse, San Gabriel, Calif. All five companies which signed the consent decree were named. Clearance in the San Gabriel area is the subject of the dispute. It was asserted that all the houses in that region should not be required to wait 28 days after Pasadena first runs.

George Bromley and Alex Moungh, operators of the Campus theatre, Los Angeles, filed the second arbitration demand in Los Angeles. Clearance was involved and the "Big 5" were cited. Also named were the Sunset, Clinton and Huntley's theatres. A clearance adjustment was requested so that the plaintiff could raise admission from 15c to 20c. Delayed availability was attached.

In Portland, Ore., P. R. Henderson of the Rialto, Albany, Ore., filed a "some run" petition against Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Twentieth Century-Fox, RKO Radio and Warner.

A "some run" demand was filed in Dallas by Ruben Frels, operator of the Normana in El Campo, Texas (Dallas Case No. 2). All five distributors which are parties to the decree were named.

Also in Dallas, L. M. Rice of the Campus, College Station, Texas, filed a clearance complaint (Dallas Case No. 3) against the "Big 5." The Palace, Dixie and Queens at Bryan, Texas, were also named. It was said that those theatres have from 30 to 45 days clearance over the Campus and a reduction is requested.

In Milwaukee on Tuesday at the opening of the arbitration hearing brought by the Evansville Theatre, Inc. of Evansville, Wis. (Milwaukee Case No. 1) against Paramount, E. W. Peck, attorney for the plaintiff, introduced as evidence what he claimed was a zoning and clearance schedule for Milwaukee county and the state established in 1930 and revised in 1933. The Jeffris in Janesville was named as an interested party in the clearance complaint.

Harry Perlewitz, business manager of the Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin, testified that to his knowledge the schedule is still operative. It provides, he declared, among other things, that any theatre in a key town charging less than 30 cents evening admission shall receive no clearance beyond the city limits.

A reprint from the September 12, 1930 issue of the Exhibitors Herald-World (now MOTION PICTURE HERALD) was entered as an exhibit by Mr. Peck. The reprint was from pages 28 and 29 of that issue which carried the complete text of the committee's zoning plan and a news story saying that the plan goes into effect on September 17 following its adoption at the two-day convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners at Gonring's Resort, Cedar Lake. The plan was said to have been agreed upon by a joint committee of the Film Board of Trade and exhibitors.

Mr. Peck also introduced what was said to be the minutes of the negotiating committee. The introduction of the minutes and the reprint from Exhibitors Herald-World were protested by Stephen Keane, counsel for Paramount, and E. H. Hallows, representing the Jeffries Company. It was asserted that the reprint was immaterial to the issue at hand and that the committee minutes were not the original ones but copies.

Other witnesses called were A. D. Kvool, general manager of the Jeffris Theatre Company and the Saxe Amusement Management, Inc., and Frank C. Clark, Paramount branch manager in Milwaukee. Both men disclaimed any knowledge of an existing zoning and clearance schedule for the state.

The hearing was to resume on Thursday. Professor Thomas P. Whelan of Marquette University is arbitrator and S. S. Perry, assistant director of the motion picture tribunals for AAA, was an observer.

Protests New York Clearances

In New York another hearing was held Tuesday on the petition of the Esquire Corporation, headed by Herbert Scheftel, operator of the Squire theatre in Great Neck, Long Island (New York Case No. 2). The hearing before George A. Spiegelberg, arbitrator was postponed to May 1.

Mr. Scheftel has been active in the newsreel theatre business but the Squire theatre is his first regular house. He is head of the company operating Telenews theatres in San Francisco, Chicago, Cleveland and Detroit. It was said that Great Neck has grown to such an extent that it needs a theatre in addition to the Playhouse, a Skouras Theatre, and that the 30 days clearance given the Playhouse over the Squire was "unreasonable."

The complaint of the Shirley Theatre Corporation in Cape Girardeau, Mo. (St. Louis Case No. 2) scheduled for a hearing last week in the St. Louis offices of the AAA, has been postponed to allow the exhibitor and the five companies and owners of the two opposition houses in the city to try to reach a settlement. If no settlement on the clearance complaint is reached by May 1, hearings will be started.

George H. Engelgard has been named arbitrator of the clearance case brought by Charles Meyerson, Lyric, Oyster Bay, Long Island (New York Case No. 7) against the "Big 5" and naming the Glen Cove and Huntington in those towns.

Henry Channing will hear the Boston Case No. 3 brought by Lucien des Coteau of Manchester, N. H. Clearance is also the subject under consideration and the five theatre-owning distributors were cited. The State Operating Company of Manchester was named as an interested party.

Arbitration Cases Filed 16 a Month

the parties failed to agree among themselves on an arbitrator.

Two new local board managers have been appointed by the AAA to succeed men who have resigned to take other positions. On Monday John Rawson, Albany attorney, succeeded Robert Elliot as clerk of the Albany board. Mr. Elliot has taken a position outside the motion picture industry. In Memphis Jack Harman has been replaced as board manager by Bruce Ely, 45 years old, formerly sales and promotion manager for the Shell Petroleum Company of Tennessee.

The clearance case (New York No. 5) brought by the River Theatre Corporation, operator of the Central, Pearl River, against the "Big 5" and naming two Skouras Theatres, the Pascack and Westwood, will be heard on May 7.

After five days of hearings the Washington No. 3 case brought by Lee H. Homand, Westway, Baltimore, against MGM, Warners and 20th-Fox and naming the Durkee Circuit was concluded. Sefton Darr, arbitrator, ordered the attorneys to file their briefs within ten days.

There are now no cases pending in Washington where the first action in the country was filed February 7. The second case was withdrawn after a settlement had been reached.

The hearing of the "some run" case (New Orleans No. 3) of Charles K. Woolner, operator of the Drive-In theatre, against Warner Bros. was postponed to May 13. It had been scheduled for Tuesday. Dr. Paul Brosman will be the arbitrator.

Illness of counsel for the plaintiff has made it necessary to postpone to May 10 the hearing of the arbitration complaint filed by Julius L. and Milton London, operators of the Booth, Detroit, (Detroit Case No. 2). Paramount, RKO, Warners and 20th-Fox were named. L. J. Carey has been named arbitrator.

Dean Terrill, vice-president of the Kexlym Oil Co., has been named arbitrator of Oklahoma City Case No. 1, a "some run" demand filed by J. D. Guest of the Ritz theatre, Duncan, Okla., against Warners. John Carroll, a lawyer, will be the Arbitrator in the action brought by E. K. Menagh, Star theatre, Fort Lupton, Colo., (Denver Case No. 2), against the "Big 5."

$55,000,000 MORE IN TICKET TAXES WITH EXEMPTIONS CUT TO 9 CENTS

Federal Tax Proposals Increase Theatre, Income, Corporation Assessments; Hint Return to World War Amusement Levies

Reduction of the federal admission tax exemption from 20 to nine cents to bring an additional $55,000,000 in revenue was reported this week in Washington to have received the approval of Treasury and Congressional leaders.

Under the plan proposed for the new revenue bill the present base of one cent tax on each 10 cents of admission would be retained instead of increasing the percentage to 15 or 20. The rate has never been more than 10 per cent even in the worst days of World War I.

Tax experts said that the progressive reduction in the exemption from 40 to 20 cents last July 1 and now to nine cents will bring the Treasury an increase of approximately $100,000,000 per year in taxes from the theatre-going public over what was collected prior to July 1, 1940.

New Revenue Bill Hearings To Begin

On Thursday of this week the House Ways and Means Committee was to begin hearings on the new revenue bill with Henry Morgenthau, Secretary of the Treasury as the first witness. During the hearings specific proposals for increased taxes will be discussed. There is a possibility, it was said, that if the nine-cent exception proposed for admission tickets was altered by the House Committee, the World War I reel tax might be revived to gain the additional revenue expected from the reduction of the exceptional level from 20 cents to nine cents. In World War I the tax was 15 cents per reel on every film shipment and all admissions were taxed at the rate of one cent for each 10 cents or fraction thereof.

The reduction to nine cents, which would be the second within a year, if passed by Congress, would provide an additional $55,000,000 of revenue over the approximately $70,000,000 which nine months' return indicate will be collected at the present base of 20 cents.

Immediate increases in admission taxes, in individual income tax rates and in corporation levies were foreseen in Washington this week as soon as Congress began its job of framing a revenue bill to raise $3,500,000,000 a year.

That sum, it was disclosed last week by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, had been agreed upon by Administration and Congressional leaders as the goal of the 1941 tax bill, bringing the expected tax revenue to $12,667,000,000 a year.

Still in the preliminary stages of their work, members of Congress have not yet divulged details of the new bill, and speculation is rife in Washington as to how the additional revenue will be raised.

That income tax rates will be higher is a foregone conclusion. Corporation rates may be increased 25 per cent or more, individual rates anywhere from 20 to 50 per cent. The eight per cent return now allowed corporations before application of the excess profits tax probably will be reduced to six per cent and the tax extended to partnerships operating on fixed capital. It is expected, also, that in its search for new sources of revenue Congress will return to some of the excise taxes of the first World War period, such as the levies on bank checks, insurance policies and soft drinks.

There is even discussion of a tax on pay rolls, to be collected at the source, or of a general sales tax, from which the Administration has shied for years.

The Treasury program calls for meeting two-thirds of the Government's expenditures by taxes and one-third by borrowing. This means that, even if the nearly $13,000,000,000 tax revenue is realized in full, the Treasury will have to borrow $6,000,000,000 during the coming fiscal year. Much of this, it is hoped, can be raised through the sale of defense bonds and savings stamps to the general public, for which an intensive drive will be initiated by the Treasury May 1.

TICKET TAXES NOW AT 7 MILLIONS A MONTH

Again topping the $7,000,000 mark, for the first time since last November, Federal admission tax collections reached $7,104,956 in March, an increase of $600,000 over the February total of $6,495,284 and $4,714,000 the March, 1940, collections of $2,390,932, it was reported this week by the U. S. Internal Revenue Bureau at Washington.

The Bureau's monthly report was featured by the disclosure that while collections nationally reversed the downward trend of the preceding three months, receipts in the Third New York (Broadway) District, dropped precipitantly from $1,591,157 in February to $650,007 in March, the lowest total for any month since last August and but slightly above the $647,532 of March a year ago.

Nine months of application of the lower 20-cent exemption has brought the Treasury an increased revenue of $36,048,745, it was disclosed. Receipts from July 1 to March 31, inclusive, it was stated, reached $52,499,059 compared with $16,450,315 in the corresponding period a year ago.

Tax Developments In the Field

The Louisiana State Supreme Court has upheld the City of New Orleans' two per cent sales tax, reversing a lower court decision outlawing the law last March. The tax starts with a one cent levy on 13-cent purchases and applies to film accessory sales and rentals but does not tax admissions. State Representative De Lesseps Morrison, attorney for the plaintiff, said he would ask Governor Sam Jones to call a special session of the legislature to "repeal the city sales tax and prohibit any suits for the collection of such taxes." The levy is expected to raise $3,000,000 a year.

Wisconsin observers predicted this week that the state legislature would end its sessions by June 1st, before two pending film tax measures reach consideration. The bills, calling for a 50 cent assessment on each 1,000 feet of film and a ten per cent occupational tax on rentals over $500 are expected to die on the docket.

The Munhall, Pa., Borough Council threatened to tax the town's only theatre, the 568-seat Park, this week when it weighed a bill levying $3 a month on theatres with less than 300 seats and one cent a month per seat for additional seats. The measure was still pending at midweek.

First Florida bill affecting theatres appeared in the state legislature, in session since April 1st, this week when a proposal to tax theatre tickets was added to a revenue bill in the house. The amendment provides a one cent tax on 15-cent tickets and an additional cent on each ten cents until the tax reaches ten cents on a dollar admission.

Illinois legislators predicted that if the three per cent state sales tax is reduced to two cents, and revenue proves insufficient the house will pass a levy on theatre admissions and increase liquor and cigaret taxes.

Exhibitors Will Press Daylight Saving Fight

Although many sections of the country move clocks forward with the start of daylight saving early Sunday morning exhibitors continued their opposition to the measure in several states. At St. Louis, Fred Wehrenberg, president of the St. Louis MPTOA, announced that theatre owners would join labor groups in opposing a daylight time ordinance pending before the board of aldermen. Previous attempts to introduce the summer time have been defeated.

In Louisville, Ky., the city's effort to adopt daylight time appeared headed for a court test after Governor Keen Johnson refused to approve a city measure adopting saving time. He questioned the constitutionality of a state law making gubernatorial approval necessary to changing Louisville time schedules. Meanwhile Mayor Joseph D. Scholtz announced the city would pass its daylight law on advice of Attorney General Hubert Meredith and would defend the measure if there is a court test of the governor's approval powers.

C. W. Krebs, secretary of the Kentucky MPTO, said that although a Junior Board of Trade poll showed a majority of Louisvillians in favor of the clock advance, a survey of motion picture audiences showed opposition by an overwhelming majority of the patrons.

Altoona, Pa., through its city council, has adopted daylight saving time, effective April 27th for the first time since the World War. Many of the city's workers are engaged in defenese industries working night, or split daytime shifts.

A bill designed to prevent the extension of daylight time in Illinois beyond the period from the last Sunday in April to the last Sunday in September was presented in the house this week by Representative Thomas A. Bolger. The law would prohibit Chicago and other large cities from extending the daylight period.

Renew Fight on Sunday Films at Harrisburg

The Pennsylvania House last week approved amendments to the O'Brien bill which would make it more difficult to initiate referenda on Sunday films in Pennsylvania communities. The law raises the percentage of voters who must sign a referendum petition from five to 35 per cent of the total registration. Originally the law specified signatures from 51 per cent of the electorate. A bill introduced in the Senate by H. Jerome Jaspan provides a referendum on primary election day, 1942, for cities wishing to lift Sunday restrictions on business and entertainment.

NATIONAL VARIETY CALLS INDUSTRY FORUM, TAKING CUE FROM THE FIELD

For the First Time, Variety Club Convention Will Turn Spotlight on the State of the Industry and Its Problems of the Day

The complex state of the industry, with its growing problems attendant upon the changeover to the "new order" under the Government's consent decree, the effect of the war and national emergency on production, distribution and exhibition, the consent decree, serious taxation problems; these and other matters of import to all branches of the motion picture will come up for airing, in open forum, in one of the first national, "all-out" gatherings of representatives from all branches to be held in this industry in years.

Taking its cue from similar forums arranged locally by regional Variety Clubs, National Variety has decided to extend the idea to national proportions at its annual convention, in Atlantic City, May 15th through 17th.

Idea Tried in the Field

The new medium for bringing all factions of the industry together locally to air industry problems both pending and potential started some weeks ago when local Variety Clubs commenced to invite exhibitors, distributors and others territorially affiliated, to forums to discuss such matters as arbitration, legislation, taxation and the like. Theretofore confining activities to philanthrophies and social, the local organizations thereby stepped into serious consideration of actual industry affairs, acting as the only groups of their kind to which all local industry factions are tied in membership.

Cincinnati, for example, turned over its Tent quarters, in mid-March, for general trade discussions of arbitration and the decree. Omaha set a similar meeting this week, with representatives of all branches invited to participate.

Producer-distributor representatives are scheduled to "answer" exhibitors' questions at the Atlantic City forum, to be held from 2 to 5 P.M. on Thursday afternoon, May 15th, after the delegates have finished registering and after they have been on the boat rides and fishing parties scheduled for that noon.

Among producers' representatives who have already signified they will attend are Nate Blumberg, president of Universal; William Scully, its general sales manager, and Frank McCarthy, its eastern district sales manager; George Schaefer, president of RKO; Henderson M. Richey, director of exhibitor relations for MGM; Tom Connors, that company's eastern division manager; Ted O'Shea, its central division manager, and Howard Dietz, its advertising and publicity director; Walter Wanger, producer, and president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, and Frank Capra, producer, among others.

National figures who have accepted invitations are John Nance Garner, former vice-president; Frank C. Walker, Postmaster General; J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice; Jack Dempsey; Bobby Jones, former champion golfer; Joan Bennett, Heddy Lamarr, Carole Lombard and Carole Landis; William McCraw, former attorney general of Texas, et al.

Fox-National Theatres circuit will be represented by Spyros Skouras; the Wilby-Kincey, by Robert Wilby, with other theatre leaders.

This week almost one thousand reservations were said to have been made. John Harris, Variety's national chief barker, said the convention would probably bring together the largest number of theatre operators ever assembled at one time. He added leading heads of all national and of all independent circuits, had given pledges of attendance.

Following the open forum Thursday afternoon, delegates will be free to attend private dinner parties, and go on sight-seeing trips, from 5 P.M. until 8 P.M. At the latter time Variety men are scheduled to attend a boxing show at the Atlantic City Auditorium, a feature of which will be wrestling by women.

Business Session Friday

On Friday, from 10 A.M. until 12 P.M. and from 2 P.M. until 5 P.M., there will be the annual business session, in the Traymore Hotel's Grand Ballroom.

The local tents will report their charitable activities during the past year, and their plans for next. They will disclose how much was spent on each charity; and will pledge certain amounts and activities, to be fulfilled before the next convention.

Officers will be elected.

All other business will be acted upon, it is expected, before the close of the afternoon session.

On Friday at 7:30 P.M. there will be a "Night of Nights" in the Westminster Room of the Hotel Chelsea. Features of this will be a buffet supper. Entertainment is being arranged by Harry Mayer. It will include talent from New York shows.

Also during the evening the "Calcutta Pool" will be conducted by Robert O'Donnell, of the Interstate circuit, of Texas. This will auction off the players for the tournament Saturday morning—the National Variety Clubs' Golf Tournament of Champions.

From 8 A.M. until 12 P.M. Saturday the tournament noted will be held. Players from every tent will compete. There will be the usual Variety Club trophies. There will also be 20 special prizes, one from each tent.

At 12 P.M. there will be the Boardwalk Parade, with bands and floats, and with tent barkers in the costumes of their territories. The parade will terminate at the Auditorium, at which a circus will be held from 2 P.M. until 4 P.M.

At this circus the Variety delegates will be hosts to several thousand children from institutions, and to other children of the area, all of whom are to be admitted free.

Mayor Thomas Taggart, Jr., of Atlantic City, has commended the Variety Clubs for the circus idea, and also for the announced intention of repeating the show the evening of Saturday, May 17th, at a nominal admission, for adults and children, the proceeds to go to local charities and the Variety Clubs' National Charity Fund.

From 4 P.M. to 6 P.M. United Artists will hold a cocktail party. This will be the only such event sponsored by a major. Executives, producers and sales personnel of the company will be hosts.

At 7:30 P.M. that night the final banquet will be held in the Traymore. The dais will hold men prominent in every field. Stars of stage, screen and radio will appear. Feature of the evening will be the annual presentation of the Humanitarian Award, won last year by Miss Martha Berry, and the year before by Father Flanagan.

Bob O'Donnell and Paul Short, both representing the Dallas tent, are to leave that city by airplane next Tuesday for the West Coast to complete arrangements for the attendance at the convention of numerous stars, executives and other personalities of Hollywood.

The two men and Mr. Wanger, previously mentioned, are chairmen of the Variety Clubs' Honored Guests Committee.

Field Activities

Kenneth T. Collins, chief barker of the Indianapolis Tent No. 10, asserted last week it will have raised $12,000 for charity between April 1, 1940, and May 1 of this year. Included in the benevolences are a blood bank for the Indiana University hospital, psychiatric equipment for the city schools, Greek War Relief, and aid to the film industry's indigent.

The ladies' auxiliary of the Philadelphia Variety Club has presented the men's group with $1,000 for its infantile paralysis fund.

The Preakness Ball, usually given in Baltimore the evening of the running of the race, will be revived this year by the city's Variety Club, of which C. W. Hicks is chief barker. The affair this year will be the evening of May 10th.

ACADEMY TO CORRELATE ALL SOUND DEFINITIONS

Darryl F. Zanuck, chairman of the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, has announced the appointment of a subcommittee under the chairmanship of Thomas T. Moulton, of the Goldwyn studios, to prepare definitions for performance characteristics of sound recording systems and theatre sound reproducing systems.

The subcommittee will attempt to correlate all of the various terms used to specify sound quality as affected by sound recording and sound reproducing systems. The work of this committee is a part of the general standardization activities of the Research Council.

Membership of the committee, which will function under the Council's Basic Sound Committee, consists, in addition to Chairman Moulton, of John K. Hilliard, Dr. Burton F. Miller, Loren Ryder, Charles Sawyer, George Urey, and Gordon S. Mitchell, manager of the Research Council.

NEW EXHIBITOR UNITS IN S. C., IOWA; THREE STATE GROUPS CALL MEETINGS

Virginia MPTO Calls Convention for July 13; Indiana ATO Elects Johnson, Wolf; Wisconsin and Arkansas Independents Meet

One more exhibitor organization appeared this week, the South Carolina Theatre Owners Association, headed by R. R. Bryant, of Rock Hill, S. C. At the same time, the Allied Theatre Owners of Nebraska and Iowa neared reorganization. It will include circuit and affiliated theatres. Meanwhile, the board of directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Virginia met last week in Richmond, and discussed, among other matters, the forthcoming summer convention at Old Point Comfort; the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana elected officers; the Independent Theatre Owners Association of Arkansas is preparing for its annual convention May 11th and 12th in Little Rock; and the Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin and upper Michigan is to have a district meeting at Antigo, Wis., May 3rd.

South Carolina's TOA

Meeting at Columbia, South Carolina, Tuesday, April 15th, theatre owners of that state formed the South Carolina Theatre Owners Association, and elected the following officers: R. R. Bryant, of Rock Hill, president; Lee Little, of Camden, and Boyd Brown, of Winnesboro, vice-presidents; Warren Irvin, of Columbia, M. F. Schnibbin, of Florence, A. I. Mason, of Laurens, and J. C. Long, of Charleston, directors. A secretary and treasurer will be chosen later.

Mr. Bryant has invited all independent exhibitors of the state, to join.

New Iowa-Nebraska Unit

The board of directors of the Allied Theatre Owners of Nebraska and Iowa is to decide, soon, on a plan of reorganization of the unit, to include all theatre owners of the two states. Their decision will be presented then to a meeting to be held in Des Moines.

Leo Wolcott, president of the organization, described the plans last week. He said the new setup would probably have a paid secretary, under supervision of the board and the officers. He added the reason for including all types of theatre operation, affiliated as well as independent, was to adjust differences within the ranks of exhibition, rather than take them to arbitration, litigation, and, eventually, legislation.

He added the money saved by such settlement would be applied to organization finances, always a problem, he noted. Such finances, he remarked, might then be put in such shape they might be used for support of beneficial legislation, rather than in constant opposition to harmful legislation. He also stated:

"On the other hand, opponents of the plan state frankly that they feel the independent exhibitors would lose their identity, individual political importance, and the force of their numbers, and would be shoved into the background and rendered impotent by the circuits and affiliated theatres.

"But, personally, I have given a lot of thought to the thing during the past three years, and I feel independent exhibitors should study the idea carefully, and, in the final analysis, decide what is best for themselves, because unless we go into any organization wholeheartedly, it will never work.

"And, whatever we do, I feel the local organization should be fully developed before even considering any national affiliation."

Virginia MPTO Summer Plans

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Virginia are to hold their summer convention July 13th and 14th at the Chamberlin Hotel, Old Point Comfort, that state. This was made known at the directors' meeting last week in Richmond, at which, also, Sydney Gates, Norfolk exhibitor, was elected chairman of the convention.

Other matters discussed included the favorable decision by the unit, to distribute throughout the state the films recently made by MGM cameramen, of Governor Price and his State Defense Commission. William Crockett, president of the organization, was one of those instrumental in having MGM make the films.

Indiana ATO Elects

Herbert Johnson has been elected vice-president, and Marc J. Wolf, treasurer, of the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana. Mr. Johnson is operator of the Ohio and Madison theatres, Madison, and of the Ritz and Palace theatres, Rensselaer. He succeeds Ernest L. Miller, of Indianapolis. Mr. Wolf is associated with Theatrical Managers, Inc., and succeeds Harry Markun, of Indianapolis.

Annual Arkansas Meeting

The Independent Theatre Owners Association of Arkansas will convene in Little Rock's Hotel Marion, May 11th and 12th. Officers are O. G. Wren, Little Rock, president; W. E. Malin, Augusta, vice-president; and K. K. King, Searcy, secretary.

The dates were decreed at a directors' meeting in Little Rock recently.

Wisconsin Unit To Meet

A district meeting of the Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin and upper Michigan will be held May 3rd in Antigo, Wisconsin. John Hanus, operator of the Home Theatre, Antigo, is chairman in charge of arrangements.

LUKAN ASKS AID IN SINGLES TIFF

L. O. Lukan, of the Independent Theatre Owners of Washington, Northern Idaho, and Alaska, this week invited "all persons interested in a single bill policy in theatres," and who may have material helpful to those fighting for such programs, to write to him at 7107 Woodlawn Avenue, care of the Green Lake Theatre, Seattle. The invitation was extended in a letter to the Editor of the Motion Picture Herald, and it added that a single bill policy for theatres would probably be one of the "most important issues" at the joint convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and the Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners, to be held in Hollywood June 9th through 12th. Mr. Lukan is chairman of the Single Bill Committee of the PCCITO.

Executives, Variety Club Honor Dervin, Weiner

John J. Dervin, former United Artists branch manager in Boston, upon his promotion to the south as district manager with offices in Atlanta, was guest at a dinner Monday night. A group of executives from United Artists' home office attended, including Harry Gold, Haskell Masters, Monroe Greenthal, David Weshner and Charles Stern. Steve Broidy, general sales manager for Monogram, also attended.

In Pittsburgh, a farewell dinner, sponsored by the local Variety Club and exhibitors, is being planned for Abe Weiner, United Artists branch manager there, who has been transferred to the Boston exchange. The dinner will be held May 12th, in the Urban room of the William Penn Hotel.

The committee in charge includes: Mark Goldman, general chairman; C. C. Kellenberg, Ira H. Cohn, Art Levy, James Alexander, Dave Kimelman, "Buck" Stoner, Herb Greenblatt, Pete Dana, Harry Seed, Lew Lefton, John H. Harris, Harry M. Kalmine, toastmaster, William Finkel, Harry Hendel, M. A. Rosenberg, Ike Browarsky and Fred Beadle.

Ainsworth Acquires Gail Theatre

William Ainsworth, president of the Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan, has acquired the Gail theatre in Mauston, Wis., from A. A. Suszki. The theatre will be operated in conjunction with the Fond du Lac, Oconomowoc and Shawano theatres, as part of the circuit being organized by Mr. Ainsworth in Wisconsin and Upper Michigan.

Two Receive MGM Award

Metro Goldwyn Mayer has awarded Honor Roll Buttons to Pat Heavy of the State theatre in Kalamazoo, Mich., and S. J. Badamo of Loew's Poli College, New Haven, for their campaigns on "Flight Command" and "Land of Liberty," respectively.

MGM CLAIMS $31,000,000 GROSS, 45,000,000 ADMISSIONS FOR 'GWTW'

8,500 Engagements and 3,000 More to Come Before 1942, According to Selznick's Distributor; List 5,000 Roadshows

A $31,000,000 gross to date at theatre box offices was claimed Monday for "Gone with the Wind" by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, with more than 8,500 engagements played and 3,000 more domestic bookings expected before the end of 1941.

Over 45,000,000 persons have seen "Wind," the David O. Selznick production of Margaret Mitchell's novel, the company said, since the picture opened in December, 1939.

In 1940 about 5,000 roadshow engagements were played and so far this year the film has been shown at about 3,400 other theatres at popular prices, it was said.

The company charged a 70 percent rental for the roadshow engagements with a guarantee of 10 percent profits where such was requested and an agreement could be reached with the exhibitor on expenses. For the popular price engagements it was reported that the rates averages about 50 percent. It was the industry's costliest production.

MGM said, "In less than a year and a half, 'Gone With the Wind' has grossed more than twice as much as the second biggest money picture of all time, 'The Birth of a Nation,' amassed at theatre box-offices in a twenty-year span."

Quigley Publications' International Motion Picture Almanac lists alltime rental grosses (not boxoffice) as with "GWTW" as follows: "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," $8,000,000; "The Singing Fool," $5,000,000; "Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," $4,500,000; "Ben Hur," $4,000,000; "The Big Parade," $3,500,000; "Cavalcade," $3,500,000; "The Covered Wagon," $3,500,000; "Jazz Singer," $3,500,000, etc. These figures also were company claims.

MGM claimed that, "in many instances, the return engagement GWTW attendance figures overshadowed the original mark set in theatres to which it returned for 'anniversary' engagements."

Although war conditions have restricted foreign distribution and cut theatre business, "Wind" is said by MGM to have set a number of first run records in various countries. Long runs abroad include 62 weeks, Ritz, London; 23 weeks, Gaiety, Manchester; 36 weeks in Sydney; 43 days, Roxy, Shanghai; 16 weeks, Ideal, Buenos Aires, etc.

Some Other Grosses

Alexander Korda's United Artists release, "That Hamilton Woman," started its fourth week at the Radio City Music Hall, New York, Thursday morning after having set a nine-year Easter week record by playing to 95,910 persons in the four days of its third weekend.

The film is the sixth to stay at the theatre more than three weeks. Its first 18 days there drew 414,896 persons. Its second week grossed $108,000, more than the previous record holder, during its third week, "The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle," two years ago.

Other films which have stayed at the theatre more than three weeks have been "The Philadelphia Story" and "Rebecca," each of which stayed six weeks; "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," which stayed five; and "All This and Heaven, Too" and "Pride and Prejudice" which played four each.

Paramount's comedy, "Road to Zanzibar" on Wednesday began its third week at the Paramount Theatre, New York. The distributor reported the second week gathered more than $62,000. Receipts over the weekend were reported at more than $25,000.

Warner Brothers' "The Great Lie" was scheduled, later this week, to enter its third week, after having gathered $23,000 over the weekend, Friday through Sunday.

"I wanted Wings," Paramount's feature, at the Astor, New York, began its fifth week Wednesday, after taking $9,000 in its fourth.

MGM's "Men of Boys Town" has been held over in its first 15 key city openings, the company reported on Monday.

Some More Field Promotions

New Orleans was to be "titillated" Thursday evening by the opening of Universal's "The Flame of New Orleans" and the attendant celebration which was to include contests, parades, participation by city officials, and appearances by screen stars. The world premiere of RKO's "Scattergood Baines" is expected May 28th, aboard a steamship in Lake Michigan.

The New Orleans premiere, Thursday evening, at the Orpheum Theatre was to be featured by a city-wide holiday, the closing of schools, the decoration of streets, and parades; and the attendance from the studios, of Joseph Pasternak, producer; Rene Clair, director; Bruce Cabot, star, and of Andy Devine, Mischa Auer, Hugh Herbert, Peggy Moran, Anne Gwynne, Helen Parrish and studio executives. There is also a "Movie Star for a Day" contest, sponsored by the local office of Universal—entrants to be judged on their resemblance to Marlene Dietrich, star of the film.

Gene Murphy and Thomas McLeod handled the exploitation in that city for Universal.

The "Scattergood Baines" premiere aboard a ship will, in probability, be aboard the Wisconsin and Michigan Steamship Company's new $1,000,000 boat, the Milwaukee Clipper. It will probably occur in conjunction with the ship's maiden voyage; and some 900 guests are expected.

Immediately after the premiere the boat will be placed in service between Milwaukee and Muskegon. Stars expected at the showing are Guy Kibbee, Jean Hersholt, Charles Winninger, Mildred Coles and Kenneth Howell.

The premiere of Warners' "Sergeant York" is expected in Milwaukee September 15th because that is the time, and the city is the site, of the annual American Legion convention.

Radio Stars on Air Show

In conjunction with Twentieth Century-Fox's new "The Great American Broadcast" the film company honored personalities of radio whose careers go back to the days of the crystal sets with a nation-wide broadcast on the "Vox Pop" show Thursday, April 17th, over the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Guests on the broadcast included Lowell Thomas, Adelaide Hawley, Guy Lombardo, Graham McNamee and Howard Barlow, and Joan Edwards, vocalist and newcomer to the networks.

Following the broadcast a dinner was held at the Barberry Room, and was attended, besides the guests of honor, by reporters, writers and columnists from New York newspapers and magazines.

Prudential Takes Casey Interests

Prudential Playhouse Operating Company, headed by Joseph M. Seider, has taken over the interests of Charles E. Casey in the eight theatres held by Casey & Wheeler.

Mr. Casey, retiring after a partnership with Irwin Wheeler dating back to 1917, will make his home permanently in Florida. Mr. Wheeler, who will retain his interest in the eight houses, will continue to manage them. The Prudential company has had an interest in the theatres for some time. The Casey and Wheeler offices will be consolidated with those of Prudential.

The eight houses involved are: the Playhouse, Richfield, Conn.; Playhouse, New Canaan, Conn.; Playhouse, Mamaroneck, N. Y.; Playhouse, Rye, N. Y.; Strand, White Plains, N. Y.; Larchmont, Larchmont, N. Y., and Playhouse and Garden Theatres, Princeton, N. J. The new arrangement will become effective Sunday.

Universal Renews Wometco, Consolidated Franchises

Universal has renewed long-term franchise agreements with the Wometco Circuit in Florida and Consolidated Theatres of Hawaii, and has negotiated a number of two-year deals with other independent circuit operators in this country, William A. Scully announced this week. Mr. Scully said that the new Wometco franchise is for five years, replacing a similar franchise which expired recently. The Consolidated franchise is for three.

Select Closes Deals

Circuit deals have been closed by Select Attractions, Inc., for "City of Missing Girls" in the following situations; Fox Intermountain Circuit, Denver; B & K Great States Circuit of Illinois; Loew-Poli New England Circuit; and for first run at Warner's Capitol theatre in Philadelphia; RKO Boston theatre, Boston; Fox Rialto theatre, Denver; Brandt's New York theatre, New York City; Strand theatre, Brooklyn, and the RKO Temple theatre in Rochester, N. Y.

Kaye Joins Cohen

Gordon Kaye, for the past two years in Republic's production department on the coast, has been made assistant to Albert Cohen, producer for the company, replacing Douglas Yates, son of H. J. Yates, who has joined the Army Signal Corps at Wright Field in Dayton, Ohio.

Theatre Man Kidnapped

UNITED ARTISTS THE FIFTH TO HOLD '41 CONVENTION; MONOGRAM MEETS

Regionals Open UA Sales Meetings; RKO - Disney Prepares "Reluctant Dragon"; Monogram Now Lists 32 Features;

United Artists, fifth film company to hold sales conventions this year, is to have its first district meeting, one of five, next Monday and Tuesday at New York's Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. Previously, Universal, Monogram, Republic, and Producers Releasing Corporation have held meetings, at which, as in the instance of UA, product and sales plans for the 1941-42 program were disclosed, and discussed.

Meanwhile, Hollywood reported a big product boom, building for "blocks of five" selling, (see page 14).

At Monogram's regional convention in Chicago Sunday, one of a series, it was disclosed the company will have 32 pictures on its new program, instead of the 26 originally announced.

Twentieth Century-Fox, preparing for a sales convention to be held this summer, announced its new season plans envisage a greater number of films in work between May and August than ever before in its history.

Walt Disney's "The Reluctant Dragon," full-length cartoon "live" talent film, will have an "early release," RKO stated.

Nicholas Schenck, MGM president, conferred in New York last week and this, with studio executives E. J. Mannix and Nicholas Nayfack.

Norman Moray, Warners short subjects sales chief, returned to New York after conferences at the studio over new product.

Paramount indicated its new season short subjects budget would be 40 per cent more than the current season's.

Tay Garnett has formed an independent producing company in Hollywood.

United Artists Meeting

The United Artists eastern regional meeting will be held in the Jansen Suite of the Waldorf-Astoria, New York, supervised by Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president in charge of sales. He will be assisted by Harry L. Gold, vice-president and eastern general sales manager, and Haskell M. Masters, western general sales manager. Attending will be members of the company's branches in New York, Boston, New Haven, Philadelphia, and Washington.

UA's second regional will be held at the Roosevelt Hotel, New Orleans, May 1st and 2nd. Sales executives from that city, Dallas, Atlanta, and Charlotte, will attend.

The third regional will be held May 3rd and 4th at the Netherlands-Plaza Hotel, Cincinnati, to be attended by sales staffs from the branches in that city, and from Buffalo, Cleveland and Indianapolis. The fourth, on May 5th, 6th, and 7th, at the Congress Hotel, Chicago, is to be attended by men from that city, and Detroit, St. Louis, Kansas City, Calgary, Montreal, St. John, Toronto, Vancouver, Winnipeg, Milwaukee, Omaha, and Minneapolis. The fifth, May 9th and 10th, at the St. Francis Hotel, San Francisco, will be attended by men from that city and Los Angeles, Seattle, Denver, and Salt Lake City.

"Dragon" Early Release

RKO Radio Pictures announced this week it had decided to give "definitely" early release to Walt Disney's next feature, "The Reluctant Dragon", which combines cartoon and "live-talent" techniques, and which is his fourth full length picture. The company is also releasing Disney's "Bambi", as well as other forthcoming Disney features, the latter under an extension of the present releasing contract, recently announced.

Mr. Disney, his animators, Robert Benchley, Frances Gifford, and others, appear in "The Reluctant Dragon".

RKO has signed Ginger Rogers to a new long term contract. An unspecified number of fiilms will be made by her during the next three years. She is now appearing in her 47th feature, "Tom, Dick, and Harry", now in work.

The company announced that 12 exchanges shared in the Pathe News special awards at the end of the fourth period, mid-April. They are Chicago, Charlotte, Atlanta, Los Angeles, Washington, Dallas, Cleveland, New Orleans, Pittsburgh, Sioux Falls, Oklahoma City, and San Francisco.

Monogram Boosts to 32

Monogram will have 32 features on its 1941-42 program, instead of the 26 announced at the convention in Los Angeles recently, its midwest sales personnel was told Sunday, at the Chicago regional convention, by Steve Broidy, general sales manager.

There will also be 16 westerns, Mr. Broidy asserted, adding some details. Eight of these films, the "Rough Riders", will star Buck Jones, Tim McCoy, and a "well known" comedian whose name Mr. Broidy did not disclose, but who was announced as expected to sign a contract shortly. The other westerns will be "The Range Buster" series, starring Max Terhune, Ray Corrigan, and John King.

Attending the Chicago meeting were franchise holders and salesmen from the Monogram exchanges in that city, Minneapolis, Milwaukee, ndianapolis, St. Louis, Kansas City, Des Moines, Oklahoma City, and Omaha, Cleveland, and Cincinnati.

Monogram's third regional convention is to be held Saturday and Sunday at the Hotel Warwick, New York. Franchise holders and exchange men will be present from New York, Boston, New Haven, Albany, Buffalo, Philadelphia, and Washington, and Pittsburgh.

Paramount Boosts Shorts

Paramount's short subjects budget for the new season will be 40 per cent more than that for the current season, Oscar Morgan, short subjects sales head, has revealed. Mr. Morgan is on tour of the company's exchanges, with "pep" talks scheduled in all of them.

The first three cartoons on the 1941--42 lineup are "Popeye Joins the Navy", "Blunder Below", and "Rootin', Tootin', Recruitin'". This is the first time Popeye has 'joined the U. S. navy.'

This week, Richard F. Murray, business manager of the short subjects department was in Miami, conferring at the Max Fleischer studio on the new cartoon product.

Warner Shorts Set?

Norman Moray, short subjects sales manager for Warner Brothers, returned to the New York home office Monday, after two months in the field and at the studio. He conferred there with Jack L. Warner, vice-president in charge of production, on new short subjects.

Ed Hinchy, of the Warner theatre circuit's home office, on Friday, April 18th, was appointed head film buyer for the Philadelphia zone. Such buying had been handled by the home office. The move is effective May 1st, and is regarded as the "first Warner move" in adapting the circuit's executive staff to operations under the consent decree; and it is furthermore expected there will be similar moves shortly in the rest of the circuit.

Lester Krieger, head of the booking department in the Philadelphia area, has been transferred to new duties in the city territory. This transfer is a consequence of the Hinchy appointment.

It was emphasized at the home office that,

"16mm Merchants' Showings Forcing Exhibitors Into Summer Shutdowns"

Indiana exhibitors join their colleagues in other states in condemning 16mm. film shows put on by merchants to the detriment of regularly established theatres.

In a letter to the Editor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, this week, Abe H. Kaufman, president of the Terre Haute (Indiana) Theatres Association, assailed the continued showing of 16mm. product, as transcribed from majors' features, and circulated with their permission. The exhibitor leader commended Republic Pictures for the announcement that the company not only would continue to have "no 16mm. competition for Republic accounts", but also that it had refused $500,000 for such rights to its 35mm. pictures.

Mr. Kaufman declared that within five years the number of traveling 16mm. shows in his state had increased to 167; and that, in and near Terre Haute, there are now six such shows, sponsored by local merchants.

"How long will patrons pay to see pictures in our theatres, when they can see them free by riding 10 or 15 minutes to a nearby merchant show?" he asked, and warned that producers "should also remember that their percentage pictures are playing against free shows six nights a week, thus hurting themselves as well as their customers; and what is true in Indiana is doubtless the same all over the United States."

He asserted that, if the "menace" continued, "it's not going to be long before exhibitors will be forced to take a five months' vacation while their patrons go to see free shows from April through September".

NAZIS FORCING THEIR PROPAGANDA PICTURES IN OCCUPIED COUNTRIES

German Studios Producing "Enlightenment" Films for Occupied Countries; Strict Codes for Patrons Enforced

War has proved no obstacle to the German film industry, in forcing Axis ideologies, reports received in Washington and New York from Berlin and the occupied countries of Europe indicate. The Nazi official cinema trust is said to be producing more pictures than ever and is exhibiting propaganda-laden pictures throughout France, Norway, Denmark and the Reich. The Germans are also exerting considerable effort to export films, particularly to South America, and are producing special newsreels and Spanish language films for overseas consumption.

Nazi efforts to control native producing companies in the Argentine were reported by MOTION PICTURE HERALD on February 22nd, page 19, in a report by Natalio Bruski, Buenos Aires correspondent. Banco Germanico, Agfa, Siemens Schubert and other German financial and equipment houses in South America by extending liberal credits, and in some cases forcing bankruptcy action, are securing decisive voice in the control of Latin American producers such as Sono Film, SIDE, PAF, and Tecnograf, Senor Bruski reported.

Cool Reception

Reception of the Nazi film fare in subject territories has not been warm, uncensored reports indicate. Norwegian boycott of the German theatres in Oslo, Stavenger, Trondheim and Lillehammer has brought a German warning that other taxes will be increased if revenue from motion picture houses continues to drop. Similar situations are reported from France, Holland, and Denmark.

A strict code of behavior is prescribed by the Germans for theatre audiences. It prohibits "laughter, meaningless applause, stamping with the feet, coughing and clearing the throat, whistling or vociferous comment." Where reception of the "enlightenment" films is particularly cool, house lights must be kept on, and at Oslo, Paris, and other large cities uniformed policemen attend every performance. Theatre audiences remain small, except for the free attendance of German soldiers and officers, it is said.

Although the war ended production in the occupied territories the Reich cinema trust claims to have increased production during the past year. Representatives here and in Berlin claim a record year for UFA, Tobis, and the German theatre operators. There are 7,000 theatres operating in Germany and the Eastern provinces and licenses have been granted to an additional 1,002 houses in "the newly acquired territories," according to a spokesman in New York.

UFA, largest German producing unit, in a statement released in Berlin recently, called the fiscal year 1939-40 one of the best in its career. It reported a gross of 166,180,000 marks for 1940 against 142,410,000 marks in 1938-39, with a net profit of 1,700,000 marks in 1940 compared with 470,000 marks the previous year.

Spokesmen here attributed better picture business in Germany to patronage during the blackout and to extensive newsreel coverage of the war by cameramen of the Reich Army's official "Pressekompanie." A unit of reporters, still and motion picture cameramen is assigned to each regiment and naval unit, and is responsible for full coverage of all action.

Last year UFA produced 27 feature pictures, three less than in the previous year; one full length foreign language (Spanish) film against six the year before; eighteen shorts, an increase of three; 32 educational and cultural films, an increase of four; 22 foreign language culture films, a decrease of ten; 87 industrial films against 125 the year before, and the same number of newsreels, 156. Military newsreels are released weekly, with more frequent issues during active campaigns.

Future Production Plans

Production plans for the coming year, according to an announcement relayed to the German Library of Information in New York by DNB, the official German news outlet, call for 110 feature productions during 1940-41. UFA will produce 34, Tobis 34, Terra 24 and Bavaria Films 18. The dispatch also mentions twenty films to be produced jointly by German and Italian companies. There is no description of their subject, or production locale, nor any mention of the joint Axis picture plans later than last November. Presumably production has been halted by the course of the Italian military campaign.

Kurt Hubert, export director of Tobis films, in a German short wave broadcast in English last Fall claimed that German studios were expanding and estimated that one hundred feature films have been produced in the Reich since the outbreak of the war. A transcript of the broadcast, aimed at American listeners, was obtained from the German Library of Information, subsidized Nazi information center in New York. Approximately 200 cultural short subjects were produced in Germany since the outbreak of War, according to Mr. Hubert. They dealt with "natural science, architecture, travel, and expeditions in foreign countries." Many were translated for the export trade.

"The type of educational films showing scenes of life and training of our boys for the army, navy and airforce with all their newest equipment, tanks, submarines, stukas and so forth and so on are extremely popular," Mr. Hubert said in the broadcast.

German newsreels which have been combined for the export trade into such propaganda pictures as "Baptism of Fire" and "Victory in the West" are filmed entirely by the regular army cameramen in the course of duty, Mr. Hubert declared. "They are regular soldiers, doing a soldier's full duty, always in the first lines . . . this explains the realistic pictures which we show and which have given millions the thrill of their lives and an idea of the grim reality of war," the Tobis director told American short-wave listeners. He cited the spectacular films of the attack on the Westernplatte near Danzig, the attack at Maas, the meeting in Compiegne and occupation of Paris as examples of the ubiquity of Pressekompanie cameramen.

Prepared in 16 Languages

Export versions of the official Nazi pictures are prepared at Berlin by the Ministry of Information. Titles and sound track are translated into 16 different languages and reels up to 3,000 feet in length are exported as what Mr. Hubert classified as a "perfect document of historical truth and nothing but the truth, therefore answering the German demand for a good substantial report in every way."

The films are circulated throughout Europe, and in South and Central America and the Far East. The UFA office in New York reports that, despite blockade difficulties, a German film reaches this country on an average of once every two weeks.

Dialogue is not translated into English and distribution is limited to about a dozen local houses in German-American neighborhoods. Two theatres in the Yorkville section of New York, four in Brooklyn, two in New Jersey and houses in Milwaukee, Chicago, San Francisco and Buffalo regularly show German newsreels, while theatres in other cities with a German section show the films occasionally. Approximately 32 features in German were brought into the country last year, according to George Nitze, director of UFA's American office. A few of the pictures received English subtitles but most were exhibited in the original German. Little theatres specializing in French and other foreign pictures do not handle the German product.

United Artists Begins Meetings

despite Mr. Hinchy's new duties, operating control, and final approval of buying, remain vested in Joseph Bernhard, general manager, and Clayton Bond, head film buyer.

Warner Brothers' "Twentieth Year For Sears" sales drive ended at the weekend. Bills for the 17-week period were said to be ahead of those in last year's 'Sears Drive', previous record holder.

Garnett's New Company

Tay Garnett has formed a production company, in Hollywood. It is scheduled to make four features, which he will produce and direct. The first will be an adaptation of his own story, "World Cruise", and which will be titled, "Three Sheets to the Wind." The film will star Brian Donlevy.

Stern with Columbia

Bill Stern, sports announcer for the National Broadcasting Company, has been signed by Columbia for the commentary on the new, "World of Sports" short subject series.

The series is for the 1941-42 program. There will be 12 subjects. Mr. Stern will narrate for all.

Increased Fox Schedule

Twentieth Century Fox will have before its cameras, from May through August, "more films than ever before in its history"; so that by August 1st, it will have between 10 and 15 films completed for release, the company announced this week. Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president in charge of production, issued assignments this week to producers William LeBaron, Mark Hellinger, and Ernst Lubitsch, and associate producers William Perlberg, Lou Edelman, and Lou Ostrow; and to producers Sol Wurtzel, Nunnally Johnson, Harry Joe Brown, Robert Kane, Milton Sperling, Ralph Dietrich, and Walter Morosco.

Among films production of which is scheduled soon are "Caribbean Cruise", "A Straight Left", "The Bowery Nightingale", "Remember the Day", "Charley's Aunt", "A Yank in the R. A. F.", "The Black Swan", "I Won't Dance", "How Green Was My Valley", "Private Nurse", "The Last of the Duanes", "The Dead Take No Bows", "The Night the World Shook", "Twenty One Men and a Girl", "Law and Order, Inc.", "Stand Up and Cheer", "Finders Keepers", and "Accent on Love".

SEX EXPLOITATION OF RKO PICTURE BY THEATRE TO RECEIVE COURT TEST

RKO Goes to Law as Showmen Offer Old Ginger Rogers Film "For Adults Only" With Lectures on "Sex"

The right of a motion picture distributor to seize film leased to an exhibitor who has linked the picture to a lecture on sex, is to be determined by the Superior Court in Los Angeles. The court, at the same time, will also rule on the question of whether oral film contracts are binding on the distributor, as effected by the distributor's representative and an exhibitor.

The action, posing unusual legal and film contractual implications, was brought against RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., by the operators of the Grand Wilshire Theatre in Los Angeles, over RKO's physical seizure of its print of Ginger Rogers' "Primrose Path", first released in March, 1940.

RKO, on Tuesday, March 4th, filed for, and immediately obtained from the Superior Court, repossession of the "Primrose" print, because of the nature of newspaper promotion used by the theatre management.

Ginger Rogers had, the week before, won the Academy Award for the best acting of the year. The theatre operators made a spot booking of the old "Primrose" picture, apparently to cash in on the Award publicity, which it attempted through newspaper advertisements citing: "1941 Academy Award Winner Ginger Rogers in Her Greatest Sex Sensation, Primrose Path. Her First Kiss. Her Love. The One Romance in Every Woman's Life."

The newspaper advertisements appeared only in the Los Angeles Hearst papers and in the Daily News.

RKO Demands Print

Joseph R. McDonough, vice president of RKO, signed the repossession papers for RKO, which demanded delivery of the print or payment of $10,000.

Attached was the service of a writ of replevin by the Los Angeles County Sheriff's office and the following charge by the distributor:

"Defendants claim to hold possession of said property (one positive print of 'Primrose Path') pursuant to a purported oral agreement or license from plaintiff; but that in truth and in fact said purported oral agreement was and is invalid and void and conferred no rights of any nature upon defendants; that said purported oral agreement was obtained by false and fraudulent misrepresentation made by defendants to plaintiff and upon which plaintiff relied, and which were known by defendants to be false and untrue."

Defendants in RKO's March 5th action to repossess included E. A. Thomas, described as an Oklahoma theatre man; Harold Goldin and Mrs. P. A. DeCenzie, the latter described as a 'sex' lecturer who spoke at the few performances of "Primrose Path" given at the Grand Wilshire.

On March 12th, the three defendants filed a counter action to RKO's complaint, asking for $20,000 general and exemplary damages, as well as costs of litigation. Harold A. Fendler, Los Angeles attorney, represents the trio.

They asserted that RKO's repossession compelled them to close the theatre for five days, and claim that RKO is wrong in its legal procedure; that the distributor should have asked the court to restrain the 'sex' advertising of the film, rather than seize the print with the Sheriff's aid.

In the March 12th cross-action by the theatre operators, they alleged that on February 28th, they entered into an agreement with RKO to rent, for one week at a rental of $35, a print of "Primrose Path." On March 1, when the first week's run started, they made a new agreement to carry the film a second week, in the latter period at the rate of $22.50. Both amounts were paid to the company, it was stated. Also paid, according to the counter suit, was $10 rental for a March of Time short, "Crisis in the Pacific."

Two hours prior to the filing of the RKO suit, it was alleged, agents of the company made demands for the picture, but this was refused because "defendants had engaged in extensive advertising campaigns by poster and lobby display and in newspapers and had hundreds of patrons in the theatre at the time."

In the counter suit for $20,000, the trio further alleged:

"On February 27, Miss Rogers won the Academy award as the most outstanding actress of 1940 and by reason of such award, cross complainants had acquired asset of peculiar, unique and unusual value which required and justified extensive publicity, promotion and exploitation given," they said.

"Acts of defendants were and are malicious, oppressive and fraudulent," the cross complaint further charged.

The promotions for the Ginger Rogers picture, coupled with the "sex" lecture, created a storm, particularly in view of the fact that the City Police Commission and the Los Angeles City Council were considering a film censorship ordinance at that time.

"Blowups" carrying such captions as "her first sex experience" were used extensively. Pictures of Miss Rogers were used throughout the campaign which stressed admissions would be "for adults only."

Practically certain to arise in the controversy is the question of whether a distributor, to prevent further running of a picture, should take back the film through a writ of replevin, or whether an injunction be obtained to prevent any assertedly objectionable advertising campaign in connection with the film.

To Question Oral Contracts

The question of whether oral contracts are binding is also bound to arise, and also what hold, if any, a distributor has over product already rented and being shown in a public theatre.

The Grand Wilshire Theatre was leased by the lecturer and her two business partners for the duration of the show. Previously, German and Italian pictures, as well as other product, had been shown there by various other persons.

Mr. Fendler, attorney for the trio, in about a week is expected to file depositions of RKO exchange workers who made the asserted rental agreement.

Also soon to be filed will be RKO's answer to the cross-complaint and the company will assert, it is reported, that the trio did not have a license to operate a theatre in the first place.

DEFENSE FUNDS AID FLORIDA THEATRES

Theatres in Tampa, Florida, are enjoying a marked increase in business because of the record-breaking tourist season and the Government money being spent on nearby army air fields and shipbuilding. Four theatres—the Victory, Rialto, Rex, and Howard, all of which have been dark during the past several years—have been running on a full-time schedule. The new State theatre, which features first-run Warner films, is finding business so good on some films that they are holding them over. Recently, "Meet John Doe" had a run of two weeks. The Tampa brought back "Gone With the Wind" for a run at popular prices, which, however, were advanced above the usual house scale, and played to capacity at each of the three daily shows.

The Sparks circuit has opened a Drive-In theatre, accommodating 400 automobiles, and a new neighborhood, the Osborne, in the Tampa Heights section is to open in June.

National Decency Legion Classifies Seven Pictures

Of the seven pictures classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for this week four were found unobjectionable for general patronage and three were approved for adults. The pictures and their classifications follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "The King of the White Elephant," "Sign of the Wolf," "Sis Hopkins" and "They Met in Argentina." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Exile Express," "Girl From Havana" and "Washington Melodrama."

Defense Films for Yorke

Emerson Yorke has been awarded a contract to produce five single-reel technical subjects by the Procurement Division of the Treasury Department.

Langton Succeeds Hanline

Maurice Hanline, Republic story editor, has resigned and Francis Langton, formerly head of the writers' department at Paramount, has succeeded.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Still Booming

Hollywood's production peak leveled off a bit this week, but remained in the boom stage, nonetheless, with 45 pictures shooting, 11 finished and nine started, in each case two less than in the same categories the week before. Being prepared were 27, and 69 were being edited.

CASTING THE LANDSCAPE

Paramount, possessor of a $150,000 property in Ernest Hemingway's "For Whom the Bell Tolls", has launched a search for locations.

What makes said search unusual is the method employed. For the studio assigned artist Richard Kollorsz to paint his conception of the type of countryside needed for filming the picture, then copied the paintings and mailed them to chambers of commerce throughout nine western states. The chambers were requested to send photographs matching the paintings, if such terrain existed in their neighborhood.

This, reports Paramount not without pride, is the first time that Hollywood has attempted to cast countryside in this manner.

Directors' News

Reflecting the current high level of Hollywood's production activity are the recent assignments of just under a dozen directors to flims at six studios.

Roy Del Ruth, recently signed to a directorial contract at the studio where he made "Broadway Melody of 1938," has received as his first assignment "The Chocolate Soldier," Oscar Straus operetta, with Nelson Eddy and Rise Stevens.

At Paramount, Victor Schertzinger is to handle "Birth of the Blues," with Bing Crosby and Mary Martin co-starring in the picture, which will feature 13 famous old songs.

Reinhold Schunzel has been signed by Sol Lesser to direct "Strange Victory," Martha Scott's next starring picture, set to start in May. In Culver City, George Cukor, who has just completed Joan Crawford's latest film, "A Woman's Face," is to direct Greta Garbo's new picture, an untitled comedy in which the star plays a dual role.

"Ladies in Retirement," stage play bought by Columbia, is to be directed by Charles Vidor, with Ida Lupino and Louis Hayward already signed for the cast.

Frank Borzage has been chosen to direct "Smilin' Thru," next Jeanette MacDonald picture, which will be filmed in Technicolor. Borzage's last two pictures were "Flight Command" and "The Mortal Storm."

William Keighley, who recently had his contract renewed at Warners after finishing "The Bride Came C.O.D.," will next handle "Iron Cavalry," story of the U. S. Army Tank Corps.

Lewis Milestone has been signed to direct "Joan of Paris," second of the Michele Morgan vehicles at RKO. Milestone is now directing "My Life with Caroline" at the same studio.

The picturization of J. P. Marquand's current novel, "H. M. Pulham, Esq.," has been assigned to King Vidor at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. And Busby Berkeley, who directed Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland in "Babes in Arms" and "Strike Up the Band," will do likewise for "Babes on Broadway," first picture in which Shirley Temple will appear under her new contract.

Edward H. Griffith, who directed "Virginia" recently, has been assigned the direction of "Out of the Frying Pan," Broadway comedy purchased by Paramount.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

The Great American Broadcast

(20th Century-Fox)

Entertainment Took to the Air

Told in terms of fiction background by fact, the story of how entertainment came to the fore in radio imparts strength, substance to this broadside of music, mirth and emotion, a film in the groove of to-day's requirements on all points. The picture is indebted to Mack Gordon and Harry Warren for a folio of songs delivered with zest and precision by Alice Faye, Jack Oakie and John Payne, and by the Ink Spots in two sequences which are among the items radio audiences have been waiting for. Other names for billing that means business are Cesar Romero, Mary Beth Hughes, the Nicholas Brothers, whose dancing has been a hit in other pictures from the same studio, and the Wiere Brothers, newcomers.

The picture opens in 1919 some time prior to the Willard-Dempsey championship fight at Toledo which, thanks to lifting of restrictions against shipping of boxing films, is included in the picture as something both to see and exploit. The broadcasting of this event, counted a milestone in the development of radio, is shown in the picture with what appears to be the authencity of then and there. The story carries its principals from this point up to the first coast-to-coast hookup.

Utilizing a three-cornered romance not unlike that employed in "Alexander's Ragtime Band," and since as mainstay of narrative interest in musicals, the picture casts Messrs. Oakie and Payne as buddies in love with the singer portrayed by Miss Faye, adding Mr. Romero as a suitor who has not only love for the lady but funds with which to finance the enterprises in which the three engage. There is struggle and separation and of course the ending the audience expects and relishes.

Production by Kenneth MacGowan reflects study and research as well as expenditure. Archie Mayo's direction divides stress between music and story in a manner to make the most of each. The film starts with a bang and holds the pace throughout.

The Flame of New Orleans

(Universal)

Miss Dietrich at Work Again

Miss Marlene Dietrich, after some male wrecking skirmishes out in the rough, tough west of "Destry Rides Again" and in the sultry South Seas surroundings of "Seven Sinners," stages her third campaign of wiles and wickedness amid the genteel environs of New Orleans around the middle of the last century. It may be because of this below Mason and Dixon line station that Miss D's conquest of the other sex has been limited to a pair of men, one a representative of high finance and the other a sailor of the high seas. The contest to capture the naughty but nice prize package is conducted more along laugh lines than heavy histrionics and there are no slug fests such as were the pictorial highlights in the preceding blonde blitzkriegs.

Besides the partial refinement of Miss Dietrich, the production is noteworthy because it marks the American directorial debut of the famed French film maker, Rene Clair. M. Clair's Gallic screen contributions, chiefly "Rooftops of Paris," "Le Million" and "A Nous La Liberte," have been the source of much "art theatre" heralding. American advocates of the Clair school of picture producing may be interested in inspecting the results of the master's introduction to the ways of Hollywood film manufacture. Showmen may be assured that M. Clair's initial American cinematic composition is a piece of entertainment material, cut from regular and recognized stock and is a straight forward job of story telling, devoid of arty narrative cliches and camera cranking. The happy adjustment of foreign talent to a strange studio setup is in large part due to the careful collaboration of Joe Pasternak in the position of producer overseer. Additional credit for slick contributions should be awarded to the cooperation of cameraman Rudy Mate and art director Jack Otterson, who provide a lush background for the charm of Miss Dietrich.

The star carries on her portrayal of a lady of dubious reputation in a tongue in the cheek style that made her previous performances of a sinner-siren something to be amused at and not taken too seriously. The canons of period costuming have ordained that the famous underpins of the actress be decorously screened but even under such limitations Miss Dietrich in her variety of hair arrangements and clothes effects a striking figure of decorative beauty. Although script opportunities for emoting are limited, Miss Dietrich is able to work wonders by the mere lift of an eyelid or a purse of a lip.

The surrounding company affords the star excellent acting assistance. The chief male roles are handled by Bruce Cabot, who returns from a term in minor melodrama menaces to the fat part of the sailor gent who wins the glamorous lady, and Roland Young, equally good as the romantic banker with an eye for good figures, either in a bookkeeper's ledger or on the city streets.

The saga of the siren "Claire" begins when the picture opens with a shot of the broad waters of the Mississippi and the sound of an off-the-screen commentator extolling in a travelogue spiel the mighty waterway. Upon the broad bosom of the "father of waters" there is found floating an expensive bridal outfit and its is the tale behind this strange find which the audience is invited to watch and enjoy. The nuptial garment belongs to "Claire," an adventuress with a phoney title and a reputation not so fabricated. The lady, through the tactics of her calling, has become engaged to the banker "Giraud." The culmination of the arrangements is endangered by the presence of "Latour," a sailor who also develops a strong attachment for "Claire," and "Zolotov," who recognizes the "countess" as having cut quite a continental scandal during her European stay. "Claire" invents a sexy relative to assume her shady reputation, an explanation which satisfies "Giraud" well enough to lead her to the altar rail. However, "Latour" appears on the church scene and "Claire," after faking a faint, elopes with him on his boat. And that is the story behind the bridal gown cast upon the waters of the Mississippi.

Seen at screening in the company's home office projection room in New York with a gathering of reviewers for a better films group. The members of the audience were mainly women and during the course of the picture there were frequent female comments on the effectiveness of Miss Dietrich's looks and gowns. In fact, the ladies were impressed enough to applaud the film at its conclusion.—JOSEPH F. COUGHLIN.

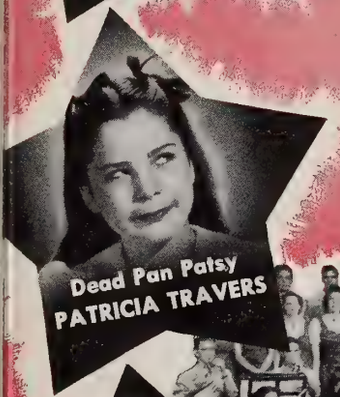
Topical Drama

Frank Morgan is starred in this topical tale of a murder which almost prevents presentation to a Senate committee of a plan to feed the conquered Europeans.

A financier, the character enacted by Morgan is depicted as lonely due to the continued travels of his wife and daughter. He finds companionship with a night club hostess, is implicated in her murder, but finally is able to present his case for the feeding of Europe's children without having it suffer through harmful personal notoriety.



Ann Rutherford portrays his daughter, in love with the young newspaper publisher interpreted by Kent Taylor, who opposes the bill on the grounds that it would only help the

Reportorial Comedy-Drama

Although subordinated to the story of a reporter and his bride, which occupies the foreground of interest, the sub-plot, wherein a band of foreigners operating in America, under guise of patriotism but with sabotaging of national defense as its objective, gives this picture a timeliness which showmen may elect to exploit. This aspect of the story is brought to light by means of the reporter's explorations into the causes of two murders which figure in the narrative.

A Scott R. Dunlap production, directed by Phil Rosen, the film co-stars Jean Parker and Wallace Ford, Jed Prouty appearing as the city editor of the reporter's newspaper. The relationship between the men parallels in some degree that made use of in "The Front Page," but the point is not stressed.

Scene of the picture is New York, the time is now, and tension reaches a peak when reporters, police and gangsters converge in quest of the saboteurs.

Caught in the Act

(Producers Releasing Corp.)

Armetta Comedy

Henry Armetta, the accented and lopsided comedian of many supporting and featured roles, is herein presented in a starring characterization of the construction foreman turned salesman who becomes innocently involved with a mob of building racketeers. Directed by Jean Yarborough, the picture is a simple comedy produced for its chuckelsome qualities only.

Armetta, as "Mike," becomes unknowingly entangled with a blonde and a racketeering organization which practices the "shake-down" racket on construction companies. "Mike" is arrested when the blonde jumps into his car, and at the station house incriminates his boss as the leader of the gang. Free on bail "Mike," with the aid of his potential son-in-law, tracks down and exposes the real leaders of the criminal organization, clearing his boss' and company's reputable reputation.

Supporting Henry Armeta are Iris Meredith as the about-to-be-married daughter; Robert Baldwin, the reporter and future son-in-law; Maxine Leslie as the gang's moll, and Inez Palange as the wife who falsely accuses "Mike" of an affair with the blonde. Produced by T. H. Richmond, the picture has many humorous moments for Armetta fans.

Under Age

Roadside Racketeering

Roadside racketeering in the shape of hitchhiking girls acting as "shills" for clip joints on the highways is the serious, semi-sociological study of shady houses of hospitality, as revealed in this feature length "crime does not pay" melodrama. The expose is preceded by a foreword formulating the film's good intent in indicting only certain questionable establishments and is not aimed at the more refined and honorable hamburger emporiums which line the nation's coast-to-coast travel lanes. The uplift note in the film should assure it a more sensible inspection than is usually granted to underworld revelations.

The chief worth of the production is the message contained in its footage and a showman, dating a screening, might emphasize the screen message. The cast is peopled with an array of young people who, although they turn in competent performances, are not too well recognized for marquee bait. Nan Grey and Mary Anderson appear as a sister act with Tom Neal as an honorable traveling salesman, and Alan Baxter as chief knuckle-man for the mob and Leona Maricle in the role of the female leader of the gang. Miss Anderson has been seen briefly before in "Cheers for Miss Bishop" and she displays looks and talent that will pay watching. Director Edward Dymtryk kept his attention intent on thematic material and allowed no distracting elements, such as romance and comedy, to interfere with the picture's preachment.

After a reformatory release and because of the pinch of poverty, "Jane" and her sister, "Edie," who shows characteristics of being no lady, go to work for a string of roadside taverns in a capacity that may be termed as sales promotional. The girls' act is to pretend to be footsore travelers, becomingly attired in slacks, who easily find transportation and companionship in the course of their peregrinations. Once a lift is obtained, the second part of the assignment is to steer the sympathetic and lonesome male to one of the mob's restaurants, where the victim's bankroll is milked. "Jane" softens up when a nice travel salesman has his wares snatched and the gang exert some physical pressure to impress the girl on the necessity of holding her tongue. "Edie," learning of what happens to her sister, is killed by the head thug when she attempts to get even for treatment given "Jane." "Jane" organizes the rest of the girls into forming a "kangaroo" court for the apprehension of "Edie's" murderer. After the ladies are through with the "mug" they turn him over to the officially appointed legal facilities for trial and conviction. "Jane" leaves off her traveling career to marry the nice traveling salesman.

The Cowboy and the Blonde

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Movie Comedy

George Montgomery and Mary Beth Hughes are the "cowboy and the blonde" of the title in this tale of a temperamental movie star and a rodeo champion. Brought to the studio as an acting possibility by the company head, enacted by Alan Mowbray, the cowboy falls in love with the star.

Hearing that he is being kept on the payroll simply in order that the star, who has fallen in love with him, cease being temperamental, he returns to his ranch, is followed by the girl, finally won over to her through a ruse perpetrated by his friend, Fuzzy Knight.

The picture is done in light vein, and handled deftly by its principals and a supporting cast including Robert Conway, John Miljan, Richard Lane, Robert Emmett Keane. The humor is not, however, all so light, as in the case of a remark made by the star's chauffeur. Asked by the cowboy's friend whether all the luggage has been taken from her car, he replies "All but one old bag, in back," Whereupon the star's maid gets out of the car.

A Very Young Lady

(20th-Fox)

Jane Withers at 15

Anyone in or out of the industry who's been wondering whether Jane Withers would manage to bridge the chasm between moppet and glamour girl, known as the awkward age, can take a look at her in this film and relax. For this is a study of the emotions of a girl of fifteen. A girl giving up the pranks of childhood for the interests of maturity, and in it Miss Withers gives a portrayal which has not been matched by any of the screen's children who have tried it. This is a Withers picture to exploit to the full—a story demanding much of its star and getting more, an entertainment for customers of all ages and kinds.

Scene of the picture is a girl's school located near a boy's school and designed to prepare its students for life on the upside of the tracks. Miss Withers begins as the tomboy of the class, equal of any boy at fisticuffs or sports, and regarded by the faculty as a problem student. In his efforts to inspire her to interest in the social graces the principal misleads her into believing he is in love with her and she reciprocates the supposed affection. In its depictment of the stages through which the child develops under influence of the emotion the picture calls upon its star for a display of acting ability beyond any of her previous castings and she responds in a manner to satisfy the most exacting. How she works out a happy ending is for the picture to tell.

Directing for Associate Producer Robert T. Kane, Harold Schuster proceeded with insight and understanding to work his material for all its values without distorting the importance of any factor or emphasizing any part at the expense of the whole. Performances in support are keyed to that of the star and a film full of entertainment for any and all is the result.

The Wagons Roll at Night

(Warners)

Carnival Life

A second tale of a travelling circus to come out of Hollywood in recent months, this differs from "Chad Hanna" in being about a contemporary carnival which finally manages to hit the big time, only to cause the death of its owner through his own conniving.

Humphrey Bogart appears as the tough minded owner of a carnival company whose only interest apart from keeping his show ahead of the sheriff is in his young sister, whom he is determined to keep from the hard life he knows, and those in it. But the girl, played by Joan Leslie, meets and falls in love with the troupe's lion tamer, enacted by Eddie Albert, who has his job through his performance in keeping an escaped lion at bay in one of the towns the carnival had played.

The lion taming act has pulled the carnival into a big time circus by the time its owner becomes aware that his sister and the lion tamer are in love. Determined to stop them, he sends the boy into a cage with a crazed lion, dies himself in attempting a rescue urged on him by the boy's sweetheart and the owner's own girl, Sylvia Sidney. The latter is seen as a fortune teller with the outfit in a performance which caused post preview comment to the effect that Miss Sidney had been away from films too long.

In chief supporting roles are Sig Rumann, Cliff Clark, Charley Foy, Frank Wilcox, John Ridgeley, Clara Blandick and Aldrich Bowker. Harlan Thomson was associate producer and Ray Enright directed.

Two Gun Sheriff

(Republic)

Don ("Red") Barry-Double

Although Don ("Red") Barry, with his grim-faced likeness to James Cagney, is given a double riding and shooting assignment in his newest mustang melodramatic offering, the extra amount of gun and horse play to be expected from the dual arrangement is not realized. In fact, the quota of action moments is considerably below par for the general run of out-of-doors productions.

Don plays twins, one of the pair being a law-abiding representative in the person of a local sheriff, and the other offspring appearing as one of the neighborhood's most notorious bad men. A gang of sagebrush cutthroats, realizing the baffling likeness between the twin gents and knowing an opportunity when it is presented for the better prosecution of dirty work, rescue the "Sundown Kid," the black sheep of the "McKinnon" family, from the end of a lynch party rope and substitute the "Kid" for his sheriff brother. However, such a setup apparently did not take into consideration the softening influence of the home circle, for the "Kid" turns noble when exposed to the affections of his mother and the girl friend of the brother. Outlaw frees sheriff and together they round up the district heavies, but a final and happy family reunion is forestalled when the "Kid" is killed in the belated pursuit of being a credit to mother and brother.

George Sherman presided over the family scene in the capacity of associate producer and director. Outstanding in the supporting cast, which includes Lynn Merick, as the good girl; Marin Sais, as "Ma McKinnon" and Jay Novello, Milton Kibbee, and Fred Kohler, Jr., is Lupita Tovar as a cafe singer and sweetie of the bad boy of the "McKinnon" twins.

Mesquiteer Offering

The titular buddies of this Western offering are the boots and saddle clique identified as the Three Mesquiteers, and in the newest of the group's collective adventure the trio is at the moment of writing Robert Livingston, Bob Steele and Rufe Davis.

The predicament, which the boys successfully solve as part of their general campaign to be prairie ambassadors of good will, concerns the opening of a stage coach route and the elimination of some opposition in the person of rival business men from the travel prospectus. The objectives are realized with full and successful emphasis on a brand of action that will perk with excitement the heart of any devoted Western scene fancier. The final sequence, which pictures the staging of the coach run and the troubles encountered on the way, have been devised in thrill-packed and suspense motif that may make some spectators even expect an invitation to the theatre for a following week's display of a chapter play.

Besides the boys, who acquit themselves creditably as usual, the subordinate players number June Johnson, Robert Winkler, Pat O'Malley and Dennis Moore. Director Lester Orlebeck paced his scenes in true Western style and deserves particular credit for the thrill finale.

Seen at a trade press screening in New York.—J. F. C.

Produced and distributed by Republic Pictures. Associate producer, Louis Gray. Director, Lester Orlebeck. Based on the characters created by William Colt MacDonald. Production manager, Al Wilson. Cameraman, Reggie Lanning. Film editor, Ray Snyder. Musical score, Cy Feuer. P.C.A. Certificate No. 7180. Release date, April 8, 1941. Running time, 56 minutes. General audience classification.

Shearer Personnel Changes

Ben F. Shearer, of the B. F. Shearer Theatre Equipment Company, Portland, Ore., has made several changes in locations and personnel of his staff. Roy Peacock, of Seattle, who has been with the company for 21 years, has been transferred to Los Angeles as manager of the office there. He relieves Frank Harris, who has been given a six months leave due to sickness in his family. The Shearer office in Spokane, Wash., has been closed and Eldred Bechtel has rejoined the Seattle staff.

Harriet Parsons' Features

Republic has announced that Harriet Parsons will produce, direct and write features for the company in addition to continuing production of her short subject series, "Meet the Stars."

Hellman Play Wins

"Watch on the Rhine," Lillian Hellman's play, now in New York performance, on Tuesday won the sixth annual Critics' Circle Award. Emlyn Williams' "The Corn Is Green" won the critics' award for the best play of foreign authorship.

Loughran Replaces Maser

James Loughran has been named president of the Entertainment Managers Association, Philadelphia organization of licensed booking agents, replacing Jack Maser, resigned.

THEATRES IN 14 STATES AFFECTED BY U.S. ARMY 'WAR' BLACKOUTS

Entire Eastern Seaboard Will Douse Lights, with Army Asking Theatres to Run Advance Trailers Advising the Public

America's first large-scale "all-out" blackout affecting motion picture theatres along with all other businesses, will be staged along the entire eastern seaboard, embracing 14 States, "some time this Summer," it was disclosed in Philadelphia this week by American Legion officials who will co-operate with the U. S. Army in the test.

The blackout will test the efficiency of the new civilian air raid precaution system. According to the plan the blackout will be held simultaneously in Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina and West Virginia.

Legion officials said that the public will be given ample advanced notice of the blackout. Theatres will be asked to cooperate by using trailers to inform the people about procedure during the test blackout, it was reported.

Experimental "blackouts" to give the War Department experience on which to base plans for the darkening of cities and strategic points.

Blackouts Simulate Life in War Zone

These "blackouts," a nightly feature of current European life, would call not only for the cutting off of all street lights, automobile headlights, and theatre marquees and signs, store windows and signs and the like, but also for the suspension of broadcasting to prevent enemy aircraft from "riding" radio signals.

A test blackout of five minutes was held last Friday night at Pittsburgh and was "80 per cent successful," according to Major F. S. Wetzel.

The public considered "the show" as entertainment and thousands lined the streets to watch. Theatres had a relatively quiet night. All marquee and lobby lights were out. Trolleys and automobiles were stopped.

All Government buildings, utilities and most business houses doused lights. Many residences also joined in the test. But the sky was bright from the glow of steel mills and the lights on many of the city's bridges were not turned off and were guide arrows to the "golden triangle" business section for a squadron of Army planes.

A second test blackout is being planned for the Seattle area where the first such demonstration was held six weeks ago. The first test was confined to the Seattle territory, but the next test is to include the entire Puget Sound area, which embraces Canadian territory as well. The maneuver will be a joint test by Canadian and U. S. authorities.

Theatres cooperated in the first test, which lasted 20 minutes. Business was off from 10 to 20 per cent in downtown Seattle. It was reported that theatremen hope that the second test in the area will be conducted at a time that will affect them less than the 10:30 to 11 P. M. period selected for the first trial.

Protest Nazi Seizure Of Offices in Paris

Formal seizure of the Paris offices of the American film distributors last week by the Nazi governors of occupied France evoked vigorous protests from the home offices and has already been made the subject of representations by American diplomats in Paris, it was learned from the State Department at Washington this week.

Film companies said offices, records, furniture and other supplies were taken by the Nazis.

At the office of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America in New York it was reported that distributors "have expressed concern" over the loss of their French offices.

Protests over the continued importation of German and Italian films into the United States were reiterated in New York this week by Max A. Cohen, New York Allied head, and ITOA chief. He said the State Department will be reminded that American films are barred from the two countries, that no rentals may be withdrawn from them, and that Axis films sent to America serve a propaganda rather than entertainment purpose.

Plan More Army Film Theatres

Regular motion picture service is to be provided for practically every officer and man in the Army and Navy under plans now maturing in the motion picture sections of the two departments.

All of the new bases which are being established in this hemisphere and all of the cantonments which are being built for the new Army, as well as new naval air bases, will have the same motion picture service, so far as possible in view of the distance and isolation of some of the establishments, as the regular Army and Navy posts and bases had in the past, it was said.

For the Army Motion Picture Service, now under the charge of Colonel Frederick L. Herron, 36 theatres are being erected at 29 camps and posts in various parts of the country, most of which are expected to be in service by July. Similar construction is being undertaken by the Navy Department at its new bases.

Disney, Fleischers Want War Projects

The Walt Disney and Max Fleischer cartoon studios have offered to make "war cartoons" for the United States Government. Max and Dave Fleischer wrote a letter to President Roosevelt, and the Disney publicity office asserted negotiations "are under way with the Office of Production Management for Walt Disney's cartoons to be used to demonstrate how certain mechanical processes involved in the national defense program are performed."

The letter from the Fleischers recalled that they produced a series of 20 one-reel cartoons in World War I, illustrating army training phases. These were made at Fort Sill, Oklahoma. Prints were sent to all camps and some are still in use, it was said.

Disney films for the OPM would be used in the latter's plant training courses throughout the country, teaching skilled workers for essential defense industry jobs.

The Disney studio, its New York office pointed out this week, has been doing some work for the Government, apart from the contemplated short subjects. Its artists have been making insignia for the U. S. armed forces' airplanes, torpedo boats, and tanks.

Hays Again Quotes Record to Wheeler

For the second time within a few months Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, on April 17th cited the record of American film production in reply to charges by Senator Burton K. Wheeler that the industry was propagandizing for war. In a speech at Salt Lake City before the local America First Committee on April 16th Senator Wheeler declared that the Benedict Arnold of the present war might be found "on the silver screen." Mr. Wheeler stated that the films urged convoys, participation in the war, and excited the people to martial passion. Mr. Hays, in Chicago, cited statistics to show that only 2.4 per cent of shorts, and 5 per cent of features produced in 1940 had any reference whatsoever in story or detail to the war. On the contrary, 17 per cent of the productions were related to national defense. "The facts deny the Senator's accusation," Mr. Hays commented.

OPM Cuts Film Aluminum Supply

The motion picture industry this week felt the heavy hand of the Government in orders under which its consumption of aluminum next month will be reduced to from 30 to 60 per cent of the amount of high-grade metal used last year, although from 60 to 90 per cent of 1940 requirements will be available where low-grade metal was used.

The Office of Production Management also has put motion picture cameras on the priorities critical list, but they are not yet subject to allocation. The priorities critical list consists of items, largely military in character, on which the War and Navy departments may issue preference rating certificates to insure the execution of contracts in order of importance.

Consumption of high-grade aluminum by various civilian industries will be limited to from 10 to 80 per cent of 1940 orders, but low-grade metal will be available in quantities ranging from 50 to 100 per cent of last year's requirements. Provision was made, however, for a more favorable classification in the case of any products involved in defense orders.

Makers of accessories fared less well, projectors and screens (both mesh for talking pictures and screens for home projection) being classified B6, providing for the delivery of only 40 per cent of high-grade aluminum or 70 per cent of low grades. Film cans, reels and tripods were given a B7 classification, limiting deliveries to 30 per cent of high-grade or 60 per cent of low-grade aluminum.

Cummings Forms Company

Mark Cummings, for many years city salesman for Paramount in Cincinnati, has resigned to organize the Independent Advertising Service, to specialize in theatre poster advertising. He is succeeded by Robert Clark, West Virginia salesman, who in turn, has been replaced by H. Twigg, transferred from the Cleveland Paramount office.

Calvert Joins Capra, Riskin

Lowell Calvert, general sales manager for Selznick International, will take over the same position with Frank Capra and Robert Riskin for the picture "Meet John Doe," which is being distributed by Warners.

Irene Francis Joins Republic

Irene Francis, former head of Paramount's reading department in Hollywood, has been appointed assistant to Maurice Hanline, Republic's story and scenario director.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Sam Eckman, general manager for Loew-Metro in Great Britain, sends word to Broadway that the company's branch office in Birmingham is one of the very few structures standing in its section, after Nazi blitzing. But, he writes, lest Fate be tempted too far, he has moved the Birmingham branch to a suburb ten miles away. This is in line with the trend on the part of all British film exchanges to move their headquarters from centers of population.

However, Mr. Eckman reports, removing exchanges isn't so easy. Suitable premises in the suburbs are not readily found and sometimes when found, local restrictions or neighborhood objections prevent storage of film.

The importance of suburban locations for film offices was recently shown in Cardiff, Wales, where a delayed action bomb fell almost in front of the M-G-M office and for almost a week no one was permitted to enter, not even an exhibitor. That is something.

There'll be a central dance floor with little tables spotted around it. The "Night Club" will be open on Sundays, for adult trade only, but there'll be no dancing.

When Chaplin's "Dictator" played Loew's Penn in Pittsburgh, the other week, one of the short subjects was a Pete Smith "Audioscopix" color novelty, for which the theatre passed out rose-colored glasses to patrons entering the auditorium. The glasses are needed to see the Audioscopix. Walking up one of the aisles during the Chaplin showing, manager Martin Burnett noticed that a male customer was still holding the colored glasses to his eyes. Burnett watched more, and posted ushers to note the fellow later. Every minute or so, the customer switched the hand holding the glasses. He kept that routine up for two hours and 40 minutes, watching the entire feature through the colored glasses. Even Nazism can be seen through rose-colored specs, when the looker is deluded.

The League of American Writers, variously characterized as "pink," and other colors, and composed of New York writers and motion picture writers of Hollywood, called a meeting, the other Friday afternoon, at the Murray Hill Hotel in New York, to "pledge resistance" to "a drive to war and Fascism." League members were asked to consider, among other things: "How can we enrich America's imperishable democratic literature and extend its audience."

As if by way of documenting what the League considers "imperishable democratic literature," the League's management, presided over by Hollywood's Donald Ogden Stewart, caused to be circulated on the meeting day, a pamphlet attacking the United States Government's attempts to deport Harry Renton Bridges.

Written by Dalton Trumbo, who also writes for motion pictures ("Kitty Foyle,"" "Philadelphia Story," and others), the pamphlet is dedicated: To the Bakers and Confectioners Union of Los Angeles, "with whom I (Trumbo) worked for nine years, who now courageously enter the fifteenth month of their strike against the Davis Perfection Bakeries."

Kelly Promotes UA District Manager

Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president of United Artists in charge of domestic distribution, has realigned company sales personnel following consultations with Harry L. Gold, vice-president and eastern sales manager, and Haskell M. Masters, western sales manager.

John J. Dervin, previously named southern district manager, has been promoted to district manager for the territory embracing Boston, Buffalo and New Haven. His headquarters will be in Boston. Arthur Silverstone has been named manager of the New York, Washington and Philadelphia district. He will work from New York.

C. E. Peppiatt was promoted from branch manager of UA's New Orleans exchange to southern district manager. His exchanges are Atlanta, Charlotte, Dallas and New Orleans, with headquarters in New Orleans. Bert Stearn is new district manager of the Cincinnati, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Indianapolis territory, with Cleveland headquarters. Jack Goldhar will manage the district including Detroit, St. Louis, Kansas City and Omaha from Detroit offices.

Charles Stern has been promoted from New York district manager to manager for the Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, and Denver territories. His office is in Chicago. Ben Fish remains West Coast district manager, the territory including Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle and Salt Lake City. He will remain in Los Angeles. In the Canadian district, A. Iscove replaces A. Feinstein as manager of the UA exchange in Calgary.

The previously announced appointment of John Dervin to southern district manager was revised to promote him to district manager in the New England area.

Historical Film Planned

Republic has announced plans for its "biggest picture" to be called "High Road to Oregon" starring Gene Autry, John Wayne and Roy Rogers. The background will be the Lewis and Clark expedition. Autry will have the role of Lewis and John Wayne will be Clark. The studio said H. J. Yates ordered preparation of the film following suggestions made to him recently in St. Louis. It is planned to have premieres in St. Louis and Portland, Ore.

Kislingbury Succeeds Huy

Graham Kislingbury, advertising manager of the Warfield theatre in San Francisco, has resigned to succeed Charles Huy in a similar capacity at the Golden Gate theatre in the same city. Mr. Huy resigned from the Golden Gate theatre to handle nationwide exploitation for RKO out of the Los Angeles exchange, working directly under Terry Turner.

Kelley Promoted

Ed Kelley has been appointed assistant to Vic Gauntlett in the publicity and advertising department of the Hamrick-Evergreen theatres in Seattle, Wash. He succeeds Eddie Rivers, who resigned recently to join the RKO exploitation staff in the middle west.

"Pepe" at "Art" Houses First, P.C.A. Seal Later

"Pepe Le Moko," French film now playing the "art" houses, has not received a Production Code Administration seal, and, according to Joseph Burstyn, of Mayer and Burstyn, U. S. distributors, will not receive one for some time.

This is because the PCA, having received an application from Burstyn and Mayer "some while ago," for a seal, suggested eliminations which the distributors refuse to make now.

Mr. Burstyn said Wednesday that after the film has run through the "art" and small, independent houses, and if it is considered for bookings by the circuits, he may then allow it to be cut for a seal.

It was noted the PCA seal is not required for unaffiliated theatres.

The picture was acquired by Walter Wanger as a background property for the making of his "Algiers." He subsequently disposed of the French picture to Mayer and Burstyn, for American distribution.

Bioff Wants Information

Willie Bioff's motion, through counsel in Los Angeles federal court, to have the Government provide him with a bill of particulars in its income tax prosecution, was answered on Tuesday by instructions from the Federal Judge, Harry A. Hollzer, that William Hall, assistant U. S. District Attorney, submit a statement advising the court how much information the Government is willing to give. Bioff, being prosecuted for allegedly failing to report some earnings in 1936 and 1937, called Federal charges "obscure."

Marc Lachman Dies on Coast

Marc Lachman, publicity man, who was at one time associated with the late Harry Reichenback, died on Tuesday at the United States Veterans' Hospital, Sawtelle, California, after six weeks' illness.

Mr. Lachman was for five years director of advertising and publicity at the Universal studio, and also had been associated with New York legitimate theatre enterprises.

He was with C. B. Dillingham, stage producer, and handled publicity for Will Rogers, Lew Fields, and Ethel Merman, and for the musical comedies, "Hit the Deck," "Great Day," and "Du Barry Was a Lady."

The Robbins-Casanave Case

Application to examine Charles L. Casanave before trial was filed Wednesday in the New York Supreme Court by Herman Robbins, president of National Screen Service, plaintiff in a suit which seeks to recover certain profits alleged to have been made by Mr. Casanave. The defendant has filed a counter-application to compel the plaintiff to file a bill of particulars. Mr. Casanave has a counter-suit pending in Westchester County, at White Plains.

Canova Reinstated

The Republic studio on Tuesday rescinded its suspension of actress Judy Canova, incurred Wednesday, April 16th, when she, assertedly, demanded supervision over stories, director, and cast in forthcoming films, including "Puddin' Head."

Says Lesser is "Bound" to UA

Despite continuing reports from the Coast, that producer Sol Lesser might join RKO as production head, United Artists officials at the New York home office and on the Coast rejected the idea, pointing out, on Tuesday, Mr. Lesser's commitments with their company.

Murray Silverstone, chief executive of the company, said in Hollywood Tuesday that "Mr. Lesser's relations with UA will remain unchanged," and added: "He is under exclusive personal contract to UA until September, 1945, for release of all his productions during that period, with certain minimum obligations annually, and in addition thereto, any Ernst Lubitsch pictures made in association with him.

" 'Strange Victory' will be the next UA film to be personally produced by Mr. Lesser, and Mr. Lubitsch shortly will commence work on his second and final film to be produced by him in association with Mr. Lesser, for UA."

Mr. Silverstone's statement was echoed in New York, by Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president in charge of sales.

The reports, last week, of Mr. Lesser's asserted negotiations with RKO, were qualified by the statements that Mr. Lesser obviously would have to obtain release from UA commitments; and they added he had offered to guarantee delivery of a picture to UA, for the coming season, if he could obtain freedom.

George J. Schaefer, president of RKO, from whom the offer to Mr. Lesser is reported to have come, declined to comment Monday.

Altschuler in New Post

Richard W. Altschuler, former purchasing agent for the Republic studio, and prior to that president of the Brunswick, Columbia, and American Records Corporation, has become sales manager of the Consolidated Film Industries, with headquarters in New York.

LOW-BRACKETS SUPPORT NEW ENGLAND THEATRES

Proportionately Higher Budget Allowances for Amusement Found in Low Income Groups

Best customers of New England exhibitors are the families of independent business and professional men earning from $2,000 to $4,000 a year the Bureau of Labor Statistics reports in an analysis of family expenditures in seven cities in Rhode Island Massachusetts, Connecticut and Maine. Recreation expenses were slightly less than the cost of medical care but exceed the average outlay for education, reading, tobacco, personal care, and contributions and taxes, the federal study of family expenses for income groups bracketed at $250 intervals from $500 to $7,500 and over per year showed.

Similar observations were made in a second study of four urban communities in the Pacific northwest region. Expenditures for motion pictures there were more equitably spread through the lower income groups with Pacific coast wage earners and clerks earning less than $3,000 a year spending more than similar workers in New England. Professional and business men in the northwest also spent slightly more than their eastern colleagues for film entertainment, but film admissions were proportionately less in their larger entertainment budget.

The United States Department of Labor in connection with the Works Progress Administration obtained the expenditure data for 1935-36 in the cities of Providence, R. I., Haverhill, Mass., New Britain, Conn., and four smaller cities, Westbrook, Me., Greenfield, Mass., and Wallingford and Willimantic, Conn. The results have just been published as part of the urban series of the Bureau of Labor Statistic's study of consumer purchases.

The cities in which the Northwest study was made are: Portland, Ore. (population 307,572 compared with 253,504 in Providence) and the middle-sized cities of Bellingham, Everett, and Aberdeen-Hoquiam, Washington.

Other Expenses Compared

Motion pictures, in general, took the largest share of recreation expenses. In the lower brackets cinema attendance accounted for almost half the entire recreation outlay. Expenditures for radios, musical instruments, sports, toys, pets, club dues and home entertaining (exclusive of food or drink) were grouped under the head of recreation. The share allotted to other forms of entertainment increased to more than half at levels above $3,000, while the proportion of the recreation budget devoted to films decreased markedly over the income range.

No increase in the total amount spent for film entertainment was consistently noted at income levels above $3,500. Expenditures for admissions to theatres, concerts, lectures, dances, sports attendance and equipment and "other" recreation expenses increased rapidly with income. Among Providence families with incomes of $4,000 or more such expenditures exceeded the average spent on motion pictures.

The bureau report developed there was little difference in the motion picture expenditures of the average family in the large, middle sized, or small city. The total spent for recreation is less in small communities, probably because of the lack of diversified amusement, and the greater prevalence of low-cost community recreation.

Taking Providence, R. I., as an example of the large city, the study showed that families with income of $500 to $750 a year spent an average of $3 on motion pictures and $4 on all other recreation. With income of $750 to $1,000, they spent $6 out of $16, and at $2,250 to $2,500 they spent $29 out of $71. The top average for film theatre attendance was $42 out of $159 in the $3,500-$4,000 group, while families with income of $7,500 or over spent only $35 out of $436.

A similar saturation point was found in the middle-sized cities, where expenditures for motion picture admissions ranged from 3 of the family's $13 recreation total for the $250-$500 bracket to $30 out of $90 in the $2,500-$3,000 class. Thereafter, the proportion declined, and families with income of $5,000 or over spent only $28 on theatres out of a total of $98 for recreation.

In the four small cities the film expenditures ranged from $4 out of $6 for families with $250 to $500 a year to $29 out of $88 in the $2,500 to $3,000 a year class. Those with incomes exceeding $3,000 spent only $25 out of $152 for motion pictures. In Providence, the largest city, theatre admissions ranged from $3 for the $500-$750 a year group to $30 for the $2,250-$3,000 bracket, among wage earners. In the same brackets the range for clerical workers ran from $8 to $29.

Variance in Different Brackets

There were marked differences in expenditures by classes in all three population groups, wage earners, clerical workers and business and professional. Thus, in the largest city, theatre admissions ranged from $3 for the $500-$750 group to $30 for the $2,500-$3,000 group of wage earners. The range for families of clerical workers in the same brackets ran from $8 to $29. In the $5,000-$7,500 class the independent business and professional man's family spent $47 on motion pictures, while the families of salaried business men spent $41 and those of salaried professional employes only $30.

In the Pacific Northwest, as in New England, the amounts spent for amusements and recreational equipment not only increased with income, but mounted rapidly enough in successive income classes to account for an increasing percentage of total money outlay for family living. Motion pictures again accounted for the largest item under admissions, with other admissions amounting to very little except in top income classes. Other admissions were less in the Pacific region than in New England.

Largest expenditures for recreation among occupational groups at the same income levels were reported by families of wage earners in Portland and the middle-sized cities. In Portland salaried professionals are a relatively better market for exhibitors in the northwest than in the New England area. In the Northwest middle-sized cities motion picture expenses ranged from $4 out of a $11 recreation budget for families making $250-$500 a year to $55 out of $459 a year for families making over $5,000.

Average expenditure in the middle income brackets from $1,500 to $3,500 was $21.70 for the Northwest middle cities against $19.30 for comparable New England towns. In Portland the middle group average was $18.70 against $25.10 in Providence. Greater expenditure for film entertainment by Providence professional groups accounts for the city's higher average. The study attributed greater prevalence of outdoor recreations in the Pacific city as reason for lower film expenditures.

Among Portland families receiving less than $1,250 expenditures for recreation absorbed less than 3 per cent of the total, while among those with incomes of $4,000 and over this category accounted for between 5 and 6 per cent. In the middle sized cities the relative increase, although less regular, was even greater between the two extremes of the income scale than it was in Portland.

Admission prices in the Northwest area are slightly higher than in New England. Motion Picture Herad, in a survey published in the issue of August 24, 1940, lists first run Portland admissions as 35 cents for matinee, and 40-50 cents in the evening. In Providence matinee admissions to first run range from 15-39 cents to 15-50 cents in the evening. Second run admissions in Portland are 25 to 35 cents, while in Providence they are 20 to 33 cents. Subsequents charge 30 cents in the northwest city, 20-33 cents in Providence.

Of interest to exhibitors and motion picture advertisers is the report's conclusion that expenses for recreation increase in successive income classes both in average amount and as a proportion of the total expenditures for current living. In Providence the increase was from one per cent for families with $500 a year to five per cent for families at the $5,000 or more level. In smaller cities the rise was from one percent for families at the $250-$500 level to almost five per cent at the $3,000 level.

New "Documentary"

"America Speaks," described by its makers as an "American Cavalcade," is to be distributed shortly by Adventure Epics Films, Inc., principals of which are H. T. Edwards and William Alexander, of New York. The film is in seven reels, and is a compilation of motion pictures of historic events affecting the United States.

Earle Books Stars

The Earle theatre, Warner vaudeville house in Philadelphia, will give preference to motion picture players instead of name dance orchestras for its weekly stage attractions. Booked during May and June are Anita Louise, John Boles, Gypsy Rose Lee, Patsy Kelly, Zazu Pitts and a "horror" stage presentation with Bela Lugosi and Peter Lorre. While the emphasis all season has been on name bands, the theatre played film names when available.

RCA-Warners Tieup

Marking the first time RCA Victor has ever tied up with a short subject on a national advertising and publicity campaign, the company has completed arrangements with Warner Brothers for a cooperative campaign for the musical, "Leo Reisman and His Orchestra." Publicity will be placed in all RCA periodicals, going to over 6,000 dealers and 370,000 consumers. In addition, streamers will be placed in dealers' windows coincidental with the film's release this summer.

Kulick Named Sales Head

40 MILLIONS, COST OF JOINING THE BERNE CONVENTION, CONGRESS TOLD

Foreign Copyright Pact Threatens American Artists, Public Purse; ASCAP-Radio Peace Near; Test State Music Laws

by FRANCIS L. BURT

in Washington

Basing their arguments on three major foundations, representatives of the motion picture and broadcasting industries last week told Senator Elbert D. Thomas (Dem., Utah), head of a subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee considering adherence of the United States to the Berne International Copyright Convention, that adoption of the agreement at this time would prove unwise, dangerous and costly.

American exhibitors, it was stated, see in adherence the opening up of a profitable field of taxation to foreign music societies, whose impositions, on top of the ASCAP movie seat tax, and other governmental taxes and charges now applied, would be more than they could absorb.

As a result, it was declared by Julian Brylawski, vice-president of the MPTOA, and Sidney B. Lust, Washington exhibitor, it would be necessary to pass the new license charges on to the public. On the basis of the charges in Europe and the business done in this country, they estimated, this might mean an increase of from $40,000,000 to $80,000,000 a year to the public.

Would Levy Foreign Royalties

That the foreign music copyright societies would lose no time in exploiting this "fertile field," it was asserted, was demonstrated in 1936 when the Senate ratified and then withdrew the treaty, at which time several of the foreign organizations set up offices in New York in anticipation of United States adherence.

The only safeguard against such impositions, Senator Thomas was told, would be to amend the copyright law in advance of adherence, to provide that music now in the public domain should not be given protection. In this way, it was explained, the European music societies would be barred from collecting for the use of music which now is not copyrighted in this country but is given protection in other countries under the copyright convention.

Challenging assertions of U. S. State Department officials that adherence to the convention would improve our cultural relations with other countries, Fulton Brylawski, copyright counsel for the MPPDA, declared it would be impossible for Americans to gain recognition of their rights in an Axis-dominated Europe.

The State Department, he said, has been less than frank in its arguments in support of the move, in which it has been joined by "only a few individuals." The authors, publishers and other copyright interests, he pointed out, have been solidly opposed to adherence.

The State Department, he charged, has yielded to English pressure for our adherence, which would eliminate the present requirement that books in English be printed in this country in order to secure copyright protection here. None of the other countries in the convention are interested, he said, because they gain copyright here by simply printing a copyright notice.

Mr. Brylawski pointed out that most of Europe is in the hands of the Axis powers, He referred to the burning of books by the Germans and their prohibition upon the playing of the music of some of the world's "greatest composers." He cited instances, also, where German courts had thrown out infringement cases in which the complainant was a non-Aryan on the ground that, whatever the evidence and the law, Aryans must be held to be in the right in such cases.

Although provision is made in the Berne Convention for the protection of the works of non-adherents, he said, Americans have been unable to get recognition in many countries. In Holland, he testified, Twentieth Century-Fox brought an infringement suit under a reciprocal copyright agreement with that country, but the court threw it out because the agreement had been abrogated by the Netherlands. Also, he added, the U. S. State Department appeared unaware of the denunciation of the treaty for several years.

Broadcasters would be in a serious situation if the Berne Convention was adopted without revision of our copyright laws to "freeze" the present set-up with respect to foreign music, it was testified by Sidney M. Kaye, of the National Association of Broadcasters.

Publishers and broadcasters have large investments in European music now in the public domain which would be threatened by adherence, and the situation would be greatly confused by reason of the fact that, as a result of the upheaval in Europe, it would be impossible to contact foreign copyright owners to secure performing or publishing rights, he testified.

Practically all of the witnesses appearing before Senator Thomas urged that the U. S. copyright law be revised before the United States enters the convention. Under the proposal before Congress, the United States would join one year after ratification, the idea being that the domestic law would be revised in that time.

It was pointed out by witnesses that not only might the law not be enacted within the one-year period but than any enactment after notice of adherence might be rejected by the convention.

Composers' Suit Hits ASCAP "Peace"

"Peace" conversations settling the long controversy between the broadcasters and the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers and aimed at returning ASCAP music to the air after a four months' ban were threatened with new complications this week when a group of independent composers filed suit against four of the leading broadcasting groups.

On Monday fourteen song writers, thirteen of whom are ASCAP members, filed a suit, seeking $1,215,500 damages, in the New York Supreme Court. The National Association of Broadcasters, Broadcast Music, Inc., National Broadcasting Company, Columbia Broadcasting Company and 12 of their officers and directors were named as defendants.

The plaintiffs charged that the radio group had impaired their livelihood through a conspiracy to destroy ASCAP and to coerce radio stations, motion pictures, hotels, orchestras and others to use only music approved by the defendants.

It was further charged the defendants conspired to force composers to sell compositions at "low and unfair prices to be fixed and controlled by the defendants" and to "acquire complete domination and control of the business of song writing and musical composition in the United States." This action, the complaint states, is in violation of licenses issued by the Federal Communications Commission to broadcasters and Federal anti-trust legislation.

ASCAP on Tuesday formally denied any interest in the suit instituted by the song writers, declaring that the plaintiffs had acted as individuals without consulting the society.

The plaintiffs and the damages which they seek in the suit against the broadcasters are: Frank Madden, not an ASCAP member, $75,000; Allen Flynn, $100,000; Paul Cunningham, Ira Schuster, Vincent Rose, Ernie Burnett and Jean Schwartz $100,000 each; Al Lewis, Larry Stock and Stanley Adams, $75,000 each; Nelson Cogane, $87,500; Sammy Mysels, $92,500; Guy Wood, $50,000; and George Whiting, $85,000.

On Friday stockholders of Mutual Broadcasting System were scheduled to meet in New York with Fred Webber, president, to receive the report of the copyright committee on ASCAP proposals. It is reported that committee will recommend an agreement with the song writers and that the member stations will vote on the pact immediately.

Discussions between ASCAP and the National and Columbia broadcasting companies were also reported to be continuing, with both sides considering stipulations for returning ASCAP music to the air. A final peace agreement with both networks is expected by observers within a few weeks. The negotiations have been conducted separately by both companies, without participation by the National Association of Broadcasters.

State Anti-ASCAP Laws

Wisconsin's six-year-old anti-ASCAP law was implemented with enforcement powers on April 17th when acting Governor Walter S. Goodland signed the Cashman bill which authorizes the Secretary of State to collect a 25 per cent franchise tax from all music brokers on gross receipts collected by them from Wisconsin theatres, radio stations, bands and other music users. As originally enacted in 1935, the anti-ASCAP law provided for a five per cent tax. In 1937 the legislature boosted the rate to 25 per cent, but no attempts were made at enforcement until recently, when the Attorney-General ruled that the statutes did not empower the Secretary of State to collect such a fee as a license requisite. The Cashman bill was drafted as an enabling measure.

Seattle attorneys for ASCAP last week announced that they would appeal to the United States Supreme Court for a review of ASCAP's action against the 1937 Oregon copyright law. Three judges of a Federal statutory court recently denied the society's motion for a new trial in its test of the law's constitutionality. ASCAP seeks a Federal injunction against the State law which makes it illegal for separate copyright owners to pool their copyrights, fix prices, collect fees or issue blanket licenses.

H. W. Haugland, Seattle attorney, filed the society's petition for a review. District judges John C. Bowen and Lloyd L. Black, and Circuit judge Bert Haney denied the retrial motion on the grounds it was not filed within ten days of the dismissal of the original injunction petition in December and on the grounds that no new evidence was involved.

The U. S. Supreme Court on Monday will hear arguments by Nebraska's attorney general Walter Johnson, and William J. Hotz, special prosecutor, asking a reversal of the 1939 district court decision holding that the 1937 Nebraska anti-ASCAP law was unconstitutional.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

BLONDIE GOES LATIN: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms, Tito Guizar—The people really come out to see the "Bumsteads." This just missed being the best of the series by the mistake of putting Tito Guizar in. Small town audiences don't want this kind of singing and I can't say I blame them. Running time, 69 minutes. Played April 6-9.—Robert F. Netzel, Palace Theatre, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

BLONDIE PLAYS CUPID: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms—A fine comedy and well liked. Best of that series.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SO YOU WON'T TALK: Joe E. Brown, Frances Robinson—A good Saturday night picture and pleased. —C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SO YOU WON'T TALK: Joe E. Brown, Frances Robinson—Fair comedy. Running time, 69 minutes. Played April 9-10.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BLONDE INSPIRATION: John Shelton, Virginia Grey—Pretty poor picture for MGM. Business poor. Running time, 75 minutes. Played April 11-12.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WYOMING: Wallace Beery, Leo Carrillo, Marjorie Main—A very fine picture that pleased all. Comedy put it over.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Miscellaneous

IT'S IN THE AIR: George Formby—This picture was well received here, doing record business. Formby is the same as Autry to our box office.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, and Alexander Theatre, Wallaceburg, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Paramount

CHEROKEE STRIP: Richard Dix, Florence Rice—Just another western—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

COMIN' ROUND THE MOUNTAIN: Bob Burns, Una Merkel—Double featured with "Dreaming Out Loud." We liked them and did business.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

LOVE THY NEIGHBOR: Jack Benny, Fred Allen, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, Mary Martin—A swell cast headed by "Rochester" helped this picture considerably. This picture only got by because of its star value. Otherwise it was nothing to get excited about. —Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

MOON OVER BURMA: Dorothy Lamour, Robert Preston, Preston Foster—A good action love story that entertained our patrons. There is plenty of action in this picture to keep it moving along at a rapid pace.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

NORTH WEST MOUNTED POLICE: Gary Cooper, Madeleine Carroll, Paulette Goddard, Robert Preston—Good picture in beautiful color but did not appeal to the women. Recording too low in spots. Business poor. Running time, 125 minutes. Played April 6-8.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

RANGERS OF FORTUNE: Fred MacMurray, Albert Dekker, Patricia Morison—This one did not click at all. There was something lacking throughout the entire production, and with the cast and production should have made a very much better picture. I am surprised at Paramount for having missed out on this one.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

SECOND CHORUS: Fred Astaire, Paulette Goddard, Burgess Meredith—Good. My patrons seemed to enjoy it very much.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

TEXAS RANGERS RIDE AGAIN: John Howard, May Robson, Akim Tamiroff, Ellen Drew—A swell western that pleased our patrons very much. The entire cast does a good job and a good story enhances this production.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffern, N. Y. General patronage.

Republic

GREAT TRAIN ROBBERY, THE: Bob Steele, Claire Carleton—Good action picture which pleased the week-end trade. Average business. Running time, 61 minutes. Played April 11-12.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MR. DISTRICT ATTORNEY: Dennis O'Keefe, Florence Rice, Peter Lorre—Good picture which drew average business. A little weak on star power. Running time, 69 minutes. Played April 13-14.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PRAIRIE PIONEERS: Three Mesquiteers (Robert Livingston, Bob Steel, Rufe Davis)—Good western. This combination the best since originals. Comedy sequences go over big. Business good. Running time, 58 minutes. Played April 3-5.—Robert F. Netzel, Palace Theatre, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

ROBIN HOOD OF THE PECOS: Roy Rogers, George "Gabby" Hayes—Did nice week-end business on a single bill but doesn't do anything like the business that Autry does.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, and Alexander Theatre, Wallaceburg, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SING, DANCE, PLENTY HOT: Johnny Downs, Ruth Terry, Billy Gilbert—Very nice little program picture. Billy Gilbert is very good in this. He seems to be gaining in popularity.—Sammie Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

TUMBLING TUMBLEWEEDS: Gene Autry—this re-issue is O.K. Picture pleased and print good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

RKO Radio

DREAMING OUT LOUD: Lum & Abner, Frances Langford, Frank Craven, Bobs Watson—Doubled featured with "Comin' Round the Mountain." We liked them and did business—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

IRENE: Anna Neagle, Ray Milland, Roland Young, Billie Burke, May Robson—Very good picture but I do not believe Miss Neagle made such a big hit here. This was my first with her.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

HUDSON'S BAY: Paul Muni, Gene Tierney, Virginia Field, John Sutton, Laird Cregar—A very fine picture that grossed $2.30 more than film rental. Trailer and advertising accessories killed the picture. —C. L. Niles, Nilese Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

STREET OF MEMORIES: Guy Kibbee, Lynne Roberts—Just a little picture which failed to draw. It was entertaining, though. Running time, 70 minutes. Played April 8.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

TOBACCO ROAD: Charley Grapewin, Marjorie Rambeau, Gene Tierney—The reputation that the stage show had for obscenity evidently held business down on this one. There is nothing offensive in the screen version and the acting is good. Half-wits are not pleasant to watch. "Dude" was that; so was "Ellie May." Curiosity brought some business for the picture had the benefit of the stage ballyhoo, the length of the run. However, the public did not realize that the stage gets away with murder in obscenity and vulgarity and the screen can not.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

WESTERN UNION: Randolph Scott, Robert Young, Dean Jagger, Virginia Gilmore—Good picture and good business. A super western in beautiful color. Running time, 95 minutes. Played April 9-10.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

United Artists

FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT: Joel McCrea, Laraine Day, Herbert Marshall, Robert Benchley, George Sanders—We thought this well produced but it did not do business. We put a big campaign behind this picture. Everybody liked it but there just wasn't enough.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, and Alexander Theatre, Wallaceburg, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Universal

BANK DICK: W. C. Fields, Una Merkel—Another weak sister with no draw.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

I'M NOBODY'S SWEETHEART NOW: Dennis O'Keefe, Constance Moore, Helen Parrish—A swell little program picture that entertained our patrons thoroughly. This has comedy, music and enough action to keep everyone interested throughout. This can be classed as very pleasant film fare.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffren, N. Y. General patronage.

ONE NIGHT IN THE TROPICS: Allan Jones. Abbott and Costello, Nancy Kelly—Abbott and Costello save this one from flopping. Our patron's won't go for this kind of music. Running time, 83 minutes. Played April 3-5.—Robert F. Netzel, Palace Theatre, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

SANDY GETS HER MAN: Baby Sandy, Stuart Erwin, Una Merkel—A fair comedy that had its funny moments. This was quite silly in spots, but nevertheless gave the patrons a laugh and that's what they want now-a-days.—Theodore J. Friedman, Strand Theatre, Suffren, N. Y. General patronage.

WHERE DID YOU GET THAT GIRL? Helen Parrish, Charles Lang, Leon Errol—Fair picture for Friday and Saturday crowd. Business fair. Running time, 65 minutes. Played April 4-5.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

Warner Brothers

SOUTH OF SUEZ: George Brent, Brenda Marshall —Fairly good action picture; keeps your interest throughout. Those that came were satisfied. Running time, 86 minutes. Played April 9-10.—Harry Tishkoff, Empress Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. Neighborhood patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

FRESH AS A FRESHMAN: Glove Slingers—Now here was a real comedy. More laughs than the Stooges. It's a real pleasure to hear the crowds roar but it's hard on the seats. Running time, 18 minutes. —Robert F. Netzel, Palace Theatre, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

HIS EX MARKS THE SPOT: Buster Keaton—Lots of laughs for week-end action lovers. Our folks enjoyed it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, and Alexander Theatre, Wallaceburg, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MAD HATTER, THE: Color Rhapsodies—Just fairish. Running time, seven minutes.—Robert F. Netzel, Palace Theatre, Crandon, Wis. Small town and rural patronage.

TAKE IT OR LEAVE IT, No. 2: Quiz Reels—Interesting but not as good as radio programs.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, and Alexander Theatre, Wallaceburg, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ABDUL THE BULBUL AMEER: Cartoons—A very fine colored cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

FORBIDDEN PASSAGE: Crime Does Not Pay Series—This two-reeler from the "Crime Doesn't Pay" series always please. This deals with smuggling immigrants into the U. S. Running time, 20 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MEMORY TRICKS: Pete Smith Specialities — A good short, different and interesting.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

WALDO LAST STAND: Our Gang—Just so-so. These Gangs have gone to pot.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

XXX MEDICO: Passing Parade—Fine one-reeler. This series is mighty good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Alta. General patronage.

Paramount

CRIME CONTROL: Robert Benchley — Average comedy with Robert Benchley getting a few laughs. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GREECE FIGHTS ON: Entertaining and instructive. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

LONE RANGER SERIAL: Before making this report, we checked our records a month previous to the playing of this serial with the last four chapters up to No. 12. Children 10 per cent increase and adults 10 per cent decrease. As serial cost is double the cost of two-reeler, it does look like serial is answer. I believe that general serials are not popular only in mature situations.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, and Alexander Theatre, Wallaceburg, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Omaha Theatre Planned

Blank and Green Enterprises, Inc., announces plans for a 1,000-seat house to cost $100,000 in Omaha. Ralph Blank, former district manager for Central States Theatres in Nebraska and nephew of A. H. Blank, head of Tri-States theatres, and Walter M. Green, owner and operator of Fepco, theatre advertising company in Omaha, head the company.

Theatre Increases Admissions

The Lyric theatre, a 2,000-seat vaudeville and first run house in Indianapolis, operated by Charles M. Olson, has raised admission prices. The new prices are 30 cents for matinees, 40 cents in the balcony and 50 cents in the orchestra at night. Night prices prevail on Sundays and children's admissions remain at ten cents. All admissions include the defense tax. The increase was necessitated, according to Mr. Olson, by the higher operating costs and to continue stage shows which will measure up to the standard set in the past.

Film Boosts Oregon City

Color motion picture film constitutes the chief sales literature of the Portland, Oregon, Chamber of Commerce, Manley F. Robison, manager of the northwest cities' tourist and convention department, indicated on his annual visit to New York last week. Touring 26 cities with a 1,000-foot reel on scenic and business advantages of the Oregon city, he reports that the pictures have brought the best response from tourist agencies, convention groups, and the public, ever received through a promotional medium. The picture cost about $1,000 to produce, he said, and following his promotion junket will be released as a travelogue to local theatres, clubs and the U. S. Travel Bureau's film service.

Juvenile Films Added

Six new units have been added to Columbia's "Happy-Hour Entertainments," the certified juvenile motion picture programs which are selected by civic organizations interested in child welfare. The units consist of a variety of shorts, principally "Community Sing" reels, "Screen Snapshots," cartoons and comedies. They offer a service of complete one-hour programs for children and bear the official approval of leading civic and women's groups.

RCA Chiefs Speak At Service Confab

A three-day meeting of RCA district service managers, to discuss advances in Photophone service activities, was concluded at the Indianapolis plant of RCA Manufacturing Company, on Monday. Company executives and sales and service representatives from Camden were present and addressed the meeting.

Following two days of discussions, a third day was devoted to an inspection of RCA's enlarged Photophone manufacturing facilities and new laboratories. According to E. C. Cahill, Photophone division manager, increased production facilities have been necessary to meet the needs of both commercial and government orders.

Those attending included: Robert Shannon, RCA executive vice-president; F. R. Deakins, vice-president in charge of engineering products division; F. D. Wilson, manager of RCA field activities; W. H. Kelley, J. K. West, and R. A. Graver, district sales managers; E. C. Cahill, F. W. Wentker, and C. E. Johnson of Photophone sales division, Camden; W. L. Jones, national service manager; A. Goodman, and L. B. Hart of Photophone Service, Camden; district Service managers J. Mauran, Boston; W. W. Jones, New York; C. H. Taylor, Baltimore; C. R. Underhill, Pittsburgh; M. D. Faige, Atlanta; L. R. Yoh, Cleveland; G. R. Beck, Chicago; W. F. Hardman, Kansas City; J. O. Hill, Dallas; W. H. Freisleben, San Francisco; G. M. Urey, Hollywood, and M. A. Walsh, assistant service manager, New York.

Asks Transfer of Fairbanks' Assets

In an accounting filed in the Surrogates Court in New York on Thursday, April 10th, by the Guaranty Trust Co., as executor and trustee of the Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., estate assets outside of California, three eastern trust funds established by the late Mr. Fairbanks prior to his death aggregated $1,407,000 it was disclosed. Guaranty Trust asks the court to transfer the eastern assets, largely cash, to the California trustee and to release Guaranty as trustee in New York, pointing out that the California assets of the estate cannot be liquidated advantageously at this time and that there is insufficient cash in the estate there to meet specific bequests in the Fairbanks' will.

The papers were filed by O'Brien, Driscoll & Raftery, attorneys for the estate.

The accounting shows that the Fairbank's eastern trust funds consisted of one of $693,000 with the Guaranty Trust; one of $522,000, with the Bankers Trust Co., and one with the Union Trust Co. of Pittsburgh of $192,000. From the funds, $596,100 has been turned over to the Bank of America, trustee for the Fairbanks' California estate, for bequests and estate requirements.

Eastern assets, exclusive of cash, included bonds and mortgage on an apartment building in the Bronx, which were sold for $246,375; a painting, "The Missionary," which was sold by the M. Knoedler Galleries for $3,500, and a set of golf clubs purchased by Dennis F. O'Brien, Mr. Fairbanks' attorney, for $15. An account with the Fifth Ave. Branch of the Guaranty Trust Co. had a balance of $81.16, and another with the Paris branch of the same bank had a balance of 1,004 francs.

The ordinary administration expenses of the trustee in the east amounted to $12,430. Several minor claims, some of which are disputed, were filed against the estate in London.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

Calling a Spade What It Is

"I have been a reader of your Managers' Round Table for many years, and from the reports of other managers throughout the country have received many valuable hints on exploitations. I read your section of the Herald very carefully each week, and have yet to read it that I haven't found some idea that was practical for usage in my location.

"I feel a little guilty in the fact that I have never taken the time to send in some material that I have used that was either original or a new slant on some old idea. So I offer my apologies, and below send you an idea that I have found to be great institutional advertising."

The above leads off the letter from Malco-man Jack Thomas, manager of the Strand, in Clarksville, Ark., wherein the theatreman tells about his excellent bridge club tiein detailed further along in this section.

Thomas feels a "little guilty". Every issue of the Round Table has brought him some practical idea for use in his situation. So eventually he gets around to removing that guilt by sending along something of what he is doing as a fair exchange for the help he has been getting from the reports of other readers.

The fact that Jack figures this out entirely on his own, in the same manner as scores of other theatremen who have come into the fold similarly, represents a main reason for the Round Table, tells the story of this department's acceptance as the industry's clearing house for proven box-office ideas in the field.

That story is, in short: The Round Table is conducted and maintained by theatremen for theatremen. The strength of the Round Table is to be measured only by how many of the industry's theatremen do their part in keeping vital this most necessary industry service.

Even if there were no consent decree, this "most necessary industry service" certainly would be no less. It so happens with the decree that such service becomes even more so. Current confirmation comes from none other than Ned E. Depinet, RKO Radio distribution head, who indicated as much at the last AMPA meeting in New York. Said the always exploitation-conscious Depinet:

"It is logical that exhibitors will build up larger patronage by setting out to cash in on the value of each picture and trying to milk it dry. The old habit of pulling a picture and grabbing another whenever one doesn't measure up to expectations at the outset, without much help from the exhibitor, will not be so easy. We will have to do business with what we have. . . . The responsibility of the exhibitor grows greater. . . . Intensive showmanship will be the order of the day. The theatre press agent and the advertising man will be even more vital than in the past. . . . "

Thus, right now, we come to finger-pointing directed at "the manager", "the press agent", "the advertising man" who refuses for one reason or another to recognize the implications of the new setup by laying down on his part of the job done by brother-showmen in furthering Round Table purposes.

And we mean "laying down", for no less emphatic term will suffice.

Those to whom the term applies are "laying down" as long as they allow others to do all the work without offering to take a-hold. The balance adjusts itself slowly as more theatremen who see the light join the fold. But this process is too slow to pass by without comment. Too few are still doing the job for too many.

THE YOUNGSTERS DECIDE

Discouragement of "juvenile-crashing" at the F P C Strand, in Vancouver, B. C., came about recently when Manager Norman Duncan nabbed a couple of school kids trying to break in. Duly informed, the youngsters' teacher promoted a schoolwide contest on "What Would You Do If You Were the Manager of the Strand and Caught Boys Sneaking In?" The entries, over 200, were judged personally by Duncan, who gave a pass for the best, with winning entry and congratulatory letter from theatreman read before the assembled classes.

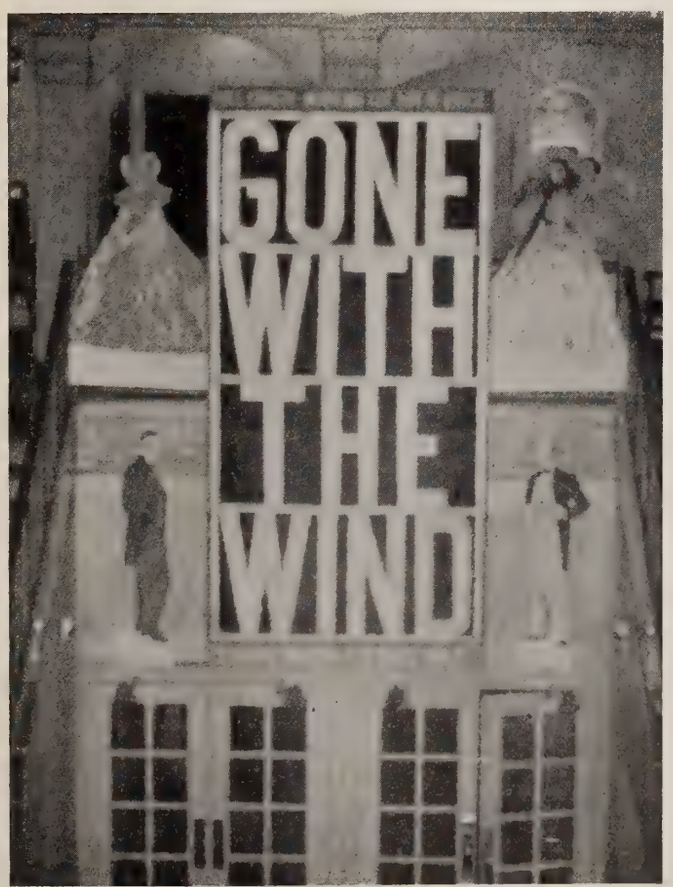
Round Table In Pictures

Full length, lifelike miniature figure of Jean Gabin as Pepe Le Moko, star of the film, currently at the New York World Theatre, is featured in dramatic window display at leading Fifth Avenue jeweler. Figure, which will continue on display for four weeks, was sculptured by Janet Riza, well known artist, for Mayer & Burstyn, distributors.

What proved to be a crowd-stopper for Russ Bovim at Loew's Ohio, in Columbus, was his walking street ballyhoo for "Tobacco Road". 24 sheet, appropriately mounted, was manned by three theatre attendants and carried through main thoroughfares.

At left is one of the many Loew Spring Festival displays being featured on the New York circuit. Live bunnies and baby chicks gave gala spring flavor to Loew's American, in the Bronx. Display was built by Manager Gilbert Marbe, assistant Ed Brunner and doorman Frank Wilson.



Forwarded by Jack Granara at the RKO Keith Memorial, in Boston, was photo of display used ahead and during two-week engagement of "Back Street". Measuring approximately 15 by 15 feet, cutouts of Boyer and Sullavan were superimposed on large disc. Cyl Champlin, house artist, is credited with design and execution.

Ingenious was the boxoffice decoration conceived by Francis Deering at Loew's, Houston, Tex., for "Topper Returns". Cashier was screened in by silver spangle paper which reflects like a mirror but allowed girl to see patrons though she was not visible to them. Usher alongside called attention to the "ectoplasm cashier".

Each measuring 33 inches in height, were the "Gone With the Wind" title letters used by Francis Gillon at the LeClaire, Moline, Ill., for advance display. At the sides of letter panel were 40 by 60 cutout figures of the principals. Date strip placed at bottom and top of sign read: "Full length. Nothing cut but the price".

From a 24 sheet, Frank Bickerstaff, at the L. & J. Palace in Athens, Ga., effected lobby setpiece for "Lady Eve". Through merchant tieup promoted apples were displayed, patrons invited to help themselves. Those picking apples carrying small title letters received tickets.

Attractive outside lobby constructed by Round Tabler Pierre Boulogne of the Norva Theatre in Norfolk, Va., for "Meet John Doe" consisted of blowups of scene stills which were planted at either side of giant cutout of Gary Cooper.

Cutout star figures set forward with fluorescent lights from behind featured Lou Brown's "Night in Rio" lobby setpiece at Loew's Poli, in New Haven, Conn. The 24 sheet cutouts of Miranda, Ameche and Faye were mounted on compoboard and enlivened with flitter.

COIFFURE CONTEST CLICKS FOR GREENE

Four - Week Competition for Valuable Prizes Put on to Box-Office Returns

Proven sure-fire box office in previous years and recommended highly by Al Greene, Rugoff & Becker district manager is the "Oceana Theatre Coiffure Contest" put on at that New York Brighton Beach spot, with local women endeavoring to compete for valuable prizes which include apparel, dance courses, summer vacations, etc. The plan, detailed as follows, should prove helpful to those members in the market for another angle of the hairdress competition.

First, the number of shops allowed to enter was limited to 30, and upon receipt of the ten dollars entry fee, given contacts with the following clauses:

Theatre agreed to accept three competitors from each shop, either employee or patron, hairdress to be executed by shop owner or regular operator. Engagement of professional model or operator not regularly employed by the shop was not permitted.

Theatre further agreed to take motion pictures on stage of contestants, filming hairdress from front, back and sides in closeups.

Patrons Witness Screen Tests

Theatre obligated itself to show the completed films of each shop's entries for an entire week, the name of shop incorporated in the reel and after the contest to give each entrant that portion of the film showing shop's contestants.

Each shop's name and address was displayed in the lobby, included in programs and names of contestants were also publicized. This was carried out further in circulars, distributed house-to-house, theatre also supplying window cards.

During the preliminaries, patrons were invited to remain after the regular show to witness the filming of the contestants on stage, which of course helped business. Films of 30 numbered contestants were shown each week for a full week, patrons given voting coupons upon which were listed 30 corresponding numbers, and asked to ring any three of the numbers on the ballot.

Thus, at the end of the third week, 90 contestants were filmed and for the finals, the one from each shop securing the highest number of votes of the three contestants from that shop, entered the finals. This insured representation from every one of the 30 entries. Final judging took place on the stage, the 30 finalists appearing in person to compete for the grand prizes on designated night of the final week.

Shop owners were invited to consult with Greene in the selection of the judges, who were chosen as impartially as possible, and who all possessed technical knowledge of the fine points of hairdressing. In Greene's case, representative of The American Hairdresser, leading coiffure trade paper, acted as one of the judges.

Prizes Promoted for Contestants

To make the contest more attractive, Al promoted shoes for the 90 contestants. Each of these was advised by letter when her picture was to be shown and the theatreman reports that many brought friends along as well as sending others to the box-office to help out the cause. Another smart idea was the personal appearances on one night each week of the 30 weekly winners, this added feature being strongly plugged by the theatre.

Merit Certificates Issued

As a final gesture the Round Tabler supplied each competing shop with a certificate of merit to be displayed in windows. Not only did this build up goodwill, but as each certificate carried the theatre name and address, it made for good advertising.

Among other prizes which were promoted were pastel portraits through tieup with cooperating photographer, in each case merchants who donated prizes were duly credited in all advertising in connection with the event. Local papers came through with excellent stories and art and in this instance Greene also stresses the importance of getting each contestant to sign a waiver agreeing to the publication of her picture for publicity purposes.

TERRELL ALL OUT FOR "SO ENDS OUR NIGHT"

Of no mean proportions was the photo contest arranged by Dan Terrell for "So Ends Our Night" at Loew's Palace, in Washington, with cash prizes and tickets going to those submitting best photos interpreting the picture title.

Instead of tying in with one store, Terrell promoted Master Photo Finishers, which brought distribution of 10,000 blanks calling attention to the contest and giving rules. These were inserted in all packages of photographic purchases or developments at seven downtown stores.

Managers Report 'Boys Town' Dates

Vigorous exploitations to build openings on "Men of Boys Town" are in evidence with Round Tablers detailing well-rounded campaigns. Down in Sharon, Pa., at the Columbia, Pat Notaro cracked his local dailies, when he discovered that the parents of two of Father Flanagan's boys were localites. Photos of the lads were run together with excerpts from their letters home in which they detailed accounts of the shooting of the film out in Boys Town. Churches and schools plugged the picture and costless heralds were distributed by news agency.

Through aid of Catholic churches in Oneonta, N. Y., and arranged by Herman Addison at Schine's Oneonta, congregations were advised from pulpits and parochial schools to listen to the "Boys Town" broadcast Easter Saturday. Bookstore used a window display of religious articles with stills and youth section of Catholic paper bore picture imprint. Telephone campaign was used week ahead and for lobby attractor, life size cutouts of Rooney and Spencer were featured in advance.

Bill Elder at Loews, in Harrisburg, Pa., planted a 24-sheet on sidewalk directly in front of theatre which proved an eye-arrestor. In addition a full page of co-op ads was promoted, each of which carried a cut of Rooney or Tracy or both, tied directly to the picture.

Fitzpatrick Features Radio Tieup

Radio coverage was sought and gained by Ed Fitzpatrick at Loew's Poli, Waterbury, Conn., with daily spot announcements over WBRY organ broadcast week ahead and on the local Saturday night "Drama of Youth" program. Spots were also secured after the "Your Marriage Club" program, tiein based on fact that Father Flanagan had appeared on this program.

Two column art appeared in local papers day before opening with readers run week ahead, classified co-ops were landed as was a puzzle contest for tickets. Numerous windows were secured and seconds at amateur fights wore white sweaters with title letters, public address system was used during rounds for additional plugs. For his kid matinees, Fitz promoted new game from local manufacturer for giveaway.

Highlight of Bill Burke's campaign at the Schine Rialto in Amsterdam was tieup with Mayor Carter, whereby the Boy Scouts took over the principal departments of City Hall for the day. Purpose was to give the boys an intimate picture of governmental administration. The "Boys Town" mayor was presented with gift from Mickey Rooney. Papers came through with stories in which picture and playdates were prominently mentioned.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Wagner Hosts Smiths

Assistant Manager John Wagner of the Palace Theatre, Youngstown, O., capitalized on the name of Smith for his campaign on "Mr. and Mrs. Smith" by calling on all Smiths in the audience during the engagement. The Smiths in the house when calls were made were awarded tickets.

'Hopkins' Premiere For Greek Relief

Much was made locally over St. Louis' first world premiere in "Sis Hopkins" at the Fox Theatre, with Harry Arthur, vice president of Fanchon & Marco and Republic's representative, Bill Saal tying the opening to the Greek War Relief, which received entire net proceeds.

Advance promotion included erection of special booths to take care of advance ticket sale by attractive girls dressed in Greek costume. Special rates were arranged with railroad and bus companies for people in towns within a radius of 75 miles to come to St. Louis for the premiere and show cards stressing these rates and the opening were posted gratis in railroad and bus stations. Thousands of teaser auto stickers were distributed and placed by merchants, window cards displayed in local and adjacent stores and trailers plugging the event run in 125 neighborhood theatres.

Newspaper coverage included a large advertising campaign in all papers which featured 10 full pages of paid advertising, preceded by a teaser campaign four weeks in advance of premiere. Publicity stories and ads were also placed in 150 leading newspapers in towns adjoining St. Louis and vicinity.

Broadcast Held From Mayor's Office

Radio stations carried broadcasts of the arrival of stars, their greeting at the Mayor's office, special Friday afternoon Greek War Relief broadcast, appearance of stars at premiere itself and special midnight broadcast from leading hotel. Station WEW publicized a candid camera contest which took place on arrival of the Hollywood contingent of stars, commercial programs devoted numerous plugs, as evidence of civic pride in St. Louis' first world premiere. Opening day was officially proclaimed "Sis Hopkins Day."

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

"Devil and Miss Jones" Gets Radio Coverage

Manager Andy Anderson of the Hill Street Theatre, Los Angeles, and Al Parmenter and Fred Rush of the publicity department of the Hill Street and Pantages, teamed up for intensive and varied campaigns on "The Devil and Miss Jones," which played both houses simultaneously.

Two 500-line Royal Crown ads, each used in five newspapers, highlighted the tie-in promotion. Royal Crown also plugged the Jean Arthur starring comedy via five 50-word spot announcements daily oxer KFI and KECA, four days in advance of playdate and every day during the engagement. A Lux ad featuring Jean Arthur broke in all local papers and at no cost to the theatres.

Bakery bannered 50 trucks and drug stores played up a special sundae on menus, strips on mirrors and store hangers. A Postal Telegraph jumbo telegram and comedy "devil" windshield stickers were other factors in the Los Angeles campaign. Newspaper coverage was generous with storeis and art ahead and during run.

Thomas Offers Booby Prize To Bridge Club Members

Since bridge clubs form an important part of the social life of Clarksville, Ark., Round Tabler Jack Thomas at the Malco Strand with this thought in mind recently prepared a trailer in which he announced that the management would give a pass to anyone holding a hand at a bridge club that had nothing higher than a nine in it.

Thomas reports that the response has been excellent and the word-of-mouth advertising of great benefit to the box-office. If a player holds a "bust" hand, the hostess signs the tally, which is presented at the theatre for admission. Theatreman reports he has never given more than five passes a week, nor received so much free advertising for so little. Local reporter picked up the idea and gave it a good sendoff.

Daily's Annual Cooking School Brought to Theatre by "Kal"

Since the local daily's annual cooking school made serious inroads in his grosses during the four days of the promotion, "Kal" Kalberer this year worked out a plan which brought the event to the Indiana Theatre, in Washington, Ind. Contacting the editor and promotion manager, Kal sold them on the idea of holding it at the theatre since it was more centrally located and more comfortable than the school gym, where it had previously been conducted.

Deal was taken on for a flat sum equal to the theatre's average take for a four-day matinee business and Kal has been assured that the same deal will be given each year hereafter. Thus, in addition to killing tough opposition, the stunt brought business on days that were otherwise losses.

EXPLOITATION BRIEFS FROM A-FIELD

Through promotion arranged by Bill Burke, at the Brant, in Brantford, Ontario, 1,000 colored comic books were secured at no cost, for distribution at kid matinee. In addition, magazine agency bannered their news trucks with tiein copy. For "Honeymoon for Three," Burke secured plug over jeweler's radio program, announcer using copy to the effect that the picture was packed with romance, as were their jewels, etc.

Tinted novelty twofold herald was distributed by Stan Andrews for "You're the One" at the Capitol, in Guelph, Ontario. Front carried line "Valuable Tips for the Ladies," while inside spread featured scene stills and copy on the picture.

A novel newspaper "doodling" contest was one of the highlights of the "Andy Hardy's Private Secretary" campaign put over by Bill Elder, Loew's, Harrisburg, Pa. A drawing of Andy's old jallopy, with Mickey Rooney, in his film role, at the wheel, was used by the local Telegraph as the basis of the contest. Readers were asked to draw in funny sayings or figures, with the funniest receiving cash and guest tickets to the film.

Taking advantage of Rodeo Week in Tucson, Bob Smith, Fox Theatre, had a "Rhett Butler" and "Scarlett O'Hara" in the gala opening parade, as part of his campaign for "Gone With the Wind." He also distributed imitation dollar bills carrying copy on the film.

For "Four Mothers" date at the Paramount, Staten Island, Ed Goth, Fabian director of advertising and publicity, promoted a series of quarter page and larger co-op ads with local laundry company. In this connection, Goth tied in original angles of films advertised with the laundry services.

Promoted from local optometrist by Sid Scott at the Capitol, Sudbury, Ont., are lens wipers which he has been distributing to patrons. Merchant's ad is carried on the wiper. For "Night Train," Scott printed a herald in form of railroad ticket which carried sock tieup picture copy.

For date on "North West Mounted Police" at the Cathay Theatre, in Kuala Lumpur, Federated Malay States, Manager Chew Sze Fong arranged for the local police band to parade to theatre and give a brief concert out front. Scene stills were planted on easel and 24 sheets used on side of theatre wall.

To sell both his Easter show and coming attractions, Les Pollock at Loew's, in Rochester, constructed lobby display above. Bunnies and baby chicks cavorted in the enclosure. Holiday greeting and picture titles were planted over all.

A reported first time for such cooperation was the full-page story and art on "Strawberry Blonde" planted by Rodney Collier for that date at the Stanley, in Baltimore, Md., in which six pictures of Cagney and story of his life were used. One of the fashion editors devoted an entire article on the influence of the costumes of the '90's on the fashions of today. Collier tied up with chain drug stores for a special "Strawberry Blonde" sundae, each person ordering one being given a photo of Olivia de Havilland.

As a goodwill builder, Bart Dortch at the Dixie, in Picayune, Miss., circularizes newcomers to the city with special letters of welcome in which he encloses a pass for the next show. In connection with "Western Union," Dortch had girl stationed in lobby through courtesy of the telegraph company, to take care of folks who wanted to send Easter greetings.

For his double horror show, "The Mad Doctor" and the "Monster and the Girl," Jim O'Connell at the Haines, in Waterville, Maine planted a "peep hole" window in store on main street. On inspection, "lookers" found 11 by 14 stills, together with titles and playdates.

Excuse It, Please

In the issue of April 5, the Amateur Radio Emergency Council tieup for "ham" amateurs at the Annex Theatre, in Detroit, was detailed and inadvertently credited to Cass Smith and Bill Hendricks of the United Detroit Theatres advertising department. Bows should go in the direction of Tom Henshaw, assistant to Smith at the Annex, for conceiving the idea and carrying it out to a successful conclusion.

Working with the senior high school classes in connection with "You'll Find Out" at the Ritz, in Aberdeen, Miss., Harry Shaw put on a Kay Kyser quiz program, cut on the profits going to the kids. Day of show, front was decorated with class colors and each senior was presented with a diploma into the College of Musical Knowledge, each member being asked a musical question before receiving the program. Promoted popcorn was distributed to the kids and the show was advertised in advance throughout the school.

Circus type tickets were printed up for "Chad Hanna" by Stan Andrews at the Capitol, in Guelph, Ontario and inserted in envelopes with picture and playdate copy. Also stressed was the fact that if the envelope contained a red ticket, holder would be admitted gratis to opening.

Run on classified ad page with stories was Louie Charninsky's request for couples planning on marrying opening day of "Honeymoon for Three" to contact him at the Rialto Theatre. Promoted ahead of time was suite, dinner and other entertainment for some lucky couple. Louie doesn't report how many "takers" he had.

Highlight of Bert Ruder's "Kitty Foyle" opening at the Schine State, in Fostoria, Ohio, was a doubles contest on which local paper and cooperating merchant was tied in. Ginger Rogers' measurements were run in daily and promoted wardrobe was awarded the girl coming closest to the star's form.

For "King of the Royal Mounted," John Duffus at the Arlington, Arlington, Va., tied up with paper featuring the comic strip and for 12 weeks during run of serial paper carried theatre credit line. In addition, heralds were distributed calling attention to the opening.

Novelty herald was used by Bill Yeakle at the Kentucky, in Danville, Ky., for "Invisible Woman." Copy at top of card read: "Hold this card over heat for your important message." When following instructions, holders read picture copy and playdates, which had been written in invisible ink.

Newspaper contest used by Joe Goldberg at the RKO Shore Road, in Brooklyn, for "Bitter Sweet" consisted of guest tickets going to those submitting longest list of hit tunes which were played in previous pictures in which Jeannette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy appeared together. Special colored two-fold heralds were distributed, merchant's ad defraying cost.

For "Phantom Fiend" and "Murder in the Red Barn" at the Albany, in Albany, Eddie Selette dressed his lobby with hanging cardboard skeletons and green lights. Glass case held first aid supplies and promoted operating table was planted alongside. Entire staff was dressed as nurses and internes and green flares set on curb at night.

Besa Short Stages Donald Duck Day

A varied campaign was arranged by Besa Short, shorts subjects head of the Interstate Circuit for its Donald Duck Day program of shorts. Neighborhood theatres of Houston, Texas, each played five Disney subjects starring Donald on his seventh birthday. All the shorts were shown throughout the day in addition to regular program.

For the children a special after-school party was held in all the theatres from 3 to 5 p.m. with a Donald Duck gift furnished by local beverage company given to every one attending, transfer picture books also were given.

Trailer was run one week in advance devoted to the party, the special gift and five Donald Duck units and announcements were made at each of the ten Popeye Clubs two Saturdays in advance.

For the lobby a cutout of Donald Duck four feet tall was put on display, carrying copy pertaining to the various highlights of the birthday party. Heralds were used by each of the 10 theatres and distributed in schools and to children around and in the theatres. Newspaper stories hit Sunday amusement pages and on Saturday in the Houston Junior Post, the only kiddie section of the three publications.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Merchant Cooperation Gained By Flynn for "Dr. Cyclops"

Part of the exploitation arranged by Hermann Flynn for "Dr. Cyclops" at the Capitol, in Melbourne, Australia, consisted of window display in leading clothier shop whereby reducing glass idea was used with folks invited to look through peep hole in window. This was tied to giant values featured in the store. Street bally was man dressed in smock, wearing thick glasses and carrying bag with title imprint. Small stickers carried by the man were planted about town. Lobby display consisted of large cutout head of the inventor with animation supplied by green flasher lights behind eye sockets, numerous window displays were landed and co-op ad promoted.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

April Fool's Trick Sells "Girl, Guy, Gob" for Gibson

William Gibson of the Cataract Theatre, Niagara Falls, New York, made use of several novel angles of exploitation in his campaign on "A Girl, A Guy and A Gob." On April Fool's Day, Gibson scattered some inexpensive purses around the city which were stuffed with stage money, and, of course, appropriate selling copy.

A week in advance ushers issued calling cards to patrons with copy as follows: "May I have the pleasure of seating you during the showing of 'A Girl, A Guy and A Gob' beginning. . . ." Ushers and cashiers wore navy hats with copy during the run. The Buffalo Coast Guard cooperated by lending equipment for lobby display. Theatre decorations included navy flags which were flown from the marquee.

Effective Merchant Tieup Brings "Foyle" Lobby Show

Before shoving off as captain in Uncle Sam's Army, Ken Grimes at Warner's, in Erie, Pa., ahead of "Kitty Foyle," promoted leading women's shop for lobby display of white collar fashions. From sports to evening wear wax models displayed the latest, neat credit card planted alongside in addition to blowup scene stills. Cooperating merchant plugged the tiein storewide and in their ads.

For "Love Thy Neighbor," Grimes planted a tieup with classified ad section of paper whereby guest tickets were awarded to those ordering ads; theatre received gratis mention in ads. Contest was featured with tickets going to those submitting best wisecrack conversation supposedly carried on between stars in scene stills run in cooperating paper.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Strawberries Are In Season; "Strawberry Blonde" the Reason

Promoted from local grocer were baskets of fresh strawberries, which were delivered by strawberry blondes to all leading columnists and drama editors as part of Marty Weiser's advance on the picture. Card accompanying each basket read: "Strawberries are in season. The Strawberry Blonde's the reason."

Special sport cartoon of strawberry blonde badminton champ of northern California was planted on sport page of local daily and followed by invitation by Rita Hayworth to play a set. Picture of Rita was planted together with story and picture credits. Couple dressed in gay nineties costume made rounds of all leading hotels, etc., distributed cards carrying picture copy and playdates.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

"A Girl, A Guy, and A Gob" Tied to Reserves by Dinny

E. V. Dinerman of the Palace, Cincinnati, tied in with Lt. Commander Haskell of the Naval Reserves for his "A Girl, A Guy and A Gob" campaign with the major phase of the hook-up the selection of a local favorite of the gobs. The girl was posed with several of the reserves in naval garb. The idea was to show that Lucille Ball, one of the stars of the Harold Lloyd comedy, had nothing on the local girl as a favorite of the gobs. Among the newspapers to use the photograph was the Cincinnati Enquirer.

Members of the Navy Mothers Clubs called a special meeting which was held in the mezzanine following which they were guests of Dinerman for the screening. The Enquirer and Times-Star covered this event with stories and the Post sent a photographer.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Gordons' "Ramparts" Bally

Stanley and Harry Gordons, co-managers of the Rialto Theatre, Boise, Idaho, used a novel method of exploiting "The Ramparts We Watch." Outfitting a pretty girl in the colorful red, white and blue garb of Columbia, they had her stand in front of a six-sheet poster placed in a central part of town. The girl distributed special circulars devoted to the March of Time production.

Indiana-Illinois Managers Report

Reaching out to all avenues of exploitation to sell their attractions, latest of Alex Manta's Indiana-Illinois men to furnish this department with accounts of their doings include Chick Tompkins at the Elco, Elkhart, Ind.; Don Johnson at the Lex, Chicago; Bob Griffith, Gayety, Chicago and Roy Hanson at the Voge, in East Chicago, Ind.

Before shoving off from the Hoosier, in Whiting, Ind. for Elkhart, Tompkins celebrated the theatre's sixteenth anniversary with a birthday party, which was publicized well in advance with front page breaks in local dailies. Teaser announcements were made from stage two weeks ahead, trailer also selling the special anniversary show. Permission was secured from the city fathers to string a banner across street in front of theatre and to tack window cards with appropriate tiein copy to all light posts. Congratulatory wires from stars in Hollywood formed nucleus of lobby display, entire staff wore anniversary chest banners and promoted cake and souvenirs were available.

For "Buck Privates," Tompkins arranged to host local recruits leaving for camp. Reserved section was set aside for the boys and at break of show, the men were asked to stand and take a bow. Photos were taken which were used in newspaper ads.

Johnson Features Contests

To publicize "Hit Parade of 1941", Don Johnson promoted a double truck which featured a contest angle. Guest tickets went to those properly identifying caricature star cuts in each ad and submitting the list together with names and addresses of respective advertisers. Teaser boxes scattered throughout paper referred to the contest. Also featured by the theatreman for "Comrade X" was a street stunt whereby tickets went to those identifying theatre bally man who toured the city. Entrants were required to tap man on shoulder and ask if he was "Comrade X."

To attract kid business to "Hit Parade of 1941," Bob Griffith promoted local merchants for balloons which were given to each child attending show, store plug was carried in weekly program. As an attractor, loud speaker was stationed out front playing hit tunes from picture and newspaper coverage featured a double truck with each ad giving picture mention. Doorknob hangers were used profusely and numerous windows promoted from cooperating merchants.

As part of his Easter show, Roy Hanson distributed tinted heralds calling attention to his bunny giveaway at special kid matinee. Rabbits were on view in cage out front week ahead. For his adult trade, Roy promoted a luscious ham which was awarded in connection with a lucky number drawing.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Patrons Snapped for 'Breakfast'

Through tieup effected with local photographers, for "He Stayed for Breakfast," Assistant Bob Haggith at the National, in Milwaukee, made arrangements for lady patrons to be photographed at a breakfast table with cutout of Melvyn Douglas. Men patrons were photographed at a second table seated opposite cutout of Loretta Young.

OBITUARIES

Harold B. Franklin Dies in Mexico City

Harold B. Franklin, an industry executive for many years, and more recently president of Harold B. Franklin Productions, Inc., Hollywood, died Sunday night, April 20th, of a heart attack in Mexico City. He was 47 years old. Cremation was in the Mexican Capital.

Born in New York, Mr. Franklin entered theatricals as a vaudeville booking agent in 1910. He was manager of Shea's Hippodrome in Buffalo from 1918 to 1922, resigning to become director of theatres for Famous Players Lasky Corporation, which operated 400 houses in the United States, Canada and Europe. During the next five years he was one of the principal factors in the development of the circuit of Paramount Theatres, for which many houses were constructed under his direction.

HAROLD B. FRANKLIN

From 1927 to 1930 Mr. Franklin was president of Fox-West Coast Theatres, which controlled some 500 theatres in California, Oregon, Washington, Montana, Kansas, Arizona and Nevada. For this circuit he built 75 theatres. In 1932 he was elected president of Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation and Orpheum Circuit, Inc. Mr. Franklin resigned in the fall of 1933 and later entered motion picture production. In 1933 he formed Frankwyn Productions with Edgar Selwyn to produce stage plays. In 1935 he joined Columbia Pictures production staff and resigned in 1938 to manage the "Motion Pictures' Greatest Year" campaign. During 1940 he produced independently for RKO.

During his motion picture career Mr. Franklin wrote "Motion Picture Theatre Management," 1926; "Sound Motion Pictures," 1927, and contributed to various film periodicals. His wife, Mrs. Anna May Franklin, survives.

Joseph D. R. Freed, Radio Executive, Dies

Joseph David Roth Freed, president of Freed Radio Corporation, manufacturer of radio receiving sets, died at his home in New York Friday, April 18th. He was 43 years old. At the time of his death he was engaged in experimental work in connection with frequency modulation.

During the World War Mr. Freed was in the radio test shop in the Washington Navy Yard, and later held executive posts in radio. In 1931 he joined Warner Brothers as radio executive in charge of Brunswick Radio, then a subsidiary of the film company. He continued in that capacity until 1938, when he became vice-president and general manager of Warners' Muzak Corporation, a music reproducing system that serves dinner and dance music to hotels and other places of public accommodations. He is survived by his wife, father, a son and four brothers.

William Danforth, Opera Star for Gilbert and Sullivan

William Danforth, performer of Gilbert and Sullivan light opera during the 1900's, died in Skaneateles, N. Y., Wednesday, April 16th, after a long illness. He was 73.

Mr. Danforth's real name was Daniels, but he changed it in 1897 to avoid confusion with his associate, the producer-actor, Frank Daniels. Mr. Danforth was reported to have known the music of Gilbert and Sullivan operas so well that he could go from one production to another without rehearsal. At various times he also appeared in musical comedy stage productions. Mr. Danforth is survived by his wife, the former Norma Kopp, a son and daughter.

Mrs. Florence Vogel

Mrs. Florence Vogel, 75, mother of A-Mike Vogel, chairman of the Managers' Round Table department of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, died Thursday, April 17th, in Miami. Funeral services were held Sunday in New York. Interment took place at Rochelle Park, N. J. Surviving are her husband, J. K. Vogel; two other sons, Harry and Louis, and two daughters, Jean and Fay.

Joseph McKeown

Joseph McKeown, general manager of Schoenstadt Theatre Circuit, Chichago, died Friday, April 18th, of a heart attack. He is survived by his mother, father, a brother and sister. Funeral services were held Monday at St. Ambrose Church. Burial in St. Mary Cemetery.

Pacie Ripple

Pacie Ripple, tenor and actor with D'Oyly Carte Opera Company in Gilbert and Sullivan operettas, and in Charles Hoyt's musical comedy productions, died in New York Wednesday, April 16th, at the Post Graduate Hospital. Funeral services were held Friday, April 18th, at the Little Church Around the Corner.

Mrs. Fannie Law

Mrs. Fannie Law, who, as Mlle. Franzeska, appeared with her troupe of trained birds on vaudeville circuits, died Thursday, April 17th, in New York. She was 70 years old.

Mrs. Hattie Delaro

Mrs. Hattie Delaro, 80, retired operatic singer and comedienne, died Friday, April 18th, in New York. She had appeared with Richard Mansfield and Lillian Russell and in the first Boston performance of Gilbert and Sullivan's "Mikado."

Samuel E. Soul

Samuel E. Soul, 61, Boston motion picture executive, died in that city Tuesday, April 15th, after a short illness. For more than 20 years he was managing director of the Seville and Central Square Theatres in East Boston. He is survived by a son, three brothers and a sister.

IN COURTS

Four Majors Bring Suit Against Exhibitor

Seventeen complaints were alleged in a copyright suit filed this week on behalf of RKO, Columbia, Universal and Twentieth Century-Fox in Peoria, Ill., against Edwin L. Harris, owner of the Princess theatre.

The case involves the alleged unauthorized showing of pictures before and after contracted play dates. It is reported that efforts to settle the case had failed. George Barnes, representing Spitz and Adcock, Chicago attorneys, filed the complaint.

Montcalm Suit Dismissed

The suit of Montcalm Theatre Corporation, operating the RKO Uptown in Detroit, against the Royal theatre of the United Detroit Theatres, a Paramount affiliate, has been dismissed on briefs. It is understood that the Uptown, which sought seven days' clearance over the recently-built Royal, will play day and date with that house.

Fox Suit Settled

Stipulation settling and discontinuing the suit of Izola Forrester and Mann Page against Twentieth Century-Fox on undisclosed terms was filed Thursday, April 17th, in the New York Supreme Court. The suit charged plagiarism of the plaintiffs' play, "Joyous," in the Shirley Temple film, "The Poor Little Rich Girl."

Columbia Suit Dismissed

Justice Aaron J. Levy of the New York Supreme Court, on Wednesday, April 16th, dismissed the plagiarism suit of Ferdinand Voteur against Columbia Pictures after trial, ruling that Mr. Voteur had failed to prove infringement of his play, "Resurrection Morning," in Columbia's picture "The Man Who Lived Twice."

"Mayerling" Suit Brought

A suit has been filed in the New York Supreme Court by John Davis Lodge against Leo Films, Inc., for an accounting and to examine the defendant's books to determine the number of bookings made on "Mayerling to Sarajevo." Mr. Lodge, an actor who played in the film, claims ten per cent of all money earned under an alleged agreement.

Co-operative Theatres Reelects Officers

Stockholders of Co-operative Theatres in Detroit, this week reelected Fred De Lodder president, Ben J. Cohn vice-president, James C. Ritter, secretary, and Bernard R. Kilbride, treasurer.

Directors are: Lew Wisper, Ben Cohen of the Hollywood theatre, Gustave W. Funk, Charles Komer, and Wade Allen.

Four new theatres just opened or still under construction were taken into membership: George Smith, Pix theatre, at Lapeer; Louis Schussel, Bel theatre at Melvindale; Sol and Mac Krim, Krim theatre in Highland Park, and Irving Belinsky, Clawson theatre at Clawson. One other new member was also admitted—Anthony Dubiel of the Graystone theatre, Detroit.

Ashby Resigns

Joe Ashby, oldest exchange manager in Denver in years of service, has resigned as manager there for RKO and has been succeeded by B. J. McCarthy, recently RKO exchange manager in Buffalo, N. Y.

THEATRE MANAGEMENT RECORD AND TAX Register. This new accounting system is the finest book of its kind ever made available to an exhibitor. In addition to being complete in every respect, it is simple—so much so that it is not necessary to have had bookkeeping experience in order to keep an accurate, complete and up-to-the-minute record of the business of your theatre. The introductory price is only $2.00 postpaid. QUIGLEY BOOKSHOP, Rockefeller Center, New York.

MOTION PICTURE SOUND ENGINEERING—547 pages; illustrated; covers every practical method and process in present-day sound engineering. Leading engineers explain every detail of apparatus and its arrangement, with diagrams, tables, charts and graphs. This manual comes straight from the workshops of the studios in Hollywood. It is indispensable to everyone working with sound equipment. Price $6.50 postpaid. QUIGLEY BOOKSHOP, Rockefeller Center, New York.

NEW 567 PAGE BOOK ON AIR CONDITIONING by Charles A. Fuller, authority on the subject. Available for theatre owners contemplating engineering changes. Book is cloth bound with index and charts and covers every branch of the industry as well as codes and ordinances regulating installation. Order now at $4.00 a copy postpaid. QUIGLEY BOOKSHOP, Rockefeller Center, New York.

RICHARDSON'S BLUEBOOK OF PROJECTION. A second revision of the Sixth Edition of Richardson's Bluebook of Projection with a complete section of Sound Trouble-shooting Charts as well as a host of additional up-to-the-minute text on the latest equipment. THE NEW unicon TICKET

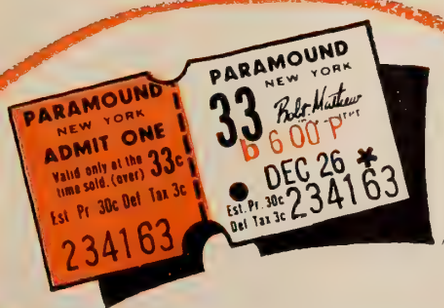
For the first time in the history of the motion picture business, a real system of box office cash control is now available

IT ELIMINATES...

PALMING AND RESALE OF TICKETS—Because it's too difficult and too obvious . . .

COUNTERFEITING OF TICKETS—Because Unicon Ticket is a patented system printed on controlled watermark paper stock, obtainable only by reputable ticket printers through a license. Unauthorized use of this ticket constitutes a patent infringement as well as a forgery for the exhibitor's signature appears on the ticket.

FALSE REFUNDS—Because the time clock stamps the time a refund is made right on the customer's stub and the time of refund may be compared with the time of sale of that ticket.



STOLEN TICKETS— Because, in addition to recording a sale, the ticket issuing machine prints the date and the number of tickets sold per issue on each ticket sold, thus validating every legitimate sale. All tickets presented or accepted for admission not thus validated are spurious.

A TIME CLOCK STAMPED TICKET

THE TIME CLOCK CONTROLS

Time of box office opening and closing ★ ★ ★ time of change of cashiers ★ ★ ★ time of every price change ★ ★ ★ an hourly, half-hourly (or any other period) report of ticket sales.

Every reporting and accounting record is a machine-made entry and hence an original entry, the importance of which will be appreciated by treasurers, auditors and comptrollers.

Every problem of box-office revenue control is now solved by the Unicon System.

It's later than you think!

These are fast moving times.

Times of high nervous tension. People are hungry for entertainment. They need amusement...change. They have jobs and money to spend. The man who can spot a trend is the man who makes the extra profits.

The trend is toward display... clean... fresh... colorful display. The retail merchant knows that. He's taken a page out of our book and he's made money doing it. You showed the world the way. Steal back your own thunder... make the lobbies sing again... sell again. Make them come alive with showman's stuff. DON'T let the picture die. Give it a real ride with advertising... glamour advertising.

It's later than you think..but not too late to bring them in if you use the Three Best Sellers in the Business.
